There are conditions under which water actually flows upward and rises above its source. If a glass tube be dipped into water the column inside will be above the level of the surrounding surface. Moreover, if a tube of half the diameter be substituted the column doubles its height. The water creeps along the inside of the tube owing to the adhesion, and forms a concave meniscus at the top.

An explanation is not difficult. It can be proved mathematically that if the diameter of a circle be diminished one-half the circumference is also reduced to that extent, while the area is one fourth of its former value. The circumference of the column of water being reduced one-half, its connect with the glass, and hence the adhesive force, is also diminished to that extent, while the cross section, and hence the weight, is decreased to a fourth of what it was before. Therefore the weight column can be twice the height of the first without exceeding the lifting power.

Remarkable as the underlying principles of this phenomenon undoubtedly are, nature made use of them long before man made their discovery. Every tree and flower adds its testimony. The core of a tree or plant, instead of being a single open channel, consists of a spongelike substance containing many miniature tunnels through which the sap and moisture collected by the roots flow upward in small rivulets, rising higher and higher in sheer defiance of the great law of gravity.—St. Louis Republic.

Doesn't Mean It.

A man always looks like a hypocrite when he brags of another man's baby.—Washington Herald.

Beaver Island News

Skating is fine in the harbor.

Capt. Dan Martin spent several days in Charlevoix last week on business.

Frank Scopp is building a new house on Cherry street.

Mrs. John Vincent, of Naubinway, spent several weeks here visiting her friends, returning home last week.

The tug Two Sisters will carry the mail to Charlevoix in place of the steamer Beaver.

Willie Boyle and his brother Hugh, made a business trip to Charlevoix Monday.

Mike McCafferty arrived home Monday for a short visit with his parents.

Peter McCafferty is on the Island for a few day's visit with his mother.

Matt Rickagers, of Chicago, spent Christmas with his parents.

George Williams, of Boyne City, was on the Island last week on business.

T. H. Spencer, of Bellaire, has a crew of men and several horses at the south end of the Island getting out cedar poles and ties.

The tug McCann took a load of fish to Charlevoix Monday.

Miss Nellie McDonald will give the New Year's dance.

THE MAKING OF A HARBOR

(Illustrated)

Chapter II.

A survey of the harbor was made in 1868 by Major Wheeler, U. S. Engineer, who made an adverse report in which he stated that there were insurmountable obstacles in the way of the improvement and that a harbor of refuge was not required owing to the proximity of the natural harbors of Northport, Little Traverse and Beaver Harbor.

In driving the piles for the Fox & Rose dock a hard pan or conglomerate had been struck which necessitated bridging over a space of some thirty feet. This hard pan extended under the river channel and was the insurmountable barrier to which the engineer referred.

The subsequent work proved that the effect of this formation was almost negligible in the prosecution of the work, however the outcome of the survey brought home the fact that if the river was to be improved, the people themselves must take the matter in hand and demonstrate its feasability. Accordingly in June 1869 books were opened at the office of Rodington Nelson & Co. and subscriptions solicited to obtain funds with which to prosecute the work, these subscriptions were payable in money, labor or anything that could be of use in the prosecution of the work. As a matter of fact, but very little was paid in money, but the response in labor was most generous and several thousand dollars was soon subscribed by residents of the village and country tributary to Pine Lake.

June 21, 1869, the tug Minnie Warren arrived and was lightered over the shoals by placing rocks, old iron, and stone and loading the ends next the tug with stone until it was level with the water, the scows were then made fast to the rug and the stone removed to the opposite end of the scows, the tug was lifted and the combination passed easily into Round Lake.—At this time the condition of the village and surrounding country was very primitive, Bridge street was profusely decorated with stumps and logs around which the road wound at will or necessity, and was being paved with sawdust from the mill, this work was done with the mill dump-cart over which Chauncey Barry presided as chief engineer and conductor. On one occasion a passenger steamer was wooding at the dock, a boy of about a dozen young lady school girls, out for their vacation, came up town to take in the sights. There were no carriages, buses or automobiles available at that time and they chartered Chauncey and his dump cart to transport them about the city, they all had to stand and filled the cart almost to overflowing. They soon found that in union there was strength for the only way that they could keep from spilling out was by clinging desperately to each other.

Chauncey afterward remarked that it was the greatest restraint of his life to resist the temptation to dump his load in the usual way. This delegation was the avant courier of our resort population. Judging by the numbers that have followed, they must have reported most favorable.

About the time of the subscriptions for the improvement heretofore referred to a company had been organized to take charge of and prosecute the work. In August the following directors were elected: Amos Fox, E. S. Redington, John S. Dixon, Seth F. Mason, William Lister, D. C. Nettleton and William Nelson; E. H. Green, secretary, and Richard Cooper, treasurer. Most of these men have long since gone to their reward. It was under this management that the stone pier was constructed under the dock reference to which was made in a previous article.

A meeting of the directors was called at the drug store and position of Pike Bacon located near the present site of the Fowler meat market. The object of the meeting was to formulate methods of improvement. Various plans were considered. One member of wide experience favored the building of cribs in Round Lake, five feet wide and forty feet long and floating them down the river into place. He said that he one would ever see over five feet of water in the river—the majority had more ambitious views and his recommendation did not prevail. At that time however the entry of steamers like the Manitou into Round Lake was beyond the wildest dreams of any one in the Pine Lake country.

In July 1869 it was decided to open a new channel between Pine and Round Lakes. In order to get the people of the up lake country to donate towards the lower river, it had been promised that the upper channel would also receive its share of attention and to make good that promise a "tow" was called in July 1869 to commence work on the upper cut. The two tugs, each with a scow in tow, were sent up the lake and returned with upwards of 100 men. The distance from the water in Pine Lake was 22 rods and at that time was covered with native growth of trees, some being of large proportions. A stout rope was produced and a sailor would climb the tree and fasten the rope well down to the top and then with a hundred men hold of the line and the encouraging "heo-heave" of the sailors the tug of war soon resulted in the yielding of the monarch of the forest to the inevitable, by nigh a space of 150 feet or more was entirely cleared and stumped, a tug was then placed in Pine Lake and a temporary dam thrown across the Old River just below the present rustic bridge, team scrapers were then set to work on the cut and a narrow ditch was scraped so that a small stream ran through the cut, the tug was then manoeuvered at the upper end and by the force of her wheel made to back her way down to the bayou. This allowed the tugs with the scows loaded with wood together with small crafts to pass through the cut instead of the shallow and tortuous Old River.

(To be continued.)

UNTIL JANUARY SIXTH

We will sell with every $3 Cash Purchase in any department, 5 lbs Granulated Sugar for 22c

LADIES' COATS---from $10.00 to $18.50. Sale price . . . $5.00

CHILDREN'S COATS---size 12 to 15 years, $6 to $12. Sale price $4.00

CHILDREN'S COATS---size 8 to 10 years. $4 to $10. Sale price $3.00

A. E. Mason's Dept. Store

228 BRIDGE St. EMREY 228 BRIDGE St.

The Old Reliable Store.

For two weeks this store offers at Greatly Reduced Prices and a number of Overcoats, including Balmacaans in all the latest models.

Men's and Youths' Blue Serge Suits.

These suits and overcoats we positively guarantee to be the very best values and we invite your inspection of these goods.

Twenty-Five Overcoats —)1913 STOCK(— AT COST.

Come in before the sizes are broken and get your choice.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, January 7, 1914. — NUMBER 38

In This Age of Reciprocity—

the business man prefers the bank which remembers and performs its obligations to the Public from which it draws its support.

Fully appreciative of these obligations, The Charlevoix State Savings Bank strives in legitimate ways to cooperate with the business interests, large and small, of Charlevoix and Michigan.

Extending all the facilities offered by a conservative and progressive Institution.

CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
J. L. CRANE, Pres.
C. RACHOW, Asst. Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Asst. Cashier.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

Responding to inquiries from many relative to our Christmas business, we are pleased to make the announcement that our December sales were the greatest in our fourteen years of merchandising in this city.

We take this as a splendid compliment, and think our endeavors to give to this community as good service and as thoroughly complete a stock as can be given to a city of this size, are responsible for your growing patronage.

In extending to you our thanks we not only assure you of our continued earnest endeavors to warrant your faith in us and our store, but to work for the good of "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

J. L. CRANE

Demonstration of Ladies' Home Journal Patterns by Miss Frisbee of The Home Pattern Co. at this store

Thursday, Jan. 7

Local and Personal Notes

Work is still progressing on the Beach Hotel enlargement.

Olof Nordrum, Ralph Washburn and Alson Smith spent New Years day as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Adams, at Bellaire.

An old shed on the west end of the railroad bridge pier caught fire Wednesday morning and was consumed. There was no damage to the bridge or pier.

The Charlevoix Fire Department wish to announce that the annual masquerade ball will occur at the Bank Hall on February 22d. List of prizes will be given later.

Guy Myers accompanied by his wife, is visiting at the Myers home on Clinton street. Guy was the past season assistant engineer with "Hy" Wood in the Steamer Briton.

A north side Petoek, name unknown, broke through the ice near Gelken's dock Wednesday morning, and was rescued by Roy Ranger and Capt. J. A. Emrey, with much difficulty.

Members of the Dictionary Club are urged to be present at the meeting next Thursday, (this week) at the home of Mrs. Hampton. Miss Hinze will discuss Suffrage and Mrs. Bridge on Anti-Suffrage.

It costs one-third more to print the SENTINEL than it does any other weekly paper in the county. Reason why is that the SENTINEL gives you more than double the reading matter of any other paper in the county. Hence it is the best paper to subscribe for. Try it.

Chas. Herrington, while fishing on the ice of Round Lake Tuesday morning, broke through and would have drowned had it not been for the prompt and heroic act of David Howard, a Point Betsy life saver who was near and pulled the old man out at the last minute before going down.

The foundations of the oldest settlement within the borders of the state of Michigan were laid in the year 1668 by two French priests, whose names were not preserved by history. The year they established a permanent mission at Sault Ste. Marie. Three years later Father Marquette, a French priest of wide influence, accompanied by a band of Huron Indians established a mission at the point where now is situated St. Ignace.

Michigan's fame as a potato producing state is slowly spreading over the American continent. The last bit of evidence of this fact is a request from New Orleans for the names and addresses of Western Michigan men who can make shipments in car lots. The potatoes grown upon the gravelly, sandy soil of Western Michigan are of the finest quality and hence are becoming more and more in demand where the best is wanted.

Veri Cram has accepted a position with the Buick Auto Co. at Flint and is already at work there.

Mr. H. H. Hess, of Lansing, has been a guest at the Park avenue home of Mrs. Dr. Boe the past week.

The SENTINEL and Chicago Inter-Ocean-Farmer, or New York Tribune-Farmer, for one year for $2.00. You cannot beat the combination.

Advices from North Dakota, where Miss Lulu Frazier has been very ill with typhoid fever, state that she has reached the critical "turning stage," and is making a good recovery.

The Loyal Order of Moose will have a party next Monday night at the Odd Fellows' Hall. All members are requested to secure an invitation from H. J. Redmond for a friend and his lady.

The board of supervisors is in session at the court house, and will probably continue the session the most of the week. The approval of bonds and the auditing of claims constitutes the bulk of the business.

Ward W. Bennett, of the local life saving crew, with his family, have gone to Glen Haven to spend the remainder of the winter with Mr. Bennett's parents. It was the elder Bennett who cost his entire fishing outfit in the recent tornado at Empire.

Roy Bliss, written by Victor Hugo, will be next Wednesday night's feature at the Magestic. In this play William Garwood and Florence Billington take the leading parts. This is a splendid production well staged and photographed. Wednesday, January 14th.

Round Lake is dotted with fish shanties, and fried perch are on the bill of fare. But a word of caution now is timely. Round Lake ice is treacherous, by reason of the shifting current which always comes with a shift of wind. Quite that are safe today are unsafe tomorrow.

Navigation with Beaver Island may be considered as closed for the winter, although a change of conditions may bring the island tug over again. Advices are that Beaver harbor is frozen in and there is considerable ice outside. These conditions prevent the two island supervisors attending the holding of the board of supervisors, which has not occurred before in a number of years.

The relics of the Petoskey family of Indians, after whom the city of Petoskey was named, are to be preserved in a cabinet in the library there if the plans of the Historical Society are carried out. Peace pipes, spears, English medals and copies of treaties in the collection date back for 200 years. Relics from Mackinaw City and Cross Village, former Indian Villages and early trading posts, are also to be secured and preserved there.

JOURNALISTIC PIRACY

We clip the following from the local columns of the Elk Rapids Progress, printed without credit:

"Young man, you are just entering the prime of your responsibility manhood. The more circumspect your daily walk and conversation the more friends you will have and the quality of your friends will be governed by the standard up to which you measure yourself. 'Fear thought but God.' Be yourself and be true to yourself. Manliness comprehends all else. You approach a new year. The morning you hang up the new calendar turn your thoughts toward and see wherein you have failed while the old one was hanging on the wall. Hold high the ideals of the new one for advancement in true manliness. The Progress wishes you a happy new year and many of them."

The suspense in the local columns of the SENTINEL last week. Now, we wrote every word of that "piece." It was just as original as anything that Henry Waterson or Geo. W. Perry ever wrote, but editor Perry substitutes "Progress" for "SENTINEL," and prints it as original. Bro. Ferry is a far abler man than forself, but he is a journalistic pilferer, besides several other things.

OHIO BAIL JUMPER CAUGHT

Sheriff Novak is on his way to Mansfield, Ohio, with Richard Castle, apprehended here on advices received from the Ohio State reformatory.

Castle, according to the warden, has a long and bad record to his discredit. He was convicted of burglary by the Ohio court and given one to five years in prison. He managed last May to get a parole and went to New York, where he enlisted in the British army, and jumped that engagement. Returning to Ohio he committed another serious offense and, while out on $500 bail, jumped it and came here.

CONWAY—OSTRANDER

Mr. Theodore Conway and Miss Chloe Ostrander, both of East Jordan, were united in marriage by Rev. Quinton Walker at the home of Mrs. Parish on Antrim street, Tuesday, Jan. 6th. The young people are very popular in their home town and have the best wishes of their friends.

THE MAKING OF A HARBOR

(Illustrated)

Chapter III.

That rivers, like man, when neglected soon lapse into a state of nature was specifically exemplified, for after the sixth pier was demolished the channel was soon filled to about its original state.

At this time many settlers were arriving and and locating along Pine Lake, and as they had to make clearing in order to subsist, the result was that an immense amount of the finest timber in the country was being sacrificed yearly. All recognized the wastefulness of this course but there was no alternative as the cord-wood business for the local market was but a comparatively small part of the annual cutting.

The only remedy in sight was the opening of the river so that the surplus could be shipped. During the summer of 1869 the tug Minnie Warren was set to again dredge the lower channel.

This work of dredging a channel for instance requires, was attended with considerable difficulty as the constantly accumulating and speedily filled the channel and the water spread out, fan-like until there was no place at which there was over six inches in depth and the wheel of the tug Minnie no longer had sufficient force to carry the sand out into the lake.

In order to relieve this congestion an ox team with scraper was employed and by passing across the river and depositing the sand on either side, the tug was finally enabled to force her way through to Lake Michigan.

In August of this year (1869) the Magic Leaf, 87 tons burden, was towed into the harbor and prepared for service. At this time, with the exception of the Mill Company, Henry Morgan was the only shipper and he dealt exclusively in ties, post and telegraph poles that he could form into small rafts that could be floated down the river and towed out to vessels lying at anchor awaiting cargo. The ties and posts were shoved from these rafts up over the side of the vessel and as there was often something of a swell on the waters, this work was of a somewhat disagreeable and dangerous nature. Amongst the longshoremen of those days who are still living may be noted Morris J. Stockman of the city, William Nelson Jr. of Boyne Falls, Robert Price of East Jordan and the writer hereof, (whoever he may be.

At a meeting of the Improvement Co. E. H. Green, A. Buttars and Philo Dewey were appointed as committee to secure and forward petition to the legislature favoring an appropriation of state swamp land for drainage purposes, the idea being to drain Pine and Round Lakes by deepening Pine River. The petition was duly presented by Senator Moffatt and resulted in securing an appropriation of sixteen sections of swamp land—but for reasons that have never become fully apparent the appropriation was soon cancelled and the settlers again thrown upon their own resources.

Early in 1872 a mass meeting was called at which Robert Miller was president and Willard A. Smith secretary, at which pledges to the amount of $2270 were secured to prosecute the work, and in February of that year the work was commenced in earnest.

The method decided on was the construction of timber cribs 16x40 feet, to be built in place on the ice, accordingly a crew of men was sent to the woods to get out timber, another crew sawed and removed the ice and a crew of carpenters under Henry Morgan, framed the timbers ready to be placed in the work, the timbers were then placed in the water and the construction proceeded in all respects as in the building of a block house.

The winter of 1871-2 was one of the coldest ever known in this region and the mercury of 32 degrees was sufficient to keep all hands on the move and loitering was not known on the job. Nine cribs aggregating a length of 360 feet were constructed and sank in the north pier and a limited amount of stone to ballast them was hauled on the ice from the gravy south of Two mile Point.

The real tug came in the spring after the ice went out and the mad winds and wild waves got in their work on the very insecurely ballasted structure. During the first storm two cribs left their proper position and emigrated to a secure position on the beach some distance to the northward and several of those remaining in place were in a thoroughly demoralized condition. The two tugs were sent out after the recalcitrant cribs but their united efforts proved insufficient to move them in the least.

The condition of the work was truly desperate as stone could be obtained only in limited quantity and by slow process and there was great danger that the remaining cribs would join their companions on the beach.

This was a contest of man vs. the elements and at this time the elements seemed to have a decisive advantage, so much so that some of the most staunch supporters of the work gave it up as lost.

(To be Continued.)

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

FOR SALE—House and lot on South Bridge street. Inquire of W. H. Miller. tf

Why the Earth Cannot Explode.

The theory of Prosperetti attributes that planets and stars arise sometimes explode, and that the earth may, without a blow, at any moment, be reduced to a celestial body like the moon. If the explosion factor of our globe could be replaced by antagonistic and destructive explosions which would not lift the earth, but would shake it to its centre, we assume that the crust of the earth is from fifty to a hundred miles in thickness, and that the combustible matter grows powerful than even nitroglycerine to burst the shell. It is necessary only to do a little thinking to see that the pressure of the earth's crust is a depth of from fifty to a hundred miles far exceeds the pressure exerted by the most powerful high explosive.—Hudson Maxim.

Memory.

Memory lets lapse: "They are poor who save not nothing; they are poorer by who hoarding, have forgotten; they most poor of all who lose and wish they might forget."

THE NEW COUNTY OFFICERS

Chas. Novak is sheriff, having qualified Tuesday and assumed the duties of the office. Following is the list of his appointments:

Under-sheriff—Henry Cook, Boyne City.
Deputy—Chas. Jefferies, Charlevoix.
Deputy—Geo. Houghton, Boyne City.

The Mr. Ferren appointment is deferred until spring.

E. L. Lewis took the oath as prosecutor, and is on the job.

County Treasurer elect Weaver will qualify the last of the week, awaiting the completion of the official sight.

TRY THIS FOR NEURALGIA

Thousands of people keep on suffering with Neuralgia because they do not know what to do for it. Neuralgia is a pain in the nerves. What you want to do is to soothe the nerve itself. Apply Sloan's Liniment to the surface over the painful part—do not rub it in Sloan's Liniment penetrates very quickly to the sore, irritated nerve and allays the inflammation. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against colds, sore and swollen joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

LARGEST CROP IN HISTORY

The Government Statistics Show 259,000,000 Bushels of Fruit Harvested in U. S.

This year's apple crop was the largest ever produced in the United States. Estimates announced by the department of agriculture placed the 1914 yield at 259,000,000 bushels, or 114,000,000 more than the produced last year.

These figures represent the actual "agricultural yield," the department explained, and should not be confused with those of the commercial crop, which comprise the marketed portion of the total production.

The five leading states in the production of apples this year were New York, 40,000,000 bushels; Pennsylvania, 25,100,000; Michigan, 17,200,000; Virginia, 15,300,000; Kentucky, 14,500,000.

PAYTON TWICE BANQUETED

Retiring County Official is Given Testimonial Receptions and Dinners

In recognition of untiring and efficient services of D. S. Payton in the cause of the Masonic Temple construction, the building committee, of which Mr. Payton was a member, gave him and his family a complimentary dinner at the Temple Friday evening. We append the menu and program.

MENU

Cocktail—"Payton Special"
Celery Olives
Olives — Dates — Mixed Pickles
Roast Turkey with Dressing
Giblet Gravy
Mashed Potatoes — Cranberry sauce
Rolls
Salad
Mrs. Payton's Favorite
Mincemeat pie — St. John's sauce
Coffee

Following the banquet came the program:

PROGRAM

Toastmaster, W. Herschel Miller

Payton's Work in Masonry . . . Frank G. Mills
Payton as a Citizen . . . Judge Joseph H. Filer
Payton as a Neighbor . . . Rev. Daniel L. Pratt
Payton as a Business Man . . . Frank W. Gunsolus
Days . . . Miss Minnie Payton
Mother Payton to answer . . . Mrs. Payton
Women's Club and Home . . . Mrs. M. Ackley
Payton's Work for Charlevoix . . . Judge Kelsey
Evolution of the Past Year . . . Frank Bennett
Evolution of the Next Year . . . Olaf Nordrum
Impromptu . . . Rev. Wm. Lewis, Rev. Daniel L. Pratt
Getting Back . . . Hon. Daniel S. Payton

AND YET ANOTHER

As these columns are being closed, (Wednesday evening) Charlevoix citizens, outside of any society affiliation, are surrounding the banquet board at the Masonic Temple in honor of Mr. Payton. There is a program of speeches all of which will be interestingly personal in their nature.

Occasions have been rare when the departure of a citizen has called forth such spontaneous testimonials as regard as these events in honor of D. S. Payton. Northern Michigan knows him as a competent and efficient factor in development work; Charlevoix county knows him as one of the most untiring and trustworthy officials in the roster of forty-five years of the county's existence; Charlevoix city knows him as a model citizen and good neighbor. Notwithstanding his heroic and valuable work as a director in the West Michigan Development Bureau, his watchfulness of his county's interests there and the laborious and exacting character of his official court house work, Mr. Payton has always found time cheerfully to operate with citizens of Charlevoix in local enterprises and social functions, to which he has always been accorded by his wife and daughter. These testimonials of regard are richly deserved. While Charlevoix sincerely regrets losing Mr. Payton and his family, there is gratification in the fact that Charlevoix county still retains them.

W. C. T. U.

The W. C. T. U. will hold the monthly meeting at the Congregational church Jan 8. Following is the program:

Singing . . . Society
Devotionals . . . Mrs. H. F. Parmele
Reading of the Minutes
Business
Song . . . It's a Long Way to Prohibition
Talk . . . Mr. Hall, Secy of T. M. C. A.
Reading . . . Members
Fathers' Testimonials
Song . . . O! Where is my Wandering Boy
Music . . . High School Orchestra

A special invitation is young mothers.

TO CHARLEVOIX TOWNSHIP TAXPAYERS

Those wishing to pay taxes, may do so at any time the coupon sheets at the office of Dr. F. H. Wilkinson, over the Post-Office.

JAMES B. WILKINSON, Treas.

PERE MARQUETTE WORTH $96,962,77!

The Appraisal Was Made by Dean Cooley of U. of M. and Given to the Commission

The Pere Marquette railway system has a reproduction value of $96,962,977, according to the appraisal completed by Dean Mortimer E. Cooley of the University of Michigan, announced to the state railroad commission and receivers here. $78,546,241 is fixed as the reproduction cost less depreciation.

The appraisal was made, lasted after eight months work by Dean Cooley, a large staff of experts and assistants. Even the cost of the road at $45,392 per mile or $86,770, less depreciation.

There is a total of 2,096.97 miles of track in the state and 2,966.87 in five states and Canada.

Dean Cooley's report was submitted at a meeting held here Thursday at which were received Paul King Dudley E. Waters, officials of the Pere Marquette railroad and numbers of the state railroad commission.

The full text of the report contains the equivalent of 180 pages of single space typewritten matter and the appendices contain 160 pages more. The detailed report is contained in sixty volumes, each volume averaging about 750 to 775 words and in addition there are ten large packing cases filled with maps, maps, field surveys and other data used in connection with the appraisal.

The report will be used in part as a basis in straightening out the railway's affairs and getting out of the hands of the receivers and into possession of new owners.

EXCELLENT WORK

The figures have been compiled which tell what has been done in a publicity way for Western Michigan during the past year. Over ninety thousand pieces of printed matter have been distributed over thirteen thousand news letters have been sent to newspapers, nearly twelve thousand letters have been mailed, approximately five thousand being individual dictated letters. Over two thousand letters went to Supervisors. Over seven hundred photographs were furnished to newspapers and magazines and about twenty pages of special articles prepared for publishers and editors.

Printed matter has been sent into practically every state in the union and to a number of foreign countries. Articles telling of Western Michigan and its possibilities have appeared in newspapers and magazines in many of the larger cities between the Atlantic coast and the Rocky Mountains. Thousands of people have become interested in the Western Michigan country and its wonderful resources. Several thousand people visited the region the past season and many more are coming in the immediate future. A reasonable per cent of these visitors become settlers. Western Michigan is becoming favorably known.

CHRATEL—HULL

At the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Hull, on State street, occurred the marriage of their daughter Miss Nellietto M. to Frank Chratel, on Thursday evening, Dec. 31. A large company of relatives and friends were present. Rev. Quinton Walker used the beautiful and impressive ring service of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The young people will reside in the city, and their many friends wish them a long happy and prosperous life.

FIELD DAY

The Anti-Saloon League will have a Field Day in Charlevoix next Sunday. Speakers will be in all the pulpits of the city. This is your opportunity to get "sparks right off the anvil." Every one invited. Let us make this a big day.

Charlevoix County Bank

The Charlevoix County Bank wishes you all a Happy New Year.

A. F. BRIDGE, Cashier.

JOHN NICHOLS, President. A. BUTTARS, Vice-President.
A. F. BRIDGE, Cashier. H. D. MOHRMANN, Asst. Cashier.

Dr. Marden's Uplift Talks

By ORISON SWETT MARDEN.

VIM IS THE POWER OF SUCCESS.

There is no other success quality excepting honesty which is more in demand today in all lines of business endeavor than vim. Everybody believes in it; everywhere we hear:

"Give us a man who can do something; a man who has push, a man with iron in his blood." Ability is worthless without the power to put it into action. Resolutions, however good, are useless without the energy necessary to carry them out. Push clears the track, pushes out of the way of an energetic man. "Energy is what wins. Many men fail to reach the mark because the powder in them is not proportioned to the bullet. Were men full to attain success in life from lack of energy—that force which achieves, accomplishes, pushes its way through obstacles—than from almost anything else.

No matter how much ability a young man may have, or how clever, courteous or amiable he may be, if he lacks energy, the powder of success, he never accomplishes much. There is no success in weakness, no victory in the uncertain step, hesitating will, lagging hand, or languid brain of an exhausted man. Even small ability with great energy will accomplish more than the greatest ability without energy. If food from a poor cook is such that velocity a tallow candle can be shot through an inch board.

He who is hampered by depleted vitality is constantly losing opportunities because he lacks strength to grasp them, to hold on to them, and to use them. He is forced behind and sees men who have not half his mental capacity, but who have strong physiques and all their power intact, forge ahead of him and seize the prizes. The great prizes, then, which everyone has to face is how to generate energy, how to conserve it, and how to keep oneself always at the top of his condition. Whenever you are angry or feel like grinding or pouting—whenever you are gloomy, fretful or morose—you are consuming your energy, wasting your vitality, and opening the sluiceways in your mental reservoir, instead of sending the power over the wheel to drive the machinery of life. Every thing which frets, chafes, rasps or brings inharmony into life is a vitality-waster. Whatever brings discord into the nervous system destroys power. Friction is a deadly foe to happiness and success. It grinds away the delicate bearings of life's machinery without doing any good or increasing our value. To free life from friction, to increase all the facilities and to stop all the leaks of energy is the first duty to oneself and to others.

Millions of people have made miserable failures in life by letting this precious energy, which might have made them successful, slip away from them in foolish living and silly dissipation. Much of the worst kind of energy-dissipation is not what is commonly called "immoral." It is often the result of ignorance, carelessness, or neglect; but it is dissipation, all the same.

If you would make your mark in the world, and do your part in advancing civilization, you must cut off everything which is an energy-waster or succession-killer. Do not do anything or touch anything which will lower your vitality. Always ask yourself, "What is there in this thing I am going to do which will add to my life-work, which will increase my power, keep me in a more superb condition, and make me more efficient in the service of humanity?"

WORKING WITH DULL TOOLS.

I criticized a carpenter working for me recently for using dull tools. He excused himself by saying that he had been too busy to sharpen them. He had been working for weeks with a dull saw and with a plane which had notches in it, leaving ugly ridges on the boards it was planing. This man had probably wasted more time in working with dull tools than it would have taken to sharpen them several times; to say nothing of the inferior work he did with them.

There are multitudes of people who never do good work because they never prepare for it, never put themselves in a position to do good work. They never sharpened their tools; never trained themselves for it, and they go through life botching their jobs.

Every youth should put himself in superb condition to make his life a success. He should prepare himself to do the best work of which he is capable.

The great reason why so many people make botches of their lives is because they didn't start right, they never learned their life trade. It does not matter what a youth decides to do in life, he should endeavor to be an expert in it, an artist instead of an artisan.

Our intelligence offices are constantly filled with people no matter how good the times, who have never half learned to do any particular thing, never learned a trade. The great majority of house servants do dishes the work because they never learned to do anything else, and this was about the only thing they could do without preparation.

How often we see men who spend most of their lives as day laborers working on the street, on railroads and ships, on farms, in all sorts of places where they get only very small wages, who have the natural ability to do something infinitely better and to earn many times as much money, but they never learned to do anything in particular, and so they drifted into the only positions they could fill without special preparation.

On the other hand, there are a great many who are in a position to prepare for their life-work, who dissipate and destroy all their chances of success by carelessness or by neglecting the laws of health. Through ignorance, indifference or carelessness their faculties, their tools, are so dulled that they are unable to do what they long to.

How often we see young people starting in life with great ambitions to make a place for themselves in the world and to do something worth while, and yet they are ruining the possibility of their doing anything very important by ignoring the laws of health, in all sorts of ways lowering their physical standards, devitalizing themselves so that they do not have sufficient force for any great accomplishment. The very thing that they are most dependent upon for attaining their object, a strong and vigorous vitality, they sacrifice.

One can accomplish wonderful things with no other capital than robust health and the determination to make something of himself, but no matter how much ambition one has, if he deviates himself, if he ruins his health by vicious habits, devitalizing himself in any direction or in particular life, he knows that his only chance of accomplishing anything very important is gone.

Everything a man does depends upon his physical condition. All of his physical defects, physical weaknesses, will reappear in whatever he does, and his mental condition will always harmonize with his physical state.

"Health is the foundation of all things."

"Vim is the power of success."

NEWAYGO COUNTY TO HAVE ONE OF LARGEST ORCHARDS IN MICHIGAN

By H. J. DANIELS.

One of the largest orchards in Michigan is to be planted in Newaygo county, southeast of Fremont 14 miles. The orchard will be located on the Jennings farm, a farm of 4,000 acres, and probably the largest of its kind in western Michigan. The orchard will be in bearing in a few years, and each year the acreage will be increased. The farm is to be planted in "Newaygo county, southeast of Fremont 14 miles. The orchard will be located on the Jennings farm, a farm of 4,000 acres, and probably the largest of its kind in western Michigan. The orchard will be in bearing in a few years, and each year the acreage will be increased. The farm is to be planted in apples, peaches and cherries, the latter being the same variety as those which are grown in the Grand Traverse region. The orchard will be located in the Ashland district, and will be in charge of a man who is a graduate of the Michigan Agricultural college. He will be assisted by a year of 12 months and when classroom work is not taking his attention he supervises gardens in all parts of the city, and urges the school children individually to learn the art of growing plant life. Such a feature of this kind is conducted and prizes awarded. In the winter months this teacher of agriculture visits the various local grangers and gives talks upon the various phases of agriculture. It is believed that by the time the lumber industry is at an end the agricultural industry will be well established.

SHEEP TO PAY FOR BOY'S EDUCATION

"Little Pete" and His Flock of Sheep.

In the accompanying picture is Little Pete and his flock of sheep given him by I. P. Haight, the "sand sod farmer" and woolen manufacturer of Muskegon. He owns a large area of sandy land which he claims that the lands are good for grazing. He gave little Pete ten sheep and told him that if the boy would care for the sheep he would give him all the increase from wool and lambs, and that by the time he was ready to go to college he would have the money paid.

Little Pete, who lives near by, is sticking well to his job and now in the second season has several lambs to show for his pains, and has made some money selling mutton.

There are several Little Petes that Mr. Haight is thus helping to get an education.

GETS PROFIT OUT OF CLAM SHELLS

A unique industry depending on natural resources of western Michigan is that of gathering clam shells for the manufacture of pearl buttons. For the past three years Mr. George Reynolds of Austin township, Mecosta county, has been gathering clams in the summer season, and has acquired a good working knowledge of the business.

The clams are found in abundance in the Muskegon river. Mr. Reynolds this year covered the river in his search for clams from the Rogers to the Croton dams—a distance of 15½ miles by wagon road, but perhaps 40 miles by the river.

The water is shallow enough in most places to permit of gathering the clams by hand. For ideal working conditions, however, the surface of the water should be free from waves due to winds, so as to move it too slightly to see the bottom readily. The clam is in an erect position, the two halves of the shell being open and resting in the mud. They obtain food by causing a constant stream of water to pass through their body, extracting nourishment from such food particles as they can use.

As soon as the clam seeker discovers a victim, he lowers the long-handled stick which he carries, inserting the hook between the halves of the shell. This causes the clam to shut the halves together, whereupon he can be lifted out and transferred to a receptacle which the clam gatherer tows for that purpose. Of course the laborers are wading constantly, so that the season for such work is naturally limited to the summer months when the water is warm.

For use in deep water or under conditions where it would be difficult to observe a victim, Mr. Reynolds has a drag made up of over a hundred wire hooks. This drag will cover an area of three feet in width. It is held in the man or launch towing it.

The launch is designed and built especially for the work in hand, the propeller being inclosed in a guard-frame from which protrudes a flat bottomed launch to slip over stones without injuring it. Apart from this precaution the propeller blades would be broken in shallow, rock-bottomed waters.

When launch and scow are filled the catch of clams is taken to shore. It might be said, however, that not every clam that is taken is considered worth keeping. Only white-shelled mussel clams are saved. Three-ridge clams, or "hickory-nut" clams, whose shells are strongly elevated laminal lines, are discarded, as are also any blackshelled specimens. The ridged shells bring a lower price and must be packed separately, and so are not bothered with at all.

To remove the clam flesh from the shell it is necessary to boil the clams for about ten minutes, when the halves part and the laborer dumps out the loosened contents. Usually this material is buried, although it would make good feed for hogs if used while fresh and not allowed to decompose. Many people are fond of the flesh of the mussels, and others relish it the thought of using it for food. The clam is similar in habits to the oyster. Like the latter, it spends its entire vital use of the flesh, he does watch for the loosened contents. Usually this material is buried, although it would make good feed for hogs if used while fresh and not allowed to decompose. Many people are fond of the flesh of the mussels, and others relish it the thought of using it for food. The clam is similar in habits to the oyster. Like the latter, it spends its entire vital that come from the resorts in northern Michigan. Sturgeon is the favorite fishing around the Beaver islands, off Charlevoix, where many years ago the notorious King Strang of Mormon days held forth. Fish that measure four feet long and weigh 40 pounds are very common, while a big yellow pike that weighed 18 pounds, five feet nine inches long, weighing sixty-five to sixty-eight pounds, is not uncommon.

Lake Michigan Fish Caught at Beaver Island.

ANNUAL POTATO CONGRESS.

The first annual potato congress in Cleveland held recently at Menominee not only proved of interest to the sugar peddlers and dealers visiting from all over the country, but the same exhibit placed later at Milwaukee proved a revelation to both dealers and consumer in that city and surrounding towns.

Not only the potato itself made a favorable impression but the method of wrapping or packing it attracted the same manner that oranges and other fruits are shipped made an impression at Milwaukee and was given much publicity. The idea of wrapping potatoes originated with the Upper Peninsula Development bureau, under whose auspices the congress and Milwaukee and the exhibit at Milwaukee were held. In connection with the wrapping, all potatoes are sorted and carefully graded, which aided materially in introducing Michigan potatoes in the Wisconsin city.

Menominee county captured first and second prizes in Class I.

BIG CROP OF CABBAGE.

George Mouyana, who owns a farm near Gladstone, Delta county, harvested 15 tons of cabbages from three-fourths of an acre of ground this fall. A market was found for all the cabbage he brought him better than two cents per pound. This should mean a revenue of $100 from the field, and even with a less return per pound or two cents per pound he would have been making more money than he could make in any other crop he might plant.

Mr. Meyanas raised about four hundred pounds of onions last season, all this year which is now stored in Escanaba. The present low price of onions has induced the grower to hold for more than it was a year or two ago, and the country will be well supplied with onions. Mr. Meyanas is a Greek and land farmers turning their attention to growing other industry, possibly only growing or raising cabbage and onions.

TO HELP DEVELOPMENT WORK.

With the idea of assisting in the development of northeastern Michigan, and especially that section tributary to the Detroit & Mackinac railway, that company has established the office of industrial commissioner, and Frank H. Gregory of Bay City has been appointed to the position.

The duties of the office are to aid in locating new industries in towns along the line of the road and to assist in bringing in new settlers to those districts where there are good farm lands, and in this work Mr. Gregory will be a material aid to the North eastern Michigan Development bureau. Mr. Gregory has been manager of the Bay City Commercial association since the organization of the concern.

MICHIGAN LEADS IN APPLES.

Michigan is one of the twelve great apple producing states of the Union and leads in the production of the four most important varieties, according to a recent bulletin of the agricultural department.

During the years from 1909-13 this state produced an annual average of 1,248,000 bushels of Baldwins, 924,000 bushels of Ben Davises, 1,966,000 bushels of Northern Spys, 893,000 Greenings and 924,000 Oldenburgs. Michigan produced 17 per cent of the Baldwins, 8.5 per cent of the Northern Spys, 8.5 per cent of the Ben Davises, 5 per cent of the Oldenburgs, 3.7 per cent of the Golden Russets, and 3.7 per cent of the snow apples, and 3.7 per cent of the Wealthies.

TURN FROM LUMBER TO AGRICULTURE.

Boyne City is the center of the lumbering industry for the northern part of the southern peninsula of this state. Lumbering is the industry of the city but realize that a day will come when there will be but few saw logs left to cut, and so they are preparing for this day by the adoption of a course in agricultural resources. The school has a department of agriculture which is in charge of a man who is a graduate of the Michigan Agricultural college. He is assisted by a year of 12 months and when classroom work is not taking his attention he supervises gardens in all parts of the city, and urges the school children individually to learn the art of growing plant life. Such a feature of this kind is conducted and prizes awarded. In the winter months this teacher of agriculture visits the various local grangers and gives talks upon the various phases of agriculture. It is believed that by the time the lumber industry is at an end the agricultural industry will be well established.

Modern Methods of Marketing in Missaukee County.

Up in Missaukee county where the roads are not yet built on the state reward plan—not many of them at least—the roads are very sandy and deep. A heavy load makes a team of horses stagger to the limit, and a team of oxen earn a good dinner every time they go to mill or town, but an automobile carries a load with an ease that amazes every man that owns one. The result is that the teams are not carrying their keep so far as road work and marketing are concnrn, but the automobile is doing its share, and so are not bothered with at all.

To remove the clam flesh from the shell it is necessary to boil the clams for about ten minutes, when the halves part and the laborer dumps out the loosened contents. Usually this material is buried, although it would make good feed for hogs if used while fresh and not allowed to decompose. Many people are fond of the flesh of the mussels, and others relish it the thought of using it for food. The clam is similar in habits to the oyster. Like the latter, it spends its entire vital use of the flesh, he does watch for the loosened contents. Usually this material is buried, although it would make good feed for hogs if used while fresh and not allowed to decompose. Many people are fond of the flesh of the mussels, and others relish it the thought of using it for food. The clam is similar in habits to the oyster. Like the latter, it spends its entire vital use of the flesh, he does watch for the loosened contents. Usually this material is buried, although it would make good feed for hogs if used while fresh and not allowed to decompose. Many people are fond of the flesh of the mussels, and others relish it the thought of using it for food. The clam is similar in habits to the oyster. Like the latter, it spends its entire vital to be cessed some irritating particle or particle of foreign matter which becomes embedded in the tissue which surrounds the shell.

These pearls are classified as (1) button, (2) button and button, (3) button and button, (4) button and button, (5) button and button, (6) button and button, (7) button and button, (8) button and button, (9) button and button, (10) button and button, (11) button and button,

Levinson's Clearance Sale----

WILL END

Saturday, January 9th

Take Advantage of this

Bargain Event

Go to ---LEVINSON'S---Get the Habit

C. Danto & Son.

THE - STORE - OF - QUALITY — WHERE - ALL - GOODS - ARE - FRESH

The Store Of Quality . . .

Fancy Oranges,

Twenty Dozen Fresh Dressed Poultry Always Ready for You.

Fancy and Staple Groceries Right Before Your Eyes.

C. Danto & Son.

212 Bridge St. Phone No. 12 - Phone No. 60

10 Great Serials

full of life and action, filled with the fire of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure will mass

The YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds in the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

52 Times a Year —not 12.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for

THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE

CUT THIS OUT and send it for 52 weeks of 1915 —$1.75 for The COMPANION for 1915, and we will send

FREE—All subscriptions received in 1914 for the remaining issues of 1914 to date

FREE—THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.

THEN—The 52 Weekly issues of The Companion for 1915.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

FRIGATE BIRDS IN FLIGHT.

Their Amazing Power and Perfect Command of the Air.

The haunt of that remarkable creature, the frigate bird, is the southern oceans, where it makes its nest on some lonely coral or rocky island. For that purpose it selects the Cocos, Ascension or Kerguelen, along with booby gannets, "stole awake" terns the beautiful boatswain birds or the great booby gannet. It leaves the ground as if from a few strips and fabricates a rude platform on top of some bush or tree, or even upon a ledge of rock, and large and broods over a single egg—all that it deals to produce in a situation so safe and so fiercely protected.

The frigate bird is large, its slender but powerful wings spreading at least four feet from tip to tip, while the body is no less than forty inches from the beak of the great beak to the tip of the long forked tail. The color is black, with purple and green glints, but the feet are black, the bill bluish into the mouth, which is peculiar to the male and is inflated to flight, is scarlet, as also is a ring about the eye. The gular pouch indicates the close relationship of these birds to the pelicans, but their habits are more like birds of prey and one good name for them is man of war hawks.

On the wing they show perfect command of the air. Their flight is swift and full of grace. They are supposedly untiring, keeping away from land for weeks at a time, soaring in enormous heights and descending with amazing speed. They can ride out a hurricane, scudding low and taking a roof in their wings, so as to expose only the tipped quills to the gale. They are able to support themselves for long hours without apparent motion, and it is a beautiful sight to watch one of them floating overhead against the deep blue sky, the long forked tail alternately opening and shutting like a pair of scissors and the head swinging slowly from side to side, as if searching the horizon. Frigate birds feed on surface swimming fish, squids, crabs and young turtles.

TRAINED FOR THE GAME.

He Played His Part Well and Won When His Chance Came.

Senator Harry Lane, who is also an M. D., was once superintendent of the Oregon State insane asylum. One day he was telling a group of his colleagues some of his experiences while there. He said when he took the job he ordered the walls around the institution torn down, arguing that if any real lunatic escaped they would be detected and returned, but that if any escaped who could not be detected they did not belong there anyway.

"A patient came along one day," he said, "and began a performance that was new to all of us. The inmates of the asylum were turned out on the lawn each morning for exercise. Well, the man I was talking about immediately began to run on a dog trot from one end of the building to the other. The patients having specialties of their own didn't notice him.

"Back and forth he went, not only on the first morning, but on every morning for months and months. He wore a path along the side of the asylum. We couldn't help but admire his perseverance. He certainly stuck to his job. But one day Mr. Man, the moment he was let out, wriggled away from the crowd and started across the fields. Guards followed in pursuit. Trained for months, and that had been his game all along, he rapidly made monkeys of the guards. He'd let them get almost within reaching distance and then he would spurt. So he vanished, and we never heard of him again."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch

The Spy and the King.

The following story is told of Louis XVIII, king of France, and Fouche, who had been at one time Napoleon's minister of police: After the Bourbon restoration the king asked Fouche whether he had set a spy upon him during the empire. Fouche admitted that he had. "Who was the spy? the king asked, and he was informed that it had been the Comte de Blacas. "How much did he get?" continued the king. "Two hundred thousand francs a year, your majesty." "Ah, well," said Louis, "he was honest, then, after all. I had only—"

The Sickroom Door.

In severe cases of illness where the patient is disturbed by the noise made in closing the door tie one corner of a handkerchief around the knob on one side of the door and the opposite corner around the knob on the other side. The door will now close noiselessly on the folds of the handkerchief.

An important Point.

A city girl was taking a course in an agricultural college. After a lecture on "How to Increase the Milk Flow" she rose for a question.

"How long," she blushingly inquired, "must one feed a cow before she will give whipped cream?"—Judge.

Professional Habit.

"That policeman is too conscientious to be a performer"

"What do you mean?"

"He arrested the growth of a vine on the front of his house when he found it was a porch climber."—Baltimore American.

SALARIES OF SINGERS.

Present Day Stars Would Laugh at These Old Time Payments.

In the good old days of 200 years ago or so singers and actors gave the world their greatest effort for what was undoubtedly considered excellent remuneration, but what in these days would find times of high priced voices and talents would seem to be pitifully small. And who shall say the performers of the past were not fully as capable as the pampered darlings of the present?

The highest salary paid went to Chasse, who received 2,000 livres, or $400, a year as her first salary, 1,000 livres extra for perquisites, 1,200 livres for Easter and 200 for breed, wine and boots; in those days an extraordinary allowance.

Mlle. Antier, the first soprano of her day, was a close second, with 4,800 francs, or nearly $1,000, a year. Today a prima donna receives more than that for a single evening. In a year "La Camargo," the most beautiful woman of her day, received in francs what many of the lesser singers of today receive in a week in dollars—2,700 francs.

Louis XIV. had the reputation of being a most generous manager and dramatic agent, since he granted 200 livres a month for the use of his opera performances and about 100 livres for the rehearsals. The doyen of the ballet received 120 livres for the first six performances and sixty for later ones.—Argonaut

RING OF THE FISHERMAN.

Used by the Popes to Seal Documents at the Holy See.

The ring of the fisherman used by the pope exclusively to seal documents of the holy see shows an engraved figure of St. Peter, the first bishop of Rome, standing in a boat and fishing with two hands a net into the sea.

In 1862, when the French occupied the city of Rome, Pius VII., then pope, was ordered by General Lamoricière to render the fisherman's ring. The pontiff refused. He feared that by power of the sanction of the ring the French government would be enabled to issue dishonest documents.

When finally forced to surrender it he gave orders that an engraving of a stamp with the view of making it use less by his enemies. This seal then was forwarded to Paris by the French general in command at Rome. On "11, in the presence of the fisherman's ring, made use of an iron disk engraved with the legends of St. Peter and Paul and inscribed with the words, "Pro Annulo Piscatoris" on the face of the fisherman's ring.

The fisherman's ring was kept in Pius ninth Napoleon I. was overthrown, when it was returned to the sovereign pontiff. The first instance of its use in Rome, in the pontiff's private documents, are stamped with the impression of the ancient parchments.—Indianapolis News.

BRAVERY IN BATTLE.

After the Fighting Has Begun the Officers Give Few Orders.

An officer in our regular army who saw fighting in the Russian war point out that the other day that most persons had a very wrong conception of how soldiers fight in modern battles.

"Every regiment has wheeled into position to attack the foe and the moment it was in sight, the trained army officers really have little to do with the operations. There is no such thing for one thing, that commands count in battle, and for the time being officers in many armies, have been substituted for bugles, because their shrill blast carries better than the nearer notes of the brass. Beyond giving the signal for the charge the officers can do little. The men, once they see the line of the enemy in front of them, know what is expected of them and carry out their work with surprisingly few orders.

"Skirmish drills in times of peace have taught the troops how to act together, and it is amazing to see how quickly the men adapt themselves to the conditions of actual battle. It is the corporals and sergeants who are in the line with the men who are the real steadying influence in a fight. They know the characteristics of the individual private in a way that the commissioned officers can never know them and are respected to give a calming word to this or that one when the emergency arises.

"In my own experience I have known a private who had served three enlistments to take charge of a company in a charge, and the officers and noncoms were very glad to leave it to him. After the scrap was over he became a private once more, but whilst that was on, so far as actual influence with the men was concerned, he was of a great deal more importance than his captain. The way that man could wriggle into cover was a revelation, and he went through three campaigns without a scratch. His example in the regiment was a big asset.

"Bravery in battle, according to my experience, is very much a matter of temperament. Some men are carried along by a sort of ecstasy, others hold themselves to the work by sheer force of will, while others—and these are the best—go through a fight with a sort of grim interest as if it was a highly amusing though somewhat dangerous sport they were engaged in."—New York Times

HOW EFFECTIVELY TO PRESERVE THE BRIDE'S BOUQUET.

Many years ago it was quite the fashion to wave a part of the bridal bouquet, press the flowers and arrange them carefully, frame and hang them on the wall. Later, when wax flowers were introduced, the entire bouquet was sometimes reproduced in wax and proved under a glass case.

The wax flowers were somewhat more natural looking than the dried ones, as they did not fade or lose their color, but it was necessary to use extreme care in moving either the frame of dried flowers or the case of wax ones, as they were easily broken.

The twentieth century has introduced a custom much more lovely than those of the past. If the bride's bouquet is of roses take several and pinch them. If of roses stay used for decorations or for wedding of reception the petals might be saved to make a rose pillow for the bride. The method of slipping roses is: Place the stems in water for a day or two, then place in rather sandy soil. Place a glass jar over the little sip and press to down in the soil, so that it will be quite firm. This forms a miniature hothouse for the slip.

If the weather is too cold to plant the slip out of doors plant it to a pot and keep it inside. Whether indoors or out, the glass should be kept over the slip until the plant grows too large for it.

GOOD ROADS AND SCHOOLS.

How Better Highways Would Aid Country Education.

That improved roads would benefit our country school system, there would seem to be no doubt. Improved roads make it possible to consolidate or centralize the schools and to establish graded schools in the rural districts. Such schools centrally located will seldom require the children within a radius of from four to five miles. In many communities having the advantage of improved roads consolidated buildings have been erected, more competent teachers have been employed and modern facilities for teaching have been supplied at a minimum cost. For instance since the improvement of the main highway in Durham county, North Carolina, the number of schoolhouses has been reduced from sixty-five to forty-two, of which seventeen are graded and have two or more rooms, and employ two or more teachers.

There are at the present time about 2,000 consolidated rural schools in the United States. It appears that Massachusetts, Ohio and Indiana have made the greatest progress along these lines, and it is rather significant to note that in these states about one-third of the roads have been improved. According to statistics of the agricultural department, there was expended in 1909, $2,116 in Massachusetts for the conveyance of pupils to consolidated schools, but in 1910 the expenditure for this purpose amounted to $262,213. In Indiana 2,000 pupils were thus conveyed in 1904 amounted to $80,000, while in 1909 $200,000 was expended. This expenditure for transportation reflects, in a general way, the extent and progress of this new educational movement. It must not be understood that this is an arbitrary border, as the expenditure thus made is saved in other directions—that is, by the decrease in the number of schools and economy in their operation.—Leslie's Weekly.

GOOD ROADS PAY.

Encourage Agriculture and Otherwise Help the Farmers.

The law suppresses the usurer, but no law will ever be binding to prevent large interest returns on work investments as are represented in improved highways, says the Breeder's Gazette. An enterprise returning a 40 per cent dividend would be eagerly sought by investors. An ample supply of such "money" would send savings institutions into bankruptcy. And yet the good roads in a Virginia county are shown to have returned 40 per cent interest on the investment.

The figures on which this estimate is based are derived from a specific study of all the factors of the problem, a study conducted by the government. A bond issue of $10,000 was used to improve forty miles of road. Two years after the completion of the work the railway hauled from the county seat in one year 45 per cent more agricultural and forest products than were shipped in the same time before the roads were improved. The dairy products increased 120 per cent. In the light of this showing good roads are clearly entitled to be called crop producers.

From an average cost of hauling over the old roads of 20 cents a ton mile the cost fell to 12 cents a ton mile, or a saving of 8 cents a ton mile. A total of 520,000 ton miles represents a return of 40 per cent annually on the original outlay. It is well to talk in tenths, fractions of a cent saving that sort of thing. In a general way their comfort and convenience are appreciated, but the taxpayer needs to be persuaded in terms of cold cash.

Rice and Veal.

Rice is the mainstay of all common foods to digest and roast veal the most difficult.

Stop the Child's Colds—They Often Result Seriously

Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough are children's ailments that need immediate attention. The after-effects are often most serious. Don't take the risk—you don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery checks the cold, soothes the cough, allays the inflammation, kills the germs and allows nature to do her healing work. Sold by your druggist. Try a bottle today.

Coughs and Colds Quickly and Completely Cured.

Take Dr. King's New Discovery to-night. You will enjoy a quiet restful sleep, you Cough and Cold will be much better in the morning.

No need to suffer aggravating, annoying, exhausting Coughs, to fast fatigue, stuffy, irritable, out of sorts at home and with people you meet.

Get a 50c bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery—start taking at once. The first dose helps. In a short time you will be completely well and feel just fine. It's nothing to be trifled with. Stop the Cough, Relieve the Lungs, Expel the Cold Germs.

It is healing to the irritated and inflamed membranes. Get a bottle at once and keep in the house for sore throat, coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, grippe, bronchial coughs, throat and lung trouble.

G. E. Clark, Westfield, Iowa, writes: "After a severe attack of Pleurisy, I was left with a hacking cough which became worse and I was given up as hopeless. After taking three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery, I was completely cured."

Trial bottle mailed on receipt of 50c. H. E. BUCKLEN & CO., 607 Hayden Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

—FOR—

Furniture, Stoves, Ranges, Carpets, Rugs, Comforts and Blankets

—Go to—

S. M. SEE & SONS,

The Reliable Housefurnishers.

Last week we told you Flour would be higher.

It is.

It will be still higher.

Buy now.

Buy Iron Duke

Argo Milling Co.

MANUFACTURERS

It Will Pay You to Watch Blanchard's Bargain Counter

F. S. Blanchard Estate,

F. L. Bartholomew, Administrator.

Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix Homes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock, which consists of everything, such as Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper.

TELEPHONE NO. 22

A Good Time Piece Is a Business Necessity.....

We have the largest and best stock of jewelry that there is in the city. Before you buy we invite you to call and inspect the line we have to select from—the goods show for themselves.

C. R. Bellinger,

Near the Swing Bridge.

Charlevoix Rock Product Company,

Producers and Manufacturers of

Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Aericultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Flux
Sugar Stone.

For prompt city delivery Call Lee Howland, Phone 297.

H. D. Marshall,

"The Old Reliable"

CONTRACTOR FOR

Sewerage, Water Pipes, Cess Pools, Basements.

All Kinds of Excavating.

DISINFECTED!

All Work Guaranteed.

Estimates Furnished.

H. D. MARSHALL, Charlevoix, Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10c ASSORTED

Best Wishes, Greetings, Lovers, Birthday etc. Also post made in our Post Card Exchange free on request, see your nearest copy of the Family Story Paper; also Catalogue and Premium List. Enclose 10c in stamps for return postage, etc.

FAMILY STORY PAPER 24-26 Vandewater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes

Electric Construction Auto and Boat Supplies.

214 Bridge St. - Phone 184

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS SHOULD USE

BROPHY'S

The Best Remedy For all forms of Rheumatism

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, GOUT, RHEUMATISM AND KIDNEY TROUBLES

DROPS

STOP THE PAIN

Three Quick Relief Doses in the Worst Form of Rheumatism

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS

SAMPLE THE BROPHY FREE ON REQUEST

Dr. Brophy's Rheumatic Cure Co. 1400-1402 W. Lake St., Chicago

(First Publication November 12th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by William I. Swift and Ida Swift, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to the Lawyers Savings and Loan Association, a corporation of Michigan, dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1913, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, on the 3rd day of April, A. D. 1913, in liber 69 of mortgages, on page 1, on which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Twenty-Five Hundred Dollars ($2500) and no suit or proceeding has been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part of it; and the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative by reason of said default; and the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, and all legal costs, charges and expenses of sale, including an attorney fee of Fifty Dollars ($50) which sale will be made at the Charlevoix Township Hall, in the Village of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1915, at one o'clock in the afternoon of said day, of the following described premises, to wit: Lots Nine (9) and Ten (10) in Block Twenty-Six (26) in the Village of Charlevoix, according to the plat of said Village, as the same is now laid down and platted, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office in said County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, subject to the rights of the public therein.

Notice is hereby given that the above mortgage will be foreclosed by said sale, and that the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, and all legal costs, charges and expenses of said sale, including said attorney fee, will be sold at said place of sale, to satisfy said mortgage, together with the costs of this foreclosure, and the expenses of said sale.

The premises described in said mortgage are described as follows, to wit: Lots Nine (9) and Ten (10) in Block Twenty-Six (26) in the Village of Charlevoix, according to the plat of said Village, as the same is now laid down and platted, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office in said County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, subject to the rights of the public therein.

Dated November 12th, 1914.

LAWYERS SAVINGS & LOAN ASSOCIATION

Mortgagee.

CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

(First Publication November 12th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by William I. Swift and Ida Swift, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to the Lawyers Savings and Loan Association, a corporation of Michigan, dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1913, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, on the 3rd day of April, A. D. 1913, in liber 69 of mortgages, on page 2, on which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Twenty-Five Hundred Dollars (2500) and no suit or proceeding has been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part of it; and the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, has become operative by reason of said default; and the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, and all legal costs, charges and expenses of sale, including an attorney fee of Fifty Dollars (50) which sale will be made at the Charlevoix Township Hall, in the Village of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1915, at one o'clock in the afternoon of said day, of the following described premises, to wit: Lots Nine (9) and Ten (10) in Block Twenty-Six (26) in the Village of Charlevoix, according to the plat of said Village, as the same is now laid down and platted, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office in said County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, subject to the rights of the public therein.

Notice is hereby given that the above mortgage will be foreclosed by said sale, and that the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, and all legal costs, charges and expenses of said sale, including said attorney fee, will be sold at said place of sale, to satisfy said mortgage, together with the costs of this foreclosure, and the expenses of said sale.

Dated November 12, A. D. 1914.

LAWYERS SAVINGS & LOAN ASSOCIATION

Mortgagee.

CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

(First Publication November 12th)

STATE OF MICHIGAN

Thirteenth Judicial Circuit. Suit Pending

In the Circuit Court for the county of Charlevoix.

In Chancery.

In the city of Charlevoix, the 30th day of October, A. D. 1914. Present, Hon. Frederick W. Mayne, Circuit Judge.

Suit pending in the circuit court for the County of Charlevoix in Chancery, at Charlevoix, on the 30th day of October, A. D. 1914, it appearing from the bill of complaint, filed, that the Defendant James L. Ferguson, is not a resident of this state, but resides in Chicago in the state of Illinois, on motion of Clark C. Wood, complainant's solicitor, it is hereby ordered that the said Defendant James L. Ferguson, cause his appearance to be entered herein, within four months from the date of this order, and in case of his appearance, that he cause his answer to the complainant's bill of complaint to be filed in this cause, within twenty days after such appearance, and that in default thereof, said bill be taken as confessed by the defendant.

And it is further ordered, that within twenty days after the entry of this order, the complainant cause the substance of the order to be published, a newspaper printed and published in said County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, in accordance with the statutes in such case made and provided, and that such publication be continued therein in the manner and form as is prescribed in the statutes of Michigan, in such case made and provided, and that such publication be made in such manner as to be completed at least once in each week for six weeks in succession, or that a copy of this order be personally served on said defendant James L. Ferguson, out of the state of Michigan, at least twenty days before the time herein prescribed for his appearance to be entered herein.

FREDERICK W. MAYNE, Circuit Judge.

A true copy.

ARTHUR A. CORNELL, Circuit Commissioner.

(First Publication December 31)

NOTICE

State of Michigan,

Circuit Court, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

Lee Howland, Plaintiff,

vs.

Lee Howland, Defendant.

Charlevoix County, ss. To Lee Howland, defendant, in the above entitled cause: Take notice that a writ of attachment issued against the above-entitled cause from said court on the 30th day of October, A. D. 1914, in favor of said plaintiff against said defendant for the sum of $225.00 with five per cent interest from September 29th, 1914, and costs, which was made returnable December 30th, 1914.

Dated November 30, 1914.

WILLIAM S. CULTY,

Attorney for Plaintiff

Business Address: 801 Mich. Trust Bldg. Grand Rapids, Michigan.

(First Publication December 31)

Notice of Hearing Claims

State of Michigan,

Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

In the matter of the estate of Forest S. Hinchcliff, Deceased.

It is ordered, that four months from date be the time for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to said court for examination and adjustment, and that all such claims against said deceased be presented to Charles Hinchcliff, executor, at the place of his residence in Charlevoix, in said County, and that such claims will be heard by said court on the 1st day of April, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

Dated December 31, A. D. 1914.

SAMUEL S. CORNELL,

Judge of Probate.

(First Publication Nov. 26)

STATE OF MICHIGAN

Thirteenth Judicial Circuit. Suit Pending

In Chancery.

In the city of Charlevoix, the ninth day of November, A. D. 1914. Present, Hon. Frederick W. Mayne, Circuit Judge.

Suit pending in the circuit court for the County of Charlevoix in Chancery, at Charlevoix, on the 9th day of November, A. D. 1914, it appearing from the bill of complaint, filed, that the Defendant James L. Ferguson, is not a resident of this state, but resides in Chicago in the state of Illinois, on motion of Clark C. Wood, complainant's solicitor, it is hereby ordered that the said Defendant James L. Ferguson, cause his appearance to be entered herein, within four months from the date of this order, and in case of his appearance, that he cause his answer to the complainant's bill of complaint to be filed in this cause, within twenty days after such appearance, and that in default thereof, said bill be taken as confessed by the defendant.

And it is further ordered, that within twenty days after the entry of this order, the complainant cause the substance of the order to be published, a newspaper printed and published in said County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, in accordance with the statutes in such case made and provided, and that such publication be continued therein in the manner and form as is prescribed in the statutes of Michigan, in such case made and provided, and that such publication be made in such manner as to be completed at least once in each week for six weeks in succession, or that a copy of this order be personally served on said defendant James L. Ferguson, out of the state of Michigan, at least twenty days before the time herein prescribed for his appearance to be entered herein.

FREDERICK W. MAYNE, Circuit Judge.

A true copy.

ARTHUR A. CORNELL, Circuit Commissioner.

(First Publication December 31)

Order For Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court held at the Probate office in the city of Charlevoix, on the twelfth day of December, A. D. 1914.

Present, Samuel S. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Dominic Brennan, deceased. Louis Chaddock, administrator, de bonis non, with the will annexed, of said estate, presents his final administration account with said estate, and petitions for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the persons entitled thereto.

It is ordered that the 18th day of January, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said Probate office, be assigned for examining and allowing said account and hearing said petition.

Publication of this order for three successive weeks in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

SAMUEL S. CORNELL,

Judge of Probate.

(First publication November 26th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage given by Frank S. Winslow and Mary E. Winslow, his wife, to Franklin D. Asbury, dated December 1, 1911 and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix county, Michigan, December 7, 1911, in liber 65 of mortgages, at page 279, whereby said mortgagors mortgaged the premises hereinafter described, and said mortgage having been assigned by the said Mortgagee, to the undersigned, by an assignment bearing date November 1, 1911, and recorded in the Register's office aforesaid in said liber 65 of mortgages, on page 280, and on the day of September 1914, said mortgagee, Franklin D. Asbury, died, leaving his widow, Walter J. Masters and Alfred E. Hass and Frederick W. Mayne, his executors, who are the undersigned, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, the sum of Twenty-Five Hundred Dollars ($2500) and no suit or proceeding has been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, said mortgage will thereupon be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, and all legal costs, charges and expenses of sale, including an attorney fee of Fifty Dollars ($50) which sale will be made at the Township Hall, in the Village of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1915, at one o'clock in the afternoon of said day, of the following described premises, to wit: Lots Nine (9) and Ten (10) in Block Twenty-Six (26) in the Village of Charlevoix, according to the plat of said Village, as the same is now laid down and platted, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office in said County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, subject to the rights of the public therein.

Notice is hereby given that the above mortgage will be foreclosed by said sale, and that the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, and all legal costs, charges and expenses of said sale, including said attorney fee, will be sold at said place of sale, to satisfy said mortgage, together with the costs of this foreclosure, and the expenses of said sale.

Dated November 26, A. D. 1914.

FREDERICK W. MAYNE,

Circuit Judge.

Hudson Address, Charlevoix, Mich.

(First Publication Dec. 3rd)

Order of Publication

State of Michigan, the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, on the eighth day of December, A. D. 1914.

Present, Samuel S. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Cornelia Lewis, deceased. Frederick W. Mayne, executor, presents his final administration account with said estate, and petitions for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the persons entitled thereto.

It is ordered that the eighth day of January, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said Probate office, be assigned for examining and allowing said account and hearing said petition.

It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, once each week for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

SAMUEL S. CORNELL,

Judge of Probate.

(First publication November 26th)

Notice of Hearing Claims

State of Michigan,

Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

In the matter of the estate of Harriet Marsh, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that four months from date are allowed for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to said court for examination and adjustment, and that all such claims against said deceased be presented to Frank Marsh, executor, at the place of his residence in Charlevoix, in said County, and that such claims will be heard by said court on the 1st day of April, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

Dated November 26, A. D. 1914.

SAMUEL S. CORNELL,

Judge of Probate.

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

THE most primitive way of making proper blankets was to sew together several sheets of newspapers between linen, says the London Queen. These sheets, made exactly the size of the bed, were sometimes inclosed between a double layer of calico patchwork, slightly tacked here and there and bound with colored braid. They were considered warm, but not healthy, from keeping in all perspiration. No one then thought of performing with a sheet the homelike bedgowns. To obviate this defect another method more complicated, but more popular was introduced. It consisted of cutting up brown paper into strips about three-quarters of an inch wide, to be plaited into ladies or other straw bonnets and then sewed together after the style of straw hats and bonnets. Aunts help to this work a stationer sold pieces of paper ready cut out for the purpose. For the same purpose newspapers were also employed, being cut up and plaited into three folds.

To make paper pillows it is important to avoid as much as possible any disagreeable rustling noise and produce the desired softness and resiliency; hence some attention has to be paid to the selection of the paper used. Newspaper scraps are entirely discarded for the purpose by a few workers who also insist on having the bits of note paper torn and cut into they consider the size of threepence bits, while others give preference to strips half an inch wide, curled as switch fashion by drawing a penknife sharply down them. One pound of these strips is sufficient for an ordinary sized pillow, which should not be too full, to secure softness. The rule is to begin at one side of the back of any underfill firmly at hand. Newspapers are too soft for the roll process, which consists of cutting old letters and any chaffy paper into strips rolled at first in loose lengthwise as tightly as possible and then turned over and, beginning again at the opposite side, to roll up till the rolls meet to produce a sort of spring. Sometimes also the scraps of paper are intermingled with soft bits of materials thus: Tear in two pieces scraps of tissue or white brown paper, and with silk or cotton invisibles and odd ends of Berlin wool.

No Heart in It.

A Broad street employer of a temperamental stenographer is a man of practical sense and real kindness who wants the girl to succeed at her profession. The other day he called her into his private office and had a fatherly talk with her. Later one of her colleagues in the same building met her in the elevator.

"Say, Gladys," she said, "what's this about your boss having a heart to heart talk with you this morning?"

"Heart nothing," responded the temperamental creature, tossing her head less in an effusion of wit. "What he handed to me hadn't no more heart in it than there is in a slab of liver at a ten cent bungery. See?"

Which is one reason why girl stenographers can be hired at 8c a week.—New York Sun

How to Use the Cleansing Coal Oil.

How many people really know the value of coal oil as a housekeeping? Iron rust and stains of all kinds can be removed from white porcelain tubs and sinks. It will clean and disinfect the toilet closet and better than anything else. The windows can be cleaned in the coldest weather with coal oil rub a sponge or cloth. Simply use it as you would water, dry with a soft cloth and polish with another. It will take the black off your pots and pans when all other remedies fail. It will remove grease and dirt from your gas range and keep it clean. It will polish nickel and it will take the black off your silver that you don't use constantly with very little or no elbow grease. Coal oil will clean your kitchen pantry better than anything else and keep your linoleum from cracking.

How to Utilize Discarded Stockings for Holders and Dusters.

Three useful ways of using discarded stockings. For ironing holder or hot dish, lifter fold stocking in length of about nine inches and stuff one half inch thick. Stitch lengthways four times, take a hook from an old garter and insert on one corner for a hanger.

For a broom take the stocking and cut off the foot and slip over the handle down on broom part. This keeps it from unwinding. Put a screw eye in handle and hang it up.

For a dusters may take a mop stick and put a thickness of stockings on, or preferable silk ones can be put on top.

How to Make Table Pads Out of Old Bedspreads.

To make good use of an old bedspread wash the spread, iron all worn places, cut out a dollar cloth and lay enough white cheesecloth to cover both sides. Onto by machine, turn both ends together, stitch all around and you have one of the finest table pads in the market. It is much easier to wash than those you buy and costs about 75 cents at the most, including thread.

Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails.

The Original and Genuine.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve

Heals the Hurt

All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

Lisle Shanahan,

Attorney at Law.

Office in County Bank Bldg.

R. L. LEWIS

Attorney at Law.

Office in Priest's Block.

Charlevoix - Michigan

ROBERT G. MADILL

General Contractor and Builder

Estimates furnished. Phone 233 Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD, DENTIST

Office in Old Post-Office Block.

Over A. L. Lawrence & Co's Store.

TELEPHONE NO. 139.

PETER BENSON

CONTRACTOR FOR

Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.

If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

THE hospital should be very careful from whom she buys her bedding, especially in mattresses. According to some reliable authorities and statistics, has been much imposed upon in this respect.

When also come to consider that there are thousands of men in the present time, many of them having enormous businesses, who are engaged mostly all the day round collecting materials for making mattresses from the city, dumps and garbage heaps, she will then recognize that it pays to be very careful from whom she makes her purchase.

This is not so applicable to the higher priced mattresses, although some of these are found to have been made of old hair and rubbish, have been picked and treated with layers of shoddy and objectionable animal hair, the masses and tails of defunct diseased horses being employed in many cases.

The heaps and piles of old clothing found on these refuse dumps are bought by the small local manufacturers and made in their farmyards into shoddy fillings for such mattresses and cosy upholstery as may be sold at popular prices. These manufactured articles find their way into nearly every store of a certain size. Stores of the higher type have, as a rule, their own factories.

All sorts of the old clothing found in these dumps have been infected with contagious disease germs, which are only prevented from coming into contact with the face of the user by a layer of ticking. It is safe to say that many kinds of disease have their origin in such abominable bedding.

Every housekeeper has seen what a few germs of fermentation will do when they put their way into a jar or preserves. She will find this a good illustration of what the germs in such a dirty kind of mattress will do should they find entrance to the bed.

The safest plan, then, is to buy bedding from a very reliable firm having the mark of their own manufacture. It also cannot afford high priced bedding is an over matter to make it herself than run the risk of buying the cheaper kind. There are many very good grades of cheap mattress and pillow fillings on the market, including clean hygienic vegetable moss as well as felt. It is not a difficult matter to construct good bedding from these, especially for the beds and cribs of young children, who are so susceptible to infections.

A very good sanitary pillow for a young infant is made by basting the ordinary kind of nonabsorbent cotton in brown unsil it is brown and fluffy. This makes a delightful pillow for a little head to rest upon and a cushion also.

It is also timely to remark that before taking any old bedding made over be sure to have it thoroughly washed and renovated by steaming or otherwise disinfecting it. The making over process may free many germs otherwise inactive.

Cough.

"I was looking at some new style twenty dollar hats today," said his wife, "and I brought this one home to see what you think of it."

"Frankfort," said her husband.

"That's what I thought. This is a cheap five dollar hat. Let me have $15."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Eyes of a Fly.

Naturalists give that the common bluebottle fly possesses between 4,000 and 5,000 little eyes when viewed under a good microscope, with—as the naked eye it appears to have only two. They are all sided and

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1917, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

On Misery creek, at the foot of a rock from which he has fallen, Bailie Miller, a boy, is discovered by a backwoods preacher, unconscious, and after revivals and prayer the boy's mind becomes a blank. Mr. Hollifield, the preacher, takes the boy home to his widowed sister, head of the family, who takes him in. Jealousy has been shut out of the Hollifield home by the presence of Bailie. Jealousy flares in the shanty of Jesse Forney, cousin of Bailie, in the Hollifield South field.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

He sauntered down the road, but, when he had passed out of vision, he turned sharply into the woods, and beaux challenge. His steps carried him to the rift in the ridge where the white oak stood sentinel over the watch tower of rock. As he rather over the edge from one side his bare foot sank, and he sat down, his legs dangling there, with her hands resting on the moss and her eyes deeply troubled. She was a good deal ahead and her lips were trembling. At once Samson's face crew black, and she had been making Sally unhappy. Then he saw the tears trickle down her cheeks while the tree trunk had hitherto concealed. It was the lone mottled figure of young "Tamarack Spicer."

"Is course," Spicer was saying, "we don't love Samson's dogs, leastways I don't but them Hollimans it's opinion him, an' I heered Sally say that he jest hung up his rifle, straight up hyar from the mouth of Misery. They'll git hyar sniffin' endwiseways."

Samson leaned violently forward. With one hand he roughly seized his cousin's shoulder and wheeled him about.

"Shet up!" he commanded. "What d——n fool stiff ner ye been Lillie Sally?"

For an instant the two clansmen stood fronting each other. Samson's face was set and wrathful. Tamarack's was surly and smirking. "Hum! I got a license ter tell Sally the news" he demanded.

"Nobody hain't got no license," retorted the younger man in the quiet of cold anger, "but I tell Sally thar'll first bee."

"She air bound ter know hit all pretty soon. Them dawgs—"

"Didn't I tell ye ter shet up?" Samson clenched his fists and took a step forward. "If ye opens yore mouth again, I'm a-goin' ter smash hit. Now git!"

Tamarack Spicer's face blackened and his teeth showed. His right hand went to the left of his belt. Outwardly he seemed weaponless, but Samson knew the concealed presence of the hickory stiff was a holster, worn mountain fashion.

"What air ye a-scarlin' after, Tamarack?" he inquired, his lips twisted in a sneer.

"That's my business."

"Well, git yer business yer git on, yeah afore I throws ye offen the cliff."

Sally showed no symptoms of alarm. Her confidence in her boy was absolute. The boy lifted his hand, and pointed down the path. Slowly and with incoherent muttering, Spicer took himself away. Then only did Sally rise. She came over, and laid a hand on Samson's shoulder. In her blue eyes there were tears yet.

"Samson," she whispered, "d'ye hy'ar ye kin go home ter yer house. Bailie ye out. Why didn't ye tell me Jesse Jarvey'd done seen ye?"

"Hit hain't notahin' ter fret about, Sally," he answered her. He spoke awkwardly, for he had been trained to regard emotion as unmanly. "Thar hain't no cause."

She gazed searchingly into his eyes, and then, with a little sob, drew her arms around him, and buried her face on his shoulder.

"If anything happens ter ye, Sam'son," she said, brokenly, "jit'll jest kill me. I couldn't live without ye, Samson. I jest couldn't do hit."

The boy took her in his arms, and pressed her close. His eyes were gazing off over her bent head, and his lips twitched. He drew his features into a scowl, because that was the only expression with which he could guard his feelings. His voice was husky.

"I reckon, Sally," he said, "I couldn't live without ye, neither."

The party of men who had started at morning from Jesse Purdyn's stove had spent a hard day. The roads followed creekbeds, crossing and recrossing waterways in a fashion that gave the bloodhounds a hundred baffling difficulties. Often, their noses lost the trail, which had at first been so surely taken. Often, they circled and whined, and balked in perplexity, but each time they came to a point where, at the end, one of them again raised his muzzle skyward, and gave voice.

Toward evening, they were working up Misery along a course less broken. The party halted for a moment's rest, and as the bottle was passed, the man from Lexington, who had brought the dogs and stayed to conduct the chase, put a question:

"What do you call this creek?"

"Hit's Misery."

"Does anybody live on Misery that ye—that you mighty suspect?"

"The Hollimans live yonder."

"This creek is settled with Souths thickeer'n hops."

The Lexington man looked up. He knew what the name of South meant to a Hollisman.

"Is there any special South, who might have a particular grudge?"

"The Souths don't need no partic'lar grudge, kep' thar's young Samson South. He's a widder."

"He lives this way?"

"These does air a-makin' a beeline for his house." Jim Hoffman was speaking. "Jesse Purdyn's dog must have been bailed that Samson denies doin' the shootin', an' claims he kin prove an alibi."

The Lexington man lighted his pipe, and poured a drink of red wine into a flask cup.

"It'd be apt to say that," he commented. "These dogs haven't any prejudice in the matter. I'll stake my life on their telling the truth."

An hour later, the group halted again. The master of hounds stopped his forehand.

"Are we still going toward Samson South's house?" he inquired.

"We're about a quarter mile hit now, an' we hain't never varied from the straight road."

"Will they be apt to give us trouble?"

Jim Hoffman smiled.

"I hain't never heered of no South submittin' yer arrest by a Hollisman."

The trailers examined their firearms, and loosened their holster-flaps. The dogs went forward at a trot.

CHAPTER V.

From time to time that day, midnburs has ridden up to spicer South's stile, and drawn rein for gossip. These men brought bulletins as to the progress of the hounds, and near sundown, as a postscript to their information, a volley of gunshot signals sounded from a mountain top. No word was spoken, but it was common accord the kinsmen rose from their chairs, and stood ready with their leaning rifles.

"They're a-comin' hyar," said the head of the house, curtly. "Samson ought ter be home. What's Tam'rack?"

"He had walked his shanner up till that moment, nor was he to be found. A few minutes later, Samson's figure came into sight, and his uncle not his at the fence.

"Samson, I've done asked ye all the questions I'm agoin' ter ask ye," he said, "but them dawgs is a-nosin' hyar, an' I'm jest a-goin' ter give ye a mile below."

Samson nodded.

"Now"—Spicer South's face hardened—"I reckon Jesse Purdyn's son-in-law ain't no dawg ner no man to make cross tracks ter hide his sneakin' trail, or yes ter let folk think he was trackin' straight up hyar from the mouth of Misery. They'll git hyar agaiust endwise."

Samson leaned violently forward. With one hand he roughly seized his cousin's shoulder and wheeled him about.

"Shet up!" he commanded. "What d——n fool stiff ner ye been Lillie Sally?"

For an instant the two clansmen stood fronting each other. Samson's face was set and wrathful. Tamarack's was surly and smirking. "Hum! I got a license ter tell Sally the news" he demanded.

"Nobody hain't got no license," retorted the younger man in the quiet of cold anger, "but I tell Sally thar'll first bee."

"She air bound ter know hit all pretty soon. Them dawgs—"

"Didn't I tell ye ter shet up?" Sam'son clenched his fists and took a step forward. "If ye opens yore mouth again, I'm a-goin' ter smash hit. Now git!"

Tamarack Spicer's face blackened and his teeth showed. His right hand went to the left of his belt. Outwardly he seemed weaponless, but Samson knew the concealed presence of the hickory stiff was a holster, worn mountain fashion.

"What air ye a-scarlin' after, Tam'rack?" he inquired, his lips twisted in a sneer.

"That's my business."

"Well, git yer business yer git on, yeah afore I throws ye offen the cliff."

Sally showed no symptoms of alarm. Her confidence in her boy was absolute. The boy lifted his hand, and pointed down the path. Slowly and with incoherent muttering, Spicer took himself away. Then only did Sally rise. She came over, and laid a hand on Samson's shoulder. In her blue eyes there were tears yet.

"Samson," she whispered, "d'ye hy'ar ye kin go home ter yer house. Bailie ye out. Why didn't ye tell me Jesse Jarvey'd done seen ye?"

"Hit hain't notahin' ter fret about, Sally," he answered her. He spoke awkwardly, for he had been trained to regard emotion as unmanly. "Thar hain't no cause."

She gazed searchingly into his eyes, and then, with a little sob, drew her arms around him, and buried her face on his shoulder.

"If anything happens ter ye, Sam'son," she said, brokenly, "jit'll jest kill me. I couldn't live without ye, Samson. I jest couldn't do hit."

The boy took her in his arms, and pressed her close. His eyes were gazing off over her bent head, and his lips twitched. He drew his features into a scowl, because that was the only expression with which he could guard his feelings. His voice was husky.

"I reckon, Sally," he said, "I couldn't live without ye, neither."

The party of men who had started at morning from Jesse Purdy's stove had spent a hard day. The roads followed creekbeds, crossing and recrossing waterways in a fashion that gave the bloodhounds a hundred baffling difficulties. Often, their noses lost the trail, which had at first been so surely taken. Often, they circled and whined, and balked in perplexity, but each time they came to a point where, at the end, one of them again raised his muzzle skyward, and gave voice.

Toward evening, they were working up Misery along a course less broken. The party halted for a moment's rest, and as the bottle was passed, the man from Lexington, who had brought the dogs and stayed to conduct the chase, put a question:

"What do you call this creek?"

"Hit's Misery."

"Does anybody live on Misery that ye—that you might

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 45 | Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, January 14, 1915. | NUMBER 39

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Three Months	$ .25
Six Months	.75
One Year	1.00

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

J. L. Crane
M. A. Levinson
A. E. Mason Dept. Store
Charlevoix State Saving Bank
C. Danto & Son

WILL CHRISTIANS WIN HOLY TOMB?

Christ's Sepulcher Is Closely Guarded by Turkish Soldiers.

AGES IN MOSLEMS' HANDS.

Famous Jerusalem Shrine, For Which the Crusades Were Undertaken in the Middle Ages, Will Leave Religious Possession of Allies. Wine Contained Within Walls of a Church.

London.—The holy sepulcher at Jerusalem, for the possession of which the crusades of the middle ages were undertaken, will almost be transferred in property of the Christians of the world in case the allies win in the European war. Today the keys of this the most venerated sanctuary in Christendom are held by the Turks and Moslem sentinels stand outside of the doors night and day. Within the church in front of its main entrance is occupied at all hours by beggars and street venders, who sell their wares and just beg.

The sepulcher is contained within the walls of a church, in which not only the Catholics, but also the Greeks, the Armenians and the Copts, have altars of worship. It is a grotto of cavern, consisting of two rooms been out of living rock. The outer chamber, which is an irregular shape, is 26 feet wide, is called the Chapel of the Angels. The inner room, in the sepulcher itself and contains the stone on which the body of Jesus rested.

It was in the outer chamber, the visitor is told, that the angels announced the resurrection to the holy women. In the middle of the floor, covered with white marble, is a piece of the stone of the tomb on which, as described by the Evangelists, the angel sat on the Easter morning. Suspended from the roof are fifteen lamps, representing as many Christian nations which now always kept burning.

A door so low that the visitor can pass only by stooping gives entrance to the inner room, behind one of the actual burial place of Jesus, which is barely more than six feet square. The stone on which the body of the Redeemer lay is raised three feet above the ground and, covered with a marble slab, serves as an altar. Immediately at the foot of the altar a lamp can find room in the small chamber, and priests, Greeks and Armenians are obliged to take turns in performing services.

TURKISH SOLDIERS GUARDING GATEWAY TO HOLY SEPULCHRE.

The Church of the Holy Sepulcher is connected by a door from the door is a rotunda, off which is the Chapel of the Apparition, marking the place where the Saviour first showed himself to his mother after his resurrection. But this is only one of many sacred associations pertaining to the ancient basilica. Just inside the main door is the stone of anointing on which the body of Jesus was laid while it was anointed by the body women before burial.

On entering the church the visitor proceeds to the top of a stairway, where a saint set in the wall states that this is the place where Christ was nailed to the cross. Nearby is the place where the soldiers cast lots for the Saviour's raiment. For it should be understood that the sacred edifice here described actually covers the rock of Calvary, and a long strip of land, 40 by 80 feet, which is the spot where Jesus was nailed to the cross. Beneath a passage alike in the hole in the rock in which the cross was planted. It is filled with silver. The holes for the crosses of the two thieves are on either hand a little to the west.

On one side of this altar, inclosed by a silver railing, is the rift made in the rock at the moment of the death of Jesus. This cleft extends downward to a bottom beneath known as the "grotto of Adam," because the skull of the first man is said to be buried there.

Students of history recall the fact that the crusades under leadership of Bouillon captured the city of Jerusalem in the year 1099 and it remained in Christian possession until 1187 when the Saracens drove out the invaders.

Farm and Garden

VARIETY OF DAIRY BREEDS.

Only a Half Dozen Known in This Country and All Good.

Everybody who feels the reputation of knowing anything about dairying is bound to breed a great many letters and to indulge in the value of different dairy breeds their merits and their characteristics, were a contribution to the Farm Progress. Now there are only about a half dozen dairy breeds that are widely known in this country, and all of them are good. Some are better adapted than are others to a given locality, but she would be dairy cow will usually make an effort to choosing the breed that is at all ready well known in the neighborhood in which he is about to start up in business.

Probably the Jersey is the best known dairy breed, being the whole country over. Where the dairy is to yield an expensive butter and near a big city the dairy cows are usually Jerseys. They are not the largest milk producers of any dairy breed, but they are undoubtedly very economical producers of butter fat. The Jersey is extremely docile and is about the best of the family cow. Her milk is rich, non-colored, creamer readily, and she rose is small, usually averaging around 300 pounds in weight.

The Jersey is one of the channel breeds and takes its name from the Jersey islands on the other side of the Atlantic. The Guernsey is the other channel breed and is almost the equal of the Jersey in the production of butter fat. The Guerns

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1916, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

On Minery creek, at the foot of a rock bluff, Samson Lescott, a giant in size, finds Stephen Leslie, a blacksmith's helper, unconscious, and after revived him, goes for assistance. Samson lives with Sally, taking Lescott to Samson's home. Sally is Samson's ward. Lescott learns from Sally all he tells them that Samson has been shot and that Samson is suspected of the crime. Lescott goes to the shooting of Isaac Morey, the Morey family, and Tamarack Spicer, the Spicer family. Sally tells him that Spicer is the man she loves. Lescott learns that Samson is on trial at Boone Smith's door. Lescott discovers Leslie's love for Sally.

CHAPTER V—Continued.

The two men had lost an hour huddled under a canopy beneath the surmounting of a sudden storm. They had silently watched titanic battalions of thunder clouds riding the skies in jolly pride, and had seen rain sweep the earth with lightning and hail and water.

"My God!" exclaimed the mountain boy alarmed; "I give anything if I could relate that."

Lescott rose smilingly from his seat before the meal, and surrended, his palms and sheaf of brushes.

"Try it," he invited.

For a moment Samson stood hesitant and reverence with diffidence; then, with set lips, he took his place and experimentally fitted his fingers about the brush, as he had seen Lescott do. He asked no advice. He merely gazed for a minute, and then, dipping a brush and experimenting for his color, set to work with the very man's whole. Samson, even though he was hopelessly clothes, and knew it, was sinewy, and the painter at his elbow caught his breath and looked on with the admiration of a boy who, listening to childish prattle, yet recognizes the gift of prophecy.

"That's the way hit looks ter me," the boy said, simply.

"That's the way it is," commended his critic.

For a while more Samson worked at the nearer hills, then he rose.

"I'm done," he said. "Hit's agin' ter fool with them thar trees an' things. I don't know nothing erbout them. I can't paint leaves an' twigs an' birdsnests. What I like is mountings an' sky an' such-like things."

Lescott looked at the daub before him. A less trained eye would have seen only the dash, just as a poor pianist hears a master's touch, the adaptable tones and long legs in a wrangling dog, and he noted in the purple.

"Samson," he said, earnestly, "that's all there is to art. It's the power to feel the poetry of color. The rest can be taught. The genius must work, of course—work, work, work, and still work, and then, with the power of seeing true—and by God, boy, you have it. You've got what many men have struggled a lifetime for, and failed. I'd like to have you study with me. I'd like to be your discoverer. Look here."

The painter sat down, and speedily went to work. He painted out nothing, he disregarded color, and yet, precisely the right touch here and there, brushes once more seized him, and he took his place before the easel. Neither he nor Lescott noticed a man who crept down through the timber and for a time watched them. The man's face wore a surly, contemptuous grin, and shortly it withdrew.

But, an hour later, while the boy was still working, industriously and the artist was lying on his back, with a pipe between his teeth, and his half-closed eyes gazing up contentedly through the green of overhead branches, their peace was broken by a guffaw of derisive laughter. They looked up, to find at their backs a semi-circle of scoffing humanity. Lescott's impulse was to laugh, for only the comedy of the situation at the moment around him. A stage director, setting a comedy scene with that most ancient of jests, the gawking of boobs at some new sight, could hardly have improved on the tableau. At the front stood Tamarack Spicer, the returned wanderer. His lean wrist was stretched out of a ragged sleeve at too short, and his tattered jimmy was shoved back over a face all aglow, the skin red as bloodshot with recent drinking, but the manner was in exaggerated and comic-opera imitation of a rural master of ceremonies. At his back were the hard-faced men and women and children of the hills, to the number of a dozen.

"Ladies and gentle-men," announced Tamarack Spicer, in a broncobuster voice, "swing yo' partners an' sashay forward. Hit's the only son of the late Henry Smith engaged in his native lousiana' heretofore undiscovered occupation of school teacher. Ladies and gentle-men, after this here show' is concluded, I'm yours waiting for the concert in the main tent. This here famous performer will favor yo' with a little exhibition of his art, called 'Mountain-dark-darnfer.'

After the first surprise, Samson had turned his back on the group. He was taking paint from the brushes, and assiduous at heretofore undiscovered occupation of school teacher. Ladies and gentlemen, after this here show' is concluded, I'm yours waiting for the concert in the main tent. This here famous performer will favor yo with a little exhibition of his art, called 'Mountain-dark-darnfer.'

"Ladies and gentle-men," announced Tamarack Spicer, in a broncobuster voice, "swing yo' partners an' sashay forward. Hit's the only son of the late Henry Smith engaged in his native lousiana' heretofore undiscovered occupation of school teacher. Ladies and gentle-men, after this here show' is concluded, I'm yours waiting for the concert in the main tent. This here famous performer will favor yo with a little exhibition of his art, called 'Mountain-dark-darnfer.'

"My God!" exclaimed the mountain boy alarmed; "I give anything if I could relate that."

Lescott rose smilingly from his seat before the meal, and surrended, his palms and sheaf of brushes.

"Try it," he invited.

For a moment Samson stood hesitant and reverence with diffidence; then, with set lips, he took his place and experimentally fitted his fingers about the brush, as he had seen Lescott do. He asked no advice. He merely gazed for a minute, and then, dipping a brush and experimenting for his color, set to work with the very man's whole. Samson, even though he was hopelessly clothes, and knew it, was sinewy, and the painter at his elbow caught his breath and looked on with the admiration of a boy who, listening to childish prattle, yet recognizes the gift of prophecy.

"That's the way hit looks ter me," the boy said, simply.

"That's the way it is," commended his critic.

For a while more Samson worked at the nearer hills, then he rose.

"I'm done," he said. "Hit's agin' ter fool with them thar trees an' things. I don't know nothing erbout them. I can't paint leaves an' twigs an' birdsnests. What I like is mountings an' sky an' such-like things."

Lescott looked at the daub before him. A less trained eye would have seen only the dash, just as a poor pianist hears a master's touch, the adaptable tones and long legs in a wrangling dog, and he noted in the purple.

"Samson," he said, earnestly, "that's all there is to art. It's the power to feel the poetry of color. The rest can be taught. The genius must work, of course—work, work, work, and still work, and then, with the power of seeing true—and by God, boy, you have it. You've got what many men have struggled a lifetime for, and failed. I'd like to have you study with me. I'd like to be your discoverer. Look here."

The painter sat down, and speedily went to work. He painted out nothing, he disregarded color, and yet, precisely the right touch here and there,

"I Have Opened My Home to You and Offered You What I Had, Yet in My Old Age, You Take Away My Mainsty."

not a matter of genre or portrait. Yet, he wished that he could paint Sally. Lescott Sally.

"Mine Sally," he boxin. "I've discovered something about Samson."

"Hit's something very nice," the man said, simply.

"Then yo reckon I tell me, because I already know hit," came her prompt and confident announcement.

"I reckon I tell you, then," she said, shyly.

"Samson is a genius," he said.

"What's that?"

"He has great gifts—great abilities to become a figure in the world."

She nodded her head, in prompt and full corroboration.

"I reckon Samson'll be the biggest man in the mountains some day."

"He ought to be more than that," Lescott ventured, and a cloud across the violet serenity of her eyes.

"What does yo mean?" she demanded.

"I mean"—the painter paused a moment, and then said bluntly—"I mean he ought to take his place in the world of New York."

The girl sprang to her feet with her chin defiantly high and her brown hands clenched into tight little fists. "Yo mean yo want to take him away from us!" she cried. "I hadn't spoke ter nobody but you about hit, yit."

Lescott felt reluctant to meet his host's eyes at breakfast the next morning, dreading their reproach, but, if Spicer South harbored resentment, he meant to conceal it, after the stolen one. He needs no here."

"I appreciate that. He will be older later. You can go now, and come back to him when he needs you more. If what I urged meant disloyalty to your home, I could cut out my tongue before I argued for it. You must believe me in that. I want you to be the fullest sense your people's leader. I want you to be not only their Samson—but their Moses."

The boy looked up and nodded.

"I reckon yo aims ter see friendly, all right," was his conservative reply.

The painter went on earnestly:

"I realize that I am urging things of which your people disapprove, but it is only because they misunderstand that they do disapprove. They are too close, Samson, to see the purple that mountains show when they are far away. I want you to go where you can see the purple. If you are the sort of man I think, you won't be beguiled. You won't lose your loyalty. You won't be ashamed of your people."

"I reckon I wouldn't be ashamed," the youth. "I reckon there hain't yo better folks ter what."

"I'm sure of it. There are going to be sweeping changes in these mountains. Conditions here have stood as immutably changeless as the hills themselves for a hundred years. That will be at its twilight. I tell you, I know what I'm talking about. The state of Kentucky is looking this way. The state must develop, and it is here alone that it can develop. Here are vast forests untouched, immeasurable coal veins. Capital is turning its eyes orange-squeezed dry, and casting about for fresher food. Capital has into your hills. Capital is inevitable, relentless, omnipotent. Where it comes, it makes its laws. Conditions that have existed undisturbed all vanish. The law of the feud, which militia and troops have not been able to abolish, will vanish before capital's brash like the mists when the sun strikes them. Unless you learn to ride the waves which will presently sweep over your mountains, you and your people will go under. You may not realize it, but that is true. It is written."

The boy had listened intently, but at the end he smiled, and in his expression was something of the soldier who scents battle, not without welcome.

"I reckon if Ethan Spicer's here at a comin' up here ter run things, an' ketchin' out my folks, hit's a right good reason for me ter stay here—an' help my folks."

"By staying here, you can't help them. It won't be work for guns, but for brains. By going away and coming back armed with knowledge, you can save them. You will know how to play the game."

"I reckon they won't git our land, nor our timber, nor our coal, without we wants ter sell hit. I reckon if they git hit, hit'll come in handy. Things has stood here like they is now, for a hundred years. I reckon we kin keep 'em thataway for a spell longer. If it was evident that Samson was urging against his own belief; that he was trying to bolster up his resolution, I would be tempted to shake his intensity of his mental struggle, and his answer had that sullen ring which was not really sullenness at all, but self-reproach.

"I reckon a feller's biggest right is ter stand by his kinfolks. Thar Spicer's gittin' old. He's done been good ter me. He needs no here."

"I appreciate that. He will be older later. You can go now, and come back to him when he needs you more. If what I urged meant disloyalty to your home, I could cut out my tongue before I argued for it. You must believe me in that. I want you to be the fullest sense your people's leader. I want you to be not only their Samson—but their Moses."

The boy looked up and nodded.

"I reckon yo aims ter see friendly, all right," was his conservative reply.

The painter went on earnestly:

"I realize that I am urging things of which your people disapprove, but it is only because they misunderstand that they do disapprove. They are too close, Samson, to see the purple that mountains show when they are far away. I want you to go where you can see the purple. If you are the sort of man I think, you won't be beguiled. You won't lose your loyalty. You won't be ashamed of your people."

"I reckon I wouldn't be ashamed," the youth. "I reckon there hain't yo better folks ter what."

"I'm sure of it. There are going to be sweeping changes in these mountains. Conditions here have stood as immutably changeless as the hills themselves for a hundred years. That will be at its twilight. I tell you, I know what I'm talking about. The state of Kentucky is looking this way. The state must develop, and it is here alone that it can develop. Here are vast forests untouched, immeasurable coal veins. Capital is turning its eyes orange-squeezed dry, and casting about for fresher food. Capital has into your hills. Capital is inevitable, relentless, omnipotent. Where it comes, it makes its laws. Conditions that have existed undisturbed all vanish. The law of the feud, which militia and troops have not been able to abolish, will vanish before capital's brash like the mists when the sun strikes them. Unless you learn to ride the waves which will presently sweep over your mountains, you and your people will go under. You may not realize it, but that is true. It is written."

The boy had listened intently, but at the end he smiled, and in his expression was something of the soldier who scents battle, not without welcome.

"I reckon if Ethan Spicer's here a-comin' up here ter run things, an' ketchin' out my folks, hit's a right good reason for me ter stay here—an' help my folks."

"By staying here, you can't help them. It won't be work for guns, but for brains. By going away and coming back armed with knowledge, you can save them. You will know how to play the game."

"I reckon they won't git our land, nor our timber, nor our coal, without we wants ter sell hit. I reckon if they git hit, hit'll come in handy. Things has stood here like they is now, for a hundred years. I reckon we kin keep 'em thataway for a spell longer. If it was evident that Samson was urging against his own belief; that he was trying to bolster up his resolution, I would be tempted to shake his

"I Have Opened My Home to You and Offered You What I Had, Yet in My Old Age, You Take Away My Mainsty."

"Yo're a Truse-Bustin', Murderin' Bully."

softened the crudeness, laid stress on the contrasts, made the harshness, and, when he rose, he had built, upon the rough cartoons of Samson's laying, a picture.

"That proves it," he said. "I had only to finish. I didn't have much to undo. Boy, you're wasting yourself. Come with me, and let me make you. We all pretend there is no such thing. In these days, as sheer genius, but deep down, we know that, unless there is, there is no such thing as true art. There is genius and you have it." Enthusiasm was again sweeping him into an unbridled outburst.

The boy stood silent. Across his countenance swept a conflict of emotions. He looked away, as if taking counsel with the hills.

"It's what I'm a-bornin' for," he admitted at last. "Hit's what I'd give half my life for. . . . I must sell my land, an' raise the money.

I reckon he would take passels of money, wouldn't hit?" He paused, and his eyes fell on the rifle leaning against the tree. His lips tightened to sudden resolve. He went over and picked up the gun, and, as he did so, he shook his head.

"No," he stubbly declared: "every man to his own tools. This here's mine."

Yet, when they were again out shooting, the temptation to play with him. A less trained eye would have seen only the dash, just as a poor pianist hears a master's touch, the adaptable tones and long legs in a wrangling dog, and he noted in the purple.

"Samson," he said, earnestly, "that's all there is to art. It's the power to feel the poetry of color. The rest can be taught. The genius must work, of course—work, work, work, and still work, and then, with the power of seeing true—and by God, boy, you have it. You've got what many men have struggled a lifetime for, and failed. I'd like to have you study with me. I'd like to be your discoverer. Look here."

The painter sat down, and speedily went to work. He painted out nothing, he disregarded color, and yet, precisely the right touch here and there, softened the crudeness, laid stress on the contrasts, made the harshness, and, when he rose, he had built, upon the rough cartoons of Samson's laying, a picture.

"Yo're a Truse-Bustin', Murderin' Bully."

"That proves it," he said. "I had only to finish. I didn't have much to undo. Boy, you're wasting yourself. Come with me, and let me make you. We all pretend there is no such thing. In these days, as sheer genius, but deep down, we know that, unless there is, there is no such thing as true art. There is genius and you have it." Enthusiasm was again sweeping him into an unbridled outburst.

The boy stood silent. Across his countenance swept a conflict of emotions. He looked away, as if taking counsel with the hills.

"It's what I'm a-bornin' for," he admitted at last. "Hit's what I'd give half my life for. . . . I must sell my land, an' raise the money.

I reckon he would take passels of money, wouldn't hit?" He paused, and his eyes fell on the rifle leaning against the tree. His lips tightened to sudden resolve. He went over and picked up the gun, and, as he did so, he shook his head.

"No," he stubbly declared: "every man to his own tools. This here's mine."

Yet, when they were again out shooting, the temptation to play with

CHAPTER VI.

Lescott had come to the mountains anticipating a visit of two weeks. He decided that he could stay no longer. It to the nearest day upon which he felt capable of making the trip out to the railroad. Yet June had ended, July had burned the slopes from emerald to russet-green, August had brought purple tops to the iron-weed, and still he found himself lingering. And this was true although he recognized a growing sentiment of disapproval in the hills. At first he had thought he recognized twin gifts; a sketch of a genius too rare to be allowed to flicker out, and a potentiality for constructive work among the poor people, which needed for its perfecting only education and experience.

"Samson," he suggested one day warm they were alone, "I want you to come East. You say that gun is your tool, and that each man must stick to his own. You are in part right, in part wrong. A man uses any tool better for understanding other tools. You have the right to use your brains and talents to the full."

The boy's face was somber in the

REALLY ODD "SAVINGS BANK"

Wife of Mexican Millionaire Devised Most Curious Hiding Place for Her Money.

With the coming of the pay envelope for women has developed the evolution of the broken-eared teapot as a savings bank. Many and varied are the methods women have worked out to save money, although it is only within the last fifty years that the average woman has had to consider the problem individually. With their "go-fetc' husbands," women have acquired of finance and investment have come to them.

Many amusing incidents of the broken-eared teapot as a savings bank have come to light. There is a story of Pedro Alvarado, the peon millionaire of Parral, Mex., whose mines yielded silver so fast that he could not spend it, though he bought pianos and ponies by the carload, and all the metal work in the palace that stood where his old adobe hut had once been built was of silver.

Alvarado had no faith in banks and kept great quantities of cash in his house. Naturally, much of this came into the hands of Senora Alvarado. The senora had a special bed quilt which always covered her at night and was never far away in the day time. When the senora died her maid went to Alvarado and asked for the quilt. But Alvarado was superstitious and disliked to give away anything of which his wife had been so much attached. He offered the woman money instead and, though dollars were no longer flowing in at the rate of 10,000 a day, he was generous in the matter. But the girl insisted that she would be the memorial of her mistress but the quilt.

Finally Alvarado's suspicions were thoroughly aroused but he ripped the quilt to pieces. It contained $30,000 in 1,000 pieces. Among them was a letter from the senora saying that she had saved the money for her husband and directed that it be put in the bank to their credit. And now the young men are being entertained in an American college upon the interest of their mother's savings.—From the Business Woman's Magazine.

Getting Lead From Radium.

A very interesting paper by E. Fajans on the different atomic weights of lead was read recently before the German Gesellschaft fuer angewandte physikalische Chemie at Leipzig. According to a line of reasoning, simultaneously developed by Fajans and Soddy during the last few years, lead derived from radium and lead derived from thorium by the loss of five and a atoms of helium, respectively, should be identical, except in atomic weight.

Throughout the past year Doctor Fajans' assistant, Doctor Lembert, has been working in Richards' laboratory at Harvard, in order to obtain atomic weights of as high a degree of trustworthiness as possible.

The differences established by the series of determinations announced at the meeting by Fajans amount to about 0.3 per cent. In this connection it is interesting to note that Soddy and Hyman read a paper before the London Chemical society early in the spring, in which they likewise described experiments which showed a difference between thorite lead and ordinary lead of 0.5 per cent.

In the Day of Love.

If men are just to each other they will love each other without much coaching, because of the justice they receive. They will not need to be taught to love their wives. Men are taught that now because they feel it impossible to be the man who is exploiting him or depriving him of his due in any sense, either as exploiting, overreaching, overcharging or competition in business or labor.

And that, by the way, is exactly the reason why teaching men to love one another as they love themselves, if not a failure in 2,000 years of trial, has not been the success the teachers have hoped. They are not just to each other when their principal business is to cheat each other. There is no great desire that rats which possibly may be infected shall get on a ship that rats in the same region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a teaspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your troubles will pass out from the vessel to the shore. To prevent entrance and exit guards are attached to the ropes and to rat ship.

Jad Salts is harmless inexpensive, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

Her Portrait.

The painstaking artist, anxious to please, remarked to a prospective customer:

"I can paint you a portrait of your wife which will be a speaking likeness."

"Can you make it cheap?"

"Yes, I can make it pretty cheap."

"But you advertised your previous engagement as a farewell concert."

"It was one. We said good-by to nearly a thousand dollars."

CLEAR YOUR SKIN

By Daily Use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Trial Free.

You may rely on these fragrant supercreamy emollients to care for your skin, hands and hair. Nothing better to clear the skin of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, the scalp of dandruff and itching and the hands of chapping and scrawness.

Sample each free by mail with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston. Sold everywhere. Adv.

Wanted More Definite Orders.

Comment on the perfect marksmanship shown by the Turks in the attack made in the form of an anecdote by Sergeant Jones of the United States Marine Corps, who says:

The captain called up a gunner and pointing out a battleship several miles away said:

"Can you hit that ship?"

"Yes, sir, sir," said the gunner.

"You are to do it, then."

"Aye, aye, sir."

"Well, you hit him in the eye with a 14-inch shell."

"Aye, aye, sir. Which eye, sir?"

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS IF BACK HURTS

Says Too Much Meat Forms Uric Acid Which Clogs the Kidneys and Irritates the Bladder.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache, dull aches in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, sick stomach, constipation and all sorts of bladder disorders.

The moment you feel your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel any kind of a pain that pain in the back ache condition shall leave it for the short. It is possible for precautions to be taken which will prevent the rodents either from leaving or entering the vessel. Their ordinary way of egress or ingress is along cables or ropes which lead from the vessel to the shore. To prevent entrance and exit guards are attached to the ropes and to rat ship.

When the public health officials find that it is necessary to turn their monovite of carbon bisulfide into the air in the hatches are battened down, every window of every cabin is sealed, and all the cracks of the doors are closed with paper attached by means of four paste. Then the Neptune's assistants, the coke in the closed furnace is started burning and the generator monovite of carbon passes through a tube into the hold of the ship until it is filled with the deadly gas. Then attention is turned to the cabins and staterooms, each of which is given its full charge of the corresponding poison.

The vessel is left alone for six hours and then the hatches, doors, windows and port holes are opened and the gas escapes. All that remains to be done is to go in and gather up the dead rats. The fumigating process is not only the rats but everything else living that is on board and this means everything living down to the smallest form of animal life.

Danger is passing quickly from New Orleans and it is passing because of the activity of the officials of the state and city, but those of the government, took hold of the situation at once and saved it. If it really decided saving, and there are those who believe that if unchecked, the bubonic plague might have spread to other cities. By William C. Rucker, who has been in charge at New Orleans, is experienced in antiplague work, having served in San Francisco, where he was the ranking officer when the crusade against the plague was instituted in that city.

The rat is the Neptune's means its work on the waterfront of cities, but it must not be supposed that every rat is a bubonic plague rat, which may carry with them the germs of a dread disease. In any city which may be infected with the bubonic plague parasite, the crusade against the rodents is carried on in all sections of the town where the rodents abound. Thousands upon thousands of the rats are caught in traps or are killed by poison. They are the place where it was taken can be known definitely. The bodies of the animals are taken to the public health laboratory and there they are examined, the examinations sometimes reaching into the number of 1,000.

Each of the dead rats is examined thoroughly and a report is made of the number of fleas which appear to be affected. In the case of a suspect, or where it is definitely determined that the rat actually has the disease, the tag is consulted and the place of capture of the animal is learned. Then the work of extermination of infestation and perhaps demolition of buildings begins in the neighborhood from which the infected rat came.

Here is what Assistant Surgeon-General William C. Rucker has said in one brief paragraph concerning the eradication and prevention of bubonic plague:

"Plague is primarily a disease of rodents, and secondly and accidentally, a disease of man. Man's safety from the disease lies in the extinction of rodents and its parasites. This is the basis of all preventive and eradicative work. If a man can live in rodent-free surroundings he need have no fear of plague, because if there be no rodents there can be no rodent parasites, and for practical purposes the flea may be considered as the common vector of the disease from rodent to rodent and from rodent to man. The eradication of bubonic plague, therefore, means the eradication of rodents."

Now, in a layman's language, the path of the bubonic plague germ is the path of a rat. Consider the rat in the hold of a ship and the rat in the city. Every rat has fleas. Some of the fleas have the germs of the plague which absorbs the plague poison. The rat dies, the wind may blow the flea to some stray goats on to a man, the parasite is charged with the disease and if the poison is transmitted be-

"NEPTUNE" COMING ALONGSIDE VESSEL TO FUMIGATE FOR RAT DESTRUCTION

A RAT PARADISE

A RAT GUARD

DEMOLISHING A "RAT RODKERY"

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

The Neptune is in charge of Past Assistant Surgeon General Rucker, who is in charge of the general crusade being conducted by the public health service against the rat plague and parasite. Dr. Claude C. Pierce is also one of the determined workers in the crusade against the rat. The rat-killing slip is worth a thousand forrests, a thousand cats and a thousand terriers in its work of rodent extermination. With one breath it can kill 10,000 rats. It can kill the rodents, but not the fleas. It is said that only octahedron. The character of the water has a definite effect on the more than 1,000 pieces. Among them was a letter from the senora saying that she had saved the money for her husband and directed that it be put in the bank to their credit. And now the young men are being entertained in an American college upon the interest of their mother's savings.—From the Business Woman's Magazine.

CLEAR YOUR SKIN

By Daily Use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Trial Free.

You may rely on these fragrant supercreamy emollients to care for your skin, hands and hair. Nothing better to clear the skin of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, the scalp of dandruff and itching and the hands of chapping and scrawness.

Sample each free by mail with 32-p. Skin Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston. Sold everywhere. Adv.

Wanted More Definite Orders.

Comment on the perfect marksmanship shown by the Turks in the attack made in the form of an anecdote by Sergeant Jones of the United States Marine Corps, who says:

The captain called up a gunner and pointing out a battleship several miles away said:

"Can you hit that ship?"

"Yes, sir, sir," said the gunner.

"You are to do it, then."

"Aye, aye, sir."

"Well, you hit him in the eye with a 14-inch shell."

"Aye, aye, sir. Which eye, sir?"

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS IF BACK HURTS

Says Too Much Meat Forms Uric Acid Which Clogs the Kidneys and Irritates the Bladder.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache, dull aches in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, sick stomach, constipation and all sorts of bladder disorders.

The moment you feel your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel any kind of a pain that pain in the back ache condition shall leave it for the short. It is possible for precautions to be taken which will prevent the rodents either from leaving or entering the vessel. Their ordinary way of egress or ingress is along cables or ropes which lead from the vessel to the shore. To prevent entrance and exit guards are attached to the ropes and to rat ship.

When the public health officials find that it is necessary to turn their monovite of carbon bisulfide into the air in the hatches are battened down, every window of every cabin is sealed, and all the cracks of the doors are closed with paper attached by means of four paste. Then the Neptune's assistants, the coke in the closed furnace is started burning and the generator monovite of carbon passes through a tube into the hold of the ship until it is filled with the deadly gas. Then attention is turned to the cabins and staterooms, each of which is given its full charge of the corresponding poison.

The vessel is left alone for six hours and then the hatches, doors, windows and port holes are opened and the gas escapes. All that remains to be done is to go in and gather up the dead rats. The fumigating process is not only the rats but everything else living that is on board and this means everything living down to the smallest form of animal life.

Danger is passing quickly from New Orleans and it is passing because of the activity of the officials of the state and city, but those of the government, took hold of the situation at once and saved it. If it really decided saving, and there are those who believe that if unchecked, the bubonic plague might have spread to other cities. By William C. Rucker, who has been in charge at New Orleans, is experienced in antiplague work, having served in San Francisco, where he was the ranking officer when the crusade against the plague was instituted in that city.

The rat is the Neptune's means its work on the waterfront of cities, but it must not be supposed that every rat is a bubonic plague rat, which may carry with them the germs of a dread disease. In any city which may be infected with the bubonic plague parasite, the crusade against the rodents is carried on in all sections of the town where the rodents abound. Thousands upon thousands of the rats are caught in traps or are killed by poison. They are the place where it was taken can be known definitely. The bodies of the animals are taken to the public health laboratory and there they are examined, the examinations sometimes reaching into the number of 1,000.

Each of the dead rats is examined thoroughly and a report is made of the number of fleas which appear to be affected. In the case of a suspect, or where it is definitely determined that the rat actually has the disease, the tag is consulted and the place of capture of the animal is learned. Then the work of extermination of infestation and perhaps demolition of buildings begins in the neighborhood from which the infected rat came.

Here is what Assistant Surgeon-General William C. Rucker has said in one brief paragraph concerning the eradication and prevention of bubonic plague:

"Plague is primarily a disease of rodents, and secondly and accidentally, a disease of man. Man's safety from the disease lies in the extinction of rodents and its parasites. This is the basis of all preventive and eradicative work. If a man can live in rodent-free surroundings he need have no fear of plague, because if there be no rodents there can be no rodent parasites, and for practical purposes the flea may be considered as the common vector of the disease from rodent to rodent and from rodent to man. The eradication of bubonic plague, therefore, means the eradication of rodents."

Now, in a layman's language, the path of the bubonic plague germ is the path of a rat. Consider the rat in the hold of a ship and the rat in the city. Every rat has fleas. Some of the fleas have the germs of the plague which absorbs the plague poison. The rat dies, the wind may blow the flea to some stray goats on to a man, the parasite is charged with the disease and if the poison is transmitted be-

"NEPTUNE" COMING ALONGSIDE VESSEL TO FUMIGATE FOR RAT DESTRUCTION

A RAT PARADISE

A RAT GUARD

DEMOLISHING A "RAT RODKERY"

HERE'S FRAGMENT OF FICTION

Of Course No Such Deceptive Crestore as Mr. Jones Existed in Real Life.

Dinner had been over only ten minutes when James made a mess of the hall for the halitrex and his bat and the lose-effecting Mrs. Jones followed close to say:

"You have been out over a month. How long is this going to last?"

"Only until the war closes, my dear."

"But I don't see that it is necessary for you to be out every night until midnight. During the hard weather you were out not a single evening. In fact, you said the men who were whooping around until were a good deal of soft heads."

"So they were, dear, but last campaign is not this campaign. Last campaign things were different. Last time to soar on pinions proud, and old glory waves to every breeze that blows."

"The bulwarks of liberty are tottering to their fall."

"Liberty is never ruled by politicians or military."

"Is liberty left to go for nothing and are our liberties to be sold for a mess of potatoes?"

"Liberty is cared supinely by and see this great and glorious country go to destruction, or shall I lead the assessment to still further cash for?"

"Shall the American nation still continue to soar on pinions proud, and old glory waves to every breeze that blows, or shall the bird become a crow and the flag become a diaphloth?"

"Why, Thomas, is it as bad as that?" asked the wife in alarm.

"It's worse. The next gate the sweeps from the North."

"Then hurry along, and be gone as long as you want to."

And Jones went down to his club and plead robbed until the wee small next morning.—Exchange.

A train of thought isn't always in time.

COULDN'T ATTEND TO BOTH

Grocery Clerk Found That Putting Up Orders and Taking Baseball Didn't Go Together.

The manager of a large Portland (Ore.) grocery store took great pleasure in reading a few letters sent in by one of his clerks. This clerk is a "fan." One of these letters, dated, "off the wooly baseball lovers who can talk, expand and argue the grind some at any time and anywhere. His duties at the store keep him anchored most of the time, though on special occasions he is assigned to the teams.

Among his duties he is put up orders for customers in the highbrowed section of the city. While he was engaged in this work the other day one of his chums called a "fan" down in and the begins to talk baseball. The grocery clerk kept on putting up the orders, but his thoughts were all on that important subject, baseball.

In the course of his argument he went to the shelf and got a case of starch instead of a package of sugar; put in two bottles of pickles, and put in a bag of dog-biscuits and order for lard, two pounds, strap instead of condensed milk. He could have drawn molasses into the kerosene can if some one had not pulled him away for a moment as he started for the molasses barrel.

For a time this was the way that his orders went on, and it caused a riot among three or four of the best customers. He is still a good deal of a "fan," but he is not going to put up orders while engrossed in his favorite subject.

"Unless a man is skilled in the art of putting up a bag of sugar, he can have a lot of money without starting much of a conflagration.

WOULD AID COTTON GROWERS

Flour-Milling Firm Urges Its Customers to Accept Inferior Grades of Product in Cotton Sacks.

In order to increase the demand for cotton, one of the largest flour-milling firms in America has directed its managers and salesmen all over the country to urge its customers to accept deliveries of flour that are shipped in cotton instead of jute sacks. Hitherto jute imported from India has been used extensively for shipments of flour, both to home and foreign markets. The sacks employed hold 140 pounds each. If the change can be induced to accept shipments in cotton sacks holding 98 pounds each, there will be a marked increase in the demand for home-grown cotton, and the sales of the flour-milling firm is regarded as a long step in this direction. Anything that will improve the financial condition of the cotton growers, it is pointed out, will increase the volume of their purchases and thus benefit general trade conditions. For the last crop it is believed that the trade will not insist on the jute sacks and hitherto.

Indication of Debility.

The "morning feeling after a good night's sleep should be one of vigorous refreshment, which should continue throughout the day with the usual fatigue, not exhaustion, at the end of the day's work. A condition of very different significance is that of feel the day, with a feeling of weakness, followed by a feeling of well-being, of even exhilaration toward the end of the day. This condition is symptomatic of, and indicates that the system is run down and debilitated, and needs attention.

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

The Neptune is in charge of Past Assistant Surgeon General Rucker, who is in charge of the general crusade being conducted by the public health service against the rat plague and parasite. Dr. Claude C. Pierce is also one of the determined workers in the crusade against the rat. The rat-killing slip is worth a thousand forrests, a thousand cats and a thousand terriers in its work of rodent extermination. With one breath it can kill 10,000 rats. It can kill the rodents, but not the fleas. It is said that only octahedron. The character of the water has a definite effect on the more than 1,000 pieces. Among them was a letter from the senora saying that she had saved the money for her husband and directed that it be put in the bank to their credit. And now the young men are being entertained in an American college upon the interest of their mother's savings.—From the Business Woman's Magazine.

FIGHTING THE PLAGUE SPREADING RAT

By Edward B. Clark

STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

DR. CLAUDE C. PIERCE

ASSISTANT SURGEON GENERAL WM. RUCKER

ALONG the levees guarding the crescent-shaped banks of the Mississippi river at New Orleans, there is good rat ship. Neptune, is at the deadly work. Deadly work which is life-saving work. Acting under the direction of Uncle Sam's public health service, Rats carry the parasite which transmits the frightful disease, bubonic plague, to man. The Neptune's work is to kill the rat and to save man. It is a crusade against the creatures blind with bias, and in them are added chapters on the natural enemy of rats, owls, hawks, weasels, cats, dogs, ferrets and the other creatures which either consider the repulsive rat a delicacy or like to prey upon the sheer love of killing.

The average reader has little knowledge of the research work which is being done by the public health service of the United States government to safeguard the people from disease and death. The plague preventive work which has been done by officials over the past year is setting works in the whole field of their study and endeavor.

OUT OF COMMISSION.

Nervous Wife—Oh, Harry, dear, do order a mousetrap to be sent home today.

Harry—But you bought one last week.

Nervous Wife—Yes, dear, but there's a mouse in that.—Pearson's Weekly.

A SAD FAREWELL.

"So you are going to make another tour?"

"Yes," replied the actor.

"But you advertised your previous engagement as a farewell concert."

"It was one. We said good-by to nearly a thousand dollars."

THE CHILDREN

DAUGHTER CAN SAVE MOTHER

There Are Many Little Pleasures Girl Can Give Her Parents—Don't Talk Disrespectfully.

There is so much a daughter can do for her mother that it is hard to know where to begin. Remember, girls, that all your lives your mothers have been sacrificing themselves for you. Now you have a chance to repay them.

Your shoulders are young and strong; help lift the burden a little from the tired shoulders that have borne it so long. Let mother see that you appreciate all that she has done for you. Take the heaviest part of the housework off her hands. Make her stay in bed in the morning while you get the breakfast. Send her out to enjoy herself while you look after the children.

Of course you cannot do this every day, but you can do your share of it. If you are a numerous family you may not do much of this sort of thing, but there are many little pleasures you can offer her.

Something pretty to wear will please her. Give your mother the love and respect you do. Confide in her and tell her your hopes and ambitions. She is better than all the girl friends in the world and will never tell your secr

Friday, January 15th
DOUBLE STAMP DAY

On this day we will give Double Stamps. This means that you will get twice the amount in "S. & H." Green Stamps that you purchase.

Special for Friday and Saturday Jan. 15 & 16:--

Ladies' $6.00 Dress Skirts, the latest styles in Black, Navy Blue and Copenhagen

$3.98

Ask for the "S. & H." Stamps.

Go to LEVINSON'S Get the Habit

C. Danto & Son.

THE - STORE - OF - QUALITY — WHERE - ALL - GOODS - ARE - FRESH

SPECIALS for Saturday

IN OUR MEAT DEPT.

Fancy Rib Roast Beef	12½ Cents
Fancy Pot Roast	12½ Cents
Fancy Round Steak	12½ Cents
Fancy Sirloin Steak	12½ Cents
Fancy Porter House Steak	12½ Cents
Fancy Ribs of Beef	12½ Cents
Fancy Hamburg Steak	12½ Cents

We also have Fresh Dressed Chickens. Come Early or Telephone.

C. Danto & Son.

212 Bridge St. — Phone No. 12 — Phone No. 63

Report of the Condition of

THE CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK

AT CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN

at the close of business December 31, 1914, as called for by the Commissioner of the Banking Department.

RESOURCES

	Commercial	Savings
Loans and Discounts, viz.:
Commercial Department	$[illegible]
Savings Department		[illegible]
Bonds, Mortgages and securities, viz.:
Commercial Department	$[illegible]	$[illegible]
Savings Department	$[illegible]	$[illegible]
Overdrafts		[illegible]
Banking House and Fixtures		[illegible]
Other Real Estate		[illegible]
Items in Transit		[illegible]
Reserve:
Due from banks in reserve cities	$ [illegible]	$ [illegible]
Exchanges for clearing house	[illegible]	[illegible]
U. S. and National bank currency	[illegible]	[illegible]
Gold coin	[illegible]	[illegible]
Silver coin	[illegible]	[illegible]
Nickels and cents	[illegible]	$[illegible]
Checks and other cash items		[illegible]
Total		[illegible]

LIABILITIES

Capital stock paid in	[illegible]
Surplus fund	[illegible]
Undivided profits, less current expenses and taxes paid	[illegible]
Dividends unpaid	[illegible]
Commercial deposits subject to check	$[illegible]
Commercial certificates of deposit	[illegible]
State money on deposit	[illegible]
Savings deposits (book accounts)	$[illegible]
Savings certificates of deposit	[illegible]
Notes and bills rediscounted
Total	[illegible]

STATE OF MICHIGAN } ss.
County of Charlevoix }

W. J. Sachs, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement, to the best of my knowledge and belief, contains a correct statement of the true state of the several matters therein contained, as shown by the records of the bank.

W. J. SYCHTS, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me Correct Attest:
This 15th day of January, 1915. J. L. Crane
BEYORDE JOHNSON, Notary Public. D. A. Hayes
My commission expires Feb. 7, 1915. John Sachs

FIREMEN'S MASQUERADE FEB. 22nd.

THE MAKING OF A HARBOR

(Continued)

Chapter IV.

The wrecked cribs were gradually placed in repair and as there followed a short period of good weather, scows were sent up Pine Lake and loaded with stones and before the next storm these cribs were sufficiently ballasted to hold them in place. A long line was then run from this permanent work to one of the stray cribs on the beach, a scow was attached to the line about half way out and with two hand spikes in connection with this line a combination was formed sometimes denominated as a Spanish windlass, being only limited in its power by the size of the perpendicular hand spike, held in place by one man, and the length of the horizontal hand spike operated by two men and forming the lever. Five men operating this from the scow proved more effective than the tugs and the two cribs were soon recovered from the shore and reassembled in the work where they still remain.

J. E. Haviland, of Acme, Mich., was at that time one of the state swamp land commissioners and finding that the people were so thoroughly in earnest and had made such strenuous beginning, he became interested in our behalf and as a result, our elusive appropriation of sixteen sections of swamp land was restored to our credit. With the proceeds of this appropriation the superstructure was placed on a part of the work and a contract entered into with Carkin and Stickney to dredge the channel from Lake Michigan to Round Lake.

The dredge arrived in July 1892 and the entire population of the village formed a committee of reception.

One cut of about 30 feet in width and 10 to 12 feet depth was made entirely through and though the contract price was 40 cents per yard for soft material and 70 cents for hard material, no claim whatever was made for hard material.

The U. S. engineers were kept posted as to the progress of the work and when the dredge had got nearly through to Round Lake, Col. Mansfield, in charge of harbors on the east shore of Lake Michigan, arrived and at once became much interested and resulting in giving us a most favorable report recommending a government appropriation.

During the previous winter two cribs had been placed in the south pier and still constitute a part of that work.

The board of supervisors voted an appropriation of $1,000 for the upper cut which was expended in making a channel about thirtyfive feet wide.

In 1876 an appropriation of $10,000 was made by the government which was expended in dredging in the summer of 1877 and small vessels and steamers at once commenced the use of both channels and the farmers up lake were enabled to land and market their produce, almost at their door.

On July 7th, 1882, the first large steamer, the Fountain City, Captain Gibson, came into Round Lake. It is doubtful if the captain ever received a more wildly enthusiastic reception than that accorded him from the throng that lined the shores of the river that day.

The first bridge across Pine River was made by driving small piles with a maul, placing rough stringers and making a walk about four feet wide and twenty inches above the water, a few plank were left loose for the passage of canoes and small boats.

The second bridge was of pile construction and had a horizontal draw some ten or twelve feet in width, operated by a wench at the approach and it took a large part of the available population of the town to manipulate this so that a boat could pass.

The third bridge was an iron swing bridge that was swung by hand which, in the development of the harbor became inadequate and was sold to East Jordan where it is still in use.

The fourth is our present double track power bridge that will probably be adequate for all needs for years to come.

The progress of the harbor improvement well illustrates the fact "that the best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft-agley."

The discouraging mishaps were by no means confined to the local management. The U. S. engineer connected the two south cribs with the shore with brush mattresses loaded with stone, the same as the lads jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi; but the ice accumulated and fastened onto these mattresses with the result that the second season not a vestige of the work remained. They protected the bank of the river with what they called plank beam revetment consisting of plank eight inches wide placed between piles and spiked together, this also soon went glimmering.

The later system of sheet piling seems to be all that could be desired.

Total appropriation for improvement of harbors on the east shore of Lake Michigan as per report of the chief of engineers 1914:

	Total Appropriation	No. of Vessels
St Joseph	$ 928,546 46	1930
South Haven	563,690 99	918
Saugatuck	553,939 00	756
Holland	772,049 77	1938
Grand Haven	1,600,943.07	2983
Grand River	313,616.15
Muskegon	967,826 30	1236
Pt. Water-White Lake	720,521 30	184
Ludington	1,091,647.81	1575
Manistee	977,054.87	1461
Portage Lake	396,939 65	598
Arcadia (recent)	60,000.00	348
Frankfort	509,475.44	2384
Charlevoix	722,119.65	1018
Petoskey	146,314.47	202

Of the total appropriation for Charlevoix harbor $880,205.04 was for construction and $153,074.38 for maintenance, amount available for fiscal year ending June 30, 1916 is $6,000. The number of passengers on steamers, summer of 1913 was 10,287.

The first project of the U. S. engineers was for a harbor of 12 foot depth but this was revised in 1902 to 15 feet in depth.

It seems that the approved project has been completed with the exception of 200 feet extention of the south pier which is to be deferred for the present and depth maintained by dredging.

"The distance from Lake Michigan to Pine Lake is about 1 mile, the distance through the lower channel being 2000 feet, through Round Lake 2000 feet and through the upper channel about 1500 feet. The maximum draft that could be carried at the end of the fiscal year was about 17 feet below mean lake level, the usual variation of level of water surface is about 1 foot."

It may be noted that the total expenditures on Charlevoix harbor, when compared with the number of vessels reported proves the fact that greater results have been attained in proportion to outlay than at any other of the fourteen harbors on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan.

It is a far cry from the frail canoe working its way by means of pole and line laboriously up the channel and the great steamer Manitou coming in under her own steam, and the progress in other directions is somewhat represented by the throngs of pleasure seekers and resorters that line her decks and the dump cart conveyance of the school girls in the early day.

The effort and outlay required for the improvement of the harbor have been amply justified by the results attained. Each year more and more are being attracted by our incomparable surroundings and each and all join in the chorus of praise that has predestined our little City of the Lakes to be in truth "Charlevoix the Beautiful."

(The End)

MANY DISORDERS COME FROM THE LIVER

Are You Just at Odds With Yourself? Do You Regulate Living?

Are you sometimes at odds with yourself and with the world? Do you wonder what ails you? True you may be calling yourself and viewing yourself, but something is the matter! Constipation, Headache, Nervousness and Bilious Spells indicate a sluggish liver. Try that remedy in Dr. King's New Life Pills. Only 25c at your Druggist. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Skin Eruptions.

SEA MINES IN WARFARE.

The Result When a Vessel Strikes One of These Deadly Engines.

To merchantmen, to the smaller and older warships—to everything that floats except the very highest and more recent products of the shipbuilder's art—the mine presents the danger of complete and almost instant annihilation. The majority of the ships in itself an element of danger, for the water surrounding it is incompressible.

If the skin and frame could give way without rupture and permit the energy suddenly expanding given 2,000 times the volume of the solid explosive to transmit their energy in such a way as simply to push the ship aside and thus find a way to the surface, the damage might be which.

But this cannot be. There is no such elasticity available. And the expansion is so nearly instantaneous that pushing the ship aside is physically impossible. Therefore the structure must break, relenting the gases first into the interior and then by fires of heat redistance finally up into the air.

This action is completely instantaneous. It blows off hatch covers and deck plates, twists massive steel members into unrecognizable shapes, spreads havoc broadcast. It transmutes a proud ship into a sinking mass of wreckage, a happy passenger saloon into a shambles—carries morning into a hundred homes. Such is the effect of unseen—Sidney Graves Noon in Leslie's.

Hard to Kill.

A distinguished entomologist writes: "When I was still new to collecting, in the south of France I discovered one day, to my great joy, a large female of Saturnia pyri hidden away in some crevice. The specimen was the finest I had ever caught, and I decided, on account of its bulky body, to stuff it to quite unnecessary operation; I have kept Saturnia alive unstuffed. The moth was first apparently killed by being forced into a cyanide bottle, where it was left about an hour. The abdomen was then emptied and the cavity filled with cotton wool soaked in a saturated solution of mercuric chloride. The insect, pinned and set, was discovered next day attempting to fly away from the setting board."

Her Attorney Explained.

Miss Curley kept a private school and one morning was interviewing a new pupil:

"What does your father do to earn his living?" the teacher asked the little girl.

"Please, ma'am," was the prompt reply, "he doesn't live with us. My mother supports me."

"Well, then," asked the teacher, "how does your mother earn her living?"

"Why," replied the little girl in an artless manner, "she gets paid for staying away from father."—London Standard.

Literary Note.

"I most confess that I don't understand Henry James. His style is so involved.

"I'll tell you how to go about reading him. First run over a life insurance policy. After that Henry James will seem lucid and clear."—Pittsburgh Post.

A Veteran.

The chief was interviewing the young man who had applied for work.

"Have you had any experience in the lunch business?" he asked.

"Why, I should say so," replied the energetic youth. "I've been touching for almost twenty years."—Lippincott's.

His Patience.

If father spends three hours at home on Sunday and doesn't fill or mend a few of the children he spends the rest of the week bragging about his patience.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin

A TABLESPOONFUL of turpentine boiled with white clothes will greatly aid in the bleaching process. A tablespoonful of borax put in the last water in which clothes are rinsed will make them surprisingly. Pound the borax so that it will dissolve easily. This is especially good to remove the yellow which time gives to white garments that have been laid aside for two or three years.

When colored muslin has become faded and it is desired to bleach it white, chloride of lime put in the boiling water in the proportion of one teaspoonful of lime to one quart of water will effect the result.

Badly stained handkerchiefs can be made as white as new if placed in a vessel and covered with ammonia and peroxide of hydrogen mixed with twice the bulk of water. Let the handkerchiefs soak until then wash them in the usual manner. Often the glove in that old shoebox discolor handkerchiefs, and this process is one of the best for cleaning them.

To shrink cotton material place it neatly folded in a tub of water and allow it to remain until thoroughly damp. Then hang it straight on the line by placing the central fold on the line. Pin it in many places so that the material will not sag.

White goods may first be put in cold water, brought to a boil, then hung on the line. Lai ginghams and other colored materials soak in lukewarm water to which a little salt has been added until all the folds are thoroughly wet through, then take out, unfold without wringing, and dry quickly. Do not iron.

Colored ginghams and other cottons should be soaked in cold salt water before washing and then washed in dissolved soap and warm water. If soap is rubbed on the color is likely to fade. Wash quickly and rinse in cold water. The colors may be revived if a tablespoonful of vinegar is added to the rinsing water for red and pink. A lump of dissolved ammonia will bright en blue, and a lump of alum will revive pink. Starch is thin boiled starch and dry in the shade. When washing glue items avoid strong soap, hot water, too much rubbing, hot starch, and do not dry in the hot sunshine. Do not wash in hard water.

Plaids are liable to fade an ugly yellow; blues and greens fade a clear white. Yellow washes nicely, brown look very clear, and mixed white and black looks fresh and bright, even when slightly faded. Most lavenders and tans wash well. Flavored materials, ginghams and muslins, will not fade if washed in this way. Make a gallon of flour starch, straining it in usual, pour half of it into two pails of soft water and wash until clean. Put the rest of the starch in the rinsing water. Dry in the shade and iron on the wrong side.

Cooked starch is much improved by the addition of sperm or salt, or both, or a little dissolved gum arabic. To make a stiffening for black brush materials, boil two quarts of wheat bran in six quarts of water for half an hour. Let it get cold, then strain. You will need neither soap nor starch if this is used. If too thick add cold water. This preparation will both cleanse and stiffen. When starching black in a or organdie it is well to add a little black dye to the starch.

When the family washing is large much time, labor and fuel can be saved if the following method is used: Take a clean laundry or kitchen table, shake out the bath towels and spread them over the table, then do the same with hand and roller towels, then pillowcases. Fold the sheets, pin them over all. Then cover with an ironing sheet. Bring the table close to the stove, so as not to lose time getting hot irons. Then commence and iron all underwear, stockings, tablecloths, napkins and handkerchiefs, all excepting starched clothes. Hang the line line sheet and all the fine work underneath will be as smooth as if sent to the laundry. When laundering any delicate goods of passing fine, do without first sprinkling it and you will find that it will look far newer and silkier than when dampened and ironed in the usual manner.

No Use to Try and wear out your cold —it will wear you out instead.

Thousands keep on suffering Coughs and Colds through neglect and delay.

Why make yourself an easy prey to restless illness and epidemic as the result of a neglected Cold? Coughs and Colds sap your strength and vitality, unless checked in the early stages. Dr. King's New Discovery is what you need—the first dose helps. Your head clears up, you breathe freely and you feel so much better. A 50c bottle to-day and stack relief at once.

Mrs. David Moore, Saginaw, Ala., writes: "My husband had a Cough for fifteen years and tried a number of other remedies without success, a sample bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery gave relief, and after taking several bottles was cured and well."

Excellent for Children's Coughs. They like Dr. King's New Discovery. It's so pleasant. Trial bottle mailed on receipt of 4c in stamps.

H. E. BUCKLEN & CO.
430 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

—FOR—

Furniture, Stoves, Ranges, Carpets, Rugs, Comforts and Blankets

—Go to—

S. M. SEE & SONS,
The Reliable Housefurnishers.

- F O R -

Purity, Flavor, Quality, Price

Buy "IRON DUKE" Flour.

Argo Milling Co.
MANUFACTURERS

It Will Pay You to Watch

Blanchard's Bargain Counter

F. S. Blanchard Estate,
F. L. Bartholomew, Administrator.

Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix Homes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock, which consists of everything, such as Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper.

TELEPHONE NO. 22

JL CRANE — JANUARY — JL CRANE

Clearing Sale!

To be Held at This Store Beginning Saturday, January 16th and Ending Saturday, January 23rd, 1915.

This will be by all odds the greatest bargain-giving event that has been held in Charlevoix for many years. it will be a real Carnival of Bargains in every sense of the word.

Our trade during the past season has been far greater than we expected even in our most sanguine moments, and hundreds of odds and ends and broken lines is the consequence. While many lots of this merchandise will be marked to sell below the wholesale cost, we feel and know that in the aggregate it means no loss to us.

Late turns in trade events and our natural wish to close out all goods in their season, combine to make this January Bargain Carnival a congregation of grand merchandise values that is not likely to be equalled in this locality for some time.

Make out a list of your needs for months to come, attend this Carnival, and cause your dollars to bring you the biggest income a dollar ever brought.

The crowds are likely to exceed our capacity at times and the store will possibly look somewhat topsy-turvy on that account. Therefore, we beg your kind indulgence and patience.

PRICES EXAMPLED BELOW ARE BUT A FEW OF THE MANY. READ THEM AND COME.

SATURDAY
January 16
SPECIAL THIS DAY ONLY
50c Childrens Outing Flannel Gowns 25c
10c Outing Flannels—large line of patterns 6¾c

MONDAY
January 18
SPECIAL THIS DAY ONLY
50c Boys Wool Mixed Flannel Shirts 12 to 14 ..... 19c
25c Golf Gloves, Women's and Misses ..... 19c pr

January Clearing Ladies' Dress Skirts
The season's best styles—prices cut to the quick

$10.00, $7.00, $8.00, $7.50
Dress Skirts $4.50
$6.95, $6.50, $6.00, $5.00.
Dress Skirts $3.75
Large line of sizes, colors and styles.

January Clearing Large & Small Rugs

9x12 $25.00 Axminister Rugs	$19.50
9x12 22.50 Axminister Rugs	17.00
9x12 15.00 Brussells Rugs	11.50
36x72 4.00 Axminister Rugs	3.25
27x54 2.75 Axminister Rugs	2.00
36x72 Matting Rugs	25c

January Clearing Table Damask
A very special clearing in three lots of Damasks
1.75 1.65 1.50 — Damasks 1.15 yd.
1.25 1.00 .98 — Damask 78c yd
65 60 50 — Damasks 43c yd

THURSDAY
January 21
SPECIAL THIS DAY ONLY
Men's 65c good quality Laundered Dress Shirts, all sizes 29c
Bias Lawn Binding, white only ..... 2c Bolt

SATURDAY
January 23
SPECIAL THIS DAY ONLY
40 inch $1.50 Crepe-de-Chene and Crepe Meteor Silks
88c yd.

These Prices are Good all the Week:

January Clearing Dress Goods
10c Heavy Scotch Towels, small check patterns ..... 29c yd
10c Dress Plaids, new patterns ..... 37c yd
10c Plain Serges in all colors. Heavy Storm Sizes and Fine French Serges ..... 37c yd
1 Special lot of $1.50, $1.25, $1.00 and 95c Fine French Serges. Heavy Brocades. All Wool Basket Weave. This Sale Price 69c

January Clearing Underwear
Munsing and Dependon Underwear at these prices should interest you:
Women's Wear—
$1.00 Munsing Union Suits 75c
1.00 Dependon " " 75c
.50 " Vests and Drawers 29c
1.00 Scarlet " " 69c
.25 Dependon Vests & Drawers 19c
Men's & Boy's Wear—
$1.00 Men's Union Suits ..... $ .75
1.50 " " 1.00
2.50 " " 1.75
.25 " " ..... .19

January Clearing Ladies' Sweaters
The finest Sweaters in our stock in exclusive ladies designs—Fine and Heavy weaves—
36 to 44 sizes
6.50-6.00-5.50-5.00
SWEATERS
all included in this sale
$3.95

January Clearing
Various Stocks and Small Things

18c All Linen Blea Crash	12½c
25c Infants Mittens, white	18c
12½c Dress Ginghams	9½c yd
5c Outing Flannels	3¼c yd
$1.95 Damask Napkins	$1.40 doz
$5.00 Silk Petticoats	$2.95
$6 & $5 Suit Cases, genuine Cowhide	$3.95
$1.50 Dutch Hoods	$1.00
1.25 Dutch Hoods	75c
50c Bradley Mufflers	29c
$1.00 Ladies' Silk Waists	$1.13
98c Blue Satin Waists	38c
89c Knee Pants	59c

Coats Thread 3c

January Clearing House Dresses
The houseddresses are of the famous Harmon make—made better than others and of better materials.

$1.50 Grade	$1.00
1.25 "	85c
1.00 "	75c
.80 "	59c

Sizes 14 to 46 including the extra stout sizes.

January Clearing Cotton Batting
Full Comfort size Batting, One Piece, 72x90.

95c grade	78c
85c "	65c
$1.00 grade	89c
2.00 Wool Batts	$1.60

January Clearing Silkolines & Challies
Full 36 in. Fancy and plain Silkolines Colonial Grade in excellent patterns. Buy all you need at this price 8½c
36 inch Comforter Challies. Special small patterns for Comforts 8c yd

TUESDAY
January 19
SPECIAL THIS DAY ONLY
25c Hair Bow Ribbons all colors ..... 12½c yd
18 & 20c Fancy Crepes for Dressing Sacques etc ..... 9c yd

WEDNESDAY
January 20
SPECIAL THIS DAY ONLY
Men's and Boy's plain Blue Denim & fancy stripe Overalls, 50c and 60c grades 19c
20c Galates Cloth, splendid patterns ..... 10½c yd

January Clearing Ladies' and Misses' Coats
The greatest bargains in up-to-date Coats ever offered in Charlevoix.

$27.50, $25.00, $22.50, $19.75, $18.00 Coats
$10.00
$15.00, $12.50, $10.00, $9.75, $9.00 Coats
$5.00
$8.00 Coats
$10.00
Wooltex Coats included in this sale.

January Clearing Curtain Mulls and Curtain Scrims

50c grade Mulls and Scrims	35c
25c " "	18c
15c " "	10½c
12 1-2c " "	8½c
10c grade	7½c

Entire stock included in sale

January Clearing Corsets

$2.00 W.B. Lace Front Corsets			$1.95
2.00 " " " "			1.25
1.50 " " " "			1.00
3.00 " " Back "			1.95
2.00 " " " "			1.25
1 Lot $1 Corsets—various makes			69c
50c W.B. & Warner's Brassiers			29c

How far would you go to save 25% and more on Men's & Boy's Clothing? You don't have to go far, you can save more than this on all LINDQUIST CLOTHING.

FRIDAY
January 22
SPECIAL THIS DAY ONLY
10c Flannelette, all colors ..... 5c yd
15c " Velouss, all colors ..... 6c yd
For Dresses, Kimonas and Dressing Sacques.

SATURDAY
January 23
SPECIAL THIS DAY ONLY
40 inch $1.50 Crepe-de-Chene and Crepe Meteor Silks
88c yd.

January Clearing Messaline Silks: 27 in. Heavy Messaline Silks—Line of Colors Regular $1.00 grade 68c

January Clearing Linoleums: 55c a yd. wide Heavy Linoleums—New Patterns 42½c
80c 2 yd. wide Inlaid Linoleums—Best to Wear ..... 65c yd

Extra Special-LINDQUIST CLOTHING-Extra Special Broken Lines and Discontinued Styles-A Few Lines in Winter Goods at

January 16 to 23 — 10% DISCOUNT — January 16 to 23

J. L. CRANE
Charlevoix, - - Michigan.

MAKING OF ONE-MAN SEED GRAIN PICKLERS IS A NEW INDUSTRY

By H. J. DANIELS.

Hereafter the farmers of the United States will not be obliged to keep the hired man from the fields in order to operate the seed grain pickler. A Cadillac concern recently purchased the right to manufacture and sell in the United States the only automatic, one-man seed grain pickler on the market. The little machine, which is exceedingly simple and yet which does the work of one or three other pickers, has been thoroughly tried out and has been found to be all that it claimed for it.

As a result of the determination of the Cadillac concern to make this pickler, a valuable industry will be added to that city's list, and a number of men will be given employment.

All of the other seed grain picklers on the market in this country require two or more men to operate them while with this machine one man can turn out all the grain in a day that several mills can do. The idea is gravely has been successfully handled in Canada and Europe for a long time.

Being necessary to have a man turn a crank to mix the grain with the formaldehyde solution, the grain is falls in a big from the hopper to the turbine which revolves in the grain solution. The solution is spread on the surface in a fine mist. The grain is fed as it falls from the revolving disc and is thrown against a stationary plate upon which the solution is spread on the grain. Inasmuch as the Cadillac company has the right to manufacture this machine without competition in the United States, it is believed that it will develop into a big industry.

The fact that all agricultural experts are urging the farmers to use a machine of this character more than for the Cadillac company, in former times it was necessary to spread the seed grain out and then dip and then sprinkle it with formaldehyde solution to kill the germs of smut and other spores. Then the crank machines were brought into use, requiring two men to operate. It is claimed by the Cadillac company that their machine is so simple that a child can operate it. The new machine will be on the market in a short time.

IS PROMINENT ROOSTER.

One of the foremost men in western Michigan in the matter of land development is Ralph Hoffman, of Holton, who has several farms which are real object lessons of what can be done on the light soil of western Michigan. Fruit growing, once a fad with him, has become a business, and he devotes most of his time and attention to planting large orchards. Several hundred acres are now in fruit and it will be but a few years before the thirty orchards will be among the most valuable pieces of fruit property in the state, and Hoffman is acting a great deal like a miser of his land will then be worth $500 an acre.

GO IN FOR SUGAR BEETS.

That the Michigan Sugar company is having no trouble in getting the farmers around East Jordan to sign contracts to raise sugar beets next year is the statement of General Manager H. H. Walker of the company. The concern owns six plants and preparations are being made to run all of them to capacity next season. It has been announced that a plant which will be built next year farmers who deliver beets to any one of eight certain stations.

TO DO SCIENTIFIC WORK.

H. B. Leach of Hart, president of the Noach Cleaning company, and general manager of the Noach Extracts, the largest being in Hart, has secured the services of Dr. F. H. Chittenden and several expert assistants of the department of agriculture, before a conference, to do a lot of scientific work in Michigan covering the pea aphis, or what is commonly known among pea growers as pea louse or pea fly. They will also work

J. E. Merritt and the First Tree Set in the Nebiska Whitney Orchard.

ATTENTION TO WINTER ROADS

Use of Wider Sleds Would Give Horses More Room and Would Mean Convenience in Spring.

Much has been said about good roads for summer but not so much attention seems to be paid to winter roads. It seems to be a general opinion in our locality that standard width of sleds should be changed from 36 inches to 44 inches, says Northwestern Agriculturist. Using narrow sleds makes roads too narrow when high, whether it is about impossible for horses to travel in winter time when they can locate the least and by best they could have wider sleds. It would not cover so often if our sleds were wider. Now being a time when roads have to be used every day by our rural carriers, regardless of weather or roads, would it not be a great help to them and to all to find a fixed track in using our wagons the first time in spring?

DO NOT SELL BEST CALVES

Only Way to Obtain Profitable Herd is to Raise Every Well-Marked Heifer From Best Cows.

A really choice, fresh cow will readily bring $60 to $100 without the calf. A cow that will milk four gallons of milk per day during two or three months and continue to milk within six weeks of calving is worth fully this price. Dairymen would gladly pay more than this for every one that is offered. In fact, it is almost impossible to get them. Not only are fresh cows in demand, but calves are usually scarce also. Dairymen and farmers are constantly tempted to freezers and butchers to dispose of their calves. Ten to twelve dollars is thought to be a good price for a few calf four weeks old, and pays better than twenty dollars for a yearold animal. Many farmers contend that it costs more to raise a cow than to buy one. This is probably true, as it will be seen if one should carefully count the cost. Our experience in the milk business for more than twenty years is that it pays to raise well-marked heifers from the best cows, says a writer in Baltimore American. We have found that is the only way to obtain a profitable herd of the best coat. It is by a course of selection from the present herd of blooded stock have been built up; as it is by a contrary course that the native stock has been built up. Our native stock has sprung from good, healthy stock, and if the best calves are retained on the farm there will soon be a great improvement in the herd.

There is no better time than now to start on a systematic improvement of the farm herd. I find after careful inquiry and personal inspection of the best-paying herds in this and the adjoining states that the most dangerous enemies are those who raise the cows they need. The average yield of the cows is small, the herd is mixed and there is less risk of bringing disease into the herd.

Prevent Leaching.

A thin coating of cocoa nutshells spread over the fallplowed ground will prevent leaching of its fertilizers and keep the ground in fine condition.

BIG SUGAR SEED FOR 1911.

General Manager W. H. Wallace of the Michigan Sugar company announces that enough sugar beet seed has been received at the American ports of entry or is en route or Siberia, to guarantee the planting seed for the 1915 season.

Western Michigan

A Region that is Rapidly Developing as a Fruit Growing and General Farming Section

TO DEVELOP THE POTATO INDUSTRY.

Efforts are being made by many interests in the western Michigan territory to develop the potato industry in this section. It has been found that the western Michigan potato, particularly when grown in the northern part of the territory, is unusually free from disease and that the yields of it are very large in some instances. A few weeks since a survey of Wexford county was made by officials representing the federal and state governments and the varieties of potatoes being grown, the diseases prevailing, and the time of the crops being produced, were duly considered. As a result of the survey an exhibit of Wexford county potatoes was made at the meeting of the Michigan Potato Growers' association at Kalamazoo, and the Wexford county growers succeeded in capturing some of the prizes offered for the best specimens of potatoes grown in the state. Now the potatoes of this county are being advertised for seed purposes, and a higher price is obtained for them than for those of the growers of the surrounding counties. However, there are Michigan potatoes are neither better nor worse than those grown in many other counties in western Michigan. The Wexford growers, however, have been more enterprising and have succeeded in getting some valuable advertising for their product. The sandy soils of western Michigan are especially productive of high quality potatoes. It is a frequent thing to harvest crops that run from one to three hundred bushels to the acre, and it is common throughout the western Michigan country to find ten, twenty and forty-acre fields. The above view is in a forty-acre field on the James Hakner farm near Lake City in Missaukee county. The picture from which the cut was made by Fox taken when the potatoes were in possom and shows a splendid growth of tops. However, when the potatoes were dug in the fall, the returns were in keeping with the plants above ground.

ADVOCATING THE MANURE SPREADER

When L. C. Cornell, a general farmer who owns 80 acres near Buckley, Michigan, recently first entertained the idea of a mechanical spreader to handle his barnyard manure, he put the thought constantly away as a foolish idea. He did not think it could pay him to invest in a machine that would be used but a few weeks in the year and only on a boundless farm such as his capital.

One day he learned of a manure spreader that could be rented for the sum of $5. He purchased it, and soon after his troubles commenced. First one cog and then this attachment and then that connecting piece would balk or give way. Perhaps he got his money's worth; at all events, he still has his money, together with a knowledge of its limitations, and is satisfied best when he sees it in the tool shed rather than on the field at work.

Having gotten the neighbors to commenting on his venture, however, Mr. Cornell was taken aback one hot day last fall when a stranger called and said he was installed through the winter. An order for 600 barrels of flour has been placed with the Wolverine company of Hancock, which will cause a good market for the farmers' wheat. Hanger received a summer of valuable civic improvements during the year.

WESTERN MICHIGAN DEVELOPMENT BUREAU'S EXHIBITS

Part of Wooten, Michigan Development Bureau's Exhibit at Toledo.

The Western Michigan Development Bureau made the bit of its history at the recent land show at Toledo. Toledo and Detroit people gave John T. Wooten, in charge of his exhibit of apples and potatoes from western Michigan, the best of accommodation. In Detroit, he was entitled to get a large crowd of City's leading business men at his lectures and to see his exhibits, and the western part of the state was given the best hall Mr. Gilmore was assured of exhibiting space and a good crowd if he would return another year. In Toledo he secured the names of 1,000 farmers in Ohio who are farmers on obtaining the place of their locations, and it is not unlikely that western Michigan will get some of those men as settlers.

BEET SUGAR SEED FOR 1911.

General Manager W. H. Wallace of the Michigan Sugar company announces that enough sugar beet seed has been received at the American ports of entry or is en route or Siberia, to guarantee the planting seed for the 1915 season.

HAD FAITH IN LETTER

JOHN FELT EPISTLE SHOULD WIN LADY LOVE.

At Any Rate, It Is Didn't Swain Announce; Very Decidedly That No Further Attempt Would Be Made by Him.

Drifting into town a homeless waif, John Heidebrink had been given to manhood, and by thrift and hard work had acquired a small farm and built a neat cottage.

One day John called on Squire Olcott, and, being a man of few words, expressed himself thus: "Squire, you know I came to this town a poor boy; you know I have made friends of everybody here, you know I have saved my money and bought a farm and built a house, you know I am thirty and have a bank account."

"Yes," said the squire, "all you say is true."

"Well, squire, I want to get married."

"Good for you, John. Who's the lady?"

"You ain't never noticed a nice little black-eyed schoolteacher passin' up the street every day, have you? Well, that's her."

"I suppose you have her consent and the affair is all arranged," suggested the squire.

"Well, no, not exactly; that is what I want you to do for me. I have never spoken to the lady in my life."

The squire, with a hearty laugh, said: "Where do I come in?"

"Don't laugh, squire. This is a serious thing. I want you to write her a letter and tell her about my being a poor boy, how I have worked early and late and saved my money, how I have saved the farm and built the house, and how I want her—she—she—to be my wife," and here John blushed the blushes coloring his honest, tanned face a shade or two deeper.

So the old squire, who was a past master in the art of love letter writing, set about composing the letter, while John patiently waited, with a little more blushing and the boy said: "Perhaps I had better read it to you, and if it is wrong in any particular, you can say so, and I will change it to suit your taste."

So he read the letter, and it was a beautiful statement of John's life, his work, his desire, his accomplishments about his farm and little cottage. He realized—was it that long before the lady had left deeply distressed and big tears rolled down his cheeks.

"How will that do?" asked the squire as he finished reading.

"Fine!" said John. "Do? It's just splendid!" Then, with a sudden burst of tears and sobs, he blurted out: "Squire, if that letter don't fetch her, she—she—she can go to blazes!"—Mack's Monthly Magazine.

"Souvenir."

There was a crowd of French villagers round the driving seat of the motor car when it stopped on the Dally Mail. "Will yer get out of this, yer little mongrel?" the chauffeur politely requested of the leader of the hood. "I tell yer, yer cannot have the souvenir, yer nuthin."

"Souvenir!" There was a crowd of French villagers round the driving seat of the motor car when it stopped on the Dally Mail. "Will yer get out of this, yer little mongrel?" the chauffeur politely requested of the leader of the hood. "I tell yer, yer cannot have the souvenir, yer nuthin."

"Souvenir!"

Closing Out Ladies' Coats--

$3.00 --- $4.00 $5.00

A. E. Mason's Dept. Store

JANUARY SALE

Begins Monday Morning at 9 o'clock Jan. 18, '15.

This sale is given to turn merchandise into cash and also to close out broken lots left after Xmas.

1 Lot Handkerchiefs worth to 25c, each	3c	1 Lot Music Vocal and Inst.	3c
Long Handled Coal Shovels each	3c	White Wash Belts 2 for	3c

Entire Stock of Embroideries and Lace Insertions, per yard 3c

1 Lot Dishes worth to 25c	10c	1 Lot Dishes worth to 15c	5c
1 Lot Sleds worth $1.25	75c	1 Lot Ladies' White Hand Bags $1.00	10c

Reduced Prices on Fancy Dishes, Cut Glass and Fancy Articles.

All Dinnerware Discount 10 per cent.

Remember some lines the quantity is limited and a great many bargains will be found inside that are not advertised or displayed in windows. So come at 9:00 O'Clock and get the choice of this big stock.

H. E. Mc HUGH

(Successor to SHAWLEY'S BAZAAR)

BELGIUM VISITOR TELLS OF MISERY

All Industries in Country at Complete Standstill.

ONE BREAD LINE OF 225,000

America's Offerings Systematically Distributed Where They Do the Greatest Good—Old Clothes Fashioned Before Being Given to the Homeless and Hungry Children.

Pittsburgh.—J. Rogers Flannery, chairman of the foreign trade committee of Pittsburgh, who has just returned from a three months' tour of Europe, reports that conditions in Belgium have not been exaggerated by lecturers and other American observers who have visited it since the famine situation developed.

"I entered the country by way of Antwerp," declares Mr. Flannery. "I found that Antwerp itself had suffered comparatively little from the bombardment. There were only 200 or 300 houses destroyed for the entire city in bad shape. We drove through town after town which had been rendered practically uninhabitable by the shelling. The worst damage we saw was at Malines, which has a population of about 30,000. It was a terrible condition, and there was great suffering. Cardinal Mercier is looking after the interests of the poor there as well as his can. A few days before we arrived he sent word to Holland that the people were on the verge of starvation and the commission for relief in Belgium managed to get a small emergency supply through to them.

"When we got off the cars they crowded around us, begging for money and help. This was an unique experience, I may say. We were very little bothered by beggars. The people are taking their misery and destitution quietly and nobly. I do not remember that I saw a single beggar abroad in all my observation of Belgium. They seemed to stand, numb and despairing, waiting for some one to come and feed them.

"When we arrived in Brussels we found that 225,000 people were being fed daily from twenty-two food stations established under the auspices of the commission. This does not include those who are being fed in the kitchens of greater Brussels. These are only the ones that are receiving aid out of funds. All the bread consumed in the city comes from the commission's supplies, but those not on the breadline manage to pay for it in some manner. The bakeries which are issued under a strict system of a coupon for the bread they make, the flour is obtained in turned back into the treasury to buy more food. However, it seems to be only a question of time when all but the very richest citizens of Brussels will be counted by the bread lines.

"I saw how work on self-help is done as by the Comite National de Secours et d'Alimentation, the Belgian body which is taking charge of the actual distribution of food. Perhaps this is not astonishing considering that the very States people in Belgium are doing things somewhat the same way. The country is divided into provinces, and each province has its own commission, which receives for all goods received from the central committee. The provincial commission then distributes the supplies among the different towns, each of which has a committee of its own. These town committees make the individual distribution.

"Brussels, for instance, is divided into twenty-two relief stations. Every applicant must apply to the station nearest which he lives. The local committee gives the applicant a card which states his name, address and the number of members in his family. Each member of the family is entitled to 250 grams of bread and one-half litre of soup a day. The rations are distributed at appointed hours, when the applicants stand with their cards at the stations and receive as many rations as there are members of the family. The card is marked or punched like a mail ticket to guard against imposition. And the commission keeps a record on a duplicate card of the number of rations issued to each applicant.

"Milk is distributed to all children under three years of age. To prevent adults from taking the milk meant for the children the children are brought to the stations and receive their milk there.

"One of the most interesting sights I witnessed was the work of the clothing department of Brussels. They were handing forth new and second hand clothes. Some of the wealthier women in Brussels were working at this job like day laborers. They are going from door to door, from house to house, by paying them for knitting sleeves and stockings. They collect all the clothing possible, and the minute cave with which men inspect it is a lesson to American charitable associations. They go over all the contributions and throw away those garments which are in bad condition. The rest of the clothing is repaired by competent women. It then goes to the disinfecting room and after it is rendered completely sterile. Finally it is dressed. A new plan of secondhand clothing which had received this treatment and which looked like new clothing."

Beaver Island News

Matt Rickogers returned to Milwaukee after spending two weeks visiting his parents.

Miss Mary Gibson and Miss Grace Gallagher returned to school at Traverse City after spending several weeks at home.

Oscar Martin went to Detroit to visit his mother.

Capt. M. J. Bonner went to Charlevoix on business.

Herold McCann made a business trip to Charlevoix.

W. J. Gallagher went to Charlevoix to attend the meeting of the board of supervisors.

Roland McCann made a business trip to Charlevoix.

Mary O'Donnell returned to Petoskey after a month's visit with her parents.

George Williams, of Boyne City, is here lumbering this winter.

Dennis D. and Hugh D. Boyle returned home after spending several weeks at Duluth and Escanaba visiting their brothers and sisters.

Married, at the Holy Cross Church, January 6th, James Burns to Miss Anna Barry.

Capt. Peter Green, of Port Huron, who was visiting his mother, went to Manistique on the last trip of tug McCann.

Capt. Frank Left went to Charlevoix on business.

James H. Gallagher, of the Beach Fisheries went to Charlevoix on business.

Will Gibson made a trip to Charlevoix last week.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

The session of the board of supervisors closed Friday. The chief business was the approval of the county officers bonds.

County Normal Notes

HAYES PEARL

Mr. J. H. Milford, County School Commissioner, visited the normal school Wednesday of last week.

Mr. J. E. Chew, one of the county supervisors, visited the normal Wednesday and gave a very interesting talk on county schools.

Lillian Akins observed the work of the chart class during the latter part of the week.

Miss Edith Hale and Mrs. Harry Gregory visited the normal Wednesday. Miss Hale gave a talk on her work in the Rowland school, where she is teaching. She was a member of the class of '11.

Ethel Sanford observed the work of the fifth grade, preparatory to teaching.

Ruby Hooker and Hazle Pearl observed the work of the third grade reading.

The class attended a meeting of the W. C. T. U. last Friday, at the Congregational church.

First Publication December 31

NOTICE

State of Michigan
Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix.

Frederick H. McDougall, Plaintiff,
vs
Lee Howland, Defendant.

Charlevoix County, ss. To Lee Howland, Defendant: and all it may concern: Notice is hereby given that a suit for alienation was begun in the above entitled cause from your wife on the 18th day of December, A. D. 1914, at the south of said plaintiff and against said defendant for the sum of $10,000 with five per cent interest from September 15th, 1914, and that you are warned to appear therein on or before the 20th day of January, A. D. 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, that being the place of holding the circuit court for said county, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, or so much of said premises as may be necessary to satisfy said decree and the costs and charges of sale, lying and being in the City of Boyne in the County of Charlevoix and state of Michigan, described as follows:

Lot numbers (16) of Miller's Original Plat of Boyne City, according to the recorded plat thereof.

CAPITOL SAVINGS & LOAN ASSOCIATION, Mortgagee.

CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

(First Publication November 19th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Thomas F. Howe and his wife, Frances Howe, of Boyne City, Michigan, to Charlevoix County Savings & Loan Association, of Lansing, Michigan, dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1912, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Charlevoix, Michigan, on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1912, in Liber 8 of mortgages, on page 56, and mortgaging a power of sale, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, November 19th, 1914, the sum of Three Hundred Fifty-seven Dollars and Six Cents ($357.06) dollars, and no suit or proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, the premises described in said mortgage, on the 6th day of February, A. D. 1915, at two o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, that being the place of holding the circuit court for said county, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, or so much of said premises as may be necessary to satisfy said decree and the amount so advanced due on said mortgage, with seven (7) per cent interest from November 19th 1914 and all legal costs, together with said attorney's fee, to wit:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the City of Boyne in the County of Charlevoix and state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit:

Lot numbers (16) of Miller's Original Plat of Boyne City, according to the recorded plat thereof.

CAPITOL SAVINGS & LOAN ASSOCIATION, Mortgagee.

CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

(First Publication November 19th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Harmon E. Howe and his wife, Esther Howe of Boyne City, Michigan, to Charlevoix County Savings & Loan Association, of Lansing, Michigan, dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1912, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Charlevoix, and state of Michigan, on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1912, in Liber 8 of mortgages, on page 56, and mortgaging a power of sale, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, November 19th 1914, the sum of Three Hundred Fifty-seven Dollars and Six Cents ($357.06) dollars, and no suit or proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, the premises described in said mortgage, on the 6th day of February, A. D. 1915 at two o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, that being the place of holding the circuit court for said county, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, or so much of said premises as may be necessary to satisfy said decree and the amount so advanced due on said mortgage, with seven (7) per cent interest from November 19th 1914 and all legal costs, together with said attorney's fee, to wit:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the City of Boyne in the County of Charlevoix and state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit:

Lot numbers (16) of Miller's Original Plat of Boyne City, according to the recorded plat thereof.

CAPITOL SAVINGS & LOAN ASSOCIATION, Mortgagee.

CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

(First Publication November 19th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Thomas F. Howe and his wife, Frances Howe of Boyne City, Michigan, to Charlevoix County Savings & Loan Association, of Lansing, Michigan, dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1912, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Charlevoix, and state of Michigan, on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1912, in Liber 8 of mortgages, on page 56, and mortgaging a power of sale, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, November 19th 1914, the sum of Three Hundred Fifty-seven Dollars and Six Cents ($357.06) dollars, and no suit or proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, the premises described in said mortgage, on the 6th day of February, A. D. 1915 at two o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, that being the place of holding the circuit court for said county, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, or so much of said premises as may be necessary to satisfy said decree and the amount so advanced due on said mortgage, with seven (7) per cent interest from November 19th 1914 and all legal costs, together with said attorney's fee, to wit:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the City of Boyne in the County of Charlevoix and state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit:

Lot numbers (16) of Miller's Original Plat of Boyne City, according to the recorded plat thereof.

CAPITOL SAVINGS & LOAN ASSOCIATION, Mortgagee.

CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

(1st Publication October 22)

MORTGAGE SALE

Notice is hereby given that default has occurred in the payment of the sum of $1,000 in the payment of principal and interest, and in the payment of taxes and insurance premiums, in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by William Lucas and Ella Lucas, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to the Charlevoix County Savings Bank, of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1912, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Charlevoix, Michigan, on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1912, in Liber 8 of mortgages, on page 38, and was duly assigned by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1912, to the Charlevoix Commercial and Savings Bank, of Charlevoix, Michigan, and recorded in said Register's office October 30th, 1912, in Liber 8 of mortgages, on page 39, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, November 1st, 1914, the sum of Twenty-five Hundred Dollars ($2500.00) dollars, and no suit or proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, the premises described in said mortgage, on the 6th day of February, A. D. 1915 at two o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, that being the place of holding the circuit court for said county, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, or so much of said premises as may be necessary to satisfy said decree and the amount so advanced due on said mortgage, with seven (7) per cent interest from November 1st, 1914, and all legal costs, together with said attorney's fee, to wit:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the Village of Boyne City in the County of Charlevoix and state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit:

Lot numbers (16) of Miller's Original Plat of Boyne City, according to the recorded plat thereof.

CHARLEVOIX COMMERCIAL AND SAVINGS BANK, Mortgagee.

CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

(1st Publication October 22)

MORTGAGE SALE

Notice is hereby given that default has occurred in the payment of the sum of $1,000 in the payment of principal and interest, and in the payment of taxes and insurance premiums, in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by William Lucas and Ella Lucas, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to the Charlevoix County Savings Bank, of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1912, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Charlevoix, Michigan, on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1912, in Liber 8 of mortgages, on page 38, and was duly assigned by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1912, to the Charlevoix Commercial and Savings Bank, of Charlevoix, Michigan, and recorded in said Register's office October 30th, 1912, in Liber 8 of mortgages, on page 39, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, November 1st, 1914, the sum of Twenty-five Hundred Dollars ($2500.00) dollars, and no suit or proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, the premises described in said mortgage, on the 6th day of February, A. D. 1915 at two o'clock in the forenoon, the undersigned will, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, that being the place of holding the circuit court for said county, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, or so much of said premises as may be necessary to satisfy said decree and the amount so advanced due on said mortgage, with seven (7) per cent interest from November 1st, 1914, and all legal costs, together with said attorney's fee, to wit:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the Village of Boyne City in the County of Charlevoix and state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit:

Lot numbers (16) of Miller's Original Plat of Boyne City, according to the recorded plat thereof.

CHARLEVOIX COMMERCIAL AND SAVINGS BANK, Mortgagee.

CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

(First Publication November 6th)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the City of Charlevoix, on Friday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Henrietta Hileman, deceased. Louisa C. Jackson having filed in said court her final account as executrix of said deceased and petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the persons entitled thereto.

It is ordered that the 18th day of January A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for examining and allowing said account and hearing said petition.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.
SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication November 6th)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the City of Charlevoix, on Friday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Henrietta Hileman, deceased. Louisa C. Jackson having filed in said court her final account as executrix of said deceased and petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the persons entitled thereto.

It is ordered that the 18th day of January A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for examining and allowing said account and hearing said petition.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.
SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication November 6th)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the City of Charlevoix, on Friday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Daniel Marsh, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that four months from date are allowed for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to said court for examination and adjustment, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims against said deceased to said court, at said Probate Office, on or before the 6th day of March, A. D. 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court on the 6th day of March, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

Dated November 6th, A. D. 1914.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication November 6th)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the City of Charlevoix, on Friday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Trotter, deceased. Frederick W. Mayer, executor, having filed in said court his final administration account and his petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the persons entitled thereto.

It is ordered that the 18th day of January A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.
SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication November 6th)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the City of Charlevoix, on Friday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Ann Jane Alexander, deceased. Frederick W. Mayer, executor, having filed in said court his final administration account and his petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the persons entitled thereto.

It is ordered that the 18th day of January A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.
SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication November 6th)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the City of Charlevoix, on Friday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Trotter, deceased. Frederick W. Mayer, executor, having filed in said court his final administration account and his petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the persons entitled thereto.

It is ordered that the 18th day of January A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.
SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication November 6th)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the City of Charlevoix, on Friday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Daniel Marsh, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that four months from date are allowed for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to said court for examination and adjustment, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims against said deceased to said court, at said Probate Office, on or before the 6th day of March, A. D. 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court on the 6th day of March, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

Dated November 6th, A. D. 1914.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

Religious Notes

Meet every Sunday at 12 o clock noon in the Carnegie Library.

Congregational Church
(REASONS NOTICED)

Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Bible School, 12 o'clock.

Young People's Meeting, 6:30 p. m

Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT BOYNE)

Bible School at 2:00 p. m.

Preaching, 3:00 p. m.

Baptist Church

Morning service at 10:30

Bible School at 11:45 a. m.

Junior League at 5:00

B. Y. P. U. at 6:30 p. m.

Evening service at 7:30

Thursday evening at 7:30

Christian Science

Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.

Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Life."

Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.

Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service

8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:30 a. m.—High Mass.
7:00 p. m.—Evening Service.

Masses during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church

Morning Prayer at 11:00.

Sunday School at 12:00 m.

Evening Prayer at 7:30.

Seventh Day Adventist

A. M. "Elijah's Discovery".
P. M. "Eternity".

Coughs

Kill If You Let Them.

Instead of your Cough with Dr. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY. It heals Irritated Throat and Lungs. Thousands in last 40 years satisfied by

Dr. King's New Discovery

Money Back If It Fails
All Druggists 50c. and $1.00

Charlevoix Rock Product Company,

Producers and Manufacturers of

Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Fluxing
Sugar Stone.

For prompt city delivery Call Lee Howland, Phone 297.

H. D. Marshall,
"The Old Reliable"
CONTRACTOR FOR
Sewerage, Water Pipes, Cess Pools, Basements.
All Kinds of Excavating.
DISINFECTED!
All Work Guaranteed.
Estimates Furnished.
H. D. MARSHALL,
Charlevoix, Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10c ASSORTED

Best Wishes, Greetings, Lovers, Birthdays, etc. Also your name in our Post Card Exchange free on request, and free sample copy of the Family Story Paper; also Catalogue and Premium List. Postage 10c stamps for return postage, etc.

FAMILY STORY PAPER
24-26 Vandewater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction
Auto and Boat
Supplies.
214 Bridge St. - Phone 184
Charlevoix, Michigan.

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Contractor and Builder
Estimates furnished. Phone 338 Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD,
DENTIST.
Office in Old Post-Office Block, over A. A. Lemon & Co's Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139.

Lisle Shanahan,
Attorney at Law.
Office in County Bank Bldg.

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Office in Priest's Block,
Charlevoix - Michigan

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS SHOULD USE
5 DROPS
The Best Remedy for all Rheumatism
LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, GOUT, NEURALGIA, AND KIDNEY TROUBLES.
STOP THE PAIN
Stops Quick Relief
Cures Permanently
DROPS
SOLD AT ALL DRUGGISTS
SAMPLE "BOTTLE" FREE ON REQUEST
Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., 180-190 N. Lake St., Chicago.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, January 21, 1915. — NUMBER 40

A HOME, A FARM, A BANK ACCOUNT, A STATE SUPERVISOR

In This Age of Reciprocity--

the business man prefers the bank which remembers and performs its obligations to the Public from which it draws its support.

Fully appreciative of these obligations, The Charlevoix State Savings Bank, strives in legitimate ways to co-operate with the business interests, large and small, of Charlevoix and Michigan.

Extending all the facilities offered by a conservative and progressive Institution.

CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
W. J. RACHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't. Cashier.

J.L.CRANE

January Clearing Sale Is Now in Progress---

(Saturday January 23rd—Last Day)

This is by far the most successful sale we have ever given and embraces the largest number of articles at the lowest figures

Of the vast numbers of good values offered we here remind you of a few:

Women's and Misses' $25.00 Wooltex Coats	$10.00
Women's and Misses' $15.00 Winter Coats	$5.00
$1.25 Heavy Table Damask	$1.15
$1.25 Heavy Table Damask	75c
$25.00 Axminster Rugs 9x12	$19.50
$22.50 Axminster Rugs 9x12	$17.00
$1.00 Men's and Women's Union Suits	75c
25c Boy's Fleeced Vests and Pants	19c
$3.00 Front Lace Corsets	$1.95
$1.00 W. B. Corsets—Latest Models	69c
25c Curtain Scrims yd.	18c
15c Curtain Mulls yd.	10½c
12½c Silkolines—Fancy and Plain yd.	8½c
$1.00 and $1.50 Wool Dress Goods	69c

Coats Thread . . 3c Spool

Isn't a Loaf Always Bread?

"Hum is proper getting out of lodge?" asked the minister. "Why, he's worse than ever."

"Sympathize with the proud father who finds a son-in-law who is a member of various secret societies and, collectively speaking, one and twenty kinds of a fine thing to be college bred.

"That reminds little Jackson, who had been in school—school, mind you, mind—when did Mr. Brown mean by college bred?"

"Oh, then, said pupil, in his last year looking ahead to the time when his four years' hard." Ladies' Home Journal.

How to Use Empty Baking Powder Cans.

If the empty baking powder cans are saved and the lids pressed with boiler they may be utilized for a number of household purposes. They make an excellent soap shaker when filled with the small pieces of soap. They may be filled with soap powder and keep a cleaning fluid. They are also very handy in the laundry as sprinklers.

Ten Stick Island.

In the Northwest bay in the Non Pareil group, there is a little island of an island of considerable height above the water, which is a fair example of a Robinson Crusoe in circumstance. The story of this island is that a Chicago man one day was so much his considered a good place for target practice to the British navy of war in the Great Lakes, and that this small islet was used as a target. Frequently the gunners would discuss of being accidentally shot away. The Chicago man, however, was a man of wonted compensation. The captain of a man of war who understood the situation, and who was a man of a generous source of blackmail unless he was shot out of the island. The place where they had been known as "Ten Stick Island."—London Standard

Mexican politics is distinguished by two things, a good deal of iron and not enough of varnish.

Local and Personal Notes

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

J. L. Crane
A. E. Mason
A. E. Mason Dept. Store
C. Dantz & Son
Myrtle Young & Son.

Chris. Hanson, of Boston, was here Saturday.

J. Leahy the Optometrist will be here again Monday February 1.

Don't forget the Firemen's masquerade ball on February 22nd.

The Maccabees had a social gathering and banquet at their hall Friday night.

Mrs. A. J. Hamilton was called to Newaygo Saturday by the death of her father.

To see six well-loaded log sleighs pass the door in one bunch looks like old times.

Fred Slight went to Grand Rapids and Lansing Tuesday. Mrs. Slight will return with him.

Miss Emma Bennett and Mrs. L. D. Bartholomew, of this city, are spending a month at Los Angeles, Calif.

The Women's Relief Corps installed officers Thursday night, and the ladies invited the old veterans in to supper.

Capt. Geo. A. Newberry, superintendent of the Central Rescue Mission, of Saginaw, is here on a vacation, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Bellinger.

The Masonic house committee announces an oyster supper as the Masonic Temple, Friday night of this week, followed by a dancing party. Bill 50c.

The Dictionary Club will meet with Mrs. Bartlett, Park Ave., Thursday evening of this week. Subject, "Michigan." Roll call, "Prominent Character of Michigan."

Mr. Ayers Beal, of Chicago, is at his summer home on the north side of Pine Lake, taking a winter vacation, in which his skis and fishing through the ice occupy his waking hours.

Capt. Harrison Bordan was advised Sunday of the death of a brother, a soldier like himself, in Detroit. The Captain was unable to go to the funeral on account of the state of his health.

Work on the Beach Hotel extension is progressing finely, thanks to the good weather that has favored them. Skinning will begin next week. Plumber and wiring will be commenced next week.

Lookout for the "Jolly Ten," they surprised Mrs. Newberry last Friday afternoon and they had a jolly good time. At six o'clock a banquet and a pleasant evening was spent. All report a fine time.

The Boyne Citizen, formerly published as a daily, but changed to a semi-weekly, now makes another change and will breather appear as a tri-weekly, being published Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

The "Jolly Ten" have started out again, they gave Mrs. C. R. Bellinger a surprise last Wednesday afternoon at six o'clock. A supper was served and the evening was spent in visiting. All reported a jolly good time.

Hr. McMillan, Representative from Charlevoix county, informs us that important committee of Fish and Fisheries and a member of the following committees: Mining, Reformatory, Private Corporations, Village Corporations.

During the wet spell Saturday evening Lake Jeffersis formed a very pretty Indian lying in a pool of water on Dixon avenue. While being taken to jail the Indian, with true "native" wit, remarked that he thought Dixon avenue was the wet part of town.

Pelliston, an Emmet county village, has advanced to new ground, so far as pool rooms and card games in its cigar stores are concerned. The village council has put all pool and billiard rooms out of commission and this order includes shaving of cigars and all other manner of gambling.

What are the sea gulls saying? Gulf! Gulf! Gulf! Over forninet the Boston dock a colony of about 500 gulls are the especial pets of Olaf Nordman and his warehouse mate—Carl Barnhart. They are quite tame, especially when they are beautiful, in summer they are fed as regularly as the warehouse cat. In winter they squat on the ice until Carl empties a barrel of trimmings, and then the entire colony swarm about the pieces, more noise than a sorry-get convention, fighting meantime over the choicest bits. Where they have their nest and hatch their young is a mystery—certainly not here, as no one ever sees a chick, gull adopt the Indian. Gull Island of the Beaver group, is the head quarters of the tribe, and they say at certain seasons you have to kick them from under your feet as you land on the beach. Over here, at the time of the year they have a language, and it is "Gulf! Gulf! Gulf!"

Homer Brady and wife returned to their home in Leland.

Fifty carpenters are engaged in construction work in Charlevoix.

D. H. Wood went to Chicago and Indianapolis Monday Morning.

The wife of Charles Vonburg died at her home in Marion Sunday Morning.

Mrs. Sarah Emrey left Monday for Los Angeles, Calif., for a two month's stay.

Miss Freda Fordermann, of Chicago, is the guest of Mrs. John Kelly, south Bridge Street.

A fine baby girl up at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Miller, and mother and child doing nicely.

Married, at Traverse City, last Friday, Mr. Frank Kephart, of Petoskey, to Miss Mildred Fanning of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Kephart will reside in Petoskey.

Appropriation of $200,000 for the purchase of a site and erection of a state normal school at Petoskey was asked in a bill introduced in the house today by Representative Hinkley of Emmet.

Sheriff Novak has appointed Chas. W. Howard turnkey at the jail. The appointment carries with it the office of deputy sheriff. Mr. Howard and family have moved to the court house quarters.

Mrs. William Hoy died at her home in Stratford, Ont., Friday. She was a sister of R. S. Shapter and brother-in-law of Mrs. George Anderson. R. S. and Mrs. Anderson left at once for Canada.

Wood Brothers, which means D. H. and Clarence Wood, have established themselves here in the electric business, including the handling of electric supplies. They start out with the contract to wire the Beach Hotel extension.

Married, at the home of the bride's parents, in Fountain, Minn., Mr. Fred S. Myers, of Charlevoix and Miss Alpha Genson. Mr. and Mrs. Myers are settled down in the rooms over Bergeon's store, and are receiving the congratulations of many friends.

DEATH OF MRS. LISCOMB

In the death of Mrs. Matilda Liscomb, which occurred at her home in this city last Thursday, there passes another of the early settlers of Charlevoix.

She came here with her late husband in 1872, and has resided here up to the time of her death. She was 76 years of age.

Mrs. Liscomb was the mother of Edward Liscomb, of Spokane, Wash., Mrs. A. A. Hanshaw and Mrs. S. H. Smith, of this place, and Mrs. Florence Goddard, of Healdsburg, Calif.

She was one of those rare good, domestic women, the sterling qualities of whom shine brightest under the strenuous conditions of pioneer life. When trouble came to the household of the little village, Mrs. Liscomb was one of the first to tender her timely aid and consolation.

DEATH OF AVA SMITH

Information reached here Saturday of the death of Ava Smith, Sr., at Charleston, Wash., where he has been living with a daughter for several years.

In the death of Ava Smith another conspicuous figure identified with the early days of Charlevoix county dies from home. He was one of the first settlers of Eveline township, and for many years was supervisor of that township. He was always one of the strongest and most intelligent members of the board. In his younger days he followed the lakes, but abandoned that calling when he located on the wild Eveline land that he transformed into a farm.

His remains are expected here as we are writing this.

ANOTHER ITALIAN EARTHQUAKE

Twenty thousand killed and thirty thousand injured, is the result of an earthquake that occurred last Thursday afternoon at 3:00 mile stretch of Italian territory.

The shock devastated many villages, and caused much damage in Rome. With every hour an additional and more accurate details are received, the horror of the earthquake increases, threatening to place it in the list of similar world catastrophes in Europe, second only to the Messina disaster of 1908.

PROGRESS OF THE WAR

Very little can be told of the present war situation. Activity seems to be the greatest in the eastern battle lines, but both sides claim advantage.

In the west it is a "stand off" and no offensive movement of the allies is expected until Lord Kitchener's new army of a million men reach the continent.

WOULD PLANT FRUIT TREES TO BEAUTIFY THE STATE HIGHWAYS

By H. J. DANIELS.

That the upkeep of Michigan's roads may be paid for by the revenue from fruit trees planted along the roads and that the next legislature will be asked by pass a bill giving farmers, or whole or counties some recognition for planting these fruit trees, is the sentiment of Hon. F. T. Colgrove of Hastings, president of the Michigan Good Roads association, in discussing the project.

The association will advocate a plan to beautify the roadsides in all instances where roads have been built under the state reward plan by the planting of fruit trees," said Mr. Colgrove, who believes there should be a greater appreciation on the part of the public of this project. "Beautiful roadsides are not only a delight to those who daily pass, but the pleasant recollections left in the minds of tourists are of great value in every locality. To start this plan in motion, Growing Trees of Monroe, who are leading nurserymen in the state, have compiled with my request and have contributed 100 apple trees to the association. They furnish the trees not only to show their interest in the upbuilding of the roads in Michigan, but also to show their interest in the new plan to beautify the roads.

"American travelers in Europe, especially in Germany, have gone into ecstasies over the roadsides made beautiful with fruit trees. The homes of farmers have undergone an entire change in appearance. In some of these countries the profits from the sale of fruit have been sufficient to pay the entire expense of keeping up the roads. While the road builders of Europe are at war with nature, yet it would be a most opportune time for this country to get busy and build up the highways, making them more beautiful and more attractive than those across the seas. The West Michigan Pike association is engaged in a most laudable enterprise, and a large percentage of the road from the southern boundary line to Mackinac has been completed. While travelling over some of the most picturesque roads and Grand Traverse counties, I was impressed as never before with some of our highways. This section of the state is especially adapted for all manner of fruit of all kinds, and we would be able in a few years to double every dollar of maintaining the roads with profits arising from the sale of fruit from the trees along the highways. This is saying nothing about the delight that such an added beauty to the landscape would produce.

Mr. Colgrove is enthusiastic over the plan, which he considers absolutely practicable, and he will keep up the agitation in the hope that something will be done the coming season.

CAMPING OUT IN FRUIT HARVEST.

The fruit harvest in northern Michigan the past fall was a serious proposition for the fruit growers because of the scarcity of help and the great amount of work to do. In many instances the farmers furnished tents and temporary buildings for the help to sleep in, and at times whole families were taken out in a bunch to lose no time going to and coming from work. Another good point about the camps was the opportunity for good times together evenings.

FARMERS CAN HAVE THEIR OWN FISH PONDS

Fish Pond on the Farm of Gilman M. Dame, Near Northport.

In northwestern Michigan many farmers can have their own trained fish ponds. The accompanying which shows a farm near Northport with a good fishing point on the back forty. It is the farm of Gilman M. Dame, the former dairy and food commissioner, high in the councils of the Republican party of Michigan. He has one of the best farms in the upper part of the state, and is himself one of the state's best farmers.

GENEROUS RETURNS FROM FRUIT.

Walks the acreage in western Michigan given over to the growing of apples is not large, the quality of the fruit produced is fine and citizens and farmers and fruit growers who have a few acres of trees are favored with generous returns because of their good fortune. The above picture is a view of a Duchess pear orchard on the H. J. Jordan farm near Walloon lake, in Charlevoix county. Mr. Jordan is a Grand Rapids business man who has developed a large farm around his summer home. General farming and fruit crops are harvested and the profits from these go toward covering the expenses of the annual summer vacation.

TRY NEW PLAN IN PACKING APPLES

After harvesting the crop from 100 acres of apple orchard at the Ridgewood farm, Old Mission, the managers have come to the conclusion that certain definite methods bring the greatest efficiency and consequent low cost of production.

Usually it is the plan to pack in the orchard, but in moving the sorting tables from one location to another time is lost; the charge takes at least half an hour, when plenty for the barrels to stand on, unfinished barrels, etc., must be shifted, as is usually the case.

To avoid this loss of time the proprietors of Ridgewood farm packed in the barn rather than in the orchard, and were so well pleased with the results that next year they will go a step further and build a packing shed. The apples, in their system of harvesting, are picked into bags similar to those used by the western growers.

When a picker had a bar full he descended the ladder, released the snaps that secure the bottom of the bag, and allowed the apples to glide gently into the boxes which had been placed under the trees for the purpose. These boxes are made to be handle, especially since they are not filled completely. A platform spring wagon is used to take the fruit to the barn and haul them, forty-five to fifty at a time, to the barn.

Here they may be stacked up six or seven tiers high, because they are not filled quite level full. The packing room is a busy place for ten hours a day; it has room enough for large barrels formed the principal package, although this was taken to pack some boxes. Two grades were made, and 10 per cent of the crop passed as fancy grade, the result of watchful and intelligent care all through the season.

Had the apples been packed in the orchard, disagreeable weather would have interfered with operations, and the early darkness would have set in upon the boxes in the working day. By packing in the barn the crew could be constantly employed regardless of rain or dew, the pickers were never idle, the packers able to keep up the work ahead of the packers all the time; this, together with the fact that artificial light could be used in the barn to offset a serious obstacle made it possible for the packers to do careful work without losing much time.

The filled barrels were easily loaded on to the wagons for hauling away by the use of an inclined plane; a goodly grade furnished sufficient impetus to roll the barrels from barn to wagon. Thus the barrels are saved from soiling in the orchard, and the necessity of lifting them from the ground to a stone boat or wagon is removed.

The key to the system used on the Ridgewood farm seems to be in the use of the more portable boxes in orchard handling, rather than the stationary ones used. This system requires no outlay of capital sufficient to buy a thousand boxes on the Ridgewood farm, but the saving in labor will doubtless pay good interest on the extra investment in boxes. On the smaller farms bushel baskets might furnish a convenient substitute for boxes.

The crop from this orchard is being stored in barrels, and will be suitable prize. There is always a sale for first grade fruit, but the expectation of the managers of this farm is that better prices will come later on than are ruling now.

MARKETING APPLES A SERIOUS PROBLEM

The marketing of the apple crop is a problem that confronted the people of the fruit belt of Michigan in 1914. The season was a splendid one from an agricultural standpoint, and fruit crops were harvested that set a circuit to the best farmers in the state. The apple orchards were better cared for than ever before, may were better sprayed, they had more attention in the matter of pruning and cultivation and the harvesting of the crop was given more than ordinary attention. In consequence the fruit growers of western Michigan had a magnificent crop of apples, but were confronted with the difficulty of getting a fair price for their product. Many efforts have been made to improve the situation and some of them have resulted in benefits to the fruit growers.

A few of the fruit growers have been salesmen as well as producers of farm wealth and they have found rather better than their neighbors. The season was favorable for apples and no special skill was required to produce the crop, but because of unusual conditions, much skill is being called for in the marketing of the fruit. Those growers who have gone after new markets and instead that their apples were of superior quality and have packed the fruit and forwarded it with extraordinary care have received returns which have been sufficient to yield a profit over and above the cost of their work. But those growers who have gone into salesmen and have made special efforts to get their products into the hands of the consumer, have had a very profitable season. This is particularly true of those who have raised just ordinary apples. In some sections farmers are unable to sell more than a barrel for their ordinary stock, which is hardly enough to pay them for the cost of growing good apples, for the barrel and for packing.

It is apparent that fancy apples will always bring a fancy price and that there will be a sufficient large demand for such stock. But it is also clear that the great mass of the consuming public are willing to pay fancy grade apples and must have everyone quality. The consumer is able to pay $2 a box, but can enjoy apple pie at $2 a barrel. The grower of apples in order to receive interest on his investment, should get from $1.50 to $2 a barrel for his product at his nearest shipping point. This means that there is little margin between what the producer must have and what the consumer can afford to pay. With the present elaborate and complicated marketing system it is impossible to connect producer and consumer upon the small margin between what one must have and the other can afford.

While the average apple grower is getting less than $1.50 a barrel for his stock this year, the average consumer in the city is paying at a rate that amounts to $3 and $4 a barrel for the fruit as he purchases. All this leads to the conclusion that the great problem to be solved in connection with the western Michigan apple crop is that of finding a medium for marketing, wherein the expenses of this function will be greatly reduced, and by who can come forward and offer a plan that is truly workable, will be a benefactor.

Fifty Bushels From Famous Tree.

Fifty bushels of macintosh apples were picked from a Baldwin apple tree in the apple orchard on the Smith Hawley farm in Summit township, Mason county.

Babcock Test is Simple.

"Those who are not familiar with the Babcock test, which is simple, can certain degree of awe, see in it some mysterious contrivance to baffle the producer, while in truth it is a much simpler machine and more easily understood and operated than half the machines used today on the modern farm.

Boys' Corn Clubs.

Boys' corn and tomato clubs are to be organized in Grand Traverse county the coming winter.

Western Michigan

A Region that is Rapidly Developing as a Fruit Growing and General Farming Section

Canada is Calling You to her Rich Wheat Lands

She extends to Americans a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants to help to feed the world by tilling some of her soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think what you can make with wheat around $1 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming is fully as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Superintendent Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to

C. J. Broughton, Room 412, 112 W. Adams Street, Chicago, Ills.; 45 Michigan, 178 Jefferson Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Canadian Government Agents.

That Would Be Plenty.

"Well, my good woman," said the summer, "I must be going. Is there anything I can do for you?"

"Only that," responded the submerged one wearily.

FRUIT LAXATIVE FOR SICK CHILD

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this delicious fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhea, indigestic, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given. Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask at the store for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Adv.

The Censor.

The Washington Star relates that Mayor Baker of Cleveland, in defense of a political opponent that had been attacked, said the other day:

"It's an honest movement and a straightforward movement, and they who attack it are as censorious as the Shakspeare old maid.

"A Shakspeare old maid was talking to a sunburned college boy on the beach. The boy was passed and the old maid said:

"'Dear me, Jerome Mumm Summers. You took her to the hop last evening, didn't you?'

"'Yes,' said the college boy, and he added politely: 'As I was taking leave of her, she asked me if I would be kind enough to dance.'

"'Dear, dear!' said the old maid. 'You kept her out till dawn! That's what these new dances lead up to!'"

DON'T LET GRAY HAIRS

Make You Look Old. Restore Natural Color by this Guaranteed Method.

Thallacetate compound, nature's remedy for restoring natural color to gray, streaked or bleached hair, is guaranteed not to stain the skin or injure the hair. Mixed ready for use, it is colorless, odorless, greaseless and non-poisonous. A scientific harmless preparation. Keeps new gray hairs from showing. Imparts lasting beauty and vigor to the hair. Gives the locks a natural appearance of youthful vigor. Leaves no sediment. Lasts long. Long-lasting results are proof of its merit. Guaranteed satisfactory on overnight trial and dealer's money. Price 50c at druggists or direct from Philo Hall Specialist Co., Dept. 1, Adv.

The Site.

Mother asked Bunny one morning to help about clearing the garden.

"What would you call a small cabbage?" Bunny asked.

"Oh, about the size of Jackie's head," answered the mother, returning to the garden brother. A few seconds later a voice came from the doorway:

"Mamma, I'm taking Jackie with me to measure by."

Irresponsible.

"No matter how hard misfortune strikes, some men, they never lose their poise."

"I dare say that's true."

"I know a man whose favorite order used to be, 'Waiter, a bottle of wine.' Nowadays he pulls on just as many sighs when he says, 'Heinie, a bucket of milk.'"

Clean Haul.

"A shrewd rascal skipped town the other day, after being in society here for several years.

"I think I understand his method."

"Yes?"

"He got into society for the purpose of going through it."

Should Tarry.

"The Chinkiips tell me they are going to move into a better neighborhood."

"That's queer."

"Why so?"

"They haven't made good yet in the neighborhood they're leaving."

The Real Thing.

Little Jack—Oh-ooy, paw, what is persistency?

Paw—Persistency, my son, is the trait a woman develops when she attempts to remove a wrinkle.

Extreme Devotion.

"Mrs. Cadfern is all wrought up over the plight of the Belgians."

"Indeed she is!" "Why, she even collects her poodle to attend meetings of relief committees."

Born Diplomat.

"Harry, I am hesitating to believe the baby looks like you."

"Why, dear?"

"Yes, I notice it more and more every day. I'm so glad."

"Do you really want him to look like me?"

"Of course I do. I've been sorry ever since we had him christened that we didn't give him your name."

"Sweetheart, you don't know how happy you make me by saying that."

"And, Harry, dear—I found the loveliest hat today. I don't believe I ever saw a more becoming one. It belongs to me. It's $25. Do you think I ought to buy that much for a hat?"—Chicago Herald.

OVERWORK and KIDNEY TROUBLE

Mr. James Meinzinl, Oakley, Kv., writes: "I overworked and strained my back and had severe Kidney and Bladder Disease. My symptoms were backache and burning in the edge of the bladder, which was sore and had a constant burning all the time—sleep disturbing, nervousness, puffed and swollen eyes, shortness of breath and J. McDaniel, Rheumatic pains. I suffered for months. I was treated by a physician, but found no relief until I used the Doan's Kidney Pills. I now feel that I am permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Doan's Kidney Pills, 50c per box at your dealer or Doan's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Adv. Ask for Doan's Pills, also music of National Anthem (English and German words) and receipe for dainty dishes. All 2 sent free.—Adv.

Lapsus Linguae.

"I shall be delighted to stand now," exclaimed a wife who had returned from a shopping expedition.

"Why so, my dear?" queried her husband.

"Because I have had all my window shades and curtains put up."

"Oh, my love, the idea that modern teeth have anything to do with wisdom is a fearful error. I'm sure you have every tooth in your head, yet I couldn't make you any stupider, you know!"

Curtain.

Density of Population.

By density of population is meant the number of persons to each square mile of land area. According to the census, Rhode Island, with 501.5 persons to the square mile, is the most densely populated state in the Union, closely followed by Massachusetts, New Jersey and Connecticut, in the order named, the only other states that have more than two hundred persons per square mile.

Inside Criticism.

"So you're going to be married, Mary."

"Yes, ma'am, and I'll be leaving you at the end of the month."

"Well, I hope you are getting a good husband."

"If he ain't any better than the one you've got I won't keep him long."

Full of Spirit.

Your cousin Samuel is such a vivacious creature."

"Yes; we call her Sal Volatile."

STICK TO IT

Until Coffee Hits You Hard.

It is about as well to advise people to stick to coffee until they get hit hard enough so that they will never forget their experience.

A woman writes and her letter is condensed to give the facts in a short space:

"I was a coffee slave and stuck to it like a leper to his cups, notwithstanding I frequently had severe attacks of sick headache, then I used more coffee to relieve the headache, and this went well enough until the coffee effect wore off.

"Finally attacks of rheumatism began to appear, and ultimately the whole nervous system began to break down and I was just becoming a wreck.

"After a time I was induced to quit coffee and take up Postum. This was half a year ago. The result has been most satisfactory.

"The rheumatism is gone entirely, nerves practically well and steady, digestion almost perfect, never have any more pain in my stomach and am gaining steadily in weight and strength."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum — must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 25c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about one cent.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

17-YEAR LOCUST COMING.

The seventeen-year locust, which did much damage to various parts of the country during the past year, is expected to make its appearance in the upper peninsula of Michigan in 1916. Marquette county farmers, as well as others, are on the alert to be not far the pest, the only counties said to be affected being Houghton and Chippewa. According to experts of the national bureau of entomology, the counties of Chippewa, Houghton, Barry, Genesee, Otsego, Shiawassee and Washtenaw are bound to be visited by the pests, while Cass, Kent, Muskegon, Newaygo and Ottawa may also be added to the list. According to statistics, the period of incubation for this insect will have expired for sighting for Chippewa county, as it will have been 17 years since its last appearance. This is also the case with counties first enumerated. The others had the locust the year following, and they sometimes begin on the seventeenth year.

Profit for Middle Man.

Bacon at 45 cents and live hogs at six cents on the farm. Pretty wide gap between the man who grows things, and the man who sets them, but the middle man and the packer know where their pasture is.

Efficiency.

The capacity of the soil is not to be measured by its fertility alone, but by the ability of the man behind the farm to extract every dollar's worth there is in it.

Care of Poultry Buildings.

Preservation of the poultry buildings means the same as cash in the bank. Keep them well painted outside and whitewashed inside. It also adds to their attractiveness and beautiation.

Profitable Business.

Dairying is a very profitable business when intelligent care is taken on the part of the man behind the farm because of the scarcity of help and the great amount of work to do in many instances, etc., which the state has in the administration of its public affairs, is shown by the perusal of a tax receipt held by the heirs of the late Andrew Carnegie, which holds true all over the state.

Mr. Barnhart went to Silver Creek in 1844, walking from Ohio, and buying 160 acres of land. By 1847 he had married and had erected a frame house on the property. That year he paid to Eli Veach, the township treasurer, a tax of $4.28 on all his possessions, real estate and personal. His tax for 1913 on 160 acres of this 160 acres was $171.31, which did not include the personal tax. He had sold off 20 acres of his original purchase in the early 50's and had later bought 40 acres more, now practically all timber, and on this the tax last year was $79.63. It seems barely possible that during the 66 years intervening he saw his property increase to 42 times the value it possessed in 1847, but if the figures indicated by the tax receipt are any guide to go by, it had.

Mr. Barnhart built the house which stands on the farm and which was his home all these years. The other buildings were not pretentious and for many years have needed repairs.

GAIN IN RURAL POPULATION.

There was an increase of 16,375 in the rural population of western Michigan during the last census period. This was a gain of 5.3 per cent. The total gain, including both rural and urban, was 59,218, a gain of 12.2 per cent. The total gain in the rural population for the entire state was but 2 per cent. The total gain in the urban population and a gain of 37.9 per cent in total population. Manistee county, which lost in total population during the ten-year period, made a nice gain in rural population.

MINT HAY FOR COLTS.

A. C. Beebe, the peppermint king from Cassopolis, is wintering a drove of 20 colts on mint hay, and their growth into valuable horses will be made at moderate cost. He also has a herd of 45 cattle on another farm and they are being given the same ration, with a little grain ration for good measure. The cattle will eat mint hay as readily as they would eat the best of timothy and clover and every which the small parties could not have had were they compelled to go to their homes during the evenings. The help feature is much like the huckleberry harvest around South Haven, Washington and Lake City, where the dreary work on the marshes is shortened considerably by the good times in the tent cities at night.

FRUIT PICKERS LIVING IN TENTS.

Fruit Pickers Living in Tents.

HOW TAXES HAVE INCREASED.

An inheritance tax that one farmer and his city neighbor has to pay every year towards the support of many public institutions, boards, commissions, etc., which the state has in the administration of its public affairs, is shown by the perusal of a tax receipt held by the heirs of the late Andrew Carnegie, which holds true all over the state.

Mr. Barnhart went to Silver Creek in 1844, walking from Ohio, and buying 160 acres of land. By 1847 he had married and had erected a frame house on the property. That year he paid to Eli Veach, the township treasurer, a tax of $4.28 on all his possessions, real estate and personal. His tax for 1913 on 160 acres of this 160 acres was $171.31, which did not include the personal tax. He had sold off 20 acres of his original purchase in the early 50's and had later bought 40 acres more, now practically all timber, and on this the tax last year was $79.63. It seems barely possible that during the 66 years intervening he saw his property increase to 42 times the value it possessed in 1847, but if the figures indicated by the tax receipt are any guide to go by, it had.

Mr. Barnhart built the house which stands on the farm and which was his home all these years. The other buildings were not pretentious and for many years have needed repairs.

GAIN IN RURAL POPULATION.

There was an increase of 16,375 in the rural population of western Michigan during the last census period. This was a gain of 5.3 per cent. The total gain, including both rural and urban, was 59,218, a gain of 12.2 per cent. The total gain in the rural population for the entire state was but 2 per cent. The total gain in the urban population and a gain of 37.9 per cent in total population. Manistee county, which lost in total population during the ten-year period, made a nice gain in rural population.

MINT HAY FOR COLTS.

A. C. Beebe, the peppermint king from Cassopolis, is wintering a drove of 20 colts on mint hay, and their growth into valuable horses will be made at moderate cost. He also has a herd of 45 cattle on another farm and they are being given the same ration, with a little grain ration for good measure. The cattle will eat mint hay as readily as they would eat the best of timothy and clover and every

BIG SHIPMENT OF STOCK.

M. Donahoe of Dowagiac a few days ago made one of the biggest shipments of stock ever sent from that station by one person in one lot. The purchase consisted of about 400 hogs, 130 lambs and sheep and 25 calves. It took five double decked cars to hold them, each car being of the larger size. For the hogs, six and one-half cents was paid. The shipment brought in approximately $10,000.

The shipment came from Silver Creek and Wayne townships, Cass county, and Pipestone, Bodo and Berrien townships, Berrien county.

Use Old Charcoal.

It is said that if old charcoal is heated well before given to the fowls it will have a tendency to drive off impurities which may have become absorbed, and will be equal to fresh charcoal.

Blighted Pear Limbs.

It is all right to cut off the blighted pear limbs, but it takes time if you have a large orchard. They should be burned at the earliest possible moment.

Hen is Egg Machine.

A hen is simply an egg machine. Just as a cow is a milk machine, and neither can do their best without quiet, comfortable surroundings, and all the well-balanced nourishing food they can possibly assimilate.

Ways of Modern Farmer.

The modern farmer is buying very little of the expensive protein concentrates. He is growing his own protein feeds in the form of alfalfa, clover, soy beans, etc.

Ranch for Angoras.

Southern Indiana parties are negotiating for land in the vicinity of Alma, Gratiot county, for an Angora goat ranch.

Lighthouse at Old Mission

cut on the waters of Lake Michigan and Grand Traverse bay for close on to a hundred years. The place is visited by and annually visited by thousands of northern Michigan tourists. It is close by the new famed fruit country of the Grand Traverse region.

TRY SUGAR BEETS AGAIN.

That the raising of sugar beets will be one of the important crops in Charlevoix county and some other counties in Michigan in 1915 is the belief of a number of well-known Charlevoix farmers. Their reason for such an opinion is that more money was secured by the farmers for their beet crop the year than in any other similar period in the past. That the acreage contracted for will be increased is also assured, for where $6 a ton was paid this last season, $6 will be given for 1915. In the three weeks the Charlevoix station was open this year 1,845 tons of beets were weighed and shipped to the factory.

BIG SHIPMENT OF STOCK.

M. Donahoe of Dowagiac a few days ago made one of the biggest shipments of stock ever sent from that station by one person in one lot. The purchase consisted of about 400 hogs, 130 lambs and sheep and 25 calves. It took five double decked cars to hold them, each car being of the larger size. For the hogs, six and one-half cents was paid. The shipment brought in approximately $10,000.

The shipment came from Silver Creek and Wayne townships, Cass county, and Pipestone, Bodo and Berrien townships, Berrien county.

ELECTRIC FARMING

By Robert H. Moulton

ELECTRICAL TREATMENT OF SEEDS TO HASTEN GERMINATION

COSY ON THE ELECTRICAL FARM, SPRING WORKS AHEAD OF THAT ON OTHER FARMS

NOW that scientists have discovered that high frequency electrical currents are powerful stimulants both of plant and animal life, the farm hand of the future may have to be a duly qualified electrical engineer before he can get a job.

It will not be enough for him to know how to manipulate the motors and transmission chain gear by which the farm machinery will be run. He will have to be up on the chemistry of electricity. He will have not only to know the use of vivisec rays in purifying the drinking water, but will also have to know whether ground wires are better for beds, ruby lights for radiums, mercury vapor for tobacco and electric sandpaper for something else.

He will have to be something of a plant neurologist, too. When the corn in the south forty is getting "nervous" or when the oats in the new wood 8 burning too soon, he will have to make corrector diagnoses and prescribe the proper treatment.

THE ELECTRICAL FARMER

Electrification for plant growth has arrived. And when the canny American farmer learns that he can double or even treble the output of his fields by the use of electricity, somebody will have to find a way for him to use electricity and make a good profit out of his crops.

A few weeks ago there was a convention of practical electricians in Philadelphia. Among the addresses one virtually swamped the attention of the corps of reporters. Yet of all the addresses, none was more pregnant of great possibilities.

It was really part of the report of the convention's committee of progress and was read by the committee chairman, T. C. Martin of New York, an authority on things electrical. He gave facts and figures to show that usual electricity has grew much more rapidly than those growing under normal conditions. It is safe for us, he said, to assume to say. He simply gave the results of experiments.

The work was started on Moraine farm in the fertile Miami river valley, four miles south of Dayton, Ohio. Dr. Herbert D. Dorsey, in charge of the experiments, which were fostered by the efforts of J. H. Tuttle, a former president of the National Electric Light association.

In preliminary experiments, according to Martin's report, small plots were marked off for exposure to different kinds of electrification. To insure that the soil of one plot was not better than that of another, top earth was collected, mixed and sifted and then laid in the identical plots, the seven inches over the entire area.

In the soil of plot No. 1 was buried a wire screen. Over the plot was a network of wire, stretched about fifteen inches from the ground. Connecting the network wire to the ground and the screen below were several wire antennae. The screen was connected to the positive post of a Tesla coil and the network to the other. A transformer supplied a 110-volt alternator current up to 5,000 volts, charging a condenser of Deffell and Eglass plates, which discharged through a primary of the coil. The results were so striking that they were operated for an hour each morning and evening.

Plot No. 2 was illuminated by a 100-watt tungsten lamp with a ruby bulb. The light was turned on for three hours daily, beginning at sundown. Plot No. 3 was illuminated the same way, except that a mercury vapor lamp was used. No. 4 had no artificial stimulation of any kind, being intended as a comparison between artificially excited plant growth and the natural conditions.

In plot No. 5 was buried a wire network connected to the terminal of a 110-volt direct current. The positive terminal was attached to a small sprinkling can with a carbon electrode in its center. The can being filled, the water was subjected to electric current for several minutes. The plot was then sprinkled from the can, the theory being that the current would flow from the carbon through the streams of water to the soil.

Plots Nos. 6 and 7 were subdivided into four individual beds, each being separated by porcelain insulators and arranged with carbon electrodes at each end. The three electrodes were applied both direct and alternating currents.

The experiments were carried on, and planted and germination had begun, the various methods of electrification were tried with extreme care, the results of the experiments were tabulated. The plants in plot No. 1 grew in every instance far more rapidly than those in the other plots, more than double the normal growth as shown in the unelectrified bed.

From this the experimenters became convinced that electrification of the ground by high-frequency currents stimulated growth to an extent that warranted a more complete investigation. So they constructed two acres of flat, rich ground.

First a network of sprinkling pipes was built 18 inches below the ground. The pipes ran east and west a distance of 200 feet and were spaced at 50-foot intervals. In the northeast corner of the tract seven copper wires were stretched north and south, each being 200 feet long and an interval of 15 feet separating them. The wires were elevated sufficiently for the soil to be plowed with horses. The ends of the copper wires were attached to insulators on top of gas pipes set in concrete.

At the eastern edge of the house the experimenters built a small transformer house and installed machinery which would furnish current of a thousand volts. The whole thing was connected up so that by means of antennas current from the wire network was sent to the network of sprinkling pipes which, of course, furnished proper connection with the ground.

By the latter part of last July the system was in readiness and the currents were tested. At that time a pressure of 50,000 volts was obtained and the frequency of the oscillatory currents was estimated to be about thirty thousand cycles a second. Here also the ends of the wires were connected to the ground, but some was killed.

The experiment planted radishes, lettuce, beets, cabbages, cucumbers, turnips, muskmelons, watermelons, tomatoes, parsnips, beans, corn and sweet potatoes. Some planted in rows running east and west, so that one-half of each row was electrified and the other half was not.

As a result it was found that practically all the plants in the electrified area grew much more rapidly than those out of it. In almost every case the electrified vegetables were ripe two weeks earlier than those outside the zone.

The electrified end of the tobacco crop was cut and it was found that each plant weighed 1,687 grams. It was two weeks before the untreated tobacco could be cut and then it weighed only 1,632 grams to the plant. Taking into consideration that the most rapid growth of the tobacco plant is in its last two weeks before cutting the experimenters estimated that the actual increase in weight of the electrified plants in the other rifled zone was 20 per cent greater than that in the unelectrified zone. If this could be followed out on a grand scale, it is apparent that the effect of stimulation on the annual tobacco output of the nation in a single season would be tremendous.

In his formal report to the association, Martin said that many questions had yet to be answered before the use of electricity for the general stimulation of plant life could be considered economically possible. He declared, however, that many of these questions had been worked out in greenhouses over the country.

Just as these amateur experimenters proved the importance of electrification to plant life, a group of English experimenters proved its importance to animal life. They took two large brooders filled with newly hatched chickens and in the same brood. One of them was subjected to the influence of high-frequency currents and the other was not. These in the latter brood failed to grow much more rapidly than those in the other.

Following is a tabulation of the results of electrical stimulation of vegetables. It will be observed that in every instance the plants in the first plot, where the high-frequency current and Tesla coil were used, excelled those in plot No. 4, where natural conditions prevailed:

	Plot 1	Plot 2	Plot 3	Plot 4
Total plant weight, grams	22.75	19.95	19.00	17.90
Edible portion, grams	13.50	11.40	10.80	9.40
Edible portion, per cent	61.0	57.0	56.8	52.5
Tops and leaves, grams	9.25	8.55	8.20	8.50
Tops and leaves, per cent	40.6	42.9	43.2	47.5
Roots, grams	9.50	8.25	8.00	6.40
Roots, per cent	41.8	41.3	42.1	35.8
Lettuce (in grams unshelled)
Edible portion, grams	67.00	62.00	60.00	55.00
Edible portion, per cent	67.0	62.0	60.0	55.0
Roots, grams	6.00	5.50	5.00	4.00
Roots, per cent	6.0	5.5	5.0	4.0
Edible portion, per cent	90.00	89.00	87.00	85.00

Laura Jean Libbey's Talks on Heart Topics

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

SHE COULD NOT GAIN HIS LOVE.

She was all sickness, yet 'twas writ
Upon her beauty beetling:
"He that's for heaven itself hath
"Let him not hope to merit me."

There's such a possibility as starting wooing all right or wrong! It is reasonable to suppose that his heart and thoughts have gone out to a girl when he seeks her society exclusively. All couples who woo are not intended for mating. Hundreds of letters reach me from disgruntled wives; many of them wait the fact that they have made a bad marriage; their happiness is ruined for life because they were tricked into matrimony by fraud; led to suppose that they were wooing a man of sterling habits; that they had gained a true and loving mate.

Many discover that they would as soon have jumped into the fire as to have become the wife of a man having such a violent disposition had they but known it, though they keep company steadily for years. As a matter of fact, these women did know the disposition of their husbands, but they did not. It was because they willfully blinded their eyes to their shortcomings. When a lover begins to get willful (as in his attentions he always will), he begins to be thinking no hesitation in breaking his engagements with the girl he has courted, because his willfulness as to whether she likes it or not—he does not mind to wear a ring to the effect that he'll make her a careless husband.

If his eyes are on every pretty girl when they pass, regardless that her eyes are on him, she doesn't have to light a dozen candles of her imagination to see clearly that he'd give her no end of trouble after marriage by too much admiration for other women. If he's always chewing cardamom seeds and cloves when he comes to see her, she ought to remark it out that he does not take them for his health. If he's on the street with her but leaves her for the noticeable purpose of getting a cigar in the corner tobacco and comes out wiping his lips, explaining that they didn't have his brand, is a very gullible young woman not to know that he had a drink. If he's always chewing gum and requesting the operation at least a couple of times during their visit, it's the irony of amusement to hear her complaining in after years that he was not what she ever dreamed of. But she was marrying a drunkard to disgrace her and children.

So on the women write, naming all the details in the calendar. Over and over while one of these husbands writes me trying to defend himself from the charge he has made his wife has made in a letter she has sent out to me. He writes with blind frankness. He is somewhat that Mary didn't know what sort of a fellow he was when we were going together. She knew I came from a long line of ancestors who lessed sometimes, but too well; and with the money burned in my pocket, it was come easy, go easy. And as for my reason for stopping at school, she should have had enough common to know I did not go there to pray. Girls should study their lovers carefully, and if they conclude they have to make before marriage, or forever after hold their peace.

DO RICH WIVES NEED SUPPORT?

Ah, what shall I do at fifty,
Should fortune keep me alive,
If I find my wealth a drifty
When I am but twenty-five.

When a man marries a poor girl who has been used to doing her back and not a cent in her purse, he knows that it is up to him to provide the wherewithal for the rent, the food, clothes and expenses of every kind. The rightly disposed man is mightily glad to be able to do it. He is proud to contribute not only comforts but luxuries for the woman who chose him in preference to all others. But how about many a man who married a rich wife? He knows if he does not provide her with a new silk dress, modish furs and plumes for her hat which cost a fortune, her darling will. He has no incentive to redouble his energies in the line of work, and does not trouble himself as to the future.

Even the daughters of the rich are old-fashioned enough to prefer to be the husband instead of the father they should look for support that he should consider this the first and foremost of his matrimonial obligations. If the father of the rich wife loses his fortune, what is to become of her? Who has not a husband who can look to in her hour of need? Her fine housefurnishes her laces or clothes will not keep the roof over her head for any length of time. If disposed of, they go for a song. This goes to show that no matter how rich a girl may be through her parents the man who marries her should not consider this sufficient cause why he should be delinquent in her support. From the hour she leaves her father's roof she should be her husband's care.

When a wife finds that a man has no intention of providing for her, though he may be able to do so had he cared for her sufficiently, her love receives a shock. Slowly but surely, she becomes disillusioned. When the seed of disillusion is sown in your tired hearts the dove of peace is ready to take flight from the nest. With most wives brooding brings suspicion in its train. Recriminations are apt to follow. Those who think that love once formed can never die make a big mistake. It can die, like a flower chilled by a sudden and unexpected frost. It is killed branch and root. Nothing in this world has power to revive it.

Every wife feels the need of a strong arm to depend upon if misfortune should turn its frowning face upon her. The girl who has been brought up to earn her own living is brave and self-reliant if adversity's storm comes upon her. Not so she who has been born and brought up with a silver spoon in her mouth, so to speak. She has no trade or profession; nor is she ingenious in making fancy work or knowing how to earn her own living in any way. The man who marries a girl of this kind takes her with all of her advantages in prosperity and disadvantages in adversity.

ARE MEN OR WOMEN MORE FAITHFUL TO LOVE?

To keep one sacred flame
Through life unfolding,
To love in winter age the same
As fire in youth burning,
To feel that we adore
Not with a passion
Which time or fate would break with more,
It could not live with less.

When I hear people speak of men being inconstant ever, to one girl except myself, I think it a pity I have no acquaintance with the noble men I have known, who have all admire too ardently on short acquaintance are few and far between. If you introduce a gentleman to a lady today and a short while after ask each how they like the other, the answer will be quite frankly: "I have met him so few times that I really cannot form an opinion. He seems to be pleasant, therefore agreeable. But men have a Special For Sat. Jan. 23rd....

Ladies Dress Skirts Regular $5 00 grade. Made in the latest styles

$2.98

To close out the balance of our Ladies' Coats we offer them at

½ Price

Go to ---LEVINSON'S--- Get the Habit

C. Danto & Son.

THE - STORE - OF - QUALITY — WHERE - ALL - GOODS - ARE - FRESH

Where you can get every thing that is to be had in the line of Groceries and Vegetables.

We have just received some Choice Large California Navels which we will sell Saturday at 25c per dozen.

—SPECIAL FOR SATURDAY—

Wich a 10 cent purchase we will sell one pound of Calumet Baking Powder for 15c (One Pound to a Customer.)

Don't forget our Meat Department:— We will have plenty of Beef and Pork. Try our Home Made Pork Sausage, that will Pork you for four. We also have plenty of thick fresh dressed Chickens.

Come Early or Telephone.
Prompt Delivery - - - - Courteous Treatment
Call Telephone No. 12 or 69.

C. Danto & Son.

212 Bridge St. Phone No. 12 Phone No. 69

PAID TO GET THE GOODS.

Consequently He Felt That They Were His by Right.

A claim once made on the explorer Cameron in the neighborhood of Gaboon, Africa, shows the weirdly peculiar workings of the native mind. Some of Cameron's possessions proved under extractive to a native, and he determined on transferring the ownership to himself. He accordingly paid another $200 to procure for him the coveted goods.

The assistant took the money and did his best to earn it, but Mr. Cameron had scarcely locked up the very article that the fellow's employer had so lately spent. The non-result so angry at his bargain, and neither did he feel that he could part with the money. Therefore he ran off with it.

What now looked then that the man who was the loser by $200 should expect the explorer to make the lost good? This he accordingly did exact.

Mr. Cameron, and told him the story, demanding in the first place the $200 which he (Cameron) by locking up his goods had compelled the complainant to lose and, secondly, the actual price of the goods themselves, which but for these arbitrary measures would now have been in his possession. It is not stated that his expectations were realized.—Lodge Spectator.

EARLY BANK RUNS.

The Dutch Fleet in the Thames Started One in London in 1666.

The first run of which we have any account in the history of banking occurred in the year 1667. It was quickly stopped. At that date the bankers of England were the goldsmiths, who had a short time before begun to add banking to their ordinary business and had become very numerous and influential.

In 1666 the Dutch fleet sailed up the Thames, blew up the fort at Sheerness, set fire to Chatham and burned many ships of the line. This created the greatest consternation in London, especially among those who had intrusted their money to the goldsmiths, for it was known that the latter had advanced large sums to the kings for public purposes, and it was rumored that now the king would not be able to pay the money. To quell the panic a royal proclamation was issued to the effect that payments by the exchequer to the bankers would be made as usual.

In 1671 there was another run on the London banks, when Charles II. shut up the exchequer and refused to pay the bankers either principal or interest of the money which they had advanced. On this occasion many of the bankers and their customers were ruined.—London Standard.

Benjamin Bunk.

At one time during the Benjamin Bunk meant a deserter from the army. Early—probably fifty—years ago there was a red nosed comedian, one Teddy Moseslie, who dressed up in a bedraggled uniform of the Tommy of the day, set the patrons of the old Music Hall on the New Middlesex and an equally hoary joke for of laughter with the refrain:

I'm Benjamin Bunk I'm Benjamin Bunk
And the bottle did desert me.
I'm Benjamin Bunk, and I'm on a bust,
So they tucked me up in the guardhouse.
—London Standard

Their Destination.

She—I wonder where those thundering goes? He—I think they are going to thunder.—Princeton Tiger.

TO THE HONORABLE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Gentlemen:

Your Committee who was appointed at the January session of the Board of Supervisors to check the Highway order book with the time checks and invoices filed by the County Road Commissioners with the County Clerk, make the following report: On January 16, 1915 we completed the checking of the County Road Commissioners time checks: time stub book and invoices of Machinery, tools, stone, gravel etc., with the County Clerk's order book, and that we checked over the accounts and time checks; examined the time books of each county Road Commissioner and find them correct and they agree with the County Clerk's record and find no irregularity therewith.

We find balance on hand of the County Road fund of $3681.45: Due from the State Reward fund $4576.00 divided as follows: On the Emmet and Grand Traverse State Road, $1276.00, Boyne City and Charlevoix Road $1,000 00; East Jordan and Boyne Falls Road $1000.00 Boyne Falls East Road (when completed) $1000.00. We make the following supplementary report.

Total cost of County Roads built in the years of 1912 and 1913 are $50983.25 as follows:

The Charlevoix and East Jordan Road 12 miles 9 feet in width crushed stone	$8374.73
The Boyne City and Charlevoix Road, 1 mile crushed stone, 2 mile gravel 9ft in width	12000.37
The Emmet and Grand Traverse State Road, 2 miles gravel 15 feet in width	8948.97
The East Jordan and Charlevoix Road, 2 miles not complete...	1767.30
The Boyne Falls East Road, 2 miles, gravel 9ft. in width (½ mile to gravel)	5696.96
The Boyne City and Deer Lake Road, 1 miles not complete.	1233.87
East Jordan and Boyne Falls Road, 3 miles, 9 ft. wide crushed stone	13561.05

Salary of the three County Road Commissioners for the years of 1913 and 1914 is 5257.88

Cost of tools and machinery bought of the General fund for the years of 1913 and 1914 is 4651.93

Tools and machinery bought by the Road Commissioners is 889.06

Commissioner O. D. Hammond's inventory of tools and machinery are as follows:

1 Gravel Screen, Val Jan 1 1915	$650.00
1 Tractor Hauler (due on bal. $1523.00)	1400.00
1 Screen Engine	350.00
1 King Junior Road Grader	300.00
10 wagons, 6 with dumps	935.50
7 Wheel Scrapers	30.00
7 Plows	35.00
4 Dump Boxes	240.00
1 Snow Fence (portable)	64.00
1 Road Drag	17.50
10 ft Sand Screen	90.00
2 Gasoline Tanks	19.50
Shovels, axes, wrenches, picks, chains, block and line, machine grease and oil and other small tools	192.25

Commissioner E. L. Lorch's inventory of tools and machinery are as follows:

1 Grader, Val Jan 1 1915	215.00
5 slant scrapers	30.00
3 wheel scrapers	60.00
1 water tank	10.00
1 force pump and 50 ft. hose	15.00
236 pinch pipe	30.00
3 Dump Boxes	60.00
Hoes, picks, shovels, hammers, wrenches, chain, axes and other small tools	61.30

Commissioner H. B. Hipp inventory of tools and machinery as follows:

6 Wheel Scrapers	60.00
4 Slush scrapers	20.00
1 Road Grader	215.00
1 Sprinkling tank	140.00
1 long belt (for stone crusher)	15.00
3 Dump Boxes	90.00
1 Stone Crusher	1800.00
1 Road Plow	15.00
Shovels, picks, axes and other small tools	25.10

The foregoing inventories of all machinery, and tools, is on file in the County Clerks office.

All of which is respectfully submitted signed by the Committee

JACOB E. CHEW
CHAS. J. ZEITLER

STATE OF MICHIGAN }
County of Charlevoix }

On this 16th day of January in the year one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, before me a Notary Public in and for said County appeared Jacob E. Chew and Chas. J. Zeitler, to me known to be the same persons who made the within report and acknowledge the same to be their report of the Committee of which they were authorized by the County Board of Supervisors of said County.

HENRY C. COOPER, Notary Public.
My commission expires Mar. 4, 1917.

MANY DISORDERS COME FROM THE LIVER

Are You Loaded Up With Yourself? Do You Regulate Liver?

Are you sometimes at odds with yourself and with the world? Do you wonder what ails you? Your you may be doing regularly and sleeping well. Yet something is the matter! Constipation, Headache, Nervousness and Bilious Spells indicate a sluggish liver. The tried remedy is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Only 25c at your Druggist.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Skin Eruptions.

PETER BENSON

CONTRACTOR FOR

Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.

If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, Jan. 18th

The common council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date—Mayor Nicholls presiding.

Aldermen present, See, Priest, Carrier, Barney and Carey.

Absent, Shapton.

Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

The finance committee submitted the following report: Having examined the following bills report the same correct and recommend that they be allowed out of the several funds as herein stated.

Highway Fund
John W. Kirby, supplies	$ 30
Wesley Calpert, services	1 50
Geo. Sherman, services	2 00
F. H. Wood, services	1 50
Charlevoix Lumber Co. supplies	3 76
Fire Fund
D. M. Ross, services	1 50
H. L. Stone, services	2 00
Mich. State Tel. Co. phone and express	1 25
Chic. Fire Dept., railroad tickets	20 00
H. M. A. Johnston & Co. supplies	11 00
Electric Light & Water Fund
Mich. State Tel. Co. phone and ser.	4 05
Mich. State Tel. Co. phone	4 50
Wm. Cameron, services	2 00
H. D. Cooper, insurance premium	32 40
H. W. Kane, insurance premium	40 00
Hagerty Brothers, supplies	1 50
A. J. Hamilton, salary	60 00
Geo. Gaunt, services	2 00
Morris Adams, services	1 50
E. S. Blanchard Co., supplies	7 75
Charlevoix Lumber Co., supplies	3 76
Julius Anderson & Son, supplies	4 50
Road and Bridge Fund
Peter Bank of Mason, Iron piling Bridge (in) (See Jan. 5)	450 00
Health Fund
Dr. A. M. Wilkinson, services on typhoid disease case	15 00
A. St. See & Sons, Knox burial	20 00
General Fund
Treasurer Charlevoix Twp. taxes	18 00
Chas. Hayes, services	2 00
Charlevoix Herald, supplies	1 50
Mich. State Tel. Co.	2 25
M. E. Skinner, services	1 50
C. Danto & Son, supplies	4 75
Charlevoix Lumber Co., supplies	3 76
Richmond-Beckett Co., supplies	1 50
Police Fund
Charles Jefferies, salary	30 00
Cemetery Fund
Mich. State Tel. Co., phone	4 55
Wm. McLain, salary	15 00
Bridge Fund
Mich. State Tel. Co., phone	4 50
Lauer Johnson, salary	60 00

Moved by Alderman Barney and seconded by Alderman Carrier that the report as read be accepted and the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to issue warrants on the city depositories for $1630.36 and the clerk be instructed to draw orders on the various funds for the amount of each respective bill. Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote. Ayes, See, Priest, Carrier, Barnes and Carey. Nays, none.

Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Priest moved the adoption of the city engineer's plans of man-holes and flush-tanks drawing No. 22 as submitted to the council. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Priest and seconded by Alderman Carey that the petition as presented by J. S. Baker to extend the porch roof over the sidewalk on the south side of the new extension of the Beach Hotel, the same being to conform with the present porch roof over said sidewalk and also to extend the cement walk south to the street curb the entire length on the south side of the Beach Hotel be granted. Motion carried.

Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman See moved the adoption of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the use of air-guns or small caliber rifles within the corporate limits of the City of Charlevoix be and are hereby prohibited and that should the same be used, the ordinance of the City of Charlevoix be strictly enforced and that the police force for the City of Charlevoix are hereby instructed to stop all violations of this resolution and the city ordinances and to prosecute any violations thereof."

There being no further business the council adjourned.

F. E. Vandermade, City Clerk.

W. R. C. INSTALLATION

The W. R. C. held their meeting in the afternoon as usual. At six o'clock supper was served to the comrades and their wives. Mrs. C. E. Bellinger installed the officers as follows:

President, May Bogbee.
Senior Vice, Nancy Phan.
Junior Vice, Lena Wallace.
Chaplain, Amanda Moore.
Treasurer, Ione Lake.
Secretary, Adline Bellinger.
Conductor, Louise Olney.
Guard, Eliza Bridge.
Ass't Conductor, Amelia Wallace.
Ass't Guard, Mary Blissett.

Color Bearers—Mary Swartz, Emma Graves, Emma Salsburg, Lois Cook, Adline Bellinger, Secretary.

Scotch of Danzig.

One of the largest Scottish colonies of the continent formerly existed at Danzig in the mid decade of the fourteenth century a number of Scottish knights journeyed to Danzig to help in the crusade of the Teutonic order against the Lithuanian heathens, and one of the city gates—now known as the Hohe Thor—was christened the Douglas Thor, after Lord William Douglas, who was slain there.—London Spectator.

Substitute.

"The English style of humor differs from the American," said the man who is ever tedious.

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "Where we use chili sauceers to denote a pointed jest, the English usually employ side whiskers."—Washington Star.

Just Had to Talk.

Madge—Why don't you think before you speak, dear? Marjorie—If I did that I should have time to say half what I wanted to say.—London Telegraph.

Happy, Indeed.

Romantic Reader—Did your last novel end happily? Author—Yes; the publishers paid me $2000 the day I finished it.—New York Times.

Self control is a great virtue. He is most powerful who has himself in his own power.

FOR SALE—House and lot on South Bridge Street. Inquire of W. H. Miller. tf

WIT IN HISTORY.

A Brief Address and a Pithy Reply That Won With Royalty.

Frederick the Great once granted a hearing to a subject on condition that he should cut his remarks very short.

"Let him say but two words," said the monarch.

"Very well," agreed the subject, and on entering the presence of Frederick he held out a petition and uttered but the two words:

"Sire, sign."

The subject won his request.

King Henry VIII. wished to commission a nobleman of his court to visit Francis I.

It was at a moment when international relations were extremely shaky, and the courtier showed no particular desire to absent himself from his home and country on so dangerous a mission.

"Do not be afraid," said King Henry. "If you lose your life in my service I will avenge you a hundredfold. I will take off the heads of all the Frenchmen in my power."

"Thank your majesty; your majesty is most gracious," said the courtier, "but of all those heads which you take off there may not be one which will fit on my shoulders."

The witty reply resulted in the courtier being excused from his dangerous mission.

GEOGRAPHICAL PUZZLES.

Where Were Ultima Thule and the Lost Atlantis Located?

A most puzzling geographic mystery has come down from ancient times. This is the old question as to the identity of Ultima Thule. It was about 600 B. C. that Pytheas, a citizen of Massalia, sailed on his famous voyage. He discovered Albion and then continued farther north until he reached a spot which he named Ultima Thule. What this country was has never been determined. It may have been Shetland or Norway or Iceland.

Another ancient puzzle is that of Atlantis. It is commonly believed nowadays that this vanished continent did once actually lie beyond the pillars of Hercules and there are theories enough concerning it. Some regard the Canary Islands as the last remains of it, others think that the supposedly lost land was really America, but, in considering these speculations. it is well to bear in mind the fact that the first mention of the country was made by Plato, and many scholars are sure that the philosopher merely indulged in an imaginative flight. The solitary evidence that Atlantis ever existed is its reference to it.—Chicago Herald.

First publication Jan. 21st

NOTICE

To the owner or owners of any and all interests in, or liens upon the lands herein described:

TAKE NOTICE, That sale has been lawfully made of the following described lands for unpaid local taxes and that the undersigned has title thereto under tax deed or deeds issued therefor, and that you are entitled to redemption thereof, at any time within six months after return of service of this notice, upon payment to the undersigned or to the register in chancery of the county in which the lands lie of all sums paid upon such purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional thereto, and the fees of the sheriff for the service or cost of publication of this notice, to be computed as upon personal service of a declaration as commencement of suit and the further sum of five dollars for each description and about other additional cost or charges. If payment as aforesaid is not made, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the lands.

DESCRIPTION: The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32) township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) west, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

Amount paid, $22.41.
Taxes of 1911.

Yours etc.
J. L. CRANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix, ss.

I, Chester Norris, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and return after carefully inquiring, I am unable to ascertain the whereabouts or post-office address of Druzel Campbell, a person entitled to be served with the within notice and after like careful inquiry I am unable to find the name or address of any trustee, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Druzel Campbell, upon whom to serve said notice, and I do hereby certify that the above notice was delivered to me for service December 21st, 1914, at which time I was under-sheriff of said County of Charlevoix.

Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 18, 1916. My fees $1.00.

CHARLES NOVAK,
Sheriff of said County.

Try This For Your Cold.

Coughs and Colds unless checked often lead to serious results.

Colds are caused by germs infesting and irritating the sensitive lining of the nose, throat, bronchi, lungs and mucous tubes. Relief is obtained by killing the germs, then soothing and healing the inflamed membranes.

This is just how Dr. King's New Discovery acts. It is Antiseptic and kills the cold germs. It is soothing and healing, relieving the irritation. Stops the Cough and Checks the Cold. Get a full bottle from your Druggist, start taking at once, you will get quick and permanent relief. Here's proof. A. J. Johnson, Shongo, N. Y., says "Dr. King's New Discovery is the best cough medicine made, and I surely believe it saved my life several years ago when I contracted a severe Cough. Before using all of one bottle I was much better, and several bottles cured me."

Excellent for Children and Delicate Women. It is Mild, Pleasant and effective.

Trial bottle on receipt of 4c in stamps.

H. E. BUCKLEN & CO.
930 Herth Front St. Phila. Pa.

—FOR—

Furniture, Stoves, Ranges, Carpets, Rugs, Comforts and Blankets

—Go to—

S. M. SEE & SONS,
The Reliable Housefurnishers.

-FOR-

Purity, Flavor, Quality, Price

Buy "IRON DUKE" Flour.

Argo Milling Co.

MANUFACTURERS

It Will Pay You to Watch Blanchard's Bargain Counter

F. S. Blanchard Estate,
F. L. Bartholomew, Administrator.

Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix Homes because it is the first thing that our visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock which consists of everything, such as

Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL

ESTABLISHED 1869.

The pioneer paper of the region between Traverse City and the straits.

Nearly forty-five years under one editorial management, and has never missed an issue.

Challenges the closest scrutiny of its record for more than four decades.

Has championed the cause of Northern Michigan in general and Charlevoix County in particular uninterruptedly since the days of Ox teams.

The SENTINEL gives more reading matter weekly than any other paper in the county.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE SENTINEL

$1.50 per Year

First Publication December 31

NOTICE

State of Michigan,
Probate Court, Charlevoix County, Michigan.
Frederick H. McDonald, Plaintiff,
vs.
Lee Rowland, Defendant.

Charlevoix County ss. To Lee Rowland, defendant and all your company: Take notice that a writ of attachment was issued in the above entitled matter, and levied on the interest in the following described real estate of said plaintiff and against said defendant, to satisfy the sum of Twenty-Five Dollars and interest from September 10th, 1914, and that said writ was made returnable December 10th, 1914.

Dated December 9th, 1914.

WILLIAM E. CLUTE
Attorney for Plaintiff
Business Address, Petoskey, Van Buren Bldg.
Grand Rapids, Michigan.

First publication December 17th

Order of Publication

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix,
In Chancery.

Dated Dec. 19th. A. D. 1916

Robert T. Mears, Complainant,
vs.
Jaime L. Ferguson, Defendant.

Suit pending in the circuit court for the County of Charlevoix in Chancery, at Charlevoix on the 19th day of December, A. D. 1914.

It appearing from affidavit on file in this cause, that the Defendant Jaime L. Ferguson is not a resident of this state, but resides in Chicago, Illinois, on motion of E. L. Bartholomew, Complainant's Solicitor, it is ordered that the said Defendant, James L. Ferguson, appear in this cause to be entered within four months from the date of this order, and within forty days after service of a copy of this order on said defendant, if this bill of Complaint be filed, and a copy thereof be served on said defendant personally, or within forty days after such service on the order of said bill, and notice of the object of the bill, and in default thereof said bill may be taken as confessed by the said non-resident Defendant.

And it is further ordered that within twenty days the said Complainant, cause a notice of this order to be published in the Charlevoix County Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County, and that such publication be continued therein at least once each week for six weeks in succession, or if a copy of this order be personally served upon the non-resident Defendant, at least twenty days before the time above prescribed for his appearance.

Complainant's Solicitor, Circuit Judge.
Address, Petoskey, Mich.

BOGLAND LEWIS, County Clerk.

(First Publication Jan. 7)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, The Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, on Friday the 1st day of January A. D. 1916.

Present, Hon. Jesse Rogers, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Tool, Deceased.

It is ordered that the 18th day of January A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be assigned for examining and allowing said account and hearing petition for distribution.

It is further ordered, that notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

SERVETUS A. COBBELL,
Judge of Probate

A true copy:
SERVETUS A. COBBELL,
Judge of Probate.

(First Publication November 19th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by William I. Ashcraft and Annie S. Ward, his wife, of Chicago, Illinois, to Carson Pirie Scott and Company, a corporation of Chicago, Illinois, dated March 9th, A. D. 1910, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, on March 15th, A. D. 1910, in Liber 30 of mortgages on page 300, and contained in a certain assignment of said mortgage made by said mortgagee, dated the 1st day of November 1913, 1914 in Liber 32 of mortgages on page 400, which said assignment was on the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 duly recorded in said Liber 32 of mortgages on page 400, and said mortgage being assigned by the said Carson Pirie Scott and Company, to Charles H. Bellinger, on the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 by an assignment bearing date the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 and recorded in said Liber 32 of mortgages on page 400, and said mortgage being assigned by the said Charles H. Bellinger, to Fred Stone, on the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 by an assignment bearing date the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 and recorded in said Liber 32 of mortgages on page 400, and said mortgage being assigned by the said Fred Stone, to Walter J. Maddox and Alfred E. Haas and Charles Novak, on the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 by an assignment bearing date the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 and recorded in said Liber 32 of mortgages on page 400, and said mortgage being assigned by the said Walter J. Maddox and Alfred E. Haas and Charles Novak, to the undersigned, on the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 by an assignment bearing date the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 and recorded in said Liber 32 of mortgages on page 400, and said mortgage being assigned by the said Charles Novak, to the undersigned, on the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 by an assignment bearing date the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 and recorded in said Liber 32 of mortgages on page 400, and said mortgage being assigned by the said Walter J. Maddox and Alfred E. Haas and Charles Novak, to the undersigned, on the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 by an assignment bearing date the 3rd day of November, 1913, 1914 and recorded in said Liber 32 of mortgages on page 400, and said mortgage being assigned by the said

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1915, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

On Mammoth Smith's little farm adjoining Lonesome Ridge, Jim Lessett, Sister Sarah's son, of Cincinnati, arrives to visit his Uncle Jim's two motherless children, Sally and Jim, Jr. Lessett is a cripple, but he has come to the Cumberlands to regain his health. He falls in love with Sally. Sarah Ann Hicks, the village belle, is in love with Jim, Jr., who is a moonshiner. Lessett's father, Judge Lessett, of Cincinnati, is a "hanging judge" who has sent many men to the gallows. Lessett's mother, Sarah, is a cripple. Lessett's sister, Mary, is married to Jim Hicks, Sarah Ann's father, who is a moonshiner. Lessett's brother, Jim, is a "wild" boy who has been in trouble. Jim, Jr., and Sally are married. Lessett's father, the hanging judge, visits his son and his family. Lessett's brother Jim is killed by his father, the hanging judge. Sally's baby is born. Lessett's father, the hanging judge, dies.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

"That's sayin' ter be a dancin' par'ty, ain't ter Willie McCagger's on yonder Saturday," he hastily amended. "I reckon you'd go over thar wuth ye, won't ye, Sally?"

He waited for her usual delighted response, but she only looked about hurriedly and without enthusiasm that she thought "might do." At last, however, her restless brake, and, looking up, she asked, with a sigh:

"Air ye sayin' shaw, Samson?"

"Why, been a-sittin' ter ye!" demanded the boy, in surprise.

For a moment, the girl sat silent. Finally, she spoke in a grave voice.

"Hit hain't nothin' ter git mad about, Samson. I hain't ever been ter no par'ty yer a mighty ter git down thar, an' git ter dancin'. Hit make a weary feelin' toward the par'ty ye kind ter git ter hatin' ter git ter dancin' wuth yer."

"Yer done told ye," she said, wearily, "thet I thinks ye ought ter do hit."

* * * * *

Lescott and Samson discussed the matter frequently, at times the latter was obstinate in his determination to remain; at other times he gave way to the yearnings for a social opportunity.

The dance on Saturday was to be something more portentous than a mere frolic. It would be a clan gathering to which the South adherents would come riding up and down Mingo and its tributaries "from Kingdom Come" to the Cumberland Ridge. Perhaps not all after midnight, shuffle jig and noding would mark its closing. Then, with a groaning of his musketoe vanity, he demanded:

"Hain't ye a-askin', Sally, whether I goes, or not?"

The girl grew rigid. Her fingers on the crumbling block of the attic rock tightened and gripped hard. Her face set with heavy lips, nor her voice, though she had to gulp down a rising lump in her throat before she could answer calmly.

"I ketch ye had ought ter go, Samson."

The boy was astonished. He had strutted the night before, fear of her opposition—and more so, of her disapproval—had vanished.

"Then ye'll, she went on.

"There hain't nothin' in these here hills fer ye, Samson. Down thar, you'd see lots of Hicks thet's now—an' devil fixed ar' beautiful. Ye'll see lots of gyrls thet hin read an' write, aslee dressed up in fall kinds of fancy dis'in's." Her high words ran out and ended in a sort of inward sob.

Completely nonplussed, hardly and awardly to Samson's lips. He reached for the girl's hand, and whispered:

"I reckon I won't see no gals thet's as purty as you be, Sally. I reckon ye know, whether I goes or stays, we's agoin' ter git married."

She freed her hand away, and laughed a little bitterly. In the last day, she had ceased to be a child, and become a woman with all the soul-aching possibilities of a woman's institutions.

Samson, she said, "I hain't askin' ye ter make no so promises. When ye sees them other gals—gals thet kin read an' write—reckon maybe ye'll think diff'rent. I can't hardly spell out print—only the hun reader."

Her lover's voice was scornful of the imagined dangers, as a recruit may be of the enemy's fire.

"Ye've been a-sittin' ter me, Sally, ever sence I kin remember. He slipped his arm about her and drew her nearer to him.

"Honey," he said, "ye needn't fret about them. Reckon yer sittin' can't make no difference fer a woman. Hit's mighty important fer a man, but you're a gal.

"You're agoin' ter think diff'rent after awhile," she insisted. "When ye grows, I hain't agoin' ter be especial ye ter come home ter me. Hit—she hesitated—the resolution in her voice for a moment quivered as she added—"but God knows I'm agoin' ter be lonely."

Sally! The boy rose, and paced up and down in the road. "Air ye gittin' ter be agin' me, too? Don't ye ena that I wants ter have a cleanin? Can't ye trust me? I'm just a-sivin' ter amount to something. I'm plumb tired of bein' ornery an' no 'count."

She nodded.

"I've done told ye," she said, wearily, "thet I thinks ye ought ter do hit."

* * * * *

Lescott and Samson discussed the matter frequently, at times the latter was obstinate in his determination to remain; at other times he gave way to the yearnings for a social opportunity.

The dance on Saturday was to be something more portentous than a mere frolic. It would be a clan gathering to which the South adherents would come riding up and down Mingo and its tributaries "from Kingdom Come" to the Cumberland Ridge. Perhaps not all after midnight, shuffle jig and nodding would mark its closing. Then, with a groaning of his musketoe vanity, he demanded:

"Hain't ye a-askin', Sally, whether I goes, or not?"

The girl grew rigid. Her fingers on the crumbling block of the attic rock tightened and gripped hard. Her face set with heavy lips, nor her voice, though she had to gulp down a rising lump in her throat before she could answer calmly.

"I ketch ye had ought to go, Samson."

The boy was astonished. He had strutted the night before, fear of her opposition—and more so, of her disapproval—had vanished.

"Then ye'll, she went on.

"There hain't nothin' in these here hills fer ye, Samson. Down thar, you'd see lots of Hicks thet's now—an' devil fixed ar' beautiful. Ye'll see lots of gyrls thet hin read an' write, aslee dressed up in fall kinds of fancy dis'in's." Her high words ran out and ended in a sort of inward sob.

Completely nonplussed, hardly and awardly to Samson's lips. He reached for the girl's hand, and whispered:

"I reckon I won't see no gals thet's as purty as you be, Sally. I reckon ye know, whether I goes or stays, we's agoin' ter git married."

She freed her hand away, and laughed, a little bitterly. In the last day, she had ceased to be a child, and become a woman with all the soul-aching possibilities of a woman's institutions.

Samson, she said, "I hain't askin' ye ter make no so promises. When ye sees them other gals—gals thet kin read an' write—reckon maybe ye'll think diff'rent. I can't hardly spell out print—only the hun reader."

Her lover's voice was scornful of the imagined dangers, as a recruit may be of the enemy's fire.

"Ye've been a-sittin' ter me, Sally, ever sence I kin remember. He slipped his arm about her and drew her nearer to him.

"Honey," he said, "ye needn't fret about them. Reckon yer sittin' can't make no difference fer a woman. Hit's mighty important fer a man, but you're a gal.

"You're agoin' ter think diff'rent after awhile," she insisted. "When ye grows, I hain't agoin' ter be especial ye ter come home ter me. Hit—she hesitated—the resolution in her voice for a moment quivered as she added—"but God knows I'm agoin' ter be lonely."

Sally! The boy rose, and paced up and down in the road. "Air ye gittin' ter be agin' me, too? Don't ye ena that I wants ter have a cleanin? Can't ye trust me? I'm just a-sivin' ter amount to something. I'm plumb tired of bein' ornery an' no 'count."

She nodded.

"I've done told ye," she said, wearily, "thet I thinks ye ought ter do hit."

* * * * *

Lescott and Samson discussed the matter frequently, at times the latter was obstinate in his determination to remain; at other times he gave way to the yearnings for a social opportunity.

The dance on Saturday was to be something more portentous than a mere frolic. It would be a clan gathering to which the South adherents would come riding up and down Mingo and its tributaries "from Kingdom Come" to the Cumberland Ridge. Perhaps not all after midnight, shuffle jig and nodding would mark its closing. Then, with a groaning of his musketoe vanity, he demanded:

"Hain't ye a-askin', Sally, whether I goes, or not?"

The girl grew rigid. Her fingers on the crumbling block of the attic rock tightened and gripped hard. Her face set with heavy lips, nor her voice, though she had to gulp down a rising lump in her throat before she could answer calmly.

"I ketch ye had ought to go, Samson."

The boy was astonished. He had strutted the night before, fear of her opposition—and more so, of her disapproval—

The Charlevoix Sentinel

Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.

WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR

Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 8

SUBSCRIPTIONS:

Three Months	45
Six Months	75
One Year	1 50

FOCH HONORED BY KING GEORGE

Comparatively Unknown General Given Grand Cross of Bath.

HERO OF TWO BIG BATTLES

Strict Censorship Keeps Many Brave Men in the Background—Joffre Plans the Attacks, While Foch Executes Them—Has Not Accepted High Office From President.

Bordeaux.—When King George visited the front he gave the same order to General Foch who had granted cross of the Bath as to the commander in chief of the allies, General Joffre. This is the highest distinction the king of England can confer on a general for purely military services.

Owing to the completeness of the French censorship, which prevents any account from being cabled out for publicity and the small attention paid to the work of the French generals in the English press, people were mystified in England when General Foch, a person unknown to them, was singled out for this compliment by their king.

But the fact is that General Foch was the hero of the battles of the Marne and Ypres, and it bids fair to go down in history as the greatest figure of the war on the Franco-British front is General Joffre. Joffre plans, Foch executes. Joffre is the herdsman, Foch the right hand of the herdsman's arm. Each likes and respects the other.

GENERAL FOCH

Foch's confidence in his chief's military genius is unbounded. Joffre knows that what is necessary to his offensive movement he has an instrument in Foch on which he can place entire reliance. In private life the two men are more than comrades in arms. They are close friends and never more happy than when they can sit down over a pipe and discuss military problems, for both are veterans in the extreme sense of the word. Their ages differ but by a few months; their birthplaces are but a few miles apart.

Ferdinand Foch was born at Tarbes, in the southern department of Gers, on Oct. 2, 1851. His father, Napoleon Foch, was secretary of the prefecture at Tarbes. When the three sons, of whom General Foch was the eldest, attended the local college. Each boy chose the profession—one law, another the church and young Ferdinand the army. Ferdinand soon made his mark and at the age of twenty-six was nominated artillery captain. Rapidly he rose to the post of professor of tactics, with the title of commandant, at the Ecole de Guerre, or Military school, where he remained five years. His lectures and military works have been translated into many languages.

Having been created Brigadier general in 1908, Foch now succeeded to the directorship of the Ecole de Guerre, one of the most confidential positions in the war department. He left this post to take command of the Thirtieth division and afterward of the Eighth corps at Nancy and finally the Twentieth corps at Nancy.

The war did not take Foch by surprise. He was among those who felt it was inevitable in the near future and had so been seemed upon by a number of politicians as an alarmist, among them Lord Roberts was in England by the corresponding political party there. Joffre, who has the leader's instinct in choosing his men, immediately selected Foch for the responsible position of commander of the Fifth army at La Fere-Charmeconte. How he acquitted himself now is a matter of history.

Early in October Foch succeeded to the command of the three armies of the north. He is now Joffre's right hand man and is looked upon as the "les generalissimo" of the French army.

Interior of Houses Damaged.

Paris.—Many hospitals now are in fact on the outside, but the interiors are destroyed, due to the usual tricks of shells, which fall through the roof and exploded inside.

A good conscience is to the mind what health is to the body.—Addison.

GRAVELED ROADS.

Gravel Should Be Confined and Held in Position.

There has been much agitation during the past year, writes R. B. House of Colorado college, concerning the surfacing of our principal roads, and as in many parts of the state we find deposits of gravel it seems that this is the material which may be economically used.

First of all, the construction should be such that the gravel is confined and held in position on the road. This is accomplished by so grading the earth foundation that shoulders are formed at the sides. The earth forming the shoulders should be well compact and solid; otherwise they will fail to the function required of them. Loose earth thrown up from the ditch at the sides of the road will not answer the purpose unless moistened and rolled with a motor or some other roller.

MAKING A GRAVEL ROAD.

The whole surface of the earth foundation should be graded to the required form and compacted with the roller and the gravel and then spread in a layer about four inches thick in the center and two and a half inches at the side. Enough sand or loam should be added to make the gravel "bind" well. This is mixed with the gravel with a harrow and the layer then sprinkled and rolled till solid. Another layer of gravel is then spread over the third and treated the same way. The result is a gravelled surface fifteen feet wide and six inches thick in the center, three and a half inches thick at the sides and if the gravel is of a good quality this road, with a little attention, should last for years.

THE CHARLEVOIX HIGH SCHOOL "Y" CLUB

Twenty-seven young men of the high school, under the leadership of A. B. Hall, James Wilkinson and W. A. Vogel, have organized the "C. H. S. "Y" Club. This is a national organization, and has branches in Boyne City and East Jordan.

The purpose of this society is to promote Christian character among the boys of the high school. The first meeting was held last Friday, at which the constitution was adopted and officers elected.

The officers are as follows:

President, Ralph Coulter.
Secretary, Kenneth Widdifield.
Treasurer, Myron Gorey.

They are to hold office for a year, and the annual business meeting is held just before the beginning of the second semester of each year. The regular meetings are to be held on Monday evenings from 7 to 8:30. The general program of each meeting is as follows:

First, a short business session; then Bible Study to last not more than 30 minutes long. The last meeting of each month is a social meeting called "bean supper." Last Monday was held the first regular meeting. This was given entirely to business and the yearly dues were fixed at $1.00.

Next Monday the second regular meeting will occur. At this time Rev. Walker will talk on "The Ministry as a Life Work." This club promises to be a most valuable asset to the lines of the boys of Charlevoix. It needs the support of every citizen and deserves to receive it.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL

In a recent prize composition contest at St. Mary's School the fortunate ones to win gold medals were: Ida Woods, tenth grade and Eileen Fairchild, seventh grade.

On Friday afternoon at four o'clock John Smith entertained his friends by giving a violin recital on the occasion of his promotion to the second grade in music. The object of these studio recitals is to prepare younger pupils for appearance in public recitals. He was assisted by Claire Carter, violin; Olivette Allard, Monica Smith, Eleanor Finucan, piano, and Doris Baker, reader. Much praise is due the little chap for his perfect technic and the ease with which he executes each number.

The following program was successfully given:

Piano Solo	Olivette Allard
Violin Solo, Dream Waltz	John Smith
Recitation	Nicholas Paganina. John Smith
Violin Solo	Die Lovely—Sticher How Gently Sweet Afton John Smith
Reading	Hazel Crosby's Violin Doris Baker
Violin Solo	Barcarole, Von Weber Ave Maria, Maccagni John Smith
Piano Solo	Olivette Allard
Violin Solo	German Folk Song, Cradle Song, Hauser John Smith
Duet	Home Sweet Home
Piano, Monica Smith, Eleanor Finucan
Violins	Claire Carter, John Smith

Religious Notes

Mens' Bible Class

Meet every Sunday at 12 o'clock noon in the Carnegie Library.

Congregational Church
(STANDING NOTICES)

Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Bible School, 12 o'clock.

Young People's Meeting, 6:30 p. m.

Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT BOYNE)

Bible School at 2:30 p. m.

Preaching, 3:30 p. m.

Baptist Church

Morning service at 10:30

Bible School at 11:45 a. m.

Junior League at 5:00

B. Y. P. U. at 6:30 p. m.

Evening service at 7:30

Thursday evening at 7:30

Christian Science

Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.

Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—Truth.

Wednesday service 7:45 p. m. Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service

8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:00 a. m.—High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.

Masses during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church

Morning Prayer at 11:00.
Sunday School at 12:00 m.
Evening Prayer at 7:30.

Methodist Church.

A. M. "The Value of the Church"
P. M. "The New Man"

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Charlevoix Historical Society will meet Friday evening January 22nd with Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Rachow.

The following is the program.

Music—Young Men's Choir of the M.E. Church.

Paper—English Immigration, R. W. Kane.

Social Intermission.

Music—Vocal Solo, Miss Helen Finucan

Reading—Miss Helen Cowan.

Elk Rapids Progress: Capt. George VanOrden, U. S. M. C., who has had charge of the government naval school at Norfolk, Va., for the past three years, has been raised to the rank of Major and detailed to a two years foreign cruise on the U. S. S. Washington. Major VanOrden is well known in this section of Michigan as he was appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis while living at East Jordan about twenty years ago. He is the son-in-law of Supervisor and Mrs. Sam B. Owen of Forest Home.

AMELIA KADEN, High School and Junior High School, Boyne City Schools, Republican Candidate for County School Commissioner at the March Primaries.

—WHY—

Because—I hold the degree, Bachelor of Pedagogics from the Ypsilanti State Normal School.

Because—I hold a state life certificate from the Ypsilanti State Normal School.

Because—I am a Senior of the State University.

Because—I am a graduate of the Ferris Institute.

Because—I have taught 25 years in Charlevoix County Schools.

Because—I hold one of the most responsible positions in the Charlevoix County Schools.

Because—I am a member of Pine Lake Grange.

Because—I am a taxpayer.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

Through the columns of the Sentinel I desire to formally announce that I shall be a candidate for the County Commissionership of Schools in Charlevoix county on the Republican ticket at the primaries on the third day of March, 1916.

MAY L. STEWART

That this is ambitious I do not deny, but I have postponed making my announcement in order to find out whether a goodly number of the citizens in this county considered me worthy and qualified to fill this responsible position and I now feel that I have somewhat determined that sentiment. My candidacy is receiving support throughout the entire county from laboring men, farmers, merchants, business and professional men who have pledged their confidence and support over their own signatures. I therefore feel justified in submitting to the electors of Charlevoix county my candidacy.

In political announcements it is customary for the candidate to pledge his faithfulness in the performance of his duties in the office to which he aspires. No office should be further removed from all temporary political unrest than the commissionership and the paramount ability and character of the candidate are of vital importance. To what degree of faithfulness is in pledging himself depends upon his native interest in educational matters and I believe the voters of the county have a right to inquire with what breadth of view he is interpreting these laudable requirements, the state law which deal with the principle uplifting of our rural schools through ways and means left solely to the ingenuity of the commissioner and designed as food for thought in his leisure moments.

The commissioner holds teachers' examinations, grants certificates, keeps the same on file, makes a list of qualified teachers, receives institute fees and pays the same into the treasury each quarter, but these duties are required of him by law. He is expected to visit each school room under his jurisdiction at least once in the school year but the simple performance of this duty would reflect no special credit upon his office for his reports must show that he has done this or his salary would be discontinued. Fledgling the performance of required duties would mean little indeed and I wish to call attention to the special powers of the commissioner which I hope to exercise with ambition and judgment.

Section 7 of Act 186 of the compiled school laws of Michigan instructs the commissioner to counsel with teachers and school boards concerning improvement in discipline, instruction and management of the school.

Section 8 of the same act says it shall be the duty of the commissioner to promote by such means as he or she may devise the improvement of the schools in the county and the elevation of the character and qualifications of teachers and officers thereof.

These are the duties which require of every aspirant for this office a heart loyal to the public school and belief in the strength and grandeur of our public school system. These are the duties which I hope to make a reality, not a mimeomer, remembering ever that the centralized school is ideal and that we should work toward this goal but that in this county our most immediate and most practicable plan is the "Standard School" and that we should strive to attain this goal by improving conditions in sanitation and health, in organization, both in discipline and attendance, in library supplies and the use thereof, in the qualifications of the teacher encouraging an active not a passive attitude toward her work. We must first of all arouse a desire for a "Standard School" plate in every district in the county. Teachers, boards of education and commissioner must all work with this one aim,—to have our rural schools win public recognition from the state authorities. This will be my aim in the office which I seek.

I have always lived in the public school, am a graduate of East Jordan high school, have attended two of our state normals, receiving a life certificate from the state normal college. I have also studied in the State University in Ann Arbor where, in classes on method and the science of education, I had the finest opportunity to meet, exchange ideas with various city and county superintendents. I taught five years in the rural schools of this county and have spent three years instructing high school classes. I have had the privilege of real schooling both in theory and experience and with food and home that she has fitted me for the position to which I aspire.

I firmly believe that character and executive ability are prime requisites and both welcome and invite investigation of my work and standing in the different schools with which I have been associated during the past eight years.

I wish to assure the voters of this county that should I be favored with the nomination and election I shall make my record as your commissioner of schools truly progressive in its earnestness of purpose.

MAY L. STEWART.

MONEY SAVING PRICES

JANUARY 22-to-FEBRUARY 1

SILKS

1 yd wide Silk Poplin, regular $1.00 grade, per yd	50c
1 yd wide guaranteed lining satins, all colors, per yd	75c
Fancy silks, per yard	35c

DRESS GOODS

$1.25 54 inch Suiting, per yd	85c
$2.00 54 inch Serge, per yd	$1.25
One Special Lot 50c Serges, per yard	35c

FLANNELETTES

For Dresses, Kimonas and Dressing Sacques.

15c quality, per yd	9½c
12½c quality, per yd	8c

SILKOLINES

Plain and Fancy colors, per yd	8½c

CRETONES

25c grade at	18c
10c grade at	8c

CURTAIN SCRIMS

25c and 15c Curtain Scrims per yd	10c

SWEATERS

Ladies' $4.50 Sweaters at	$2.00
Children's $2.00 Sweaters at	$1.00
50c and 25c Mufflers at	19c
50c Mittens and Gloves at	35c
25c Mittens and Gloves at	19c
25c Hoods at	19c

COATS

Ladies' Coats at	$5.00
Children's Coats at	$3.00 & $4.00

UNDERWEAR

Women's—

$2.25 All Wool Union Suits at	$1.65
$1.50 Part Wool Union Suits at	$1.19
$1.00 Fleeced Lined Union Suits	75c
50c	39c
$1.00 All wool Pants and Vests	75c
50c Fleeced " " "	39c
25c " " "	19c
Misses 50c Union Suits at	39c
Children's all wool garments 30c off on each suit.
Children's Outing Flannel gowns and sleeping suits	35c

BLANKETS

All wool Blankets $5.00 grade at	$3.50
Imperial Blankets $1.25 grade at	98c

A. E. MASON'S DEPARTMENT STORE

First publication Jan. 21st

NOTICE

To the owner or owners of any and all interest in, or lien upon the lands herein described:

TAX NOTICE. That sale has been duly made of the following described land for unpaid taxes thereon and that the undersigned has title thereto under a deed of such sale; that the law provides that you are entitled to redemption therefrom at any time within six months after return of service of this notice, upon payment to the undersigned or to the register in chancery of the county in which the land is sold of all sums paid upon such purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional thereto, and the fees of the sheriff for the service of notice of this notice, to be computed as upon personal service of a declaration in ejectment, and all and the further sum of five dollars for each description without other additional cost or charges. If payment as aforesaid is not made, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the land.

DESCRIPTION: The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32) township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) west, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

Amount paid $2.46
Taxes of 1909

Yours etc.
J. L. CRANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix, ss.

I, Charles Novak, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and return after carefully inquiry, I am unable to ascertain the whereabouts of post-office address of Daniel Campbell, a person entitled to be served with the within notice and after like careful inquiry I am unable to find the name or address of any lunatic, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Daniel Campbell, upon who service of said notice can be made. I further certify that the above notice was delivered to me for service December 7, 1914, at which time I was under sheriff of said County of Charlevoix.

Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 18, 1915. My fees $1.10.

CHARLES NOVAK,
Sheriff of said County

TO THE REPUBLICAN ELECTORS OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

I wish to announce that I will be a candidate for re-election to the office of County Commissioner of Schools.

I believe that my experience in the office and my knowledge of the condition of the schools of the county will make it possible for me to render efficient service.

If elected to the office I will do my best for the boys and girls of the county.

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. MILFORD.

Children's Coughs—Children's Colds Both are Serious

When one of your little ones shows symptoms of an approaching cold give it Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey at once. It acts quickly, and prevents the Cold growing worse. Very healing—soothes the lungs, loosens the mucous, strengthens the system. It's guaranteed. Only 25c at your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.

Bucklin's Arnica Salve for sores.

Charlevoix Rock Product Company,

Producers and Manufacturers of

Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Fluxing
Sugar Stone.

For prompt city delivery Call L68 Howland. Phone 297.

H. D. Marshall,
"The Old Reliable"
CONTRACTOR FOR
Sewerage, Water Pipes, Cess Pools, Basements, All Kinds of Excavating.
DISINFECTED!
All Work Guaranteed.
Estimates Furnished.
H. D. MARSHALL,
Charlevoix, Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10c ASSORTED
Best Wishes, Greetings, Lovers, Birthday, etc. Assortment mailed on Post Card Exchange free on request, and free sample copy of the Family Story Paper; also Catalogue and Premium List. Enclose 10c stamps for return postage, etc.
FAMILY STORY PAPER
24-26 Vandewater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction Auto and Boat Supplies.
214 Bridge St. - Phone 154
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Hardie.

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Contractor and Builder
Estimates furnished. Phone 338 Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

GLASSES FITTED
CONSULT
J. LEAHY
Optometrist
Expert on Eye Strain
Headache, Dizziness, Nervousness, and all other symptoms of Eye Strain cured.
Crossed Eyes Straightened Without an Operation.
Fitting Children's Eyes a Specialty.
Difficult Cases Solicited.
Glasses Guaranteed to Fit.
Date:- Monday, February 1,
ONE DAY ONLY!
At Hotel Charlevoix.

DR. J. A. AULD,
DENTIST.
Office in the Hamilton Block,
Over R. L. Lewis & Co's Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139.

Lisle Shanahan,
Attorney at Law.
Office in County Bank Bldg.

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Office in Priest's Block
Charlevoix - Michigan

Tired!
Are you tired? run down? nervous? no wonder you are discouraged. What is life worth? Not much. You are ill. You want to be well, strong, active. Kidneys and Liver need attention. Nothing will do this better than Electric Bitters.
Electric Bitters
50c. and $1.00 All Druggists

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American,
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
Munn & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

RHEUMATISM SUFFERERS SHOULD USE
DROPS
The Best Remedy For all forms of Rheumatism
LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, GOUT, NEURALGIA AND KIDNEY TROUBLES.
DROPS
STOP THE PAIN
Gives Quick Relief
Sold by all Druggists
SAMPLE "SUNSHINE" FREE ON REQUEST
Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co.
180-183 W. Lake St., Chicago

Very High.

"I just got that doctor's bill for that fever of mine."

"How was it?"

"It was so very high fever—higher than I dreamed."

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, January 28, 1915. — NUMBER 41

A HOME BANK WITH A STRONG SURPLUS

In This Age of Reciprocity--

the business man prefers the bank which remembers and perform its obligations to the Public from which it draws its support.

Fully appreciative of those obligations, The Charlevoix State Savings Bank, strives in legitimate ways, to co-operate with the business interests, large and small, of Charlevoix and Michigan.

Extending all the facilities offered by a conservative and progressive Institution.

CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
W. J. RACHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't. Cashier.

J. L. CRANE

SPRING 1915

New Red Seal Ginghams--
Absolutely fast colors and the choicest patterns we have ever shown.
Short Lengths-5 to 10 yds-9½c yd
Regular Goods . 12½c yd

New Comodore Percales--
Guaranteed fast colors--full 36 inch wide - extra fine cloth, same as used in all 15c percales—New spring 1915 patterns—Compare with any 15c grade
Our price 12½c yd

English Sol Satin--
We are pleased to announce the placing on exclusive sale of English Sol Satin—
54 inches wide - 5 yr. Guarantee
$1.00 Per Yard

ROAST RABBIT

In these days of the high cost of living, everything must dot on a cheaper rabbit. The country contiguous to Charlevoix and on the islands, there are thousands of them, and they are good when properly cooked.

Empty skin and thoroughly wash the rabbit; wipe it dry, line the inside with sausage meat and force meat (the latter of bread crumbs well seasoned and worked up). Sew the stuffing inside, skewer back the head between the shoulders, cut off the fore joints of the shoulders and legs, bring them close to the body, and secure them by means of a skewer. Wrap the rabbit in buttered paper, keep it well basted, and a few minutes before it is done remove the paper, flour and fruth it and let it acquire a nice brown color. It should be done in three quarters of an hour. Take out the skewers and serve with brown gravy and red current jelly. To make the rabbit present in the same manner as above, in a good oven it will take about the same time as roasting. Most cooks garnish the rabbit with slices of lemon and serve on with current jelly. Sometimes the head is cut off before sending to the table, but this is a matter of individual taste.

A RESPITE DESIRABLE

You can pound the eternal life out of any moral question of civic cause by excessive preachment.

The publisher of this paper will vote for prohibition, local option, or any other measure that will shake the open saloon to death, and bury it where an earthquake cannot resurrect it.

But he will not proclaim, directly or indirectly, his political course upon the views of any candidate for office along the line indicated. We have heretofore made this plain.

But, as we remarked at the outset, you can sing that "Tiperary" song, or "Pull for the Shore," until they make the average citizen jump off the bridge.

Throw the switch, please.

LOCAL NEWS.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

J. L. Crane
M. A. Levinson
A. E. Mason Dept. Store
C. Dunto & Son

R. F. Sloan is in Grand Rapids and Detroit this week on business.

Fred Sneathen, of Hayes, has gone to Grand Rapids for the remainder of the winter.

Giles T. Warner, of Hammond, Ind., was here a few days this week, the guest of R. C. Hammett.

Word from Florida is to the effect that R. F. Foley is gaining in strength, but is not yet out of danger.

The first zero weather this far this winter came Thursday morning, when the temperature registered two degrees below.

The Jolly Ten visited Mrs. Mary Hilton last Wednesday at twelve o'clock. Dinner was served and just before leaving they served cider. A good time is reported by all.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Baker returned yesterday from Grand Rapids where they have been for a week, selecting furniture etc., for the enlarged Beach Hotel.

The Charlevoix Fire Department will give a masquerade ball on February 22nd. Tickets for the door prize, which will be on display. Look for full particulars later.

Miss Christine Peterson, an eight grade Charlevoix high school teacher, has resigned her to accept a position in the manual training department of the Grand Rapids schools.

The February term of the circuit court for Charlevoix county will begin Monday next, with six criminal cases; nine cases of law on the prize docket, and twenty-five civil cases, five of which are divorce cases.

Wednesday afternoon a jolly party of friends and neighbors gathered at the Antrim street home of Mrs. Arthur Woodin. A feature of the event was a pot-luck supper, which was followed by a most enjoyable social time.

Geo. Meenard, whose home was near Grand Rapids, and who was here visiting his son, V. L. Meenard, died Saturday of cerebral hemorhage. The remains were taken to his home Monday. A wife survives him.

Thirty fish shanties were carried out into Lake Michigan at Petoskey when the ice broke away a mile from shore and floated out into the lake. It is not thought any fishermen were on the ice at the time. Loss will be several hundred dollars.

The ice harvest in Pine Lake was begun in earnest last Monday morning. D. Hemmes and R. S. Shapton have contracts covering about 40 acres each, except that of H. W. Widdifield. Owing to the uncertain ice, it is said that a larger amount than ever will be cut.

What has become of the skunks, Alpoulette Island? We had thought some scheduled to the interesting little creatures, and we see or hear of no more of them. The greedy trappers have decimated the breed, and no longer do the beautiful quadrupeds nest with the house-cat under the shed or the barn.

Fred S. Myers has bought of the F. S. Blanchard estate the residence property on Park avenue in the rear of the Blanchard hardware store, and will modernize and overhaul the house and occupy it as a residence. The house is one of the oldest in the city, having been built by Capt. A. G. Aldrich in 1867, and occupied by him for many years.

The manager of the Majestic Theatre is offering another treat in the way of films for Feb. 3rd—"The Lure." This is a Shubert feature of fine arts and a splendid story of society, the underworld and poverty, through which runs a love story of interest. This is first of a long line of good productions that are to be presented at the Majestic. They come as follows: "Lure," "America," "The Dollar Mark" "The Man of the Hour," "Mother," "The Gentleman From Mississippi," "When Broadway Was a Trail," "Across the Pacific," "Chimes" and "Price of Peace" every one of which are really worth while.

TO THE REPUBLICAN ELECTORS OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

I wish to announce that I will be a candidate for re-election to the office of County Commissioner of Schools.

I believe that my experience in the office and my knowledge of the condition of the schools of the county will make it possible for me to render efficient service.

If elected to the office I will do my best for the boys and girls of the county.

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. MILFORD.

TOM QUINLAN DEAD

The Passing of an Early Charlevoix County Settler

Thomas Quinlan, a prominent citizen of Petoskey, and one who was "in at the birth" of that city thirty years ago, was found dead in his garage Monday evening. The cause of his death is not known.

The death of "Tom Quinlan" is of more than passing interest to the old settlers of the western end of Charlevoix county.

When Fred J. Meech came from Vermont in 1872 and bought the Norwood lumbering and mercantile business, he brought young Quinlan with him as a clerk. In Vermont Tom's father was for many years in the employ of the Meech family. Tom remained at Norwood in charge of the store for several years.

The year Mr. Meech discontinued operations at Norwood the Northern division of the C. H. & L. railroad was built and Mr. Quinlan went to "Bear Creek," (now Petoskey) where he later was married to a sister of the late Phillip B. Wachtel. From that time to the day of his death he has been a conspicuous figure in the development of Petoskey and its immediate section.

SOCIAL GATHERING

A delightful evening was enjoyed at the home of Judge and Mrs. Correll, Wednesday Jan. 20, the occasion being a supper served by the ladies of the Congregational Bible Class to the men of the class.

Master of Ceremonies, Mr. A. F. Bridge.

To prevent any somberness either in feeling or appearance, a number of ladies were served with the gentlemen. The welcome to the guests was very amusingly given by the hostess, Mrs. Correll, and the toast to the ladies by Mr. Robert Sloan who was also adept in that vocation. Following the supper old time songs added charm to the evening, Miss Correll being the accompanist, and interpreted with short readings. Brief speeches by Rev. Mr. Taggart and Judge Correll of a practical and helpful nature, were very much appreciated. The character of the evening was not only entertainment but served to bring the members of Judge Correll's class in touch with each other, thereby increasing interest in the study of the Bible.

WILL SELL ISLAND INTERESTS

HOUSE OF DAVID "HOLY ROLLERS" TO DISPOSE OF HIGH ISLAND PROPERTY

An influential member of the Benton Harbor House of David was in Charlevoix a week lately, in an effort to get several of the Island Colony to the main land for witnesses in certain proceedings pending at Benton Harbor, growing out of the serious charges made against Benjamin, the head of the outfit. He was unsuccessful and returned to Benton Harbor.

While he would not be stated that it had been decided to dispose of the High Island interests, as it had been an unprofitable venture, from the start.

The larger part of the Island is owned by the House of David, large tracts of timber constituting an extensive area. A saw-mill was built two years ago, and considerable lumber and other timber products have been shipped. The original intention was to gradually put the Island in a state of cultivation, improvements to include extensive fruit culture. The soil of the Island is so light that it is the main land, but a good harbor affords shelter for their boats.

A PLAIN MATTER OF BUSINESS

An effort is being made by the railroads to raise passenger rates half a cent per mile.

Michigan is especially interested in placing the Pere Marquette railroad on a stable basis of operation. If the increase asked for will do this, it should be granted.

In fairness to the Pere Marquette, the "high cost of living" should enter into the impartial consideration of the question. This concided economic condition touches railroad operations as forcibly as it does any other business enterprise.

There has been very much "bunk" written about railroad corporations that should be dissolved by a dispassionate analysis of the question.

Elk Rapids Progress: That local option will again be voted on at the spring election was determined Friday afternoon when the board of supervisors unanimously voted to submit the question. The fight is on. Should the roads be such a condition that the voters can get to the polls in the rural precincts on the fifth day of next April there is no question of the outcome. The townships are overwhelmingly dry and the city is not as wet as some people think. There is not a man engaged in the traffic within the county but is telling his compatriots in doubt and grief that the "jig is up," and they may as well prepare to vamoose on May 1st.

THE PROBATE COURT RECORD

Summary of the Probate Court Proceedings for County of Charlevoix for the Year 1914

Seventy-eight estates have been probated during the year.

Twelve have been closed and the estates assigned to the persons entitled thereto.

Thirteen children without parents or persons liable for their support have been placed in homes; five of them having been adopted; others are on trial.

Two children have been sent to Ann Arbor for medical treatment or surgical operation under Act No. 274 of the Public Acts of 1913.

There have been thirteen commitments to Traverse City State Hospital during the year 1914 by the probate court of this county. Two of them, however, were not legal residents of Charlevoix county, they were here for temporary purposes; because insane and were sent to that institution for treatment by this court at the expense of the county of which they were legal residents. Of the persons sent to Traverse City during the year, three have recovered and been allowed to return to their homes.

The Juvenile Division of Said Court

Twenty-four children under 17 years of age, and with one exception above 14 years of age have been brought before the court during the year 1914.

They were sent to the Industrial School at Lansing, and one was sent to Adrian, Michigan. The others were placed on probation and allowed to return to their homes with the admonition not to offend.

Those placed on probation have not returned to the court for violation of their probation or for new charges except in three cases.

While at Adrian attending the Sunday School convention in October last, I took advantage of the opportunity to visit the Industrial School for girls.

I had heard some reflections on the management of that home that were not creditable and I confess that I was sending girls there very reluctantly. I now say that the charges made against the manner of conducting that home are untrue.

Mrs. Mary C. Johnson the Superintendent of the home is a lady of culture and refinement. In addition to that she is one of those forceful characters whose influence is felt in every department of the work. A lady of superior mental ability, combining firmness with tendereness and sympathy, for the unfortunates under her care.

I wish to add to this that I visited the various wards of the home and met the manager of each ward, and several of the teachers, and they were all competent, efficient persons.

I came away feeling that I had been more than repaid for my effort to make the visit and I will have no misgivings in sending girls to that home in the future when the necessity exists.

Servetus A. Correll,
Judge of Probate.

LIST OF JURORS FOR THE FEBRUARY TERM OF CIRCUIT COURT

Matt Allen	Eveline Township
Ira Bennett	Hayes Township
Harry Dutcher	Hudson Township
George Ager	Marion Township
Joseph Shirk	Melrose Township
Thomas Cummings	Norwood Township
Barney McCafferty	Peaine Township
Herman Fellows	St. James Township
Moses Lalonde	South Arm Township
Ira F. Davis	Wilson Township
Ralph Starmer	Bay Township
W. J. Gamble	Boyne Valley Township
Edward Sage	Chandler Township
John Martin	Charlevoix Township
Dell Mitchell	Boyne City 1st Ward
E. Fountain	Boyne City 2nd Ward
Wm. J. Thompson	Boyne City 3rd Ward
Roy Scott	Boyne City 4th Ward
Eugene Jackson	Charlevoix 1st Ward
John Macey Jr.	Charlevoix 2nd Ward
H. Waldfogel	Charlevoix 3rd Ward
Thos. Passenger	East Jordan 1st Ward
Fred Bismott	East Jordan 2nd Ward
A. W. Stewart	East Jordan 3rd Ward

COUNTY CONVENTION

Notice is hereby given that the republican county convention will be held in the city of Boyne City on the 5th day of February, 1915, at one o'clock p. m. for the purpose of selecting eleven delegates to attend the republican state convention appointed to be held in the city of Grand Rapids on the 12th day of February, 1915.

Each township and ward is entitled to the following number of delegates:

Bay township, 2; Boyne Township, 3; Chandler township, 1; Charlevoix township, 1; Evangeline township, 1; Eveline township, 1; Hayes township, 2; Hudson township, 1; Marion township, 2; Melrose township, 3; Norwood township, 1; Peaine township, 1; St. James township, 2; South Arm township, 3; Wilson township, 3; City of Boyne City: first ward, 4; second ward, 4; third ward, 7; fourth ward, 6; Charlevoix, first ward, 2; second ward, 3; third ward, 4; East Jordan, first ward, 2; second ward, 3; third ward, 3.

Wm. J. Pearson, Chairman.
Will H. Griffin, Secretary.

GREAT BRITAIN AND THE DACIA

In this controversy between the governments of the United States and Great Britain involving the right of the latter in search the Dacia, which has been granted a clearance for a German port, with a cargo of cotton, the Britisgh are right, when the underground channels of the transaction are known.

The Dacia was formerly a Hamburg-American vessel. She was "bought" by Bristung, a Michigan upper peninsula German for one dollar. She is as much a German vessel today as she ever was, but Bristung, who has large copper holdings, wants to use Uncle Sam as a catspaw in getting the Dacia through with her cargo, under U. S. protection, thereby putting Great Britain upon record with a precedent.

The merit of the occasion is that the Washington democratic government must have an anchor out to windward for the 1916 German vote. There is lousy politics involved in the transaction and it is not so far afar all.

Great Britain is right in her contention that she has a right to search the Dacia, and the best thing that Mr. Bryan can do is to gracefully yield the point.

BILL TO PENSION TEACHERS

Governor is Favorable for Its Passage Says that the Measure Should Be Adopted

Gov. Ferris will sign a bill providing for a pension for school teachers if the present legislature seen fit to pass such a law. The governor says he is not entirely familiar with the provisions of the bill to be introduced by Senator Verdier, of Grand Rapids, providing for the pensioning of school teachers and he did not wait to express an opinion at this particular bill.

"On the whole, however, I am opposed to pensions of any kind except to men who have served in the army and their widows when necessity requires," said Gov. Ferris. "The system of pensioning teachers is simply a means of inforcing an obligation that should be discharged today. It is somewhat along the line of buying a set of books and paying at the rate of 10 cents a day for a number of years. The book agent will tell you that you will never miss the money.

"I would like to see the salaries of competent school teachers advanced so that they would be able to save enough to take care of themselves when they are incapacitated for active service."

An attempt was made to secure the passage of a teachers' pension bill at the last session of the legislature, but it was unsuccessful.

It is believed that the teachers' pension bill could be passed easily if a referendum clause be attached, but those who backed the bill in the legislature two years ago were anxious that the legislature should settle the question without submitting it for the approval of the voters of the entire state.

There seems to be no sentiment in the legislature for the teachers' pension bill that was exhibited two years ago and its sponsors are of the opinion that the measure stands an excellent chance of passage.

Traverse City Record-Eagle: Louis H. Conger, secretary of the West Michigan Fire Association, expected to be in Tra

The PSYCHOLOGY of MASS FORMATION

WITH NIKOLA TESLA

WHEN I was a boy and chance or an unavoidable predicament made it necessary for me to walk around a yard after dusk of an evening, I began reciting a long poem over and continued until my lips were as silent—or walked a mile out of my way to get well around it.

But even with all my whistling in a broken attempt to feel a recent courage, my legs nevertheless were pretty wobbly and my knees shine—not of the showering stars. My heart, too, ungainfully budded up in a comet tail with its strike, so that there wasn't much blood in circulation to keep me warm, and quite as a matter of course I got "cold feet."

In the nervous tension my scalp contracted so that my hair fell as if it was an assembly of porcupine needles, goose flesh writhed in creepy lines over my body while my spine seemed like nothing so much as an animated icicle and my nerves were rasped by the demon of fear, for, mind you, every one of those disembodied gentlemen was a potential ghost that might at any instant raise its uncanny arms and weep awesomely over and claim me for its own.

Did you ever pass a graveyard at night when alone? And didn't you feel just about that way when you did?

Much as I might wish to be a boy again, I should not ever care to have to pass a graveyard at night—alone.

There has been so much said and written pro and con in discussing the tactics of the Germans in sending their forces at the enemy in what is known as the "mass formation" that it seems as if little could be added to the argument.

But there is a phase of this tactic, a policy that so far has not been presented, not to my knowledge, at least.

It is a simple phase of the question that has to do with the element of human nature, the mental process of the mass, as disclosed by the individual as its unit.

Why is it that the man who quakes with fear at the approach of an impending battle quite often, as the records show, is the one who goes in at the charge with apparently the daredevil recklessness and disregard for danger that distinguished him among his comrades as the man unafraid or as being "crazy with the heat"—of battle?

However, before he attains to this degree of courage and composure—if he is to be stricken with battle fever he must have been divorced from his sense of fear by some process or association apart from his conscious control. Fear and the concrete evidence of bravery are seldom if ever combined in any hazardous undertaking, and especially in the case where the individual faces the enemy in hand-to-hand combat—in close, supported and alone.

And that brings us again to the weird and fearsome scenes that take form in the dreadful dark, along the silent and deserted road at the edge of the plot-haunted graveyard.

It is interesting, and not a little amusing, now that I and we are all pretty much alike in that respect, look back over the years and coolly analyze the mental attitude in which under the curtain of night I unceremiously approached, trembingly passed and thankfully left behind those harmless and sacred villages of the dead at the time I was an impressionable lad.

For you see, when fortune favored me with companions on the infrequent occasions of my nocturnal journey past the old graveyard, even if it were only a short one, I was not quick enough to recognize the possibilities of a ghost in a close abounded tombstone, my courage always retained enough stamina to carry me through the other three-sided-fencing obstacle—without having to resort to the expedient of whistling myself out of breath, at any rate.

There might be prowling ghosts over there in the lowering dark of the somber aisles running through the shrine and the weeping willows—but what fellow should be afraid of ghosts with a faithful comrade treading close at his side?

However, on occasions when there was a company of us, four or six or more boys, that walked together along the graveyard road, why, there just simply were no ghosts at all.

But if one of us had, by some fortuity become separated from the main body and suddenly realized that he was stark alone among the monumental possibilities of his ominous surroundings, his false keyed bravado would instantly have lost its grip and hit bottom with a plump.

The chances are, as a matter of fact, that he would have been "scared stiff" enough to get out of his tracks—for the moment, at least. And, quite unblushingly, I am assuming that that boy must have been myself.

And, as for any of us to have ventured in the circumstances to go in there alone—quite unthinkable, I assure you.

But what, you are asking, has all this to do with the question of the German general war staff's tactics when storming a fortress or charging the battle line in sending their troops at the enemy in close order or extended order, where the chances of or opportunities for detection would be minimized, and where, too, such action would be likely to occur, because the individual is deprived of the moral support and psychological encouragement of close-touching comrades to spur him on.

It is in the countenance of this element in human nature, which is concrete rather than abstract that the German commanders show their fine understanding of this phenomenon of temperamental idiosyncrasy, the mental activities, if you please of the soldier facing the enemy, for, after all, the soldier is only the average citizen in uniform.

And this particular attitude of the soldier is the story, all over again, of the boy and the dark and the graveyard road. Alone and unsupported, he is the victim of fear. Touching elbows with fellow comparisons, the sense of fear either is momentarily allayed, or shame prevents an open display of it. Almost any man would accept the challenge of the risk in such environment rather than be called a coward by his comrades—or to be shot as such by a watchful officer.

It is the understanding of this fact, for it is a fact, not a theory, that justifies and possibly compensates the Germans in their tactics of charging the enemy en masse.

And then, too, the military experts, and even the men themselves, know that with the great advances made both in offensive and defensive means in modern warfare, the individual units of masses rather than by the individual as the unit. When a certain objective is aimed at, the commanders, having millions of men in hand and more in reserve, coolly calculate the number of many one to reach it, and to do so but men in solid masses at the enemy with the purpose of breaking him by sheer weight of numbers.

The battle value of the individual as developed in wars of the past, when massed, bayonet and saber were prominent factors, is largely lost in the face of ultra-modern machinery devised to wholesale killing, which demands the cooperation of masses rather than the distinguishing attributes of the individual. Such machinery makes for barbarism and brutal slaughter rather than civilized warfare, if war was to be waged. Civilized warfare, but in this day of a blood-red continent it is a part of the game, and we must conform accept it.—New York Press.

BATTLE WITH A JELLYFISH

G. H. Wilson lies at the Cottage hospital in a critical condition from an thrilling and amusing encounter as he and over taken made here. He had a life-and-death struggle with a huge jellyfish. Four hundred feet from the shore, off Serena, Wilson was suddenly attacked.

He was before him what he says looked like a great sheet of butter and eggs. Suddenly strips of yellow ribbons were thrown around him, and while began to separate from the mass and extend toward him. He turned to swim out of reach when the creature threw its tentacles about him and the mad fight was on. In the struggle Wilson took the mass into fragments, but reached shore exhausted, and his face and shoulders stinging as though from scalds. His pain at times was so intense that morphine had to be administered. He about 10 days more unnoticed.—Santa Barbara (Cal.) Dispatch to Los Angeles Times.

Wasting Wealth.

The United States produces about forty per cent of the total coal output of the world, writes George H. Cushing in the Technical World Magazine. There are 17 separate commercial products made from coal, and practically all of these are allowed in America to go up in smoke and are imported from Europe.

For example, all the aniline dyes are byproducts of coal, yet scarcely any of these are made in this country, and all our big cities "hitch their vats of gorgeous colors into the air daily." Cushing oil is another such product that goes to waste in smoke and is then imported.

His Somnolent Periods.

Anxious Mother—But, dear, when do you find time to sleep?

Daughter—Oh, I'm taking four lectures.—Cornell Widow.

Poor Yet Making Rich

By REV. L. W. GOSNELL, Assistant to the Dean, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

TEXT—As poor, yet making many rich.—II Cor. 6:10.

On Christmastide a certain Christian worker was troubled because he could not make many gifts. His poverty distressed him, until God began thrumming his heart to the words of the text: "As poor, yet making many rich." He forgot his poverty and began to understand the joy of the apostle, who had learned "to suffer need."

1. Paul enriched the world by his life. All his preaching was enforced by his testimony: "I live yet not but Christ liveth in me." Spurgeon comments on the wondrous power of George Whitfield's preaching, "It was simple, but the hearer felt that here was a man dealing with realities of which he knew. The bishop of Durham tells of a university preacher at Cambridge who generally spoke to empty benches, yet when the students were sick or dying they would send for this man; his life was fragrant.

What an opportunity for the humble! Hundreds of the notable scientists, statesmen, physicians, business men leaders have taken humble Christian homes whose godly atmosphere they have carried with all their activities. Many a plain father or mother will wear a crown of rejoicing in the ages to come because of the spiritual influence of their saintly living before their children.

2. His prayers were another source of Paul's riches for "a word" we may say without straining language that he prayed "without ceasing," and we may believe him. Says Dr. John P. Mott: "It is possible for the most obscure person in a church with a heart right toward God, to exercise as much power for the evangelization of the world as it is for those who stand in the most prominent positions. Therefore no one is excused if he commits the great sin of omitting to pray." We can make missionaries of our pastors, our church, and our own church and community, too, no matter how poor we may be. Dr. Campbell Morgan tells of a preacher who would go from pew to pew in his church on weekdays and pray for those who sat there on Sunday! Are riches are not the only riches that this is perhaps the highest service that even a great preacher could do for his flock.

3. His writings are one of Paul's gifts to the world. What a heritage are his epistles! We know how "philanthropy" was to William H. Vanderbilt! We know how Paul's epistles have blessed by a tinker in fall. If we object that this tinker had unusual genius, it may be replied that many ordinary persons, with love for Christ in their souls, have left behind them a few pages of spiritual riches, which have blessed the world by their influence.

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home.

Little did they think of their audience in the kitchen of the ship yonder, but the song followed the steerage and sailor lad over the high seas until he had found the true "Shelter from the stormy blast."

A soul in which Christ lives scatters light and blessing everywhere—"as poor, yet making many rich."

INDIAN TROOPS IN ACTION

Although mainly Mohammedan, the Indian army embraces men of the most varying religions, sects and races. Its normal strength in round figures is 160,000 men, but this does not include (about) 20,000 imperial service troops, 30,000 reserves and 35,000 volunteers.

The officers, of course, are British, but every regiment has its native officers, known respectively as jemadars, subadders and jemidars. A risaldar is the native commander of a troop of cavalry, while the subadder and jemidar rank respectively as captain and lieutenant—among themselves, that is, for in no circumstance does a native captain exercise any command over a British lieutenant. The Indian soldiers whose names are most familiar to the British public are the Sikh, the Rajput, the Gurkha and the Pathan.

It was the Sikh, of course, who put up such a tremendous fight against England years ago, but who, once conquered, has ever since proved the loyalest of the loyal. Originally of Hindu origin, the Sikhs as a religious sect were founded by Nanak Shah in the fifteenth century, and reached the zenith of their military and political power under the famous Ranjit Singh (1780-1839). The Sikh is not here a fighter, but is admitted or selected as one when he reaches early manhood, from which date he never cuts his hair, and always wears an iron bangle on his wrist. In their religion the Sikhs are forbidden to use tobacco in any shape or form. Equally at home in the saddle or on foot, the Sikh is a magnificent specimen of a man, and an awe-inspiring figure with his big beard, and great mustache curled up behind his ears.

"Rajput" means literally, "son of a king," and the Rajputs are an intensely proud, reserved and silent race. They are the world's finest horseman, bar none, though they do not disdain to serve in infantry regiments. They are very tall, upstanding men of magnificent "presence" and haughty demeanor, for they never forget or allow the spectator to forget that they are of royal blood. Inside his turban the Rajput carries a steel circlet with sharp edges, and this he can hurl or throw with such deadly accuracy and force as to decapitate an enemy many yards distance.

Kipling was made as familiar with the Gurkha, who is "blood-brother" to the Highlanders, and the most cheerfully bloodthirsty devil on fighting. The Nepaul descent shows itself in his broad, flat features and squat frame, and the contrast between him and the lordly Sikh or Rajput is comical in the extreme.

For example, all the aniline dyes are byproducts of coal, yet scarcely any of these are made in this country, and all our big cities "hitch their vats of gorgeous colors into the air daily." Cushing oil is another such product that goes to waste in smoke and is then imported.

His Somnolent Periods.

Anxious Mother—But, dear, when do you find time to sleep?

Daughter—Oh, I'm taking four lectures.—Cornell Widow.

NOT A MERE POETIC MYTH

Abundant Proof of the Existence of Women Warriors Known as Amazons.

For a long time it was held that the story of the Amazons, the valiant race of woman warriors, so great a favorite with the Greeks and other people of antiquity, was a mere poetic myth, but within recent years archeological researches have indicated that there did indeed remain fighters of high rank in those remote days.

A couple of years ago there was unearthed a sepulcher in that part of Italy known as Etruria, in which was discovered a war chariot of bronze and iron, wheels was crouched the skeleton of a woman. About this skeleton were the remains of rich robes and ornaments of gold and ivory, such as, in the old traditions, the Amazons wore in battle. The bronze work and the terra cotta vases bore the date of the tomb as about 500 B. C.

The first stories of the Amazons as signed them to the northeastern part of Asia Minor, but Etruria was peopled from Asia Minor and had attained a high degree of skill in castings and arts long before Rome was founded. Such evidence as this tomb affords is, in the opinion of more than one authority, more convincing than the pictures of Amazons on the old vases, or such legend as that of Queen Penetheslia, who was said to have led 1,000 woman fighters to the aid of Priam during the Trojan war.

Mount of Olives.

The Mount of Olives has seen some remarkable happenings and appearently it is to see others. Now that a military wireless station has been installed on its almost treeless top some persons say say that it has been desecrated, thinking it should not be made subject to modern inventions, especially those used in war, but should be left as nearly as possible as it was in the days of Christ. Modern war, like ancient war, brought in no respect of sacred places. Less than a half century after Christ was seen on the earth for the last time a Roman general who cut all the trees on the top of the Mount of Olives and here have been no trees since, trees there stove, which may have made the work of installing the wireless plant less difficult.

Why We Need More Calcium.

Science now assures that we ought to make calcium one of the ingredients of bread in order to give our bodies more of this mineral element. Unless we eat an abundance of milk and vegetables most of us do not get a sufficient amount of calcium, particularly if we take our carbon dioxide in the form of bread, potatoes and beans. Hardening of the arteries and a number of other modern diseases are thought to be due to an insufficient amount of calcium in the diet. To make the bread, it is proposed to use in breadmaking a preparation composed of rye flour and calcium chloride.

Hired Up.

Mrs Crawford—What makes you think that she knows her husband thoroughly?

Mrs. Crabshaw—Because she can tell exactly how much money to take out of his pocket without his missing it.—Judge.

The Better Proof.

Casey—Dooley offered to prove to me that I was a fool last night.

Casey—Oi proved it to him in black an' blue that he was a liar.

Sure Method.

Employer—Did you put that note where it will be sure to attract the foreman's attention when he comes in?

Office boy—Yes, sir. I stuck a pin through it and put it on his chair.

A Prophet Without Honor.

Mrs. Flubdub—I'm afraid it's going to rain today.

Mr. Flubdub—Oh, I think not. I just saw the weather man going down the street with an umbrella.—Judge.

Looking.

Friend—What are you doing for a job?

Another—Looking for one.—Judge.

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put it another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

Titus' Sack of Jerusalem.

The Emperor Titus was received one of the greatest soldiers ever produced by Rome, and for his almost miraculous slaughter he was entitled "the Joy of the World." In the year 70 Titus made Jerusalem a charnel house. It is estimated that during the siege he killed 2,500,000 Jews. Finally the living behind the walls of Jerusalem became so weak they could no longer throw their dead over the walls and then Titus marched in with his victorious legions. When the sack of Titus had killed every man, woman and child in the city, the victors actually waded ankle deep in blood in the gutters.

Accidental Hexameter.

Among the Latin verses of Gilbey's other claims to notice may be counted the hexameter which he drew from the firm responsible for what is surely one of the best hexameters in the English language. It is, or used to be, found printed in very small type at the foot of the label on every bottle of Gilbey's port wine, and runs as follows:

"Bottled in brilliant condition, but care must be used in decanting."

The accent, rhythm, and beat alliteration of this would be hard to beat. Try it music, of course, be purely accidental.—Manchester Guardian.

Good Advice.

Bacon—I see it said that many persons are apt to remain too long in a cold bath, and care should be taken to avoid this mistake, which has a debilitating effect if indulged in often.

Egbert—If you happen to break through the ice this winter, remember that. Don't stay in too long.

Competition.

"My uncle Bill's down to Panama!" bragged little Harry.

"Sho! That's nothin'," retorted little Billy. "My brother Jim's been to Australia!"

"Well, what if he has? My father's gone to Egypt!" said little Harry.

"Pooh!" ejaculated little Billy. "My grandmother's gone to heaven!"—Judge.

An Irishman's Delight.

Casey—Oi don't see what th' powers do be arraigin' for, anyway.

O'Brien—Yes don't eh? Then begorra, you're a good specimin' av an Orishman.

Exit Father.

Little Girl—My father says he has gone into politics.

Pleased Actress—What did he say he was to act in, dear?

Little Girl—In the '70's.—Puck.

Heard at the Concert.

"She sings with a good deal of expression, doesn't she?"

"Yes, she does, but it's the kind of expression you must learn to give your voice to appreciate."

Consider the cobbler, who thinks it is never too late to mend.

Good Living Possible

—even in hard times, by a little care in the choice of foods.

One's diet can be simplified and made more healthful by cutting down on high-priced meats, and adding a liberal ration of the delicious wheat and barley food—

Grape-Nuts

This means both good nourishment and wise economy.

Grape-Nuts contains all the nutriment of these splendid grains, including an abundance of Nature's vital phosphates — all in concentrated, but easily digestible form.

Grape-Nuts furnishes rich nourishment. Ready to eat from the package with cream or milk. Crisp, sweet and appetizing!

There's a way to live well, and

"There's a Reason"

IN AFRICA'S WILDS

By H. M. EGBERT.

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.)

"Mlungu!" said Roberts' native boy, pointing to the faint vague trail that lay among the burned grass, and Roberts understood. The word means "white man" and is in universal use throughout a wide region of Africa.

There was a wagon, and there were four oxen. As nobody starts into the jungle with less than eight oxen Roberts' surmised that the other animals had been eaten by lions. If this were the case, the explorer, or whoever he was, was having a hard time of it. The oxen had lain down repeatedly—and it was 290 miles to the nearest settlement.

Roberts pushed on for two days and nights and on the third morning he came upon the white man's camp.

The camp fire had gone out. The natives had deserted, driving away the oxen with them. The explorer lay on his back, unconscious, on the straw mat, one in the abandoned wagon, delirious and apparently dying. It was Westoby.

Westoby was the last man Roberts had expected to find in Africa. He had left England a year before, when pretty Mary Joyce, in a fit of pique, threw him over, and he almost starved. Westoby had been announced just before Roberts sailed to hunt lions and buffalo in the jungle.

Roberts swamped, and for eight days he fought the fever devil that was grinding down Westoby's constitution. On the ninth day he felt sure that Westoby would die. He only 50 paces beyond him.

When would Westoby live? Roberts had quite still. He felt sure that Westoby would make him. And Westoby was delaying—perhaps he wanted to see Roberts come back.

He opened his eyes feebly and recognized Roberts.

"Hello, old man!" he said, stretching out one limp hand.

Roberts took the hand and for five days more nursed Westoby back to life. Often the man raved in delirium and whispered Mary's name. At such times Roberts resolutely closed his ears, but he could not shut out the image.

Suddenly Saw a Sight That Completely Unnerved Him.

Finally the day came when Westoby was well enough to sit up. They had fortified upon every logic but the one which was vital to both of them. But the time could not be delayed no longer. And so they dropped into the discussion simultaneously, for one of those silences which fell constantly between them.

"How did you leave Mary?" Westoby inquired.

"Very well," said Westoby. "She often speaks of you, Roberts. You were old friends."

"Yes," answered Roberts, resolutely. He had learned all he wanted to know. Westoby was a liar and a coward. There was no more to ask.

"Why, I'm a lucky fellow," said Westoby. "I'm alive, Roberts, and I'm a lucky fellow."

Why had he not died? Roberts asked himself the question. He had brought Westoby back to life, and Westoby was a liar and a coward. There was no more to ask.

Why had he not left Westoby to die? The damning thought occurred and recurred to him constantly. He had begun to hate Westoby more than ever. Westoby, now rapidly regaining strength and health. He would have to leave him before that insane impulse overwhelmed him.

He had never meant to return to England, but now, if Westoby died, why could he not go back and see Mary's love. That she and her husband had developed irreconcilable differences was sure, otherwise why should Westoby have left her after less than a year of marriage?

The two men said good-by and separated. Westoby was going to continue his hunting trip in the interior, he said. There was a native village a few miles away, where men could be purchased and fresh servants hired. Roberts announced his plan of returning to the coast. He had grown tired of the country. In truth, he felt that Mary's spiritual presence there, reflected through Westoby, made Africa impossible.

Without emotion, with a final handclasp, Roberts took away beside the wagon, his native boy upon the seat behind the driver. Twice he looked at the rise Roberts looked back. Westoby was sitting upon his horse, looking after him with a peculiar expression. It looked almost malignant to Roberts. He wondered why Westoby had so changed his own hostility to ward him.

They drove all night. Roberts was anxious to put as many miles as possible between Westoby and himself. At dawn, sleepless, Roberts unharnessed and taking his shotgun went down to the stream in the bottom of a ravine and some guineas fowl for breakfast.

He had heard a lion roaring as he rode that night, but far away. Toward dawn the sounds seemed to draw nearer, then they ceased abruptly. Roberts surmised that the beast was stalking an antelope, but he paid no further thought to the matter. Lions were cowardly beasts, and unless driven by hunger rarely attacked a man, and never in the open.

He shot a guinea fowl and was resting upon the bank waiting for the sun to rise before returning to camp. Suddenly, as he sat there, he saw a sight that completely unnerved him.

Five hundred yards away, flat on his stomach, visible only by reason of the dark spot that he made against the yellow grass, was Westoby. Westoby, stalking Roberts, covering him with his rifle and worming his way toward him.

Roberts was paralyzed with horror. It was not fear of death; a hit at that distance was unlikely, and it could be easy enough to dodge into the bush and make for camp, where he had a rifle. But Westoby wanted to kill him—and something wanted to kill Westoby.

Two hundred paces behind Westoby an enormous lion crouched on his belly. It, too, was worming its way through the grass, hardly perceptibly except to Roberts trained eyes. And in two minutes it would be near enough to springs.

Roberts sat and watched in fascination unable to do a single thing for Westoby first." When he reached the top of that little knoll, no doubt, but the end would be upon him.

It seemed as though fate had both men in the balance and was weighing them; and, with a grim sense of humanity, Roberts waited to see what Westoby would do.

Westoby was within 400 yards now, within 300 yards, 200 paces. Westoby was nearing the knoll. Suddenly the lion crawled a little forward, his belly almost hidden by the grass. Roberts could see the tip of his tail enaying slightly as it advanced.

Westoby had reached the knoll and now lay still, his rifle before him. Roberts. The lion was only 50 paces behind him.

When would Westoby fire? Roberts sat quite still. He felt sure that Westoby would make him. And Westoby was delaying—perhaps he wanted to see Roberts come back.

Roberts saw the lion rise and crouch for the spring. He saw the lion's mouth open and the fangs show white against the dark red of the mouth disappeared, as they were no longer used after he had left the plains in the west.

"Thrift, Thrift, Horatio."

In a certain New England village there is a spinster lady who has the little old lady who kept the village store used to do up small parcels in the leaves of Bibles, left by representatives of tract and Bible societies. She kept the sacred volume back of the counter, and tore off one leaf after another as purchases were made. One night, business was pretty brisk and the leaves of the fat Bible were torn off with more than usual rapidity. "Dear me! Dear me!" gasped the thrifty soul as she hastily tore off another leaf from the Potatoes for a hurried customer. "Sometimes I'll have to be getting another Bible pretty quick. They're thick, but they don't go far that way when it comes to potatoes."

Italian Cigar-Lighter.

In a country village in Italy, Popular Mechanics tells us, we may see a slowly burning piece of rope supported on an iron stake. Its position is outside a cigar store and when the use the smoker is to make of it. It is a crude cigar lighter, but certainly as suitable as the wooden Indian still used as a sign for a tobacco store.

An Exception.

"This country is sadly backward in conserving her natural resources."

"For the most part, I have to acknowledge that she takes precious good care of her baseball talent."

Variety of Styles in Afternoon Gowns

THERE "is a greater variety of styles than ever before launched into the taste of the individual in afternoon gowns than in others. Something this uniformity is evidenced in costumes for the street; women confine their choice to dresses of the kind to one of a nail-down (or even fewer) accepted styles. But in the afternoon gown they are inclined to run after strange gods. However, there are methods of suppression and conservative styles, it seems, and a genuine simplicity is an apparent governing idea in a great many of the new modes. But afternoon gowns are apt to be measured by any rule, and there is no harm in repeating that the individual may follow her own sweet will in selecting the styles that please her most.

A radical departure from accepted styles was evident in the afternoon dress pictured here, when it first appeared, it was one of the sensations of Kurzman, for the display of American designs, at New York. Among many lovely things it was admired and praised, but was so different in outline from preceding modes that it became something of a sensation.

It is clearly set forth in the picture and so plain that it hardly needs description. It is made of crepe silk, a pale green, flaring skirt and an equally pale green bodice. The sleeves are short, with turned-back cuffs of the material, and a fichu matches the neck. There is no frill or fall of lace, no girdle, no embroidery or other ornamentation. It is almost austere and is saved by its quaintness and picturesque attributes. Since the advent of this gown doubts as to the coming of the wide rippled skirt have disappeared; it no longer looks unusual.

Hairdress Without Waves or Curls

WITH the earliest hats for spring, or with some of them, there is no mention of coiffures which require any extra size in the crown of head dress. For the new ventures in millinery are even smaller than the small hats worn this winter. Many of them are merely a narrow band of satin or straw encircling like a bandeau about the head, supporting a scant crown of satin arranged in to the band at the edge, ready of trimming, exquisitely made flowers are sewed flat to the band. There are callors and other shapes that fit as closely.

For such close-fitting headwear the problem is that of disposing of the average quantity of natural hair, so that it will not interfere with the fit of the hat, and also to provide a few waves in the locks about the face to soften the overall effect. This is not the plain, the pale coiffure shown in the picture given here offers a solution that is attractive. It is becoming to most faces and easy to accomplish. The hair is parted off about the face and combed forward, where it is to be coiled and pinned to keep it out of the way, while the back hair is dressed. It forms a sufficient quantity of hair to braid into two soft full plaits it may be managed as shown in the picture. The plaits are pinned flat across the back of the head below the crown. The front hair is to be parted either in the middle or a little to one side and rolled back from the face. The ends are twisted and concealed under the back hair. With the toilet comes a facsimile of the half about the face are pulled forward into loose waves and pinned with invisible pins into place. A liberal use of the hairpins will make the coiffure neat instead and as half nets are hardly practical for this particular style, the pins are a necessity.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Useless.

"Woman should dress as attractively for breakfast as they do at other meals," said a lecturer. "If they would keep the love of their husbands."

"What's the use?" spoke up a wife of experience. "Our husbands can't see an over the tops of their newspapers anyhow."

Why Beef Tea May Be Intoxicating.

Liverpool physicians are interested in the effect of a cerebellar salesman who shows every sign of alcoholic poisoning, although he is a teetotaler. His illness is ascribed to the excessive drinking of beef tea and other meat extracts, and the physicians believe that this indicates that nitrogenous stimulants have an effect on the system similar to that of alcohol.

Our Company.

The rapidity with which the human mind levels itself to the standard around it gives us the most pertinent warning as to the company we keep.—Lowell.

Corner for the Juniors

CORN-CLUB WORK OF VALUE

Increasing Interest and Enthusiasm in This Labor of Boys and Girls Which Does Much Good.

(By C. H. HUSSMAN.)

It is a well-established fact that both play and contest interests perform a very important part in the processes of education and have much to do in creating efficiency for man in the equation of social and industrial life.

The corn-club work is a very important factor in the economy of the farm in directing boys who live in rural districts in the business as a profitable and notable profession. The way in which the club work takes hold of a boy is quite remarkable, and from the enthusiasm created by the club work and contests, greater interest in farm life is sure to develop.

We need the boys for the present efficiency of the farm, and we must have their work, their leadership, and their influence for the future if American agricultural and rural interests are to endure and contribute as they should to human comfort and prosperity.

Boys' corn-club work should be constructive and permanent, and in order that it may be as the following lines of contest work are suggested to the club membership. These contests should offer some relaxation in the main line of work and should be practical and recreative as well as instructive. The following are a few of the clubs of corn-club contests:

1. To increase members' interest in corn in all of its important phases.

2. To secure better and more consequently better yields (all seed should be returned to the contributors)

3. To give industrial activity and practice to club members for the entire year.

4. To give members greater interest in club work through contests, play and contest methods.

5. To furnish profitable diversion to the boys during the otherwise idle hours of play time and vacation periods. "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure."

To stimulate interest in the contests the following premiums would be most suitable:

1. Free trips and expenses paid to district and state fairs, educational institutions and chautauqua, etc.

2. Top buggy, saddle, gold watch, automobile, etc.

3. Clear title to one or more acres of land (to encourage land ownership.)

4. Farm implements, tool equipments, etc.

5. Thoroughbred pigs, cattle, horses, mules, pens of chickens.

6. Club emblems, banners and pennants.

7. Manual training workbench, set of tools, camera, trunk, leather hand bag, writing desk, etc.

8. Poultry equipment, such as incubators, watering and feed troughs, brooders, fences and gates.

9. Free tuition to short courses in agricultural and mechanical colleges and regular courses in colleges.

10. Canvas tent, camp outfit, canoe, hunting equipment, baseball suit, suits of clothes.

11. Dictionary, encyclopedia, set of agricultural books, special club library, series of books of standard literature.

Two Corn-Club Boys Discussing Merits of Ears of Seed Corn.

12. Subscriptions to farm journals, magazines for special periodicals for boys.

Every premium offered for contests and club work should have for its main object the promotion and encouragement of the work. The premiums should represent the greatest good and interest of the corn-club membership; it must teach the broad viewpoints of the club work and encourage both members and leaders to be progressive and constructive in their work, and it should serve to increase the club members' interest and respect for farm life.

Real and Ideal.

An ideal serves us in proportion as there is reality in it. Many a young girl selects her ideal out of some romance, some heroine who has nothing in common with normal, healthy womanhood, and the result of such a choice is manifestly unfortunate. The best ideal for a girl to cherish is some maiden who is principally memorable for nothing warmer than the tint ink in her veins, but a girl of flesh and blood, strong to resist temptation, and brave to meet trouble.—Girl's Companion.

She Was Not to Blame.

Mrs. A.—Do your son's marks from college?

Mrs. H.—Yes, and he has the strangest ideas. He says he's descended from a monkey, but I'm sure I don't see how that can be—unless, of course, it's his father's side.—California Pelican.

Lure of the Towns.

The improvement in schools, churches, roads, telephone service, library, social life and industrial convenience of the rural sections means that the boys and girls of the farms will soon cease to feel the lure of the towns.

PLAY FOOTBALL ON A TABLE

Regular Rules Govern Game and Scores Is Also Kept—Old and Young Enjoy Pastime.

One of the funniest and most amusing games imaginable is that of playing football with an egghell. Imagine it! But frail as the new kind of football is, it is rarely broken if the rules of the game are observed in. This is most surprising, too, because the rules of the game are pretty much the same as those used on the real grid iron. There is a difference in numbers, however, for the players are limited to as many as can get about the table, or more and no less, and anyone taking into consideration the size of the table. A rule which will delight the feminine side of the house is that which admits girls as well as boys to the game.

Make the football by making a tiny hole in each end of the shell and blowing out the contents, and then mark boundaries on the table field with tape or chalk having two ends of the table for goals. Each side elects a captain who then ties his team to a given signal both sides or teams begin to blow upon the egghell that has been placed in the center of the field. Side kicks, of course, to blow the egg toward his goal. No player must leave his place and it is a most rigid rule that no player may touch the ball in any way than blowing. For so doing a player is sent from the field as being actual game. Regular football rules are used, and the score is kept as in a game of football, the two teams should have a name, either ridiculous or not, as the case may be, as colleges or schools. This always adds interest to the contest. Old and young alike can enjoy the game, especially if they understand football tactics and rules.

WINTER NOVELTY FOR BOYS

Folding Sled, Just Introduced, Is Strong, Simple in Construction and Cheap.

Doting parents looking for Christmas novelties and one which will interest those having boys to take care of will be pleased with the new folding sled which is just being introduced. It is strong, simple in construction, light in weight. Runners Fiera made of ¾-inch basswood spring steel, are in two pieces in length and are securely attached with corrugated clips bolted to the wood top and strengthened bolts. The top is of dry hardwood, 24 inches long, 11½ inches wide and 7½ inches thick.

Sled Which Folds Flat.

MONEY MADE IN WAR KITES

Ohio Boy Makes Toys Armed With Glass to Destroy Enemy's Material in Careful Sketches.

In a little attic workshop in Cleveland a twelve-year-old boy spends his hours turning out big, ferocious-looking "war" kites, which he sells to his playmates, says an exchange.

The boy is Robert Jenney, a seventh grade pupil. Stuart caught the war craze from his father, who is of the opinion that the European powers had declared hostilities.

For several years he has been the most skillful kite maker of his district and has sold many kites due to the fame of her relatives says. "Let's go out to the ball park this afternoon and coast Kitty's bunchard."

Showing Goods.

Redd—For a Philadelphia traveling salesman there has been built an automobile with a body composed of a series of shelves and pigeonholes for samples which unfolds and makes an extensive display.

Greene—If it turns turtle I should say it would make an extraordinary display.

Going Up.

Church—German naturalists are interesting in the fact that the rare habits of that country seem to be changing. Instead of burrowing underground they are building their nests above ground instead of in burrows.

Gotham—Everything seems to be going up.

College Changes.

Bill—What's become of your college coach? Have you lost him?

Jill—Oh, no, indeed.

Why, I haven't seen him at a football game this season."

Bill—Oh, he's now coaching the boys in the tango and hesitation, now."

No Escape.

"Great Britain is ruling her women."

"They ought to do double execution."

"How so?"

"They'll use both face powder and gunpowder."

Their Worth.

"Well, they're all centsible.

And the married man who preaches economy usually wants his wife to do all the practicing.

Any woman can dress in ten minutes if given an hour to fix her hair.

IS CHILD CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, tongue fills with coat, and your child becomes fretful, peevish, cross, sleepy or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomachache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Appears as Counsel for Husband.

Mrs. Emma Nelson appeared before Judge Ryan as counsel for her husband, George Nelson. She was the lawyer and received a "fee" of $1.10 from the judge. Nelson and five others were arrested in a raid on a dice game. All but Nelson were fined one dollar each, the costs of three dollars.

"My husband is a good man, and works steadily," Mrs. Nelson pleaded. "He's not a gambler."

"You are his wife, aren't you?" Judge Ryan said. "As a fee, Mrs. Nelson, you can have the dice."

The judge then handed Mrs. Nelson a box of which the dice game was raided.—Chicago Tribune.

Baiter's White Bonanza Oats.

Made C. J. Johnson of Lincoln Co., Okla., a profit of $1,000 from 15¾ bushels seed last spring. Can you beat that in 1917? Wow! Adv.

This great yield can be taken as more and larger than any other variety of oats. It is a remarkable yielder. Stalks thick, strong, stiff, not easily lodged. It's a remarkable drought resister. Matures early. Yields from 100 to 200 bushels per acre. Weighs 36 lbs. per bushel. Ripens with Early Ohio. Stalks thick, strong, stiff, not easily lodged. It's a remarkable drought resister. Matures early. Yields from 100 to 200 bushels per acre. Weighs 36 lbs. per bushel. Ripens with Early Ohio.

Pa., N. Y., Kansas and Missouri:

We are America's leadership in Alfalfa and Potatoes.

Timothy, Cl

Special For Sat. Jan. 30th.....

Ladies Dress Skirts Regular $5 00 grade. Made in the latest styles

$2.98

To close out the balance of our Ladies' Coats we offer them at

½ Price

Go to ··· LEVINSON'S ··· Get the Habit

THE GRANGE

Conducted by
J. W. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y.
Editor of the New York Grange Bulletin

THE GRANGE HALL.

An Indicator of Permanency and a Real Community Asset.

Is it too much to hope that every grange of fifty active members should own its own hall? I hardly think so. Many granges of less numbers have such a property, and some go into debt for it with the belief that such is a debt is a worthy incentive to labor and economy. In the first place, every grange needs a public meeting place. Some granges have one that some organized, under the circumstances with surround them, to meet in the homes of members, but no grange so meeting together can do its best work. It is largely limited in doing such work as it could if it had little standing to its community.

Viewed from the standpoint of money making or economy, it will be found that a well equipped grange hall is a money maker in almost any village where public meetings are frequently held. If there is no other public hall all the more reason why the grange should own one. I say "well equipped," and that is what every grange hall should be. It were better to have no hall than to have one furnished with articles contributed from the cast off furniture of some of its members, albeit this may not be without value, but it will be inharmonious and is sometimes exceedingly humorous. Buy furniture with the idea of its being permanently in use and decide as to whether you so decide or not, for it is extremely difficult to make a change after furniture is once placed, either from the standpoint of economy or mere convenience.

A substantial, well built, well furnished grange hall is a real asset in any community. Besides being a source of income, it is a source of pleasure not only to the grange, but to the community, and all will point to it with pride and look upon it as the center of things that pertain to neighborhood interests, where, under conditions prescribed by the grange, neighbors may meet in any approved capacity. In short, it is a civic center in fact and in name.

It goes without saying that a well equipped hall should be a well kept hall, and as such it will have a moral influence upon those who assemble in it and in fact upon the community where it is located. The moral influence of a clean floor and windows, well cared for curtains and rugs, the kitchen and cupboards, may seem little, but it is immeasurable. These things cannot be too much emphasized. They certainly cannot be overlooked by men and women who in their own homes give them proper attention.

As to the plan of a convenient grange hall, I shall say but little because circumstances will determine plans, and circumstances will differ widely. Probably the average grange hall has an assembly room for the meeting of the grange on the second floor. The hall will be fitted with a commodious stage or platform at one end. It will have necessary curtains and fixtures. At the other end will be the anterooms. Hence stairs there will be a hall commodious enough to be used for ordinary public purposes, for the rental of which reasonable sums should be asked. Adjoining this hall there will be a good sized kitchen, with cupboards, and it will be equipped with necessary utensils. Heat and ventilation will be well provided for throughout the building. It not inevitably the expense has not been considered in estimates the structure is ill built.

Halls should be well furnished, of all means desirable if according to the prescribed ceremony of the grange. It is discovered and learned by the executive set in which all members who have contributed to the erection of the hall will rejoice, and as these successes are often public, they will impress those outside your order, most favorably. In Ohio there was a grange of forty members and the site hall project was first discussed. A little less than four years passed and the hall was completed, and at its first meeting seventy new members were received. Its total membership is now over 100. This serves to show that outsiders are impressed by such substantial evidences of success in grange endeavor.

Since beginning this article I have run across the following paragraph relative to another grange in Ohio which so harmonizes with the thought I have tried to bring out that I reproduce it. The writer says:

"Since building our hall we have trebled our membership, and our hall is the community center for the whole neighborhood. We now have plenty of young people joining the grange and those being reinstated, and still others who had not been to grange meetings for years are coming regularly. Our hall is crowded to the doors at every monthly community meeting. In these meetings people other than grangers are invited to participate. They seem want to become members. The whole community now looks forward from one meeting to the next, expecting an enjoyable evening and nothing ill. To hold a grange hall together essentials are necessary—co-operation, tact and work.

J. W. DARROW

Origin of Humbug.

It is not generally known that the word "humbug" (long as much in vogue as of doubtful origin) originally was in some sense a coined word. Horace Bond of that ilk in Henry's time, a daughter of the family married a son of Hume of Hume. In process of time by default of male issue the Bogue estate devolved on one Geoffrey Hume, who was called popularly "Hume of the Bogue," or rather "Hum o' the Bog."

He was inclined to the marvelous and had a vast institution to exalt himself, his kin, their lineage and all his ancestors on both sides. His tales, however, did not pass current, and at last when any one made an extraordinary statement in the Norse, the hearer would sneer up his shoulders and style it just "a tale of the bog." This was shortened into humbug, and the word soon spread over the Whole Kingdom.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Safely First.

Prospective Father in law—You've got some nerve to ask me for a loan of money when you know I think you are a fortune hunter. The Count—Oh, no mossiur! I am one wan von Americaine call so "safety first" crank.—Puck.

MANY DISORDERS COME FROM THE LIVER

Are You Just at Odds With Yourself? Do You Regulate Living?

Are you sometimes at odds with yourself and with the world? Do you wonder what ails you? Then you may be eating regularly and sleeping well. Yet something is the matter! Constipation, Heedlessness, Nervousness and Bilious spells indicate a torpid liver. The tried remedy is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Use them at your risk. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for Skin Eruptions.

AMERICAN ARMY IN FINE HEALTH

No Peril In Holding Large Bodies of Men In Field.

FEVER MENACE IS REDUCED

Percentage of Disease Decreased 18 Per Cent in Past Year, Says Brigadier General Gorgas in His First Annual Report—Rate For Alcoholism Lower Than It Has Ever Been Before.

Washington.—In his first annual report as surgeon general of the United States army, Brigadier General William C. Gorgas says the time has come when the United States can be assured that it can maintain a state of hygiene comparable that will warrant the housing of large bodies of troops in the field indefinitely. Figures submitted by General Gorgas indicate that of all the armies in the world that of the United States is the healthiest.

The report further shows that the percentage of disease in the United States army is the lowest it has ever been and that since 1912 this rate has been decreased approximately 18 per cent in the United States proper, while the rate is also lower than at any period in modern wars it is a matter for justifiable pride to upon improved sanitary conditions.

The great reduction in the amount of preventable disease forecasts great economies to the government as practical application is developed. Up to comparatively recently the duties of medical officers were almost entirely confined to the care of the sick and wounded. In keeping with modern tendencies sanitarians have developed, and to their former duty is now added that of sanitary science with the application of preventive medicine in the field and garrison, the building and disposal of the sick and wounded in campaign and the various specialties of the civilian physician and surgeon. All this requires personnel and training unknown in past years. The medical corps is the only portion of the army not included in the plan of enlistment of the army instituted when Senator Root was secretary of war.

"It seems time that a comprehensive scheme was adopted to keep medical officers trained and abreast of the times in both civilian medicine military and strictly professional duties.

"For some years it has been necessary to constantly employ from ninety to [illegible] members of the medical corps with troops. In a de-militarized the medical corps be large enough to perform all the duties required in peace, and any reserve of trained medical officers be effected in other ways. In time of war there will be demands for medical officers that the corps will be unable to meet. A sufficient number to meet requirements in peace is the best preparation to meet the demands upon the medical department in mobilization and war."

© 1914, by American Press Association.

BRIGADIER GENERAL WILLIAM C. GORGAS.

MODERN ROAD BUILDING.

Plan by Which Each Step Takes Care of Present and Future.

Highway Improvement, like the growth of population, should be progressive, writes the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Each stage should be ample for the requirements of its period. This requirement fixes first the proper location, grading and drainage of the subgrade, which are essential to any good road. This subgrade can be used as an earth road during the years when traffic is light and can be kept in very serviceable condition by dragging after spring and fall rains at a cost of $30 a year per mile.

The second step is to make a gravel road when travel increases or funds become available by applying several inches of stone, crushed gravel, or dragging and rolling the earth road. This can be done in most places for a few hundred dollars a mile, and maintenance will cost about $100 a mile.

When the gravel road becomes overtaxed it forms an excellent foundation for a concrete surface. It is easy and cheap to loosen up the gravel and roll it to uniform consistency, then lay a coating of hydraulic concrete to carry heavy traffic. The surface consists from one to two inches of concrete, at a cost of approximately $1,00 a square yard, or about $5,000 a mile. The final step is to provide a road building when heavy teaming and motor trucking problems make it advisable to lay a course of vitrified brick or granite sets grouted with cement on a sand cushion on top of the concrete, or if part of the road should become a problem street or be set apart as a boulevard a quiet pavement of wood blocks, sheet asphalt or asphalt blocks can be laid on the concrete. This road plan, the chamber believes, provides for varying volumes and kinds of traffic over a century or more of use and involves no loss of investment in improvements that are expensive only to maintain and not essential as a foundation in the final type of highway.

Workers for the "very beautiful" never will reach their goal until they eliminate the decrepit old hornets and rickety waste rather boxes that decorate the sidewalks once a week.—Philadelphia Press.

AMELIA KAUEN, High School and Junior High School, Boyne City Schools. Republican Candidate for County School Commissioner at the March Primaries.

—WHY?—

Because—I hold the degree, Batchelor of Pedagogics from the Ypsilanti State Normal School.

Because—I hold a state life certificate from the Ypsilanti State Normal School.

Because—I am a Senior of the State University.

Because—I am a graduate of the Ferris Institute.

Because—I have taught 25 years in Charlevoix County Schools.

Because—I hold one of the most responsible positions in the Charlevoix County Schools.

Because—I am Master of Pine Lake Grange.

Because—I am a taxpayer.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

May I, Stewart, will be a candidate for commissionership of schools on the Republican ticket at the primaries on the third day of March, 1915. All support will be appreciated by a return service of persistant, honest labor. Adv.

Posters on Roads.

A public [illegible] to be compelled to see on his outside from the adjacent sinner. Whether fertilizer text or a whisky or patent medicine poster, it is an insult to the public. It is not an opinion only, it is a fact. Posters are a property. It is the right and duty of the road overseer to remove all of them. Posters are a nuisance. The following paragraph is taken from the editorial column of the Pittsburgh Gazette: "Posters are not to be tolerated along the country roads.—County Gentleman.

PETER BENSON
CONTRACTOR FOR
Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.
If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

C. DANTO & SON

THE STORE OF QUALITY

It does not cost any more to deal in a first-class store where there is courteous treatment and prompt delivery than it does to trade elsewhere.

Our competitors are wondering how we can sell so low—in order to show them that we can watch our

Specials for Saturday

in our meat department. We will sell

Choice Pot Roast of Beef
Rump Roast of Beef
Rib Roast of Beef
Short Ribs of Beef
Round Steak
Sirloin Steak
Porter House Steak
Hamburg Steak
Pork Spare Ribs

12½ C.

Fresh Dressed Chickens, Young Mutton. Choice Young Pig Pork. Fat Veal.

Try our Sweet Pickle Pork and Corned Beef. Tomato or Sage Sausage.
COME EARLY—FIRST COME! FIRST SERVED!

C. DANTO & SON,

Telephone No. 12—69. See Window Display. We give Trading Stamps.

—FOR—
Furniture, Stoves, Ranges, Carpets, Rugs, Comforts and Blankets
—Go to—
S. M. SEE & SONS,
The Reliable Housefurnishers.

FROM—
September 1885

Iron Duke Flour

TO—
January 1914

A Good Record.

Argo Milling Co.

MANUFACTURERS

It Will Pay You to Watch Blanchard's Bargain Counter

F. S. Blanchard Estate,
F. L. Bartholomew, Administrator.

Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix Homes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock, which consists of everything, such as Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Binds and Building Paper.

TELEPHONE NO. 22

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL

ESTABLISHED 1869.

The pioneer paper of the region between Traverse City and the straits

Nearly forty-five years under one editorial management, and has never missed an issue.

Challenges the closest scrutiny of its record for more than four decades

Has championed the cause of Northern Michigan in general and Charlevoix County in particular uninterruptedly since the days of Oxteams

The SENTINEL gives more reading matter weekly than any other paper in the county.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE SENTINEL

$1.50 per Year

First Publication December 31

MORTGAGE SALE

State of Michigan,
The Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, Michigan.
Jacobus Hoogland, Plaintiff,
vs.
Lee Hoogland, Defendant.
Charlevoix County, ss. To Lee Hoogland, Defendant and all who may remain:
Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Jacobus Hoogland to Lee Hoogland, dated the 6th day of November, A. D. 1908, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan, on the 13th day of November, A. D. 1908, in Liber 40 of mortgages on page 1, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Three Hundred Twenty-Five Dollars and Ninety Cents ($325.90) principal and interest, and no proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.
Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage with interest and costs of sale, which said premises are described as follows:
Lots Nineteen (19) and Twenty (20) in Block Twenty-Six (26) in Bridge and Moore's Second Addition to Boyne City, Michigan.
Dated: Boyne City, Michigan, Nov. 30th, A. D. 1914.
JACOBUS HOOGLAND, Mortgagee.
CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

First publication December 17th

Order of Publication

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix, ss.
At a session of said court held in the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, on the 10th day of December, A. D. 1914.
Present, Hon. Florence A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.
In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Tucker, deceased.
It is ordered that the time for presenting claims against said deceased be limited to six months from the date hereof, and that the creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims against said deceased to said court at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, on or before the 10th day of June, 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court on the first Monday of March, and the first Monday of June next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, each day.
It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.
A true copy.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL,
Judge of Probate.

(First Publication November 19th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Thomas J. Keenan to the TRAVERS BAYSIDE AND EVERGREEN BEACH ASSOCIATION, dated the 6th day of August, 1913, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan, on the 14th day of April, A. D. 1913, in Liber 40 of mortgages on page 1, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Twenty-Five Dollars and Ninety-Five Cents ($25.95) principal and interest, and no proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.
Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage with interest and costs of sale, which said premises are described as follows:
Lots Nine (9) and Ten (10) in Block Twenty (20) in Bridge and Moore's Second Addition to Boyne City, Michigan.
Dated: Boyne City, Michigan, Nov. 30th, A. D. 1914.
TRAVERS BAYSIDE AND EVERGREEN BEACH ASSOCIATION, Mortgagee.
CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

First publication December 17th

Mortgage Foreclosure

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Peter W. Weiner and Anna J. Weiner, his wife, to George Crawford, dated the 3rd day of April, A. D. 1911, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan, on the 4th day of April, A. D. 1911, in Liber 40 of mortgages on page 1, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Twenty-Five Hundred Dollars and Interest, and no proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.
Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage with interest and costs of sale, which said premises are described as follows:
The East half of the Southeast quarter of the Southwest quarter of section Twenty (20) in Township Thirty-Four (34) North Range Seven (7) West, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.
Amount paid, $22.41.
Taxes of 1914.
Yours etc.
J. L. CURANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan
Attorney for Mortgagee.

(First Publication November 19th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Hans A. Wilson, of Boston, Massachusetts, formerly of Chicago, Ill., dated March 4th, A. D. 1913, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1913, in Liber 40 of mortgages on page 1, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Three Hundred Twenty-Five Dollars and Ninety Cents ($325.90) principal and interest, and no proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.
Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage with interest and costs of sale, which said premises are described as follows:
Lots Nineteen (19) and Twenty (20) in Block Twenty-Six (26) in Bridge and Moore's Second Addition to Boyne City, Michigan.
Dated: Boyne City, Michigan, Nov. 30th, A. D. 1914.
HANS A. WILSON, Mortgagee.
CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

First publication December 17th

Order of Publication

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix, ss.
At a session of said court held in the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, on the 10th day of December, A. D. 1914.
Present, Hon. Florence A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.
In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Tucker, deceased.
It is ordered that the time for presenting claims against said deceased be limited to six months from the date hereof, and that the creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims against said deceased to said court at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, on or before the 10th day of June, 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court on the first Monday of March, and the first Monday of June next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, each day.
It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.
A true copy.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL,
Judge of Probate.

(First Publication November 19th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Thomas J. Keenan to the TRAVERS BAYSIDE AND EVERGREEN BEACH ASSOCIATION, dated the 6th day of August, 1913, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan, on the 14th day of April, A. D. 1913, in Liber 40 of mortgages on page 1, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Twenty-Five Dollars and Ninety-Five Cents ($25.95) principal and interest, and no proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.
Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage with interest and costs of sale, which said premises are described as follows:
Lots Nine (9) and Ten (10) in Block Twenty (20) in Bridge and Moore's Second Addition to Boyne City, Michigan.
Dated: Boyne City, Michigan, Nov. 30th, A. D. 1914.
TRAVERS BAYSIDE AND EVERGREEN BEACH ASSOCIATION, Mortgagee.
CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

First publication January 21

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.
At a session of said court held in the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, on the 11th day of January, A. D. 1915.
Present, Hon. Florence A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.
In the matter of the estate of Chas. J. Fellow, mentally incompetent. Chas. J. Fellow, having filed in said court his petition praying for licence to Mortgage the interest of said Mentally incompetent in the following real estate:
It is ordered that the hearing of said petition be set for the 11th day of February, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said Probate Office, in the City of Charlevoix, for hearing said petition, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court at the time and place to show cause why a licence to mortgage the interest of said mentally incompetent in said real estate should not be granted.
It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.
A true copy.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL,
Judge of Probate.

First publication January 21

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Ernest J. Hammond and Leonie E. Hammond, his wife, of Chicago, Illinois, to Charles Mc Kenzie of Chicago, Ill., dated March 8th, A. D. 1913, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 10, A. D. 1913, in Liber 40 of mortgages on page 1, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Twenty-Five Hundred Dollars and Interest, and no proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.
Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage with interest and costs of sale, which said premises are described as follows:
Lots Nineteen (19) and Twenty (20) in Block Twenty-Six (26) in Bridge and Moore's Second Addition to Boyne City, Michigan.
Dated: Boyne City, Michigan, Nov. 30th, A. D. 1914.
CHARLES MC KENZIE, Mortgagee.
CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

First publication December 31st

Order of Publication

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix, ss.
At a session of said court held in the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, on the 30th day of December, A. D. 1914.
Present, Hon. Florence A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.
In the matter of the estate of Mary E. Tucker, deceased.
It is ordered that the time for presenting claims against said deceased be limited to six months from the date hereof, and that the creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims against said deceased to said court at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, on or before the 10th day of June, 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court on the first Monday of March, and the first Monday of June next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, each day.
It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.
A true copy.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL,
Judge of Probate.

(First Publication December 31st)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Wm. Bond and his wife, Eveline Bolce of Boyne City, Michigan, to THE LAFAYETTE AND BAY ASSOCIATION, a corporation of Michigan, dated the 3rd day of April, A. D. 1911, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan, on the 4th day of April, A. D. 1911, in Liber 40 of mortgages on page 1, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Three Hundred Twenty-Five Dollars and Ninety Cents ($325.90) principal and interest, and no proceedings at law have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.
Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage with interest and costs of sale, which said premises are described as follows:
Lots Nineteen (19) and Twenty (20) in Block Twenty-Six (26) in Bridge and Moore's Second Addition to Boyne City, Michigan.
Dated: Boyne City, Michigan, Nov. 30th, A. D. 1914.
THE LAFAYETTE AND BAY ASSOCIATION, Mortgagee.
CLARK C. WOOD, Attorney for Mortgagee.

First publication January 21

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.
At a session of said court held in the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, on the 11th day of January, A. D. 1915.
Present, Hon. Florence A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.
In the matter of the estate of Nancy Jones, mentally incompetent. Chas. J. Fellow, having filed in said court his petition praying for licence to Mortgage the interest of said Mentally incompetent in the following real estate:
It is ordered that the hearing of said petition be set for the 11th day of February, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said Probate Office, in the City of Charlevoix, for hearing said petition, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court at the time and place to show cause why a licence to mortgage the interest of said mentally incompetent in said real estate should not be granted.
It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.
A true copy.
FLORENCE A. CORNELL,
Judge of Probate.

A Fine Business Motto.

Dishonesty is not usually counted among the motto's attributes, but I have seen a couple of them right the last days, mending shoes, smoking and not quitting their hoed of each other's throat until they were lifted of the ground by a stick passed between them and smartly stricken. From "A Farmer's Notebook" by C. E. D. Phelps.

The "bomb trust" is one trust it should be exploded.

The only way to get your money's worth is to live a cheerful life.

Do not wait too long for the ship to come in. Swim out and meet it.

About the only knocker that fails to work overtime is Old Man Opportunity.

GOOD ROADS RETURNS.

Good roads mean better schools and a higher moral and social standard; they bring the best method of the world, and in groups, they make one free nation; to do did not date from Adam, or how he expressed it. Wherever good roads are built the people begin to buy paint for the house and the barns are treated, the picket fence disappears the tumble down one in front, rose bushes are planted and the lawn has attractive all these things come along pretty. Hence good road building should not be regarded as an expense, but as an investment. They will pay a wider and surer return than money invested in almost any other direction. In high authority has said that with good roads the farm gains an advantage of the market with bad roads the market nearly always takes advantage of the farmer.—Farm Progress.

Cleaning For Action.

When a warship is cleared for action not only is everything movable on decks removed or made secure, every article made of wood is cut up or practicable thrown overboard. Furniture, chairs, pictures, all the furnishings of officers' quarters, in fact, are hurriedly put over the side, in the belief that it is better to lose the much less if not worth of stuff is that actually in the battleship. At the moment that a warship is preparing to fire not a stage, not a bit of wood on the deck. All the officers are seen working the guns and getting the ammunition ready.—London Answers.

A Declining Art.

"Don't you want your boy, Josh, to be a good speaker, asked the "Sun Dial."

"I dunno." Replied Farmer Corntoss. "I don't see that a good speaker gets nowadays as much called on now as they used to, to decide a lack."—Washington Star.

A Poor Remedy.

"I hathe a man who had a cold in his head the other morning."—Puck.

"Poor fellow! Now what food found that man relief enough to cap that remedy?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Bravery.

Willie—Paw, what is bravery? Paw—Bravery is something that makes men hire the top of the tree when they want to pick up an orchestrion.—Puck.

First publication Jan. 31st

NOTICE

To the owner or owners of any and all interests in, or lien upon the land herein described:

Take Notice, that sale has been lawfully made of the following described land or unpaid taxes thereon and that the undersigned has title thereto subject to redemption therefor, and that you are entitled to redemption therefor, at any time within six months after return of service of this notice, upon payment to the undersigned or to the register in chancery of the amount in which the lands lie of all sums paid upon said purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional thereto, and if, upon the sheriff's return of service of notice of publication of this notice, no redemption be made within the expiration of a declaration as commencement of suit and the further sum of five dollars for each description without other additional cost or charges. If proof of service of so not made, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the land.

Description: The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32) township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) west, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

Amount paid, $22.41.

Taxes of 1914.

Yours etc.
J. L. CURANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan
Attorney for Mortgagee.

State of Michigan, ss.
County of Charlevoix, ss.
I, Charles Novak, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and return after carefully inquiring, I am unable to ascertain the whereabouts of, nor place address of Daniel Campbell, the person entitled to be served with the within notice.
I have made diligent search and inquiry, I am unable to find the name, or address of any trustee, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Daniel Campbell, upon whom service and notice can be made. I further certify that the above notice was received to me for service December 7, 1914, at which time I was under sheriff of said County of Charlevoix.
Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 16, 1915. Fee $1.
CHARLES NOVAK,
Sheriff of said County.

Constipation
Is to be decided. It leads to serious results. Sick Headache, Poisoned System and a score of other troubles follow. Don't let Constipation Stay. Keep your Kidneys, Liver and Bowels healthy and active. Find your system of Constipation every Remedy. Nothing better than
Dr. King's New Life Pills
All Druggists 25 cents
SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
Munn & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

PAYROLL OF CIVILIZATION MET BY FARMER

WANTS NO "DEADHEADS" ON LIST OF EMPLOYES.

A CALL UPON THE LAW MAKERS TO PREVENT USELESS TAX UPON AGRICULTURE.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union

The farmer is the paymaster of industry and as such he sees more the nation's payroll. When industry pays its bill it must make a profit upon agriculture for the amount, which the farmer is compelled to honor without protest. This check drawn upon agriculture may travel to and fro over the highways of commerce may hold cities, guide the globe with bands of steel; may search the earth's treasures in the earth or traverse the skies, but in the end it will rest upon the soil. No dollar will remain suspended in midair; it is as certain to seek the earth's surface as an apple that falls from a tree.

When a farmer buys a plow he pays the man who mined the metal, the woodman who felled the tree, the manufacturer who assembled the raw material and shaped it into an article of metal, the railroad that transported it and the dealer who sold him the goods. He pays the wages of labor and capital employed in the transaction as well as pays for the tools, machinery, buildings, etc., used in the construction of the community and the same applies to all articles of use and diet of himself and those engaged in the subsidiary lines of industry.

There is no payroll in civilization that does not rest upon the back of the farmer. He must pay the bills each of them.

The total value of the nation's annual agricultural products is around $12,000,000,000 and it is safe to estimate that 95 cents on every dollar goes to meeting the expenses of subsidiary industries. The farmer does not work more than thirty minutes per day for himself; the remaining thirteen hours of the day's toil he devotes to meeting the payroll of the hired barons of agriculture, such as the manufacturer, railroad, commercial and other servants.

The Farmer's Payroll and How He Meets It.

The annual payroll of agriculture approximates $12,000,000,000. A portion of the amount is shifted to foreign countries in exports, but the total payroll of industries working for the farmer divides substantially as follows: Railroads, $1,252,000,000; manufacturers, $4,245,000,000; mining, $400,000,000; banks, $300,000,000; mercantile $1,500,000,000, and a heavy overhead expense must be added for promoters.

It takes the corn crop, the most valuable in agriculture, which sold last year for $1,092,000,000, to pay off the payroll of the corn trade, the money derived from our annual sales of foodstuffs of approximately $1,000,000,000, the yearly cotton crop, valued at $300,000,000 in the wool crop, which is worth $410,000,000, and the oat crop, that is worth $440,000,000, we require to meet the annual payroll of the manufacturers. The money derived from the annual staple crops is used in meeting the payroll of the bankers, merchants, etc. After these obligations are paid, the farmer has only a few bunches of coupons left. Some have been able to move an elderly as the German forces moved the Germans from the Marne, and have settled at the gates of Paris, but would have a tremendous payroll to be death struggle around the fortifications of Paris.

There is a lesson in this that all nations should heed. Along the borders of the United States, where is the nation that can afford to occupy at any time, there should be a system of free, local, military highways, along which troops might be moved easily and speedily at any time.—Southern Good Roads.

ROADS AND WARS.

The great war now in progress in Europe must show how wonderful value of good roads may be when armies are called to be moved. Because of the fine roads in Germany and France the movement of troops in the German army, being prepared for immediate action, passed across the line into French territory.

East of Germany lies the great Russian empire, with its 20,000,000 soldiers ready for active service against Germany, but hindered by the worst roads in Europe. If the gigantic army, of the Russians could have been able to move as quickly as the German forces moved the Germans would have been at Berlin instead of at the gates of Paris, but would have had a tremendous payroll to be death struggle around the fortifications of Berlin.

There is a lesson in this that all nations should heed. Along the borders of the United States, where is the nation that can afford to occupy at any time, there should be a system of free, local, military highways, along which troops might be moved easily and speedily at any time.—Southern Good Roads.

When You Travel.

Don't wait until you reach the station, a few minutes before it is time for the train to start, but be on the line for starting, arriving at your destination and the time of connecting. Other passengers wish to take the same train and meet appointments. And don't argue the question of the price of your ticket with the ticket seller. The price is fixed by the managers and directors of the road. If the price is unjust, address a communication to them and stay at home until the price is satisfactory or pay it and keep still.—Exchange.

Rattlesnakes.

Advancing civilization is fast diminishing the rattlesnake on the American continent. There are said to be twenty species and thirteen varieties. While the venom of this snake is usually fatal to man, it never attempts to strike unless it is molested.

Stop the Child's Colds—They Often Result Seriously.

Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough are children's ailments that need immediate attention. The after-effects are often most serious. Don't take the risk—you don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery checks the cold, soothes the cough, allays the inflammation, kills the germs and allows nature to do her healing work. See at your druggists. Try a bottle to-day.

Rattlesnake Bite.

Dr. Vaughan, of Ohio, says that the rattlesnake bite is not dangerous if the fangs do not penetrate the skin. Dr. Vaughan says that he has seen a man bitten by a rattlesnake and the fangs did not penetrate the skin. The man was not

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1915, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

4th Mistry creek Sally Miller finds George Samson, a mysterious man, in the woods. Samson finds Sally that night. Jesse Brent, a neighbor, tells Sally that Samson is suspected of the crime. Samson tells Jesse he is innocent. Jesse promises the lovers to do his utmost to find Samson. Samson receives Tamarack letter to leave the country. Sally finding with bloodhounds the man who killed her father, Samson is arrested as the man who killed Miller. Samson recovers athletic ability in Samson. Willie arrives with news of Jesse's death. Tamarack discovers Samson in Jesse's home. Tamarack tells Sally that Jesse has killed himself. Tamarack "Gets Jesse's letter" who shot Perry. Lescott tries to blackmail Tamarack. Sally tells Jesse she can decide for herself. Tamarack's letter to Lescott. Lescott's letter to Sally. Sally's letter to Jesse. Sally tells the sheriff that he is going to marry Jesse Brent.

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

Lescott stayed on a week after that simply in deference to Samson's insistence. It was long enough to allay any slight under fire, but when the week was out the painter turned his horse's head toward home, and he this venin him back to the Illwerness and the Hain.

A quiet of unbroken and dolly routine settled down on Misery. The conduct of the Scuffs in keeping hands off, and acknowledging the justice of Tamarack Silvers' decree, had been their answer to the declaration of the Hillsmen to letting Samson rifle into and out of Hixon. The truce was established. Then, a short time later Tamarack left the country to become a railroad trakeman, Jesse Purry passed the word that the truce still, until further orders, demat from violence. The word had crept about that Samson, too, was going away, and, if this were true, Jesse felt that his fa were being too generous with the past. Purry believed dynamite guilty despite the acceptance of the bounds.

Lescott had sent a box of books, and Samson had taken a team over to Hixon, and brought them back.

He devoured them all from this pass to this time, and many of them he went back to, and digested again.

He wrestled long and gently with his uncle, struggling to win the old man's consent to his departure. But Silent South's brain was no longer plastic. What had been good enough for the sires was good enough for the future. Nevertheless, he arranged affairs so that his nephew should be able to meet financial needs, and to go where he chose in a fashion befitting a nephew.

November came in bleakly, with a raw and devastating breath of fatality. The smile died from horizon to horizon, and the eyes cold rains beat and lashed the forests. And, toward the end of the month, came the day which Samson had fixed for his departure.

At the threshold, with the saddle-bags over his left forearm and the rifle in his hand, he paused. His uncle stood at his elbow and the boy put out his hand.

"Good-by, Uncle Spicer," was all he said. The old man, who had been his second father, shook hands. His face, too, was expressionless, but he felt that he was saying farewell to a soldiers of genius who was abandoning the field. And he loved the boy with all the centered power of an isolated heart.

A half-mile along the road, Samson halted and dismounted. There, in a small cove, surrounded by a jungle of vetters and hackberry bushes, stood a small and dilapidated "meeting house" and churchyard, with the grass thrown up on the way through the room underground to the unkempt half acre and hatred before the humble house stones which marked two graves. With a sudden emotion, he swept the back of his hand across his eyes. He did not remove his hat, but he stood in the drizzle of cold rain for a moment of silence, and then he said:

"Pap, I hain't forgot. I don't want ye ter think that I've forgot."

Before he arrived at the Widow Miller's, the rain had stopped and the clouds had broken.

Sally opened the door, and smiled. She had spent the day nerving herself for this farewell, and at least until the moment of leave-taking she would be safe from tears. The Widow Miller and her son were left them alone, and the boy and girl sat before the blazing logs.

For a time, an awkward silence fell between them. At last, the boy rose, and went over to the corner where he had placed his gun. He took it up and held it on the bench between them.

"Sally," he said, "I wants ter tell ye some things that I hain't never said ter nobody else, in the past place, I wants ye ter keep this hyar gun for me."

"The girl's eyes widened with surprise.

"Hain't ye a-goin' ter take hit with ye, Sammy?"

"He shook his head.

"I hain't a-goin' ter need hit down below. Nobody don' use sin-shots thar. I've got my pistol, an' I reckon that will be enough.

"I'll take good keer of hit," she promised.

The boy took out of his pocket a box of cartridges and a small package tied in a greasy rag.

"Hit's loaded, Sally, an' hit's cleaned an hit's greased. Hit's ready ter use."

Again, she nodded in silent assent, and the boy began speaking in a slow, careful voice, which gradually mounted in intensity and emotion.

"Sally, thet thar gun was my pap's. When he lay a-dyin', he gave hit ter me, an' he gave me a job ter do with hit. When I was a little feller, I used ter set up 'mont all day, pellotin thet gun an' gittin' hit ready. I used ter go out in the woods, an' practice shootin' hit at things, till I learned how ter handle hit. I reckon thar hain't many feellers round here thet kin beat me now." he paused, and the girl hastened to corroborate.

"Thar hain't none, Sammy."

"Thers hain't nothin' in the world, Sally, thet I care like I does thet gun. Hit's got a job ter do. Thar hain't but one person in the world I'd trust hit with. Thets you . . . I wants ye ter keep hit ter me, an' ter keep hit ready. . . . They thinks round hyar I'm quittin', but I hain't. I'm sorter like a hound, when I smell a hood this hyar thing—an' I'll need hit bad." He took up the rifle, and ran his hand caressingly along its barrel and stock.

"I don't know when I'm a-comin', he said, slowly, "but, when I calls for this, I'm a-comin' again'er need hit quick. I wants hit ter be ready for me, day or night. Maybe, nobody won't know I'm hyar . . . Maybe, I won't want nobody ter know. . . . But, when I whistles ye thus (he a whippoorwill), I wants ye ter slip out—an' fetch me thet gun!"

He stopped, and bent forward. His face was tense, and his eyes were filled with appeal. His lips were tight set and fanatical.

"Sammy," said the girl, reaching out and taking the weapon from his hands, "if I'm alive when ye comes, I'll do hit. I promise ye. An' ye added, if I hain't alive, hit'll be a-doin' thar in thet corner. I'll prayer hit, an' Keep hit loaded, an' when ye calls, I'll fetch hit out thar to ye."

The youth nodded. "I must come any time, but likely as not I'll ner come a-fightin' when I comes."

Next, he produced an envelope.

"This hyar is a letter I'm done writ ter myself," he explained. He drew a pencil from his pocket.

"Samson, come back." Then he handed the missive to the girl. "Thet thar is addressed ter me, in care of Mr. Lescott. . . . If anything happens—if Uncle Spicer needs me—

"When I Whistles Like a Whippoorwill, Fetch Me That Gun."

wants ye ter mail thet ter me quick. He says as how he won't never call me back, but, Sally, I wants thet you jest send for me, if he dies, or they tends he hain't a-goin' ter write no letters home. Use spicer ever read, an' you can't read much sither. Jest I'll plumb shore he thinks should ye die an' night."

She colored and nodded.

"Yes, Samson," was all she said.

He smiled.

"I reckon I'd better be gettin' along," he announced.

The girl suddenly reached out both hands, and seized his right one in both hers tight, and rose, facing him. Her sunburned face grew very pasion, and her eyes widened. They were dry, and her lips were tightly closed, but through the tantlem pallor, in the twilight, the boy could read her soul, and her soul was shaken.

He drew her toward him, and held her very tight.

"Sally," he said, in a voice which threatened to choke. "I wants ye ter take keer of yerself. Ye hain't like these other gals round here. Ye hain't a gal big enough ter—ter—ter—"

"Enough to love him, Sammy," said in the night as he mounted, laughed for God's sake take keer of yourself!" He broke off, and picked up his hat.

"An' thet gun, Sally," he reminded the door. "That there's the most precious thing I've got. I love hit better nen anything—take keer of hit."

Again, she caught at his shoulders.

"Does ye love hit better'n ye do me, Sammon?" she demanded.

He hesitated.

"I reckon ye knows how much I love ye, Sally," he said, slowly, "but I've done made a promise, an' promise a man ter keep hit for him."

They went together out to the stile, he still carrying his rifle, as though loth to let it go, and stood for a moment with him to the road.

As he untied his reins, she threw her arms about his neck, and for a long while they stood there under the clouds and stars, as he held her close. There was no eloquence of leave-taking, no professions of undying love, for these two hearts were inarticulate and dazed, clinging to a wilderness code of self-repression, and they had reached a point where speech would have swept them both away to a breakdown.

CHAPTER VIII.

The boy from Misery rode slowly to west Hixon. At intervals, from strong glee out and made the shadows black along the way. At other times it was like riding in a basin cauldron of pitch. When he passed into that stretch of country at whose heart Jesse Purry dwelt he raised his voice in song. His singing was very bad, and the ballad lacked tone, but it served its purpose of saving him from the suspicion of furtiveness. Though the front of the house was black, behind its heavy shutters he knew that his coming might be noted, and slightly at this particular spot might be misconstrued in the absence of frank warning.

The correctness of his inference brought a brief smile to his lip when the sentinel creek that skirted the orchard and heard a stable door creak softly behind him. He was to be followed again—and watched, but he did not look back or pause to listen for the hoofbeats of his unsolicited escort. On the soft mud of the road he would have heard them had he been his ear and drawn rein. He rode at a walk, for his train would not leave until five o'clock in the morning. There was time in plenty.

It was cold and depressing as he trudged the empty streets from the station to the railroad station, carrying his saddlebags over his arm. He heard the whistle and saw the blazing headlight, and a minute later he had pushed his way into the smoking car and dropped his saddlebags in the seat beside him. Then, for the first time, he saw and recognized his watchers. Purry meant to have Samson followed as far as Lexington, and his movements from that point definitely reported. Jim Asberry and Aaron Scuffs were the chosen spies. He did not speak to the two cronies who took seats behind the car, but his face hardened, and his brows came together in a black scowl.

"When I gits back," he promised himself, "you'll be one of the first fellers I'll look fer, Jim Asberry, dunn ye! All I hopes is that nobody else don't git ter hell ter me first!"

The sleeping car to which he was assigned was very leaving Lexington too was almost empty, but he felt upon him the interested gaze of those few eyes that were turned toward his entrance. He engaged every fair with a pale very pretty girl, who was sleeping and undressing, in it somehow each lip that had started to twitch in amusement straightened, and the twinkle that rose at first glance sobered at second. Yet, for all his apparitions sense of amusement Samson was waking to the fact that he was a conqueror, and his manly pride made him cut his mesa shoulders in the direction of where he was busy beating down impulsive eyes with his defiant gaze. He resolved after some thought upon a definite policy. It was a very old policy, but to him new—and a discovery. He would change nothing in himself that involved a surrender of code or conviction but, wherever it could be done with honor, he would concede to custom.

It was late in the second afternoon when he stepped from the train at Jersey City, to be engulfed in an unimagined roar and congestion. Here it was impossible to hold his own against the unprovoked laughter of the many, and he stood for an instant glaring about like a caged tiger, while the current of humanity swept around and flowed toward the three ferry stairs. Then he saw the smiling face of Lescott, and Lescott's extended hand. Even Lescott, immaculately garbed and far-cultured, seemed almost a stranger, and the boy's feeling of intimacy from the moment of greeting was chilled. But Lescott knew nothing of that. The man in Samson held true, making his emotions.

"So you came," said the New Yorker heartily, grasping the boy's hand. "Where's your luggage? Well, just pick that up and make a dash for the ferry."

"Hyar hit is," replied Samson, who still carried his saddlebags. The painter's eyes twinkled but the girls was so frank and friendly that the man instead of jeering at it defiance grinned responsively.

"Right, oh!" laughed Lescott. "I thought maybe you'd bring a trunk, but it's the wise man who travels light."

He followed Lescott out to the foot of Twenty-third street and stopped with him into the tonneau of the painter's waiting car. Lescott lived with his family uptown, for it happened that, had his canvases put down in value whatever, he would still have been in a position to drive his motor and follow his inclination about the world. If he did not take to Paris in the spring, he would be understood that a life which must be not only full of early embarrassment, but yet positively revolutionary, should be approached by easy stages. Meanwhile, the car turned down Fifth avenue, passed under the arch and drew up before a door just off Washington square, where the landscape painter had a studio suit. There were sleeping rooms and such accessories as seemed to the boy unheard-of luxury. Though Lescott regarded the place as a makeshift annex to his main establishment.

"You'd better take your time in selecting permanent quarters," was his careless fashion of explaining to Samson. "It's just as well not to hurry. You are to stay here with me, as long as you will."

"I'm obleeged ter ye," replied the boy, to whose training in open-hooed hospitality the invitation seemed only natural. The evening meal was brought in from a neighboring hotel, and the two men dined before an open fire, Samson eating in mountain silence, while his host chatted and asked questions.

"Samson," suggested the painter, when the dinner things had been carried out and they were alone, "you are here for two purposes. First, to study painting; second, to educate and equip yourself for coming conditions. I'm going to take work, more work, and then some more work."

"I hain't skeered of work."

"I believe that. Also, you must learn not to be afraid. You've got to rub your fighting instinct with a strong curb.

"I don't low to let nobody run over me." The statement was too unsentimentally—or an announcement of a principle which was not subject to modification.

"All right, but until you learn the rogue let me advise you."

The boy passed into the fire for a few moments of silence.

"I gives ye my hand on thet," he promised.

At eleven o'clock the painter, having shown his guest over the premises, said good-night and went upstairs to his own house. Samson lay awake while awake, with many disquieting reflections.

Meanwhile Lescott, letting himself into a house overlooking the park, was hailed by a chorus of voices from the dining room. He turned and went in to a gay group just back from the opera. As he thoughtfully mixed himself a highball, they bombarded him with questions.

"Why didn't you bring your hair barian with you?" demanded a dark eyed girl, who looked very much as Lescott might have looked had he been a girl—and very young and lovely. Now she flashed on him an affectionate smile, and added: "We have been waiting to see him. Must we go to bed disappointed?"

George stood looking down on them, and disliked the lie in his place.

"He wasn't brought on for purposes of exhibition. Dramatic sense, I was afraid if he came in here in the fashion of his arrival—carrying his saddlebags—you would have had a blazing headlight, and a minute later he had pushed his way into the smoking car and dropped his saddlebags in the seat beside him. Then, for the first time, he saw and recognized his watchers. Purry meant to have Samson followed as far as Lexington, and his movements from that point definitely reported. Jim Asberry and Aaron Scuffs were the chosen spies. He did not speak to the two cronies who took seats behind the car, but his face hardened, and his brows came together in a black scowl.

"When I gits back," he promised himself, "you'll be one of the first fellers I'll look fer, Jim Asberry, dunn ye! All I hopes is that nobody else don't go ter hell ter me first!"

The sleeping car to which he was assigned was very leaving Lexington too was almost empty, but he felt upon him the interested gaze of those few eyes that were turned toward his entrance. He engaged every fair with a pale very pretty girl, who was sleeping and undressing, in it somehow each lip that had started to twitch in amusement straightened, and the twinkle that rose at first glance sobered at second. Yet, for all his apparitions sense of amusement Samson was waking to the fact that he was a conqueror and his manly pride made him cut his mesa shoulders in the direction of where he was busy beating down impulsive eyes with his defiant gaze. He resolved after some thought upon a definite policy. It was a very old policy, but to him new—and a discovery. He would change nothing in himself that involved a surrender of code or conviction but, wherever it could be done with honor, he would concede to custom.

It was late in the second afternoon when he stepped from the train at Jersey City, to be engulfed in an unimagined roar and congestion. Here it was impossible to hold his own against the unprovoked laughter of the many, and he stood for an instant glaring about like a caged tiger, while the current of humanity swept around and flowed toward the three ferry stairs. Then he saw the smiling face of Lescott, and Lescott's extended hand. Even Lescott, immaculately garbed and far-cultured, seemed almost a stranger, and the boy's feeling of intimacy from the moment of greeting was chilled. But Lescott knew nothing of that. The man in Samson held true, making his emotions.

"So you came," said the New Yorker heartily, grasping the boy's hand. "Where's your luggage? Well, just pick that up and make a dash for the ferry."

"Hyar hit is," replied Samson, who still carried his saddlebags. The painter's eyes twinkled but the girls was so frank and friendly that the man instead of jeering it defiance grinned responsively.

"Right, oh!" laughed Lescott. "I thought maybe you'd bring a trunk, but it's the wise man who travels light."

He followed Lescott out to the foot of Twenty-third street and stopped with him into the tonneau of the painter's waiting car. Lescott lived with his family uptown, for it happened that, had his canvases put down in value whatever, he would still have been in a position to drive his motor and follow his inclination about the world. If he did not take to Paris in the spring, he would be understood that a life which must be not only full of early embarrassment, but yet positively revolutionary, should be approached by easy stages. Meanwhile, the car turned down Fifth avenue, passed under the arch and drew up before a door just off Washington square, where the landscape painter had a studio suit. There were sleeping rooms and such accessories as seemed to the boy unheard-of luxury. Though Lescott regarded the place as a makeshift annex to his main establishment.

"You'd better take your time in selecting permanent quarters," was his careless fashion of explaining to Samson. "It's just as well not to hurry. You are to stay here with me, as long as you will."

"I'm obleeged ter ye," replied the boy, to whose training in open-hooed hospitality the invitation seemed only natural. The evening meal was brought in from a neighboring hotel, and the two men dined before an open fire, Samson eating in mountain silence, while his host chatted and asked questions.

"Samson," suggested the painter, when the dinner things had been carried out and they were alone, "you are here for two purposes. First, to study painting; second, to educate and equip yourself for coming conditions. I'm going to take work, more work, and then some more work."

"I hain't skeered of work."

"I believe that. Also, you must learn not to be afraid. You've got to rub your fighting instinct with a strong curb.

"I don't low to let nobody run over me." The statement was too unsentimentalize—or an announcement of a principle which was not subject to modification.

"All right, but until you learn the rogue let me advise you."

The boy passed into the fire for a few moments of silence.

"I gives ye my hand on thet," he promised.

At eleven o'clock the painter, having

"You are a Dear, Wilfred!"

brought the sleepiness from his eyes, he knew that she meant to speak the unveiled truth.

"Put your own holdings in a lot of railways and things, you handle the other people's and sisters' property, don't you?"

He nodded.

"It is fashion; I do. I sign the necessary papers when the lawyers call me to and ask me to come downtown."

"Are you a director in the Metropolis Trust—away?"

"Guilty."

"In the Consolidated Seacoast?"

"I believe so."

"With your friends, who are also shareholders, you could assume control of the Morning Intelligencer easily."

"I guess I could assume control, but what would I do with it?"

"Do you know the reputation of that newspaper?"

"Pretty well it's all right. It's conservative and dowdy. I read it every morning. It's a thing of old fashioned nicely between the grapefruit and the bacon and eggs."

"It is, also, powerful," she added, "and is said to be absolutely sacrilegious to touch it."

"Trouble you tell, life an anarchist? You are a Dear, Wilfred! I adored. I worshiped—that last. I wanted to kiss you for it."

"And as I looked, suddenly he smiled and ran a hand through his black mane on my shoulders, the eyes I loved looking into mine and said: "I'll forgive you, daddy, and well say nothing about it. And then he put his arms went round my neck, and the head came down close to mine, and the tears welled up in my eyes, and I buried my chiefs.

"Though only seven, he was the bigger man of the two, and I know it. Sonny, I said, "I'm going to swear off. It's a period to conquer my temper. We'll never have a disgraceful scene like that again. I'm all through with that kind of thing, laddie. I'm going to be as much of a man as you are."

"He drew back and looked me square in the eye, and so that I could see the tears in his own. "Are you in earnest?" he asked.

"That's all there is to it. Only a little domestic episode, but it was one of the big lessons of life to me. And, I tell you, it settled accounts for good and all. It's not the master now, for I am."

We and Up.

Governor-elect Williams, at a dinner in New York, praised the New Year resolution habit.

"A good habit," he said, "and a very, very old one. It dates, in fact, from the stone age.

"Dressed in the furs of wild beasts two men of the stone age, Wa and Up, met one New Year's morning.

"Say, Wa," said the first, "need I use your cleaver, will you?

"What for, Up?" asked the second man.

"I want to go home, said the first, "and turn over a new leaf."

War Order.

Customer—Here, waiter. Where are the olives? Hold on. Bring me a half a pound and some crackers too.

Waiter (coldly)—Grandams, half a bombshell and bowl of shrapnel—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Expecting More Turn-Downs.

"I understand that Jack has been thrown over by no fewer than three girls ye been engaged to."

"Yes, he's working now on an adjustable engagement ring."

Willing to Let It Ache.

A barefooted dirty, white boaring cotton one day, saw his big toe under the desk, that's pular bear had come on the ice and was excitedly making his way toward them. No warning was given to the football players. Before long the bear appeared close to the edge of the floe, and he seemed to be in a great hurry. He shambled rapidly along in and out among the hummocks, and every few feet he would turn his head over his left shoulder the bear and crane his head anxiously. Closer and closer he came, and it was plain that he grew more and more excited. The men on board the ship got out their rifles, to make sure that the boat did no harm to the men on the ice.

The giant ice bear came to the last hummock that separated him from the bed of play. One of the men was in the act of "kicking the stuffing" out of the ball when the bear suddenly emerged into clear view. The ball flew to the ice, the man's leg came hurtling back to the deck, and he was then half-way down the ice ship like a deer. There was a scramble of frightened shouts, and the ice became alive with running men. Never was there a more-sudden change of scene. Men stumbled and fell and yelled and fought for a place in the boat.

The men on deck were so convulsed with laughter that they made no effort to shoot the bear. And after the first whoop the bear became so thoroughly alarmed at the consternation he had caused that he turned tail and fled in a clumsy gallop down the ice floes.

We All Know Them.

"There are certain people who eat with their knives, and they keep on at it even when they are a little worn, remarked the Grump to the Mugwump.

PUT END TO FOOTBALL GAME

Polar Bear May Only Have Intended to Witness Contest, but Players Took No Chances.

One day, while the whalesship Narwhal was tied to an ice floe in Baring sea, and the lookouts were at the masthead, a bear was seen coming toward her the appearance of whales, a party of the forecastlemen made a football of rags and corn, and went over the top of the deck in mischievous fling around on a smooth stretch of ice a short distance from the vessel. The fun was at its height and the men were just getting the kinks out of their legs when the lookout from the crow's nest called softly down to the deck that a polar bear had come on the ice and was excitedly making his way toward them. No warning was given to the football players. Before long the bear appeared close to the edge of the floe, and he seemed to be in a great hurry. He shambled rapidly along in and out among the hummocks, and every few feet he would turn his head over his left shoulder the bear and crane his head anxiously. Closer and closer he came, and it was plain that he grew more and more excited.

What Do YOU Pay? Some men, thinking economize, pay 5 cents for cigarettes. They might enjoy real quality, if they realized that 20 FATIMAS would cost them only 15 cents.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

20 for 15¢ FATIMA TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES

AGENTS are making big money selling Comfortable Combination Suits and Lasters to their friends. Sales are made in 20 to 40 minutes, and repeat orders are received every day. Quick sales, big profits, and satisfied customers are the rewards. Write agents' dept. today. Initial outfit FREE. Comfortable Suit Co., Dept. 1, Cincinnati, Ohio.

YOUR SUCCESS is the dominant note in our business. Success in life depends upon the right training. Success in our business depends upon your ability to secure positions for our graduates. Write today for our catalog. Detroit Business University, Dept. 1, Detroit, Mich.

Ladies Make Approval Home Hosiery Work. The simplest, most attractive and most profitable proposition ever offered. Hosiery Supply Co., Dept. 1, Cincinnati, Ohio.

FIRST RATE Hosiery. Wholesale Outfit free. Agents wanted everywhere. Hosiery Supply Co., Dept. 1, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Wretchedness of Constipation Can quickly be overcome by CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. Purely vegetable—act easily on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty. SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE. Genuine must bear Signature Brent Good

W. N. U., CHICAGO, NO. 2—1915.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Must be the tongue that speaks to fill. Where words are always fitted To the thing that they kill. That keeps the law of kindness still. Whatever else befall.

Must be the hands that toil to sill The great world's corners round. The hands that never are afraid To do a kindly deed.

SOME DISHES NEW AND OLD.

Rabbits are cheap if easily obtained and plentiful and in many sections are are common food. There are a few ways of preparing them.

Larded Rabbit Baked in Milk—Skin the rabbit, well press five or six slices of fat pork over the dressed rabbit thin slices of fat salt pork over the dressed rabbit thin slices of fat salt pork and pepper, and place in a pan with a little water in the pan, then when well browned lower the heat, add milk and water to the meat, the dredging with flour after each basting. Cook for an hour longer. The relish may be browned in fat on the top of the roast and then put into the oven with the milk and cooked until perfectly tender. For the gravy take some of the fat in which the meat was fried, an equal part of flour and add the hot milk from the pan, season well and serve with the rabbit or pour over the rabbit. Serve with rice croquettes each holding a small spoonful of currant jelly.

Rabbit may be parboiled and then fried as one does chicken, serving a gravy made from the fat in the pan.

Rabbit Hasenpfeffer Style.—Divide the forelegs and the body into pieces, lay in a deep dish and soak in salt water. Try out some fat salt pork and add to it a little onion, cook the meat in it low and two tablespoonfuls of flour, a quart of veal broth, a teaspoonful of salt, a bay leaf, half a teaspoonful peppercorns, four cloves and the juice of one lemon. Add the meat and the rabbit is tender. Add a generous tablespoonful of butter, half a cupful of fruit juice or orange juice, and two lumps of sugar. The sauce should be very delicate. Serve on a platter and surround with spoonfuls of savory stuffing, and make sure the sauce in a separate dish.

Sauce Milt.—Take two tablespoonfuls of butter, in it cook three tablespoonfuls of flour, add a half teaspoonful of salt, and a pinch of cayenne, when smooth, and bubbling, add three fourths of a quart of milk, stirring it into the hot pan, a cupful at least. Cook until smooth and grain into a bowl.

Sauce Hunter.—Add to a quart a cupful of rice and a cupful and a half of tomato, season with salt and pepper, either chicken or veal, season with an onion, cut in halves with two cloves pressed into each half, a teaspoonful of salt, a chili pepper (without seeds), cayenne to taste and a dash of paprika. Cook until the rice is tender, add enough more broth or water to make it not desirable, for one likes to feel that the service is fresh and free from all dust and germs. The tea cart is a great convenience, for all the service may be brought in at one.

Small cakes, crackers and cookies are served with a cup of tea. The English custom of serving sandwiches and marmalade is observed by some.

Nellie Maxwell

once with strips of bacon and fried potatoes as a hunter's dish.

Venison Steak With Chestnuts—Take a venison steak, and cut into boiled chestnuts which have been mashed and seasoned well, roll up, tie with a string, and roast, serve with cauliflower or brussels sprouts.

A FEW COMPANY DISHES.

When one is entertaining it is nice to serve some dishes which are especially dainty. To look at, as well as appetizing. We all like to be original and have a surprising now and the way to do this is by experiment, by combinations and give the world a new dish.

Chestnut Puree for Peppers.—Boil the nuts, put through a ricer when tender. To a pound add a half of the riced chestnuts add three tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of chopped pimentos (canned red peppers), a tablespoonful of grated onion, half a teaspoonful of salt, and a cupful of rich milk. Parboil the peppers and fill with the puree, dotted around broiled steak or as a vegetable with almost any meat combination. Have the stems and white portion as well as the seeds removed from the pepper before parboiling.

Cardinal Pears.—Cook canned pears in sugar and water that has more or less of currant jelly. When cooled place in glass dishes, pour rounds of sponge cake, cover with the thickened sirup and a spoonful of whipped cream. Cut the cake into squares and rounds or shredded in strips.

Fig, Date and Cucumber Salad.—To serve four salad plates, pare one large apple, core and cut in small cubes. Pour over the apple a dressing made of lemon juice and milk occasionally with a fork. Sprinkle the top with caraway candies or bits of citron in flower design with the cassines and bake in a moderate oven.

Her Hat.

"They say he loves her so much he can even anticipate her thoughts."

"Yes, indeed. When we were coming out this morning he said 'Yes, dear, it is on straight, before she had said a word."

Bone Milk Bone tablespoonfuls of butter, in it cook three tablespoonfuls of flour, add a half teaspoonful of salt, and a pinch of cayenne, when smooth, the pleasure of one's guests. Tea may be served in cup and saucers, enough for a pot of tea, those small bags in a box are good for tea for months and will always be ready for the quick cup of tea with no grounds to contain. Tea should be made and when the weather is bad you have always attained. Intense, discussions by members on poultry, alfalfa, corn and such topics, and on one occasion a canning demonstration, have the established material for the club members to consider. The experiment in the bean dish worked so well that this year the work is being extended to various points in the county.

What Mecosta county can do, any county can do, indeed most of the county commissioners of schools in western Michigan have been congratulating with the state agent in charge of club work, Mr. E. C. Lindeman, at East Lansing, with the result that, using all the forces already in motion as a foundation, the prospects of building up the club work in all the counties are very promising.

In most counties the plan is to have the boys corn show, girls' canned product show, or the like, in connection with the Farmers' Institute. This is the plan in Wexford county, where one of the largest and oldest corn shows of the state exists. About two hundred dollars in prizes are awarded annually at the corn show, partly in cash and partly in scholarship prizes. The latter comprised the payment, last year, of tuition and all expenses for a term except car fare, for three boys who attended the eight weeks' short course at the agricultural college. To the winners of this reward, the boys had to not only grow an acre of corn under club rules but also to present a short script, without outside help, on some farm topic of general interest, as well as have completed the eighth grade in the public school.

The growing of the acre of corn, half acre of potatoes, or tenth acre of tomatoes in the case of the girls, is a means to end, not an end in itself. It is a means to end, not an end in itself. It is a means to end, not an end in itself. It

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR
Office, 113 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9.
SUBSCRIPTION:
Three Months ... $ .40
Six Months ... .75
One Year ... 1.50

QUAKE VICTIMS DRIVEN INSANE

Soldiers Worked Day and Night to Rescue Those Alive.

BRAVE CHILDREN ARE SAVED

Survivors Maniacs by Madness Wandering Aimlessly Around the Ruins. Young Women's Fiance Worked All Day to Rescue Her, but Cries Gradually Became Inaudible.

Rome.—Numbers roaming aimlessly about, unknowing to utter survivors half will days and hands of wolves prowling amid piles of bodies, men seeing frantically out in vain at heaps of wreckage from which come the faint and gradually weakening cries of their loved ones, women and children dying of starvation and exposure, scores of old and young perishing by death great heaps of ruins from which the utmost efforts of the rescuers were unable to drag them in time—these were some of the terrible scenes that the government officials in charge of the relief work in the area devastated by the recent earthquake.

One of the men made crazy by the catastrophe killed an injured survivor who reproached him for loosing a rifled wife shop. Scores of men and women, crazed by grief and hardship, wandered about the country a danger to the living. For those adequate protection even the thousands of soldiers on the scene were insufficient.

One of the most painful cases reported here is that of a young man whose fiance, buried in the ruins, called out to him to save her if he loved her. All day he had been digging desperately at the wreckage, aided by the soldiers who were moved to tears by his grief. Despite their great efforts there was no hope of saving the girl, and her voice gradually became inaudible. The same young man had previously saved himself. He further said his sisters from underneath the walls of his father home, but could not find his aged father.

Strangers were not allowed to approach the towns and villages in the stricken area, where the work of rescue went on without cessation. The dead of Italian towns alive in the ruins and of taking care of the injured survivors and feeding those who are unhurt was so great that attempts to bury the thousands of bodies were abandoned, and they were piled up in great heaps awaiting the moment when there were no more to save.

A royal commissioner assumed charge of the enthusiasm now and ordered the soldiers not to dig into the ruins unless they heard the moans or cries of victims. Officers were specifically detailed to find out the most likely spots for excavation. In Avezzano as a result of systematic exploration of ten survivors were found. Many were all numbed by exhausted and badly injured, and several had to be carried out. Dead and dying were all being amputated.

The ruins are now terribly silent. The burial of the dead was hastened for sanitary reasons.

Various reports from the soldiers show that scores of persons had the poor misfortune escape from death in the catastrophe. Under wrecked houses little children have been found alive, although nearly dead from exposure and cold, but absolutely unhurt by the wrath of Vesuvius and Etna. The ex durance of women and babies was remarkable, for many of them were in bed only of food when saved after long cold, dispiriting and terrible and with the dead bodies of their fam ilies buried in debris near them.

The inhabitants of Novak and Ancevitza fled in a panic because of the immense revenue additional heards. Also the crest of Monte Pumdetta 6,100 feet high, due to the earthquake.

The estimate of the number of dead remains in the neighborhood of 30,000. Fifty towns and villages have been destroyed. The following list of dead is claimed not to be definitive: Avezzano 200, Villalago 25, Balnao, 4, Pupoli, 5; Pentina, 4; Barrea, 12.

The mortality in the country, where many immense and buildings collapsed, has not been ascertained.

In Avezzano three table-d-hote only slightly injured were taken from the ruins. Four other children, the oldest seven, also were found. Although exhausted, they kept shouting until they were saved. They promised the soldiers who dug them out that their father would pay them, but he was found dead in the ruins near by. A girl who was served uninjured from a neighbor ing building asked the soldiers whether it was dawn. She said she felt that she had slept a long time, but could not see the light. Eight rescues were the result of an entire day's work by 20,000 soldiers, which shows the energy of the task which confronted the government.

At Isola dei Fra the main church collapsed, but the statue of St Dominic, the town's patron saint, was unstunned and is intact, standing in the floor on a hand which is raised in blessing.

Turks Surrender For Food.

Petrograd. The Russians occupied Sarikamish the Turks frequently move their trenches to the first line, and at the first smell of food the Turks throw down their arms and surrender.

Preserve your pet relations to one another. Kindness does not offer your dotish.—Ephetetas.

Scientific Farming

ONION IMPORTANT STAPLE.

Availability to Storage in a Mature State Enhances Its Value.

The onion is one of the most universally used of all vegetables in the United States, says a bulletin of the agricultural experiment station of the University of Illinois. It is used in soups, stews, pickles and sauces and can be found in all large markets in one or both forms throughout the year. Its adaptability to also for in the mature state enhances its value as a storage product. In this truly long-keeping nature also survives half will days and hands of wolves providing amid piles of bodies men seeing frantically out in vain at heaps of wreckage from which come the faint and gradually weakening cries of their loved ones, women and children dying of starvation and exposure, scores of old and young perishing by death great heaps of ruins from which the utmost efforts of the rescuers were unable to drag them in time. There were some of the terrible scenes that the government officials in charge of the relief work in the area devastated by the recent earthquake.

THE ONION IS FOUND IN ALL LARGE MARKETS.

One of the men made crazy by the catastrophe killed an injured survivor who reproached him for loosing a rifled wife shop. Scores of men and women, crazed by grief and hardship, wandered about the country a danger to the living. For those adequate protection even the thousands of soldiers on the scene were insufficient.

One of the most painful cases reported here is that of a young man whose fiance, buried in the ruins, called out to him to save her if he loved her. All day he had been digging desperately at the wreckage, aided by the soldiers who were moved to tears by his grief. Despite their great efforts there was no hope of saving the girl, and her voice gradually became inaudible. The same young man had previously saved himself. He further said his sisters from underneath the walls of his father home, but could not find his aged father.

Strangers were not allowed to approach the towns and villages in the stricken area, where the work of rescue went on without cessation. The dead of Italian towns alive in the ruins and of taking care of the injured survivors and feeding those who are unhurt was so great that attempts to bury the thousands of bodies were abandoned, and they were piled up in great heaps awaiting the moment when there were no more to save.

A royal commissioner assumed charge of the enthusiasm now and ordered the soldiers not to dig into the ruins unless they heard the moans or cries of victims. Officers were specifically detailed to find out the most likely spots for excavation. In Avezzano as a result of systematic exploration of ten survivors were found. Many were all numbed by exhausted and badly injured, and several had to be carried out. Dead and dying were all being amputated.

The ruins are now terribly silent. The burial of the dead was hastened for sanitary reasons.

Various reports from the soldiers show that scores of persons had the poor misfortune escape from death in the catastrophe. Under wrecked houses little children have been found alive, although nearly dead from exposure and cold, but absolutely unhurt by the wrath of Vesuvius and Etna. The ex durance of women and babies was remarkable, for many of them were in bed only of food when saved after long cold, dispiriting and terrible and with the dead bodies of their families buried in debris near them.

The inhabitants of Novak and Ancevitza fled in a panic because of the immense revenue additional heards. Also the crest of Monte Pumdetta 6,100 feet high, due to the earthquake.

The estimate of the number of dead remains in the neighborhood of 30,000. Fifty towns and villages have been destroyed. The following list of dead is claimed not to be definitive: Avezzano 200, Villalago 25, Balnao, 4, Pupoli, 5; Pentina, 4; Barrea, 12.

The mortality in the country, where many immense and buildings collapsed, has not been ascertained.

In Avezzano three table-d-hote only slightly injured were taken from the ruins. Four other children, the oldest seven, also were found. Although exhausted, they kept shouting until they were saved. They promised the soldiers who dug them out that their father would pay them, but he was found dead in the ruins near by. A girl who was served uninjured from a neighbor ing building asked the soldiers whether it was dawn. She said she felt that she had slept a long time, but could not see the light. Eight rescues were the result of an entire day's work by 20,000 soldiers, which shows the energy of the task which confronted the government.

At Isola dei Fra the main church collapsed, but the statue of St Dominic, the town's patron saint, was unstunned and is intact, standing in the floor on a hand which is raised in blessing.

Turks Surrender For Food.

Petrograd. The Russians occupied Sarikamish the Turks frequently move their trenches to the first line, and at the first smell of food the Turks throw down their arms and surrender.

Preserve your pet relations to one another. Kindness does not offer your dotish.—Ephetetas.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, Jan. 25th, 1915.
The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date, Mayor Nicholls presiding.
Aldermen present, Priest, Cartier, Barney and Carey.
Absent Sim and Shapton.
Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Barney that the organization resting seating risk for the purpose of playing basket ball and other indoor sports be evicted their electric light bills providing at the end of the term of two or three months the receipts did not warrant the payment of these bills. Motion carried.
Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Carey that the application of the Wood Brothers be accepted providing they file bonds to meet the approval of the city attorney. Motion carried.
Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Barney that the petition as presented by Dr. A. M. Wilkinson signed by Earnest Aldrich and 59 others all members of the Y. M. C. A. to enforce ordinances against the use of all forms of gambling devices, such as slot machines, punching boards, dice shaking etc., also to pass an ordinance, if such is not in existance, to prohibit the sale of cigarettes to minors such ordinance to take immediate effect was referred to Commerce Charter and Ordinance Committee to report Monday, February first, 1915.
There being no further business the council adjourned.
F. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

Limitations.

If you pass out the punch for to blow,
Keep account the people you do not know;
If you pass out the cigars for to light,
Be sure you don't get a bad of them;
If you pass out the wine, be sure to stop
When you see more noses than enough to Cover the four false floors. Shout one
Of more, and you'll be in and thus
The capacity of the crib greatly is Taxed. Pass out the music, if you
Be so good, but be careful not to let
Your wife hear the phonograph
Play "Love Will Find a Way."

Up and Down.

"What does it mean when the policeman at the crossing holds his arm up perpendicularly?"
"It means that he sure has four horses."—Baltimore American.

Children's Coughs—Children's Colds Both are Serious

When one of your little ones shows symptoms of an approaching cold give it Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey at once. It acts quickly, and prevents the cold growing worse. Very healing—soothe the lungs, loosens the mucus, stops cross the system. It's guaranteed. Only 25c at your Druggist. Buy a bottle today.
Backlund's Arnica Salve for sores.

First publication Jan. 21st

NOTICE

To the owner or owners of any and all interests in, or liens upon the lands herein described:
TAKE NOTICE, That sale has been lawfully made of the following described land for unpaid taxes thereon and that the unredeemed tax title thereto under tax deed or deeds issued thereof, and that you are entitled to redemption thereof, at any time within six months after return of service of this notice, upon payment to the undersigned or to the register in chancery of the county in which the lands lie of all sums paid upon such purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional thereto, and the fees of the sheriff for the service or cost of publication of this notice, to be computed as upon personal service or a declaration as commencement of the further suit or suits, and also all such description without abstract and additional cost, or charges. If payment as aforesaid is not made, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the land.
Description. The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32), township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) west, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.
Amount paid $29.49
Taxes of 1892.
Yours etc.
J. L. CRANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan
State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix.
I, Charles Novak, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and return after carefully inquiry, I am unable to ascertain the whereabouts or post-office address of Adelbert Campbell, a person entitled to be served with the within notice and after diligent and careful inquiry, I am unable to find the name or address of any trustee, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Daniel Campbell, upon whom the within said notice can be made. I further certify that the above notice was delivered to me for service December 7, 1914 at which time I was under sheriff of said County of Charlevoix.
Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 18, 1915. My fees $1.10.
CHARLES NOVAK,
sheriff of said County.

(First Publication January 30)

Foreclosure Notice

Default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage made by Lee Howland and Ann Howland, his wife, mortgagors, to the Charlevoix State Savings Bank, a Michigan corporation, mortgagee, dated August 7, 1911, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the 11th day of August, 1911, in liber 1 of mortgages at page 46, which by power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative and no proceedings at law or or having been instituted to collect the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage the sum of $1,135.50 of principal and interest, and the further sum of $25 and the mortgagee at liberty to purchase said premises, and to foreclose said mortgage by advertisement and sale of the premises therein described at the east front door of the County Court House of Charlevoix County, Michigan, at public vendue, on the 8th day of May, 1915, at the Circuit Court in said County, on the first day of May, A. D. 1915 at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at which sale there will be sold the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and costs, and the attorney fee allowed by law, viz: The west half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-five (25) in township thirty-four (34) north range seven (7) west, Charlevoix County, Michigan.
Dated this 30th day of January, A. D. 1915.
CHARLES H. BOYNTON,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Charlevoix, Michigan.

First publication Jan. 28.

Notice of Hearing Claims Before Court

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.
In the matter of the estate of Cecelia Lachbrook, deceased.
Notice is hereby given that four months from the time date of January A. D. 1915, have been allowed for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to court for examination and adjustment, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said court, at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, on or before the 28th day of April, A. D. 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court on Monday the 28th day of May A. D. 1915 at ten o'clock in the forenoon.
Dated January 28 A. D. 1915.
SEWARD C. TUNNELL,
Judge of Probate.

County Normal Notes

FRED GREGORY

Ruby Hooker was absent from school Thursday and Friday on account of the death of her grandmother, Mrs. Scott, of Evart, Mich.

Ward Gruett was absent from school last Friday.

Glenn Kirby visited the normal room Thursday afternoon.

The class has organized a "house of representatives as an aid to their work in civil government. Ward Gruett was chosen speaker; Clare Thorsen, speaker pro tem; Cleo Thorne, clerk and Fred Gregory, sergeant-at-arms.

The class attended a program given by the girls' chorus of the high school in the assembly room Friday morning.

Mr. A. B. Ball called at the normal room Friday afternoon.

Miss Bessie Allen substituted in Miss Jarvis' room Monday and Tuesday afternoon, during the illness of Miss Jarvis.

Helen Mesch visited the normal room Thursday afternoon.

Debarred.

Mr. Throgmorton—Is it my daughter you want, or is it her money?
Jack Hoverem (amateur champion 100 yards)—Mr. Throgmorton, you surprise me. You know very well that I'm an amateur athlete.
Mr. Throgmorton—What's that got to do with it?
Jack Hoverem—A great deal, sir. It debars me from taking part in any event for money.—New York Mail.

Up and Down.

"What does it mean when the policeman at the crossing holds his arm up perpendicularly?"
"It means that he sure has four horses."—Baltimore American.

Children's Coughs—Children's Colds Both are Serious

When one of your little ones shows symptoms of an approaching cold give it Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey at once. It acts quickly, and prevents the cold growing worse. Very healing—soothe the lungs, loosens the mucus, stops cross the system. It's guaranteed. Only 25c at your Druggist. Buy a bottle today.
Backlund's Arnica Salve for sores.

First publication Jan. 21st

NOTICE

To the owner or owners of any and all interests in, or liens upon the lands herein described:
TAKE NOTICE, That sale has been lawfully made of the following described land for unpaid taxes thereon and that the unredeemed tax title thereto under tax deed or deeds issued thereof, and that you are entitled to redemption thereof, at any time within six months after return of service of this notice, upon payment to the undersigned or to the register in chancery of the county in which the lands lie of all sums paid upon such purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional thereto, and the fees of the sheriff for the service or cost of publication of this notice, to be computed as upon personal service or a declaration as commencement of the further suit or suits, and also all such description without abstract and additional cost, or charges. If payment as aforesaid is not made, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the land.
Description. The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32), township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) west, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.
Amount paid $29.49
Taxes of 1892.
Yours etc.
J. L. CRANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix.
I, Charles Novak, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and return after carefully inquiry, I am unable to ascertain the whereabouts or post-office address of Adelbert Campbell, a person entitled to be served with the within notice and after diligent and careful inquiry, I am unable to find the name or address of any trustee, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Daniel Campbell, upon whom the within said notice can be made. I further certify that the above notice was delivered to me for service December 7, 1914 at which time I was under sheriff of said County of Charlevoix.
Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 18, 1915. My fees $1.10.
CHARLES NOVAK,
sheriff of said County.

(First Publication January 30)

Foreclosure Notice

Default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage made by Lee Howland and Ann Howland, his wife, mortgagors, to the Charlevoix State Savings Bank, a Michigan corporation, mortgagee, dated August 7, 1911, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the 11th day of August, 1911, in liber 1 of mortgages at page 46, which by power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative and no proceedings at law or or having been instituted to collect the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage the sum of $1,135.50 of principal and interest, and the further sum of $25 and the mortgagee at liberty to purchase said premises, and to foreclose said mortgage by advertisement and sale of the premises therein described at the east front door of the County Court House of Charlevoix County, Michigan, at public vendue, on the 8th day of May, A. D. 1915 at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at which sale there will be sold the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and costs, and the attorney fee allowed by law, viz: The west half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-five (25) in township thirty-four (34) north range seven (7) west, Charlevoix County, Michigan.
Dated this 30th day of January, A. D. 1915.
CHARLES H. BOYNTON,
Attorney for Mortgagee,
Charlevoix, Michigan.

First publication Jan. 28.

Notice of Hearing Claims Before Court

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.
In the matter of the estate of Cecelia Lachbrook, deceased.
Notice is hereby given that four months from the time date of January A. D. 1915, have been allowed for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to court for examination and adjustment, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said court, at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, on or before the 28th day of April, A. D. 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court on Monday the 28th day of May A. D. 1915 at ten o'clock in the forenoon.
Dated January 28 A. D. 1915.
SEWARD C. TUNNELL,
Judge of Probate.

Religious Notes

Congregational Church
(STANDING NOTICES)
Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.
Bible School, 12 o'clock.
Young People's Meeting, 6:30 p. m.
Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT HORTON)
Bible School at 2:00 p. m.
Preaching, 3:00 p. m.

Baptist Church
Morning service at 10:30
Bible School at 11:45 a. m.
Junior League at 3:00
B. Y. P. U. at 6:30 p. m.
Evening service at 7:30
Thursday evening at 7:30

Christian Science
Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.
Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Love."
Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.
Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service
8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:00 a. m. —High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.
Masses during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church
Morning Prayer at 11:00.
Sunday School at 12:00 m.
Evening Prayer at 7:30.

Methodist Church.
A. M.—"The Test."
P. M. —"Social Sins."

GLASSES FITTED
CONSULT
J. LEAHY
Optometrist
Expert on Eye Strain
Headache, Dizziness, Nervousness, and all other symptoms of Eye Strain cured.
Crossed Eyes Straightened Without an Operation.
Fitting Children's Eyes a Specialty.
Difficult Cases Solicited.
Glasses Guaranteed to Fit.
Date:- Monday, February 1, ONE DAY ONLY!
At Hotel Charlevoix.

Northern Michigan
The Ellsworth board of trade has named the following officers for the ensuing year: E. L. Skinner, president; M. Strait, vice president; G. C. Towns, secretary; H. J. Tanner, treasurer. The local association will make an attempt, during the coming year, to have its annual meeting, a banquet will be held by the association January 22, in the local opera house.
The Antrim iron company of Mancelona is shipping from 15 to 25 carloads of acetate daily. Acetate is used in the manufacture of smokeless powder and the demand for the product has been exceedingly heavy of late, due to the war in Europe. The company has found it necessary to install eight more retorts to be added in connection with its furnaces here. The improvements represent an outlay of $150,000.
Petoskey News: Word was received in Petoskey Friday morning announcing the death of Mathew F. Guinon, former well known attorney and resident of Petoskey, who died of pneumonia at Los Angeles, Cal., Friday, Jan. 15. Interment was made in that city. Mr. Guinon for years had an office over what is now the Quinlin company offices and practiced law in this county. He was a member of both Odd Fellow bodies being a veteran Odd Fellow, also a veteran in the Knights of Pythias lodge, having been a member of the order for nearly thirty years. He was also a member of the Court of Honor in Petoskey. He moved to California several years ago and is survived by his wife who still resides in that state.
Mrs. Clara Howhall, who died recently at Central Lake, was the Torch lake born in Painesville, Ohio, December 27, 1862. She married to Charles R. Marshall February 9, 1879, and in December, 1890, moved to Michigan and settled at Alma, which was her home until a few years ago. In October, 1901, Mr. Marshall died, and November 1, 1902, she was married to Daniel Flanagin, who died at Antrim December 24, 1905. It was during the last year of Mr. Flanagin's life, that Mrs. Flanagin's health broke down from constant attendance at the bedside of her sick husband. She had poor health the remainder of life. After Mr. Flanagin's death she lived with her daughter, Mrs. Lashbrook, at Torch Lake several years before moving to this village. She made Central Lake her home the rest of her life, dying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lashbrook on January 21 inst. She was 62 years and 10 days old.

MONEY SAVING PRICES
January 22nd - to - February 1st

SILKS
1 yd wide Silk Poplin, regular $1.00 grade, per yd 50c
1 yd wide guaranteed lining satins, all colors, yd. 75c
Fancy silks, per yard ... 35c

DRESS GOODS
$1.25 54 inch Suiting, per yd ... 85c
$2.00 54 inch Serge, per yd ... $1.25
One Special Lot 50c Serges, per yard ... 35c

FLANNELETTES
For Dresses, Kimonas and Dressing Sacques.
15c quality, per yd ... 9½c
12½c quality, per yd ... 8c

SILKOLINES
Plain and Fancy colors, per yd ... 8½c

CRETONES
25c grade at ... 18c
10c grade at ... 8c

CURTAIN SCRIMS
25c and 15c Curtain Scrims per yd ... 10c

SWEATERS
Ladies' $3.50 Sweaters at ... $2.00
Children's $2.00 Sweaters at ... $1.00
50c and 25c Mufflers at ... 19c
50c Mittens and Gloves at ... 35c
25c Mittens and Gloves at ... 19c
25c Hoods at ... 19c

COATS
Ladies' Coats at ... $5.00
Children's Coats at ... $3.00 & $4.00

UNDERWEAR
Women's—
$2.25 All Wool Union Suits at ... $1.65
$1.50 Part Wool Union Suits at ... $1.19
$1.00 Fleeced Lined Union suits ... 75c
50c " " " ... 39c
$1.00 All wool Pants and Vests ... 75c
50c Fleeced " " " ... 39c
25c " " " ... 19c
Misses 50c Union Suits at ... 39c
Children's all wool garments 40c off on each suit.
Children's Outing Flannel gowns and sleeping suits 35c

BLANKETS
All wool Blankets $5.00 grade at ... $3.50
Imperial Blankets $1.25 grade at ... 98c

A. E. Mason's Dept. Store

Grippy? Feverish? Chest Stuffy? Bad Cough?
Drive those Ugly and Annoying Feelings Away with Dr. King's New Discovery—Pleasant, Soothing, Healing.
No need to suffer those annoying, it off, get a 50c bottle to-day and start using at once.
Mr. A. Cooper, Oswego, N. Y., says: "It is a real pleasure to testify to the excellent qualities of Dr. King's New Discovery. I have for many years been afflicted with a Cough that had become chronic, and nothing ever prevented quick coughing until I used Dr. King's New Discovery."
Trial bottle mailed on receipt of 4c. stamps.
H. E. BUCKLEN & CO., 439 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

10 Great Serials
full of life and action, filled with the joys of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make
The YOUTH'S COMPANION
Better Than Ever in 1915
Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.
52 Times a Year —not 12.
Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.
THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE
CUT THIS OUT
send now, in the name of the COMPANION for 1915 with $2.00 for The COMPANION and receive all the issues of the COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914 FREE
FREE THE YOUTH'S COMPANION FOR 1915 FREE
THEN THE COMPANION FOR 1916 FREE
SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

Caught.

"I was looking at some new style twenty dollar hats today," said his wife, "and I thought this one home to see what you think of it."
"Twenty!" said her husband.
"That's what I thought. This is a cheap five dollar hat. Let me have $15."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Eyes of a Fly.

Naturalists state that the common blowbottle fly possesses between 4,000 and 5,000 little eyes when viewed on her a good microscope, although to the naked eye it appears to have only two. They are six sided and fastened together like the cells in a honeycomb.

Hit Patience.

If father sneaks home home at morning Sundays and doesn't sill or mains a few of his stickers he spends the rest of the week breaking about his patience.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

How to Use Eno's Baking Powder Cans.

If the empty baking powder cans are saved and the tins pierced with holes they may be utilized for a number of small kitchen purposes. They make excellent sugar shakers when filled with fine small pieces of soap. They may be filled with sugar powder, sand, borax or cleaning fluid. They are also very handy in the laundry as sprinkers.

Charlevoix Rock Product Company,
Producers and Manufacturers of
Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Fluxing
Sugar Stone.
For prompt city delivery Call Lee Howland.
Phone 297.

H. D. Marshall,
"The Old Reliable"
CONTRACTOR FOR
Sewerage, Water Pipes, Cess Pools, Basements.
All Kinds of Excavating.
DISINFECTED!
All Work Guaranteed.
Estimates Furnished.
H. D. MARSHALL,
Charlevoix, Michigan

25 Post Cards 10c
ASSORTED
Best Wishes, Greetings, Lovers, Birthday etc. Also your name in our Post Card Exchange free on request, and free sample copy of the Family Story Paper; also Catalogue and Premium List. Enclose 10c stamps for return postage, etc.
FAMILY STORY PAPER
24-26 Vandewater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction
Auto and Boat Supplies.
214 Bridge St. - Phone 134
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of this city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Contractor
Estimates furnished. Phone 333 Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD,
—DENTIST—
Office in Old Peninsula Block, Over R. A. Lamson & Co's Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139.

Lisle Shanahan,
Attorney at Law.
Office in County Bank Bldg.

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Offices in Priest's Block.
Charlevoix - Michigan

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS SHOULD USE
The Best Remedy for all forms of Rheumatism
LUI-TACO SCIATICA, COUT NEURALGIA AND KIDNEY TROUBLES
DROPS
STOP THE PAIN
Gives Quick Relief
Sold by all Druggists
Price 50 Cents
SAMPLE "DROPS" FREE ON REQUEST
Lui-Taco Laboratories, Dept. 6, Detroit, Mich.

VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, February 4, 1915. — NUMBER 42

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

A HOME BANK UNDER STATE SUPERVISION
In This Age of Reciprocity--
the business man prefers the bank which remembers and performs its obligations to the Public from which it draws its support.
Fully appreciative of these obligations, The Charlevoix State Savings Bank strives in legitimate ways to cooperate with the business interests, large and small, of Charlevoix and Michigan.
Extending all the facilities offered by a conservative and progressive Institution.
CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
W. J. RAGHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't. Cashier.

J. L. CRANE
Special Values for Spring 1915
Just arrived and Specially Priced for Early Sales

New Imperial Silks
Leno Stripe floral patterns 26 inch wide-a most popular weave-for waists, evening full shades—especially priced for early purchase, yd ... 50c

New Oriental Laces
A fortunate purchase of Oriental laces, 16 to 18 in. wide new patterns for spring 1915 at the lowest price ever offered yd ... 8c

Men's Silk Ties
New spring patterns in all silk flowing end men's ties. Special price for this lot ... 29c

New Commodore Percales
Finest finish of any Percale in the market. Full 36 inch. New Spring Patterns ... 12½c

New Coverall Aprons
Full size-made of American shirting prints-taped kimono sleeves-belted back-for early purchase ... 29c

New Ladies' Waists
Spring 1915
Spring Waists of Voiles Crepes, and other favorite materials in plain white wash waists, latest patterns and styles. $1.50 and $1.25 $1.00 for early buyers values.

New Striped Wool Danish Cloth
A very tasty fabric for dresses and skirts-unexcelled for Children's school wear 40 inches wide per yd ... 25c

ALL SILK CREPE-DE-CHENES
40 inch Heavy Crepe-de-Chene—New Spring shades including the New Sand Shade yd ... $1.25

LOCAL NEWS.

Very much in evidence these days—snow shovels and sox.

"Bob" Bridge arrived home Saturday for a week's vacation.

There will be an Equal Suffrage meeting in the high school music room on Friday afternoon of this week, at three o'clock.

R. F. Sloan, while on a business trip to Detroit last week, made a run to Chattaqua to visit his mother and brother.

The plumbing and wiring contractors have begun work on the Beach Hotel extension and the carpenter work is progressing.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church will serve a New England supper Wednesday, Feb. 10th. All you can eat for 25 cents.

The Dictionary Club will meet Thursday of this week with Mrs. Armstrong at 2:30 p. m. Subject, "Books." Roll call, "Our Favorite Books."

The Masonic house committee announce another dancing party for Friday night of this week. Good music and old-fashioned dances. Bill, 25 cents.

All should hear the sermon on the "Dance" Sunday night. If the elder is home on the subject, need him an invitation to the next dance.

Listen! Don't forget the big masquerade dance given by our five department stores Wednesday night, February 22nd. Everybody should talk about it. Help the boys.

The ice people say the ice is perfect in quality—better than last year. The "cakes" are sixteen inches square and all blue ice. It will be a big industry the most of this month.

An early morning fire alarm Friday brought out the departments to quench an incipient blaze that started in the furnace room of Olaf Nordrum's residence. Very little damage was done.

Word has been received here of the death Sunday, at Brooksville, Misc., of Miss Rosa Holmes, daughter of the late Robert O'Neill, and grand-daughter of Capt. Harrison Berdan, of this city.

With Supt. Craig in the lead, the young fellers of the high school are doing some ground and lofty ski business out on the precipitous sides of Mt. McSauba. "Great sport," says the superintendent.

Plans are being prepared and bids solicited for the construction of a new vault at the court house provided for by the board of supervisors at the October session. The vault will be in the basement, and will be used for storing old records and files.

Temperature in Chicago Friday morning 20 below zero, in Charlevoix 10 below. This is the comparative record between the two cities thus far this winter. Southern Michigan points show similar comparisons. And yet, there are people who call it the "frigid north."

At the urgent request of members of every denomination in the city, Rev. Quinton Walker will preach next Sunday night on the subject, "Why Christians Ought Not to Dance." All should hear a full and fearless treatment of this vital topic. If you don't want the facts stay at home. All are cordially invited, but especially the Christians that dance.

On Saturday evening the old soldiers and their families to the number of over thirty sat down to a luck decent on the home of J. M. Felts and with readings and other diversions, had a most enjoyable time. The old boys, though averaging on the octogenarian still with their best girls fully justified the lines:

"Four score life twenty,
Heads as flakes and legs,
In earth's wide school taught
All are girls and boys."

Bracken & Freiles last week bought the cigar business of Chas. Novak, and will continue to manufacture the same Novak brands of goods that have established a deserved popularity throughout this section. The members of the new firm have been in the employ of Mr. Novak for several years, are skilled workmen, and will push their goods to the limit. Both are well known and reliable men, and deserve well of the smoking public. Mr. Novak will apply himself entirely to the duties of sheriff.

Rural carriers the country over will get a straight salary of $1,200 per year, unless the senate takes liberties with the appropriation bill as passed by the house. Congressman Fordney of Michigan had the fight for the increased salary for the rural carriers. Last year it was supposed that all carriers having the standard route of 24 miles would receive this salary. But there was a joker in the bill which permitted the postmaster general wide latitude. Under various rules and regulations Mr. Bor lason with held the raise from $1,100 to $1,200 from the vast majority of carriers. Mr. Beakes secured a provision in the present bill making the raise mandatory.

BELGIAN SOLDIERS DIGGING TRENCHES.

Photo by Associated Press Association.

Y. M. C. A.

Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, was one of the first, if not the first, efficient expert. Since the time he injected system into the work which Moses had undertaken for the Lord the trend has been toward the elimination of things that lessened efficiency and the addition of those things which tended to heighten efficiency. Big business has employed experts to put their establishments of a basis of the utmost efficiency and has had its ear to the ground to discover new ways in which to increase the net earning. Big business including the manufacturers of intoxicants, has discovered that the consumption of liquor by its employees lessens their power to produce. Today the sober man is in demand. Though a long time in coming to this conclusion big business must in given credit for coming to the same conclusion relative to the cigarette in a much shorter time. Few people know exactly what the attitude of big business is toward what Henry Ford calls "The Little White Slaver."

On Monday February 8th Chas. M. Carson, superintendent of the Cadillac Motor Car Co., comes to Charlevoix to tell the young people of the public schools why big business has catalogued the cigarette with liquor as an efficiency reducer. Mr. Carson comes under the auspices of the County Y. M. C. A. Committee and will speak at the high school at 9:30 a. m. on the above mentioned date.

The cooperation of the local W. C. T. U. will make it possible, at the time of Mr. Carson's lecture, to put in the hands of all school boys a copy of Henry Ford's reply to the American Tobacco Co. which was a "The Case Against the Little White Slaver."

M. E. SUNDAY SCHOOL
PUTTING ITSELF ON THE MAP OF CHARLEVOIX

Three hundred and three people attended the Methodist Sunday School last Sunday. Plans are being executed for making it four hundred during February.

This school is enrolling many new members each Sunday. Every member old or new is a booster for his school. "Leaders" and "Round to Work" buttons are seen on every street in the city. George Block and James Lieuwenga are the "leaders" who lead these divisions in a campaign for new members and more regular attendance of old members.

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR
Office, 113 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9
SUBSCRIPTIONS.
Three Months - - - $ .45
Six Months - - - - .90
One Year - - - - - 1.00

QUAKE VICTIMS DRIVEN INSANE

Soldiers Worked Day and Night to Rescue Those Alive.

BRAVE CHILDREN ARE SAVED

Survivors Menaced by Madmen Wandering Aimlessly Around the Ruins, Young Women's Frenzy Worse—All Day to Rescue Helpless Cross Gradually Became Insufferable.

Rome.—Hamless roaming aimlessly about, mourning the sole survivors; half wild dogs and bands of women prowling amid piles of bodies, men tearing frantically out in rain at heaps of wreckage from which came the faint and gradually weakening cries of their loved ones, women and children dying of starvation and exposure, such is the situation in Avezzano, the death great heaps of ruins from which the utmost efforts of the rescuers were unable to drag them in time—these were some of the terrible stories from the diversions officials in charge of the relief work in the area devastated by the recent earthquake.

One of the men made out by the catastrophe killed go injured survivor who refused aid his for losing a cribed wine shop. Scores of men and women, crazed by grief and hardship, wandered about the country, a danger to the living, for whom adequate protection even the thousands of soldiers on the scene were insufficient.

One of the most painful cases reported here is that of a young man, whose fiancee, injured by grief and hardship, wandered about the country, a danger to the living, for whom adequate protection even the thousands of soldiers on the scene were insufficient.

The young man reported the case of his fiancee to the soldiers, who were moved to tears by the grief. Despite their great efforts there was no hope of saving the girl, and her voice gradually became inaudible. The same young man had previously saved himself, his mother and his sisters from underneath the walls of his father's home, but could not find his aged father.

Strangers were not allowed to approach the towns and villages in the stricken area, where the work of rescue went on without cessation. The task of digging out those alive in the ruins and of taking care of the injured survivors and feeding those who are without food or shelter that attempts to bury the thousands of bodies were abandoned, and they were piled on the great heaps awaiting the moment when there were no more to save.

A royal commissioner assumed charge of the earthquake area and ordered the soldiers not to dig into the ruins unless they heard the moans or cries of victims. Officers were needlessly detailed to find out the most dense spots of devastation in Avezzano as a result of systematic exploration of ten survivors were rescued. They were all severely injured and badly injured, and several had to be operated upon, crushed limbs and legs being amputated.

The ruins are now terribly silent. The burial of the dead was hastened for sanitary reasons.

Various reports from the soldiers show that scores of persons had the most marvelous escapes from death in the catastrophe. Underwrecked houses little children have been found alive, although nearly dead from exposure and cold, but absolutely unhurt by the crash of their old memory. The endurance of women and children was remarkable, for many of them were injured only of food when saved after long efforts. Immediately in tears and with the dead bodies of their families buried in debris near them.

The inhabitants of Balsorano and Raccaviva fled in a panic because of the immense rumbling subterranean noise the crest of Mount Pizzodeste, 6,100 feet high, due to the earthquake.

The estimate of the number of dead remains in the neighborhood of 30,000. Fifty towns and villages have been destroyed. The following list of dead is demanded but not destroyed villages in the Salmona district is now available: Avezzano, 290; Villalago, 23; Scanno, 4; Popoli, 5; Pentina, 4; Barrea, 12.

The mortality in the country, where many farmhouses and buildings collapsed, has not been ascertained.

In Avezzano three hundred only slightly injured were taken from the ruins. Four other children, the oldest seven, also were found. Although exhausted, they kept shouting until they were saved. They thought the soldiers who dug them out (but their father would say them, but he was found dead in the ruins near by. A girl who was saved unscathed from a collapsing building asked the soldiers where her mother was. She said she fell ill and had slept a long time, but could not see the light. Eight rescues were the result of an entire day's work by 20,000 soldiers, which shows the energy of the men and which confounded the government.

At Lucoli, in the main church collapsed, but the church of the Sisters, the town's parish priest, was unharmed and he helped, step by step, from a hand which is refused to bleeding.

Turks Surrender For Food.

Petrograd.—The Russians engaged against the Turks frequently more their kinsmen to the first time, and at the first smell of food the Turks throw down their arms and surrender.

Preserve your old resistance in other men. Time—Instalment Sons not effect your decision.—Exchange.

THE DOGS IN EVENT IN ALL LARGE MEN SCENE.

Hardly moving some nature also adapts itself to the situation. Shipment of dogs, cats and sentiner for a considerable time. Dogs are very sensitive to the shaking.

Dogs are very sensitive to the rocking, and small dogs in danger of freezing. Cats may move in either method of or of a small size, either sitting or lying on the top of a strong shed and onion crates. Cats are very sensitive to the rocking and are inclined to move with it on one side. The cats are very sensitive to the rocking and are inclined to move with it on one side. The cats are very sensitive to the rocking and are inclined to move with it on one side.

Scientific Farming

UNION IMPORTANT STAPLE.

Acceptability to Storage is a Matter Some Substance Its Value.

The union is one of the most important staple crops grown in the United States, says a bulletin of the agricultural experiment station of the University of Illinois. It is used in both its immature and mature stages. It may be found in all climates, and is grown in both forms throughout the world. Its adaptability to storage in the mature state, coupled with its value as a supply product, its rela

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, Jan. 25th, 1915.

The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date, Mayor Nicholls presiding.

Alderman present Priest, Cartier, Barney and Casey.

Absent Sen and Shapton.

Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Barney that the organization renting skating rink for the purpose of playing basket ball and other indoor sports be rebated their electric light bills providing at the end of the term of two or three months the receipts did not warrant the payment of these bills. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Casey that the application of the Wood Brothers be accepted providing they file bonds to meet the approval of the city attorney. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Barney that the petition as presented by Dr. A. M. Wilkinson signed by Earnest Aldrich and 59 others all members of the Y. M. C. A. to enforce ordinances against the use of all forms of gambling devices such as slot machines, punching boards, dice shaking etc., also to pass an ordinance, if such is not in existance, to prohibit the sale of cigarettes to minors such ordinance to take immediate effect was referred to Commerce Charter and Ordinance Committee to report Monday February first, 1915.

There being no further business the council adjourned.

P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

Lumbermen.

[illegible]

Kind of [illegible] do height of the [illegible]

[illegible] Ever [illegible] Ever [illegible]

In a river [illegible] a half [illegible]

That's no use [illegible] now we start you

[illegible]

A [illegible] or in whistle when a [illegible]

[illegible]

If you and get [illegible] a [illegible] or [illegible]

[illegible]

What do we actually [illegible] time?

Why, we [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] up to [illegible] a [illegible]

Look! Look! [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Look the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

You needn't talk to me [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

If you [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] half a pint [illegible]

[illegible]

Don't [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a [illegible]

Ah, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[

HUMOROUS INCIDENTS in the LIFE of LINCOLN

ST. GAUDENS' STATUE OF LINCOLN
LINCOLN PARK, CHICAGO

ABRAHAM LINCOLN
BIRTHPLACE

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

It is difficult to think of Abe Lincoln, born in a small log cabin, surrounded by hardship and sorrow in early youth, who won success by hard struggling, and whose last years were among the most serious and tense that ever confronted any president, as a humorist. It is more unusual because his countenance was extremely sad and seeking, and his nature was so tender and sympathetic as to often make him almost melancholy. No man ever felt the responsibilities our nation had imposed on him more acutely than he did, and no president ever succeeded in acting according to popular opinion without being cursed by popular whims and caprices, better than did he. Though often completely weighted down by the cares and trials of the nation during the most critical period of its history, he succeeded in cheering himself, those about him and the people.

There are many charming and humorous stories interwined with his early boyhood, several told by the school mates who worked for him. She says that he often squatted himself out on the floor and worked to write his name. He was no more easily satisfied with these early efforts than with his later undertakings. But after he had worked and struggled and knew he had done his best, he got up and began to criticize his work. "Then he set to and made it over a time. 'Look at that! will you, Abraham Lincoln. Don't look a blood bit like me. And he would sit musing at it, a spell.'

Though he did not mind hard work and while still a young boy could swing an ax with the ease of a grown man, he was happiest when he had a book near him. As his mamma says: "Reuna to me now! Reuna to me! Ever after he was twelve that he didn't have a book somewhere round. He'd put a book inside his shirt and fill his pockets with corn dodgers an go off to plow or hoe. When noon came he'd set down under a tree an' read an' eat. Or he would come to the house at night he'd take a cheer back by the chimbly, put his feet on the rung, get out his books and read."

'Aunt Sairy' never let the children pester him she always said that he was going to be a great man some day and she wasn't goin' to have him hindered.

When Lincoln started out to make a living and a name for himself, he soon learned that life is not all sunshine for the boy or girl who must accomplish everything by their own hard consecutive effort and work. Though the situation often looked exceedingly dark and his work often resulted in failure, he had some friends to help him on than he at first knew. He was wonderfully strong. What exhausted other men seemed to act on him as a tonic. Once he was working in a small town where there was a man by the name of Armstrong. When the new man came to the place his strength and courage were sure to be tested with Armstrong. The newcomer never always got through this same ordeal, and Abe with the rest. Much to the surprise of both camps Armstrong was defeated. Everybody was of the one opinion that Abe Lincoln was the best and strongest man that ever broke into the camp. To show that there was no pride and boast in this victory, he became a friend of the Armstrong family. Mrs Armstrong soon grew so fond of him that she treated him as a relative, and she often feed him dried venison and brush away the sadness from his face by hugs and kisses.

Abe friends did not have to work long to discover that he was an exceedingly poor business man. One failure came after another. These showed the real strength and character of the man. He never complained nor fretted because success was not coming his way.

He was determined, however much luck turned against him, to be honest and keep his hands clean. He often told his friends that he preferred to go without a square meal than to lose a night's rest through a guilty or an annoyed conscience. The following story is one of the many illustrations that he lived up to this statement. It was while he was doing business as a merchant that a farmer's wife brought something of his which needed weighing and computation. She had come some miles from home. It was only after she had discovered that he had overcharged her thirty cents, and he walked four miles to correct the mistake. A friend heard of this incident joked with him about it, when the humorous Abe answered: "This is a joke, but a serious matter I know that this customer needs the thirty cents more than do I."

Though this sense of humor was natural to him, he realized when still a young boy that a pleasant way and a joke sometimes helped a person life easier and sweeter. He loved to listen to a good joke and loved to tell one. He had a wonderful memory, and this helped him in making other folks' stories his own. Good stories were so highly prized by him that he stored them away in his memory with jealous care, and used them as the occasion arose when he had an appropriate one in mind. I am only a retail dealer. A pinch of mental snuff.

When his friends complimented him on the way he could tell a story, he would have to have a laugh it away with a joke, to show that he appreciated their friendship and still that he refused to be spoiled by fulsome flattery. The following is a story in point. One day a friend shook hands with him and said: Mr. President, it is some time since I saw you in Illinois." "Yes," came the jovial answer, "I am about the same as the old horse who was put in a pasture to graze. A neighbor, seeing the horse after she had been there some time, exclaimed: 'Why, old horse, you have grown in size, but she looks now about the same as when you first put her in.' She neither recipes nor Recipes! That's just about the way it is with me."

Two qualities he had in common with the same man after he was made president of the United States that he was when he began to make a reputation for himself. One was his sense of humor, which never allowed him to become self-conscious, and the other his wonderful faith in God and in his fellow men. His friends never hesitated to approach him to ask him a favor nor tell him a funny story. A friend says: "One day on board ship I showed him in Harper's Weekly a funny little rhyme. He was so amusing that the president sat down and sprawled himself on the deck and said: 'Read me your poem.' I handed him the knife and he cut the piece from the paper, saying: 'Not a very dignified position for the president of the United States, but eminently comfortable for that purpose.'"

Lincoln was another of his favorite recreations. He loved to hear the boys sling their songs in the woods, and loved homely ballads and simple diction. The greatest favor a friend or soldier could show him was to sing simple tunes. As one friend admits: "Often have I seen him in tears while I was rendering in my poor way a homely melody."

He found great delight in the laughter and pranks of children. He allowed his own love great freedom in the White House. He often let their mischievousness go unpunished because every thing which children have the recreation and pleasure. The keeper in the White House tells this story showing his love for children: "We were walking over to the war department. Just as we got to the door a little boy came in sobbing and having another at her side got in our way I took hold of the little girl gently and put her to one side to the president could pass.

"'That's all right, that's all right,' the president said, as though he was displeased that I had disturbed the child."

It was his sense of humor that enabled him to bear poverty lightly. Honest surroundings did not appeal to him; he was as content in the log cabin where he was born as in the White House. The plainest suits pleased his tastes. Gradients of wealth was wholly unknown to him. If he was proud about anything it was his knowledge and nothing more. The following story is told about him and will prove this point. He was asked to give a lecture in the Illinois college for the library fund. When the lecture wanyerer and the money passed out he went up to the librarian and said: "I notice that there are not many listeners here tonight; I don't think we made much on this lecture." to reply the official said: "When we go for the rest of the hall, music and advertising and your compensation there will not be much left for the library." Mr Lincoln replied: "Well, both be hopeful; pay me my railroad fare and the fifty cents that my supper cost me and you can have the rest."

This lovality was largely because he felt the sorrows and hardships that come to most men and women, and he did everything in his power to lighten their burdens. As he said to a friend: "When I am dead I wish my friends to remember that I always pluck a thorn and plant a rose when possible."

He was beloved by thousands and thousands of people. Many who believed in slavery appreciated the grand character of the man. And it was his strong and courageous personality that converted thousands of men to believe that slavery was wrong. But no one loved him so well as the colored people. His words were always on their lips. An old colored man once said at a meeting in South Carolina: "Brederin, you don't know what you're talkin' about. Now you just listen to me. Massa Linkin he's everywhere. He knows everything. He walk de earth like de Lord."

When his soul was most troubled he would try and ease himself by a joke. There was so much sadness in his makeup that he found this the best safety-valve.

This sense of humor gave him wonderful faith and courage. He was one of the last to advocate drastic measures in deciding the slave question. However, as soon as the time came he was ready for any emergency. Here! Jim gits me Jonie Norrie (a clerk of court well up in politics and prominent in the party) to carve a story, and I'll do for the fellow—a typical example of his lordship's judicial mind.

A carriage said to be 200 years old is still in service at Petersham, Mass.

Dr. Marden's Uplift Talks

BY ORISON SWETT MARDEN.

PICKING UP KNOWLEDGE BY THE WAY.

I often receive letters from young people, complaining that it is impossible for them to attend school or college because they have to work, and thus they lose all the opportunity to acquire an education.

Did you ever stop to think, my young complaining friends, that a great many of the most prominent men of today have been self-educated? I do not mean that they have worked their way through school or college, but that they have actually gathered an education in the widest and best sense by their own efforts, with little or no actual schooling.

Thomas A. Edison had only a few months' regular schooling for his parents were poor, and at twelve years of age he had to earn his own living. But he began reading "solid books" very early. When only boy he was absorbed in Gibbons' "Home", and Hume's "England," and had already read the biographies of many great and noble men.

Andrew Carnegie had only an elementary school education, but by reading and studying in his leisure moments he acquired the culture that has fruited in several hundred many of magazine articles on topics of world-wide interest, to say nothing of his business accomplishments.

Prof. William J. McGlee, who recently left the United States bureau of ethnology after remarkable geologic and ethnological achievements, was a blacksmith in Iowa when he became a study geology, the higher mathematics and languages. He was made head of the department of ethnology at the Louisiana Purchase exposition, and is now one of the foremost ethnologists of the world.

Those who complain that you have no opportunity to get an education, read the lives of men who have risen from obscurity to great power by self-education, biographies like that of Franklin, of Lincoln, of Garfield, President Marshall, men who from the direst poverty, by sheer force of their own will power, have lifted themselves into the highest stations of the land.

Did it ever occur to you that you are right now in the greatest of all universities, the university of life, where you are meeting people every day from whom you can learn something valuable, no matter how humble they may be?

If you are ambitious you can work knowledge every moment of your life. Every piece of work you do, every human being you meet is a study for you.

If the young people who long for knowledge and think they are so deprived of it because of their unfortunate position as wage-earners could be made to see that their opportunity is thus in their to drink in wisdom, to every break in their work picking knowledge through their very pores. The results of all the schools and all the colleges and universities of the past are spread out here before our eyes in the civilization that now is. There never was such a time for picking up knowledge from the air.

To the busy worker our free public libraries are a veritable university. Water-Heater-in a Faucet.

One of the novelties put out by inventors of electrical devices is a water heater which is attached to the water faucet over a hand basin. The handle of the faucet controls the electric current, which is carried to the heater device from the regular lighting circuit by turning the handle in one direction cold water flows direct from the faucet, and by turning it in the opposite direction the water is instantaneously heated by flowing through the device.—The Pathfinder.

A POTATO KING

DR. YOU KNOW, MR. FARMER.

"If I were a farmer boy, or a boy without capital, I would devote the entire energy, ingenuity, and perseverance of my nature to the Potato Crop of the Red River Valley, alone story in the John A. Salzer Seed Co.'s Catalogue such a bargain chain—Adv.

That's about the Mr. Schroeder's, the self-made Potato King, comes from a warm heart, a level head, an active hand, and above all, a successful Potato grower!

For 10c in Postage

We gladly mail our Catalog and sample package of Tea Peas, Prize Corn, Snails, Wedding Bells, 170 Varieties of Wonderful Regrowing Vegetables, Beautiful Flowers, Prize Pumpkins, Big Potatoes, Dwarf Peas, Jerusalem, the Size Filler, etc., etc.

Or Send 12c

And we will mail you our big Catalog and six generous packages, Early Cabbage, Parsnip, Cucumber, Lettuce, Radish, Onion—Sensational lots and lots of juicy delicious Vegetables, Flowers, the early Spring Catalog.

Or send to John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 7103, La Crosse, Wis., twenty cents (stamps or coin) for Seed Potatoes and their big catalog.

Decrease in Contagious Diseases.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are a special remedy in heart and arterial diseases, nervous prostration and dropsy. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a cure. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a cure. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a cure

Ladies' House Dresses...

We are showing an extensive assortment of House Dresses that cannot be excelled. It will not pay you to get the goods and make them as these are sold at such low price.

See the Window Display.

One Half Off On Winter Coats.

Go to ---LEVINSON'S--- Get the Habit

C. Danto & Son.

THE - STORE - OF - QUALITY — WHERE - ALL - GOODS - ARE - FRESH

It does not cost any more at our store where everything is fresh and the prices right than it does to trade anywhere else. Our aim is to get what you want at a right price; what we have not got we are willing to get for you.

WE GIVE STAMPS.

Remember, Our Telephone is Number 12.

C. DANTO & SON.

212 Bridge St. — Phone No. 12 — Phone No. 61

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

The following rules to prevent the spread of the infection are set down by W. Scott Matthews, Illinois food commissioner.

Do not visit farms or districts where the disease is prevalent or suspected.

Do not purchase feed or bedding from infected districts.

Do not feed swill which is liable to lacerate the mouth.

Keep dogs tied up. All stray animals, including animals of game species should be killed.

Do not permit visitors other than officers or veterinarians to inspect your animals.

All buildings, feed lots, yards and equipment should be kept in a clean and sanitary condition. Defaming troughs should be particularly looked after.

Keep all live stock off the high ways.

Wash and scald all milk cans as soon as they are returned to the farm.

The following disinfectants will destroy foot and mouth germs in one hour: Good white washes, solution of carbolic acid 5 per cent, solution of washing soda 2 per cent, or hydrochloric (muriatic) acid, 1 per cent.

Disinfectants such as bichloride not unless time are being used dry and on the hands and should not be used on the feet of animals.

If the disease is present in your vicinity, spray barns thoroughly either with carbolic cresol solution or a solution of chlorinated lime made according to these directions: Unslaked lime, twenty-two pounds; water, fifty gallons.

Water used should be lukewarm. Stretch the solution before placing it in the sprayer. Spray the barns soon after the cattle are turned out each morning.

The germ is not easily killed by cold. Boiling will destroy it in a minute.

Try This For Your Cold.

Coughs and Colds unless checked often lead to serious results.

Colds are caused by germs infesting and irritating the sensitive lining of the Nose, Throat, Bronchial Tubes. Relief is obtained by killing these germs, then healing and soothing the inflamed membranes.

This is just how Dr. King's New Discovery acts. It is Antiseptic—Kills the germs. Then it is Healing—Soothing, relieving the irritation. Stops the Cough at once. Try a bottle. Get a 50c bottle from your Druggist, start taking it soon you will be cured in a convenient relief. Here's proof. A. Johnson, Shongo, N. Y., writes: "King's New Discovery is the best cough medicine made, and I swear by it. Have it saved my life several times, and when I contracted a severe cough, before trying all of your kinds I took one bottle, and several bottles cured me."

Excellent for Children and Delicate Women. It is Mild, Pleasant and Effective.

Trial bottle free at our store.

R. E. BUCKLEN & CO.
500 North Broad St. — Lyons, Mich.

Pastures on Roads.

A nuisance that ought to be completely banished from the public roads is the pasturing of cattle, sheep, or other stock upon the roadsides. It is a tremendous accomplishment. One hundred million people will have for their daily use a system of communication that knows no East, no West, no North, no South. Dialects, provincialisms, sectional prejudices, must evidently yield to the closer union, the better understanding the more intimate comradeship that the human voice establishes. The neighborliness of a whole nation is advanced by the brushing away of the physical restraints of remoteness.

This contribution to the future happiness and prosperity of a more closely united people has not been brought about, however, by the overcoming of a few isolated, concrete difficulties. Its success has depended upon the exercise of the highest engineering and technical skill and the solution was found only in the cumulative effect of improvements great and small, in telephone, transmitter, line, cable, switchboard, and every other piece of apparatus or plant required in the transmission of speech.

In this work the experimental and research department of the Bell System of which this Company is a part, has been engaged ever since the telephone became a commercial possibility, less than 40 years ago. With no traditions to follow and no experience to guide, this department, which is now directed by a staff of over 250 engineers and scientists, including former professors, post graduate students, scientific investigators—the graduates of 140 universities—has created an entirely new art—the art of telephony, and has given to the people of this country a telephone service that has no equal.

It has required vast expenditures of money and immense concentration of effort, but these have been justified by results of immeasurable benefit to the public. The transcontinental telephone line, 2,400 miles long, joining the Atlantic and Pacific, is part of the Bell System of 21,000,000 miles of wire connecting 8,000,000 telephone stations, located everywhere throughout the United States. Companies this system are the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Associated Companies and connecting companies, giving universal service to 100,000,000 people.

Truly, This Is The Triumph of Science

Michigan State Telephone Company

COST OF DRAG MAINTENANCE

Simplest Contrivance Yet Devised.

PRODUCES SMOOTH SURFACE

An Inexpensive Service For Maintaining Certain Types of Roads Which When Wet Become Rutted—Use in Construction is Secondary.

[Prepared by the office of public roads for United States department of agriculture.]

When it is appreciated that of more than 2,000,000 miles of public roads in the United States only about 200,000 miles have been given a hard surface and of these 200,000 miles approximately one-half are surfaced with gravel, the importance of every effective device for maintaining the simpler types of roads becomes readily apparent. It should be observed in this connection that a large part of our total mileage of public roads is entirely unimproved and that the drag is of little use in improving sand or clay roads which have never been covered or drained. A much larger part, however, has been sufficiently improved to make the work of the drag effective, and it is unquestionably true that the magnitude of this part is steadily increasing.

DRAGGING AN EARTH ROAD.

The drag is a simple and inexpensive device for maintaining certain types of roads which when wet become rutted under traffic and which become firm on drying out. It is also well adapted for producing a smooth and uniform surface on newly constructed roads in which the material used for surfacing is earth, earthy gravel or some similar material. It is however essentially a maintenance implement and its use in construction is distinctly secondary. Roads which are very rocky or very sandy cannot be satisfactorily improved by the drag.

Notwithstanding the fact that road drags have been widely used, there are very few reliable data which relate to the cost of their maintenance. Furthermore, most of the data which have been collected are difficult to interpret because of the fact that they do not usually furnish sufficient information concerning the character of the surface maintained or the prevailing climatic and traffic conditions to warrant the drawing of general deductions. Sufficient is known, however, to warrant the statement that it is undoubtedly the cheaper method than dragging has ever been devised.

The cost of constructing a satisfactory road drag varies from about $2 when a split log drag is used and all materials are conveniently available, to perhaps $40, when the drag is made of first class sawed lumber, neatly painted in every detail and painted. This item of first cost appears almost insignificant when it is considered that the life of a well constructed road drag should be at least three or four years.

Probably the most economical and efficient system of managing drag maintenance is to assign definite sections of road to each of several responsible interested residents whose teams will lire conveniently near the road. In this way the men and teams who do the dragging will be certainly in other work when not engaged in dragging the road along the share for which only for the actual time employed.

To summarize a few of the principal advantages of the road drag:

First—The road drag is the simplest and least expensive contrivance for the purpose of maintaining roads constructed of earth or earthy material.

Second—The economical operation of a road drag depends to a very great extent on the skill and intelligence of the operator.

Third—The time to use the drag is when the material composing the road surface is sufficiently moist to compact readily under traffic. Effort has been made by the drag and does not contain sufficient moisture for the purpose following the drag to produce results.

Fourth—Dragging cannot usually be accomplished to best results at all the time and it is therefore desirable to have it done by interested persons who can find employment for themselves and teams when they are not engaged in dragging.

STORING VEGETABLES.

The Best Way to Keep Them and Apples Through the Winter.

Only good, sound heads of cabbage should be selected for winter storage, says a contributor to the Wyoming Farm Bulletin. All loose leaves should be removed and the heads placed on shelves. If possible, in a cool cellar. Apples also should be sound and kept in a cool place. They should be sorted from time to time and any which show beginning to decay taken out.

Beets, parsnips, carrots, turnips and such vegetables contain a large percentage of water. Consequently the loss of any bushels of time they lose a good deal of their water and shrink, and wilter. All for use in a small family, where only a bushel or two of each kind of vegetable is needed for the winter, storing in sand is the best way of keeping them. A layer of sand is put on the bottom, then a layer of vegetables, and so on until the box is full. The sand keeps the moisture in the vegetables, and they will remain fresh and plump until spring.

A part of the crop of parsnips should be left in the ground until spring. They freezing will not injure them in the least, and they will be of finer flavor when dug in the spring than in the fall. Vegetables that have become shrunken through the loss of their moisture can be made plump and smooth again by soaking for half an hour in cold water before parting.

Winter Squash.

The squash is not fully appreciated by a great many housekeepers. It should always find a place in the diet of every family. It is nutritious and easily kept all winter. They should be harvested with care to avoid bruising and stored in a warm, dry room.

Like the Sun.

Why is bright the sun shine?
Because when it shine it is light.
—London Telegraph.

It Really Does Relieve Rheumatism

Anybody who is afflicted with Rheumatism in any form should try Sloan's Liniment. A little of Sloan's Liniment on hand is a comfort and a joy when pain or soreness is a pain or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, throbbing, aching and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and have it in the house against the need of sprains, bruises, lumbago, rheumatism and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.

—FOR—

Furniture, Stoves, Ranges, Carpets, Rugs, Comforts and Blankets

—Go to—

S. M. SEE & SONS,

The Reliable Housefurnishers.

FROM---
September 1885

Iron Duke Flour

TO---
January 1914

A Good Record.

Argo Milling Co.
MANUFACTURERS

It Will Pay You to Watch

Blanchard's Bargain Counter

F. S. Blanchard Estate,
F. L. Bartholomew, Administrator.

Charlevoix
Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix Homes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock which consists of everything, such as Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper.

TELEPHONE NO 22

(First Publication December 31)

NOTICE

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix, Michigan, Probate, 17 Michigan, Plaintiff.

Lee Rowland, Defendant.

Charlevoix County, ss. To Lee Rowland, Defendant. Suit has been begun against you in the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, by Frank Plaintiff, praying for a divorce from said bonds on the ground of desertion for a period of six years, with cruel and inhuman treatment, and adultery, and for the custody of your minor children, and for the costs of suit, and for such other and further relief as the court may grant, which will take place at the Circuit Court room, in the village of Charlevoix, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1914, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place you are required to appear and answer said petition, and that a copy of this order be published in the Charlevoix County Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

Dated December 10th, A. D. 1913.

WILLIAM M. CLUTE
Attorney for Plaintiff.
Business Address, Box 1008, Trust Building, Saginaw, Michigan.

(First publication January 31)

Order For Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of said court, held at the probate office, in the village of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 20th day of January, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Bernice A. Gorman, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Mary J. Gaskill, mentally incompetent. Clara J. Leiter Gaskill in her petition prays that the court may grant to her a license to sell the interest of the estate in said estate for the purpose of support.

It is ordered that the 16th day of February, A. D. 1914, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be appointed for hearing said petition, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court at said time and place, to show cause why a license to sell the interest of said estate in said real estate should not be granted. It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

A true copy.
BERNICE A. GORMAN,
Judge of Probate.

(First publication December 17th)

Order of Publication.

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix.

In the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix.

Robert T. Mann, Complainant, vs.

James L. Ferguson, Defendant.

Suit pending in the Circuit court for the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, at the court house in the village of Charlevoix, on the 1st day of December, A. D. 1913.

It has been satisfactorily proven by affidavit on file that the defendant James L. Ferguson is not a resident of this state but is a resident of Illinois, on motion of Hosmer, Jones & Jones, solicitors for complainant, it is ordered that the said Ferguson, James L. Ferguson, cause his appearance to be entered in said cause within four months from the date of this order, and in case of his answer that he cause the same to be filed, and a copy thereof to be served upon the complainant's solicitors, within twenty days after service on him of such answer, and in default thereof the said complainant's solicitors, within twenty days after such default, may take such order as they may deem just and proper in the premises.

And it is further ordered, that within twenty days after service of this order on the said defendant, a copy thereof be served on the said defendant personally, or in default of such service, that the said complainant's solicitors may deem such service equivalent to personal service of the same upon the said defendant.

Dated at Charlevoix, this 1st day of December, A. D. 1913.

WILLIAM M. MAYNE,
Circuit Judge.
(A true copy.)
RICHARD LEWIS, County Clerk.

(First Publication November 18th)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by William L. Dyson and his wife Martha Dyson of Boyne City, Michigan, to the LAPEER SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Michigan, and duly authorized to transact business in the State of Michigan, dated the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, in the County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan, and recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 1, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 2, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 2, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 3, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 4, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 5, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 6, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 7, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 8, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 9, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 10, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 11, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 12, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 13, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 14, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 15, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 16, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 17, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 18, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 19, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 20, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 21, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 22, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 23, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 24, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 25, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 26, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 27, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 28, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 29, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 30, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 31, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 32, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 33, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 34, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 35, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 36, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 37, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 38, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 39, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 40, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 41, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 42, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 43, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 44, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 45, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 46, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 47, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 48, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 49, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 50, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 51, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 52, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 53, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 54, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 55, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 56, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 57, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 58, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 59, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 60, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 61, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 62, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 63, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 64, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 65, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 66, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 67, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 68, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 69, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 70, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 71, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 72, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 73, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 74, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 75, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 76, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage bearing even date herewith, which said assignment of said mortgage was duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix in liber 50 of mortgages on page 77, on the 16th day of April A. D. 1912, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time and place the said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to the undersigned, by an assignment of mortgage b

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1916, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

SYNOPSIS

On Misery creek Billy Miller finds George Lescoit, James Forty of the Indian commission, James Forty of the Indian bureau and Wilfred Horton, the last a relative of the crime, Samson Dodge, in the act of forging a check on Miller. Miller, with bloodhounds, the man who shot Forty, and Wilfred Horton, who has left his father's home, leave Dodge's cabin. Lescoit discovers Samson in a parting crowd of mountaineers. Samson is arrested for the murder of Forty. At Wilfred's request Lescoit goes to the Miller place to be going to leave the country. Fardale, Miller's daughter, meets Lescoit. Miller's son, Rufus, returns from New York fully equipped to be a "gentleman." Lescoit presents Wilfred to Fardale. Lescoit presents Wilfred Horton to a parting crowd of mountaineers. Lescoit presents Wilfred to Fardale. Lescoit presents Wilfred to Fardale. Lescoit presents Wilfred to Fardale

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, February 11, 1915. — NUMBER 43

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning,
at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9.

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Three Months	$ .40
Six Months	.75
One Year	1.50

WHEN WAR COMES

How the Nations Sever Their Diplomatic Relations.

PASSPORTS TO AMBASSADORS

The Formal Etiquette That Covers This Ceremony and the Issuance of Safe Conduct. Passports—Story and Confusion of Embassy Departure.

The ambassador has been president with his passports and has left the country.

Behind this curt formula, which indicates the departure of an ambassador from the country to which he is accredited on the rupture of diplomatic relations, lies a picturesque episode in proceeding with which few of the public are conversant.

When a foreign country declares war it is usual for its representative formally to present his credentials, the terms of which are received by way of the foreign minister, who issues orders to-ards, and then to ask for his passport, or safe conduct papers, which are furnished him by the foreign office of the nation whose hospitality he has been. In the other hand, if the initiative is taken by the country to which he is accredited, his passport is sent to him by special messenger.

An ambassador is the personal representative of his sovereign, and the responsibility rests with the country whose power he has been officially in the nation.

The time in which an ambassador is allowed to make his preparations for departure depends to some extent on the cause severing the relations of the nation with which his own nation is at war. Twenty-four to forty-eight hours may be taken as the period which diplomatic courtesy, the law and his departure, and his safety meanwhile is secured by passports issued by the civil authorities. During this time papers of importance, which have not already been delivered into the hands of his government, are delivered to proper persons, disposition during the journey home, or because it is deemed safer than that they should be consigned to the mails rather than be taken away.

Although the messages from his country to an ambassador are in code, it is hardly necessary to say that the authorities may be allowed to study a document in code in case it can be translated, hence the advisability of those extreme precautions.

The question never arranges with the representative of a neutral power to take over such duties as are thus forsake and then, with the officials of the embassy and the members of his family, execute in a special train placed at his disposal by the government whose power he is quitting. At the port of embarkation a special vessel is provided for the purpose, and also provided.

It is not absolutely necessary for him to take his wife and family with him, but this is usually done, for it is found they prefer to make the journey homeward at the same time, not only for reasons of safety, but because the temper of the people might make and delay impossible.

Before he leaves he usually sends autograph letters of farewell to intimate friends and letters acknowledging the courtesy shown him by foreign office officials. The removal from the embassy of the arms of his country, the flag and the official name-plate are external signs of an ambassador's enforced departure.

It can be imagined what a miserable business it is for an envoy of a foreign country abruptly to bring his mission to an end, to the sound, as it were, of guns and for him to run from the hearty welcome of his arrival with the enthusiasm and distinction looks on his departure.

However well he may be prepared in advance for quitting the country by sending his personal baggage and papers in advance, it is in a state of confusion at the end and he leaves, so hurriedly has he to complete his arrangements, and, leave man himself he may be, he must always have some sensitiveness as to the attitude of those near door to him until he is well out of the country.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Bette—He can be a gentleman when he wants to.

Nell—Yes, he seems to forget himself sometimes.—Boston Transcript.

SECRECY HIDES VOSCES BATTLES

Fighting There Somewhat Like Civil War Encounters.

LIFE IN NANCY NOW NORMAL

Shells Frequently Fall in Streets, and Aviators Constantly Fly Over City, but Business Goes on as Usual—Officers Enter City and Dine at Restaurants—French Gain Weight.

Nancy.—Throughout the war the veil of secrecy has been thick lower the Lorraine frontier. If a correspondent was to be shown anything he was always sent northward. Among the spots of the Vosges around Nancy there has occurred fighting which has been unsurpassed in stubbornness of picturesqueness.

Here continued of the heights meant that the valley was a death trap. Here the woods and forests screen artillery from fatal reconnaissance, and could those of the Wilderness name in the civil war are often reproduced.

In Nancy, that thrifty, dull old capital of French Lorraine, life seems more normal than in Paris. The city is used to having war on its outskirts, aeroplanes visitors and frequently visiting unless, and one of their bombs is no surprise to the population.

Nancy is so brilliantly lighted as in times of peace until to in the evening. Women are there, of course, rosy cheeked from facing mountain gales, come in from the front and dine in the restaurants, looking as sturdy as tum berjacks.

Then black potato is the suburbs comes the sound of gunfire from one direction or another, which means that

Photos by American Press Association.

BRITISH CAVALRY IN ACTION (TOP) AND WOUNDED FRENCH SOLDIERS ELECTED BY GERMANS (BELOW).

FLOATING HOMES.

Large Dwellers of New York on the Bights of the Harbor.

The lot of the harbor dwellers is not one for commiseration. He is far more businessized and cosmopolitan than his neighbors in the field blues of the tenement districts which he sees from his barge as he floats past the river front of New York's east side streets.

At evening his floating home is moored to a quiet dock. He may sit on his bit of deck and enjoy his after supper pipe in quiet as he gazes upon the darkling ripples of the water and listens to the drone rest of the city's busy day. His wife sits beside him, putting the last stitches in a gingham garment for their child, who already is in his bunk.

Their cabin is bright and clean with out and within. White paint and green trimmings, a bit of striped awning and a little flagstaff are its outward embellishments. Muslin curtains at its tiny windows, geraniums on the sills, a cheery nickel clock on its cozy shelf above the stove, a neat red table cloth, a homemade braided rug and a bright chintz three give character to the living room or galley. Within is the bedroom, perhaps 6 by 8 feet with a white iron bed and a bunk above its foot, in which the son and baby sleeps peacefully.

There may be a cottage in New Jersey or down Long Island sound waiting this worthy couple when winter comes to close the floating home and season's work, but they make the large their home while on the

Some of these barge homes shelter families of five or six persons. In some of the more crowded rollicking barges the skipper's house is on the roof. Its dimensions may be 12 by 16 feet, affording three rooms. In the "parlor" one would look for a piano to find a sofa, a music cabinet and racks of records and family portraits. In evenings, all accordion or banjo music, while the contents, being of a rollicking turn, like to dance to it on a Sunday in a gorgeously painted room of his own building, with bookboards to make it comfortably and a soft settling as nearly as the nature of a rug defender.—Harper's Magazine.

Northern Michigan

Fruit growers of the Grand Traverse region are putting great faith in commercial benefit they expect to receive from the Fruit and Produce exchange they recently organized. Alfred Bentall is president of the exchange. Mr. Bentall represents the Ridgewood farm at Old Mission. This farm produced thirty carloads of apples in 1914.

Boyne Citizen: There will be no Democrat and Republican party tickets in the field for the coming city election. The matter was decided upon at a public meeting, duly advertised and held at the city hall on last Monday evening. Several of the prominent republicans of the city were present and the matter of a party ticket for the city election was thoroughly threshed out, every known phase of the matter being discussed from such standpoint.

On January 14 North Bay Arbor of Bay Shore held an open meeting to discuss the feasibility of organizing a branch of the central chiming house. There was quite a large attendance and considerable interest shown in the project. The committee appointed to solicit shares were able to raise between four and five hundred dollars at the meeting. The committee intend canvassing for the balance in the near future. Companion Levi Joslin, of the central chiming house, was present to discuss the subject and answer any questions that were asked.

Central Lake Torch: Last Friday evening at the Blue Store Hall, the Ellsworth Board of Trade held their first annual banquet which proved to be the biggest and most successful event ever staged in Banks township. President L. VanSlyver introduced the toastmaster of the evening, Judge E. R. Harris. Many were the toasts and everyone agreed that the Judge was a model master of ceremonies. At the speakers' table were W. P. Smith, E. Smith, G. C. Townsend, W. A. Bass, R. S. Peebles, E. J. Chesbro, D. E. Cox and C. E. Bearss. Among the out-of-town guests were A. D. Superway, of Traverse City; W. D. Hicken, of Central Lake; J. Hart, of East Jordan and L. E. Wagley, of Bratus, all of whom income members of the board. Over the hundred of the most prominent citizens of Banks township attended, and forty new members enrolled in the ranks for the ensuing years. It is the desire of the Board of Trade that every citizen in the township become a member and help us all work for Banks township. There is now a membership of eighty-two and at the next meeting which will be held the first Wednesday in February, it will reach the hundred mark.

Traverse City Record-Eagle: The annual meeting of the Western Michigan Development bureau was held last Wednesday afternoon in the rooms of the city commission. The directors from each of the twenty counties in the bureau were present together with a number of local members. The directors heard the reports of the president and secretary, elected officers for the ensuing year and planned for the business of the year. Six years of association activity has seen this organization grow from a small beginning to one whose influence is felt throughout the country. Thousands of people have been interested in this region who knew nothing of it a few years ago, with the result that they have invested their capital in farms and fruit lands that are yielding splendid returns. Commercial orchards in thousand acre tracts were unknown, and stock raising and alfalfa growing as cared for today are all the outcome of the work of the officers of this bureau. Lecturers have gone into other localities on tours of enlightenment with results endorsed of no little net. Putting the harvesting of fruit and the beauties of poor roads into the movies is another progressive movement. President D. H. Day and secretary Jean I. Gilman have been indefatigable in their labors and their reports of the year's work were listened to with interest. The reports showed forcibly and that you are entitled to receiveance thereof, at any time within six months after return of service of this notice, upon payment to the undersigned or to the register in chancery of the county in which the instrument of sale was made, upon such purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional thereto, and the fees of the sheriff for the service or cost of publication of this notice, to be computed as upon personal service of a declaration as commencement of suit and the further sum of five dollars for each description without other additional cost or charge. If payment as aforesaid is not made, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the land.

Description: The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32) township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) west, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

Amount paid $29.46

Taxes of 1912.

Yours etc.
J. L. CRANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan

State of Michigan, ss.
County of Charlevoix, ss.

I, Charles Novak, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and affirm, after carefully inquiry, I am unable to ascertain the whereabouts or post-office address of Daniel Campbell, a resident of said county, and that he is within notice and after diligent inquiry I am unable to find the name, or address of any trustee, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Daniel Campbell, upon who service of said notice can be made. I further certify that the above notice was delivered to me for service December 7, 1914, at which time I was under-sheriff of said County of Charlevoix.

Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 16, 1915. My fees $1.10.

CHARLES TOVAK,
Sheriff of said County.

MASON'S
Grocery Department
WILL SELL FOR CASH
February 4-5-6

Grocery Dept.

12 Large Oranges	19c
3 Large 5c boxes Tooth picks	5c
12 boxes So Ohio Matches	35c
3 boxes 5c Ohio Matches	10c
12 Clothes Pins	1c
50c Lantern	38c
$1 No 2 Cold Blast Lantern	75c
$1 New Style Lantern	88c
4 pounds 10c Prunes	25c
4 pounds A. & H. Soda	25c
4 pounds 8c Rice	25c
3 lb can White House Coffee	98c
Japan Cup and Saucer and 1 pound of Coffee	30c
1 pkg Green Circle Raisins	8c

We sell 15c, 20c, 25c, 30c and 40c Coffees

We recommend our Full Value Spring Hill, Continental, Barrington Ball and White House Coffees.

We Recommend and sell a 15c, 25c, 35c, 40c and 50c Japan Tea

Provisions

Don't you want to buy a Barrel of Flour at right prices?

Spring Wheat Flour, to buy now at wholesale, would cost me $8.00 to $8.50 a barrel. We want the money and will sell you for Spot Cash:

Rye Flour, barrel	$6.75
Prodenor Flour, barrel	$7.50
Gold Medal Flour, barrel	$8.00
Purity Flour, barrel	$8.00
90 pounds Oatmeal	$3.15
100 lbs Oyster Shells	75c
Crackers by the box, pound	7c
60 pounds Lard	$7.50
60 pounds Cottolene	$5.50
60 pounds Lard Compound	$5.40

We carry a large line of National Biscuit Co's. Cookies, Confections and Crackers.

3 cans, any assortment, 10c Corn, Peas, Beans, Tomatoes, Pumpkin, Hominy, Soup, Sauer Kraut or Pork and Beans 25c

2 cans, any assortment, 15c Corn, Peas, Beans, Tomatoes, Spinach, or Pork and Beans 25c

A. E. Mason's Dept. Store

Religious Notes

Congregational Church
(STANDING NOTICES)
Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.
Bible School, 12 o'clock
Young People's Meeting, 6:00 p. m.
Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT BOYNTON)
Bible School at 1:30 p. m.
Preaching, 2:30 p. m.

Baptist Church
Morning service at 10:30
Bible School at 11:45 a. m.
Junior League at 3:00
B. Y. P. U. at 6:30, p. m.
Evening service at 7:30
Thursday evening at 7:30

Christian Science
Christian Science Society, Van Felt Hall
Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Spirit."
Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.
Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service
8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:30 a. m.—High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.
Mass during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church
Morning Prayer at 11:00.
Sunday School at 12:00 m.
Evening Prayer at 7:30.

Methodist Church.
A. M. "God in Nature."
P. M. "Why Christians Ought Not to Dance."

First publication Jan. 21st
NOTICE
To the owner or owners of any and all interests in, or claiming to claim the lands herein described:

TAKE NOTICE, That sale has been lawfully made of the following described land for unpaid taxes thereon and that the undersigned has title thereto under such sale and deed and tax sale duly recorded.

There may be a cottage in New Jersey or down Long Island sound waiting this worthy couple when winter comes to close the floating home and season's work, but they make the large their home while on the

CUT THIS OUT
and send it for some of this wonderful medicine. It will relieve you at once. Sold for 175 and we will send FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of this year
FREE THE NEW COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.
THEN The $1 Weekly Issue of THE COMPANION for 1915.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

GALLAGHER—JAMES OWEN

O der for Publication
State of Michigan, the Probate Court for the County of Antrim.
At a session of said court, held at the Probate office in the City of Charlevoix in said County, on the 2nd day of February, A. D. 1915.
Present, Hon. Severens A. Correll, Judge of Probate.
In the matter of the estate of Charles S. Bird deceased.
William L. Bird, Guardian, having filed in said court his petition, praying for license to sell the interest of said estate therein described.

It is ordered that the 3rd day of March A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be assigned for hearing said petition, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court, at said time and place, to show cause why a license to sell the interest of said estate therein should not be granted.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.
SEVERENS A. CORRELL,
Judge of Probate.
A true copy.
SEVERENS A. CORRELL,
Judge of Probate.

Vaccination may keep people from taking things, but it won't cure kleptomania.

Saved by Tobacco Box.
Paris—After his mistress had repelled an attack of the Prussian guard Leiore Serjeant, Trooke of the Coldstream guards found a bullet imbedded in his tobacco and realized that the tin tobacco box in his breast pocket had saved his life.

Two of the largest logs ever put into Michigan saw mill were cut into lumber at the Crowl Lumber Company's plant last week. The logs were sliced and made two sleigh loads when brought to the product measured over 2,000 feet. The Harbor Springs Lumber company's steam log hauler is bringing in some large logs and the company expects to get in their entire cut in about ten days more.

Lisle Shanahan,
Attorney at Law,
Office in County Bank Bldy.

Charlevoix Rock Product Company,
Producers and Manufacturers of
Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Fully Vitrified Stone
Furnace Flux
Sugar Stone
For prompt city delivery
Call Lee Howland,
Phone 297.

PETER BENSON
CONTRACTOR FOR
Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.
If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10c
ASSORTED
Best Wishes, Greetings, Lovers, Birthday, etc. Also your name in our Post Card Exchange free on request, and free sample copy of the Family Story Paper; also Catalogue and Premium List. Enclose 10c stamps for return postage, etc.
FAMILY STORY PAPER
24-26 Vandewater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction
Auto and Boat
Supplies.
214 Bridge St. - Phone 134
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Contractor
and Builder.
Estimates furnished. Phone 333 Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD,
DENTIST.
Office in Old Post-Office Block.
Over R. L. Lewis & Co's Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139.

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Office in Priest's Block.
Charlevoix - - Michigan

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS SHOULD USE
5 DROPS
The Best Remedy For all forms of Rheumatism
LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, COLD, NEURALGIA, AND KIDNEY TROUBLES.
5 DROPS
STOP THE PAIN
Gives Quick Relief
Regular Size 50 Cents
SOLD AT ALL DRUGGISTS
SIMPLE "5-DROPS" FREE ON REQUEST
Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co.
180-186 W. Lake St., CHICAGO

10 Great Serials
full of life and action, filled with the fire of line inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure will make
The YOUTH'S COMPANION
Better Than Ever in 1915
Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education, Biography, Character Sketches minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no agency in enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.
52 Times a Year
—not 12.
Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE

Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.
Bucklen's Arnica Salve
Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

Announcement

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-nomination as City Treasurer, at the Republican city primaries, March 3rd.

JOHN COOK.

Local and Personal Notes

Marion Harris left Monday for a visit with friends in Minneapolis.

E. A. Burnett, of Harbor Springs, was in the city over Sunday.

Madeline Mullen and Irene Finucan are visiting Mrs. Ira Adams at Bellaire.

Hon. A. Buttars and wife leave this week for California for a stay of a month or more.

Ben Yettaw has bought the Bert Beaudoin candy and fruit business, and will conduct the business at the old stand.

Capt. Jas. Sanford left Monday on a business trip to Chicago, and will visit his son, who is a student at Notre Dame University.

St. Mary's Literary Society will serve an oyster supper at Graham's furniture store Saturday, February 13th, from 5:30 to 9:00. Bill, 35 cents.

F. A. Kenyon, of Mackinac Island, was in the city Saturday on his way home from Lansing where he attended a meeting of the Mackinac Island park board.

F. V. Alexander, P. M. agent, and wife are taking a two weeks vacation in C. L. Gonser's acting as agent during Mr. Alexander's absence.

The Norwood high school basket ball team came here and defeated our team, at the roller rink, leaving the victory with Charlevoix. On Friday night of this week Charlevoix team goes to Norwood for a game.

A distinguished corps of artists, including John Bagbee and Roy Ripley, have about completed the work on the Odd Fellows' club-room, and the I. O. O. F. sports will soon have a mighty pleasant place in which to spend their leisure hours.

The publisher of this paper owns a male cat. We call him Kaiser. He has imagined he was the only thing of the kind in the neighborhood worth mentioning, and in that opinion his owner coincided. Monday morning Kaiser came in with one eye closed and his off hind leg mutilated. We would be thankful for information that will locate Gen. Joffre, as we wish to learn his exact condition before we confer the iron cross on Kaiser.

A desperate effort is being made by Congressman Sam Smith to rescue the item of $70,000 for rural free delivery in villages which was dropped from the postoffice appropriation bill. The house passed this item but would allow rural delivery in many villages which are too small to have city delivery and are not provided for in the rural delivery. The senate followed the plan of economizing in every possible way, struck the item out of the bill. Senator Townsend is a member of the postoffice committee. Congressman Smith appeared before the committee and begs with the aid of Senator Townsend to get the item put back.

As we see the big loads of kiln wood on their way to the Rock Product Co's yards, a thought is suggested. The company is buying 1000 cords of this wood. It consists of material that is practically unmarketable for any other use, as it embraces everything formerly burned in the fallow. But it means that a great many acres of fairly good land is being cleared for plow or pasture—land that with proper fertilizing and cultivation will bear profitable crops. Every acre added to the area of tillable land means a little more wealth of the locality. Another important factor in the work of agriculture is preparation for the operation of the Charlevoix Lumber company in territory closely contiguous to Charlevoix. The present winter a large area of good hardwood land will be cleared up to let in the plow.

Miss Agnes Orlowski left yesterday to visit friends in Chicago.

Capt. Don Campbell will command the steamer City of Boyne the coming season.

B. A. Herman left Thursday on a business trip to Chicago and other points, to be gone a week.

R. M. McKeal suffered a stroke of paralysis Tuesday afternoon, and is in a very serious condition at his home in the city.

The Charlevoix Hardware Co. has made some very useful improvements in the interior of its store, which includes an office enclosure.

Married, in Petoskey, February 4th, Capt. P. McCafferty, of this city, to Miss Freda Fordermann, of Chicago. Capt. and Mrs. McCafferty will make their home at Charlevoix.

Mrs. John Line, of St. Louis, arrived here Monday, called by the serious illness of her mother, Mrs. Yettaw (Lavra)—Mrs. Yettaw died Sunday morning, aged 77 years.

Sacred hymns and tunes and likewise worldly songs will be sung at the Congregational Meeting House on February 21st, 1915, by Ye men and women singers. Look out for a list of tunes.

Married, at the Methodist Parsonage, February 3d by Rev. Quinton Walker, Mr. Harry Hinsbaugh and Miss Anna Campbell of Phelps. These young people have many friends in the city who are interested in their future happiness.

We have several times been accused of editorial responsibility for a local item that appeared in these columns last week in connection with the "dance" sermon of Rev. Quinton Walker, and which was construed as disrespectful to the pastor. We are compelled to state that the item was handed in by the pastor himself.

Ye Auld Tyme Consairt, to be held in ye Congregational meetinghouse in Charlevoix, on ye 26th day of February is on ye way. Following are the artists: Arminta Bush, Prudence Rachow, Patience Taggart, Jehoshaphat Williams, Winthrop Saltonstal and Obed Harris, supported by other singers of fame. Admission 25 cents—well worth 50, but on account of so many dinners and suppers taking place about this time, will ring this night only for 25 cents apiece.

The following from the Boyne Citizen has a local application: "To the person whose patience is liable to become extremely short when service needed, the following following the blowing of the fire whistle it will be well to remember that it is not to call the people who make the calls and in reality not their fault, as they have a right to call at any time. The services at these times is not particularly hard on the phone girls during the day time at the week day, but on Sunday afternoon and evening or at night there is but one operator at the board. The operator of operator is exceedingly strenuous for a few minutes following the turning in of the fire alarm. It seems that everyone wants to know where the fire is and all at the same time.

CIRCUIT COURT

All day Tuesday was taken up in securing a jury in the malpractice case of Robert Russell vs Dr. A. M. Wilkinson. No case is now being tried. Attorney for complainant, R. L. Lewis; for defendant, Douglass, Kaman & Harbour, of Detroit, J. M. Harris, of Counsel.

DON'T KILL THE SPARROWS

To the Editor: Do we wish to welcome back the stupid worm to our forests and orchards?

It is urged that the sparrow is not really an insect-eating bird. From my own experience I have proved that it is. I remained a sentinel one cold morning on the porch. The young were fed altogether with insects and larvae.

Yesterday I saw sparrows on the branches of the trees near our house looking for food along the bark. Let no bird be destroyed. Each has its own special work. The handsome blue-jay is a bird-lover. It has been seen to jay destroy a robin's nest and after its robbing again pull it to pieces after the eggs were laid.

But the bluejay has its place of usefulness, as the farmer's friend. That bird fill of his, a small manner, takes care of the troublesome sharded beetles.

Do not let the children become prejudiced against the little brown grey of our streets. Do not foster cruelty by teaching them a wholesale destruction of the busy little fellows who cause no chirping among us to do us good and who in no of a nest that would have deposited our orchards and forests with foul broods of disgusting worms.—BIRD LOVER.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

On the delightful program given by the Charlevoix Historical Society by Dr Armstrong's last Friday night were contributions from several of the young people of the village. Arrangements, whose musical responses are always anticipated, opened the entertainment with a beautiful piano solo by Miss Ruth Greig, responding to encore with a second selection.

Robert Bridge, at home from Ann Arbor on a few days' vacation, surprised and delighted the society with his finely rendered selection, "Adoration," Felix Borowski; encore, "Sonnenir," Franz Dalla.

The trio was complete when Miss Nita Mayne responded with a musical monolog, "Not Undeserved," one of life's sad experiences most inspiringly given, and very much appreciated, by encore, "A Little Humorous Story."

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Bidness and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to R. E. Hanna.

HAVE WE A FIRE BUG?

Mysterious Fire at O'Leary's Barn—Incipient Blaze Front and Rear

As Dr. Armstrong was returning home from a call at five o'clock Saturday morning, he discovered smoke issuing from under the closed doors of O'Leary's livery barn. He at once advised O'Leary at his home and an alarm sent in.

The department was promptly on the spot, and a fire was extinguished in the floor that was no where near the stove. After a hole about two feet square was burned in the floor the blaze was extinguished.

While afternoon—Sam Hamilton—was in the basement to get water on the fire, he discovered fire in the straw in the rear of the barn, at a point where there was no possible connection with the first blaze. This blaze was also quickly suppressed.

O'Leary left the barn at two o'clock a. m.

Have we a fire-bug among us?

THE PREACHER AND THE DANCE

Considerable interest to say the least is centered in the Sunday night sermon of Rev. Quinton Walker on the dance question. Dr. Walker certainly has plainly, but public criticism is disarmed by the fact that the speaker at the outset, made it plain that his remarks were intended for members of the church.

We are charitable enough to conclude that the sermon, as mentioned above, as the Methodist church; certainly the pastor has no moral or ecclesiastical right to enter any other denominational domain in passing judgment.

This being true, the pastor was right from the standpoint of Methodist law. The discipline of the Methodist Episcopal church forbids dancing, therefore Methodists should not dance. The Methodist brother or sister has no right to argue the question with the preacher—it is the law. If the brother or sister considers the rule unjust, there are plenty of other pastures in which to browse, where the sun shines just as brightly and the rain falls just as copiously.

The edicts of the church, uttered ex cathedra, constitute ecclesiastical law, and the culpability of the dancer lies in his or her contempt for the law more clearly than it does in exemplifying "the poetry of motion."

These observations are confined to the practical application of the question of church discipline; the moral side of the question is quite another thing. Personally, we do not believe dancing, as we know it, directed from some of the modern fool "steps," is sinful. But what a religious denomination thinks about it is none of our business. It has rarely as much the legal right to put the ban on lobster and terapin or the ban on lobster and terapin or the House of David to forbid the trimming of the whiskers of the faithful. If the Holy Roller cults his hair he should be expelled from the fold, or suspended until he lets it grow again. As a matter of fact, we consider the whole question as so much "bunk." The conscience is the main thing, and a much better moral guide than a sectarian definition of sin.

ODD FELLOWS' GATHERING

One Hundred and Twenty-Five Odd Fellows Had Jolly Time

According to Odd Fellows the event of Wednesday night last, under the auspices of Wequetonsing encampment, says the Petoskey News, was the most enjoyable undertaken by that lodge in many years. There were fully one hundred and twenty-five men present and the dinner at one hundred and five sat down to the chicken banquet at 10:30 o'clock after the lodge work had been completed.

The guests of honor were Grand Patriarch Lindley, of Detroit, Grand Scribe John Penfield, of Vicksburg; twenty-six Charlevoix Odd Fellows, fifty as many from Harbor Springs and four from Boyne City. The feature part of the event was the royal purple degree which was conferred on a class of ten candidates, two of them being from Charlevoix, one from Harbor Springs, and seven from Petoskey.

Messrs. Lindley and Penfield gave interesting and instructive talks before the lodge and there were also many other interesting and enjoyable features. At the close of the banquet a game of baseball was played in which the visiting team was beaten by a score of 11 to 7. The visitors drove from their home in big sleighs.

WHEAT CROP THREATENED

Ice Sleeting May Damage Big Acreage, Says Expert Snowsmith of Agricultural College

War time prices for wheat may be seen in Michigan this year, not because of any war, but as a result of the serious damage threatened by the ice sheath which now covers the fields in practically all parts of the state. Because of conditions in Europe, farmers throughout the state have planted a vast acreage to wheat, and should this crop be killed they just could not afford to stand it.

"It is impossible to say definitely at this time just what the damage will be, and snow will be to the wheat crop," said Prof. V. M. Shoesmith, of the Agricultural college. "Many other crops have been ruined by just such conditions as now prevail, and should the winter have been one of long duration of time serious results will probably follow.

"It is believed that if warmer weather comes soon and that the ice is melted away, that practically no loss will be suffered this year. The danger lies in having the growing plants under the ice for too long a period. Conditions vary somewhat in different parts of the state, and should ice have been present for several weeks, some counties will escape with smaller losses than others.

"The wheat crop this year will be a most important one, and every effort will be made to produce the largest amount of this grain ever grown in Michigan. Europe is clamoring for wheat, and with a tremendous demand, and a record breaking price already established to the product, a rich harvest is looked for this year, in hoping.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, Feb. 8th, 1915.

The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date—Mayor Nichols presiding.

Aldermen present, Sec. Pratt, Barney and Carey. Absent: Cartier and Shapton.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Enter Aldermen Shapton and Cartier. There being no further business the council adjourned.

P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

GAME LEGISLATION

Senator A. T. Roberts, of Marquette, Friend of Wild Game, Introduces the "Buck" Bill

Game legislation has struck into the senate with a vengance. The "buck" bill, famous because of the favorable advertising given to it by the Michigan Sportsman's association, was introduced by Senator A. T. Roberts, of Marquette, who is an ardent supporter of the plan to preserve Michigan's game.

Only one male deer that has horns three inches above the hair may be killed during the open season, and the carcass must be used or disposed of within thirty days thereafter, says the bill.

All females are to be protected as a means of multiplying the game and replenishing the forests of the state with the native animals.

The bill also provides that only six quails may be killed at one time, with not more than fifteen in possession; partridge and spruce hens, six to be killed, with not over twenty in possession; geese, brant and ducks, twenty-five to be killed, with not more than twenty-five in possession.

During the calendar year not more than fifty of any one kind may be killed. The penalty clause in the proposed law is applied for violations. This clause provides for confiscation of the game and a heavy fine, or fine and imprisonment or conviction.

Carlson, Ladies' Tailor, 214 Park Ave. Petoskey, Mich.—Every thing in Tailoring for women's wear latest styles and fabrics. Will show styles and samples for suring in Charlevoix. Watch for adv. or make appointment by mail.

Desire for liquor and drugs relieved in four days; inquire secretary Hinsdale Hospital. 18—5-15-6

PROPOSES CHANGE

Representative Kemmerling of the Monroe district, says the Traverse City Record-Eagle, has introduced a bill in the legislature which calls for a radical change in the road building system of the state. According to his measure road building would be carried out along the same plan that is now followed in the construction of roads. The adoption of the system would be optional with the counties.

In order to start work on any road a petition would have to be presented to the county commissioners signed by fifty-one per cent of the property fronting on the road. If the tax is adopted the commissioners may appropriate from fifty to seventy-five per cent of the improvement against the county at large and from twenty-five to fifty per cent against the property owners along the highway that is improved. The measure is practically a copy of the present drain law with such modifications as are necessary in its application to road building. The proposed bill has good points, but there is a question as to whether it would provide for a sum of good roads on account of the direct assessment feature that it contains. As a rule the more remote a tax payer is the better the people like it, although they have to pay just as much in the end as they would if the direct assessment feature were carried out more frequently. The strength of the good road movement lies in the fact that everybody has to bear their share of the cost, in a plan which although not as just as the proposed law has been taken kindly to by the people of the state. It is probable that the farmer member of the legislature will not wax any too enthusiastic over the measure although it is favored by one of the most successful farmers in the state.

LOOKING FOR A RECORD SEASON

It is the consensus of opinion sustained by well defined indications, that the resort season of 1915 will eclipse all Charlevoix records.

Heretofore a large contingent of the wealthy have spent summers in Europe. Last summer a large number of our sojourners had relatives in Germany and France, some of them encountering serious difficulty in getting home.

There will be no pleasure trips to Europe the coming summer and the effect will be to greatly augment the number who will turn their faces toward the home resorts. That Charlevoix will be greatly benefitted by the condition of things goes without saying.

We are credibly informed that every room at the inn is already booked. The enlargement of the Beach Hotel to double its former capacity means a constant trend in the direction indicated. No one doubts that this splendid summer hotel will be filled.

Therefore, get ready for the crowd, for an enormous increase is certain. Charlevoix is the favorite of them all, and its resorts as a summer resort is gaining strength as the years pass.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION

At the republican county convention held at Boyne City last Friday the following delegates to the State Convention were elected:

East Jordan—H. I. McMillan.
Boyne Falls—W. J. Pearsen, Ford P. Robbins.
Charlevoix—R. A. Emrey, Olaf Nordrum.
Boyne City—W. H. White, Wm. F. Griffin, Mr. Abbott, F. O. Thompson.

The Liver Regulates the Body a Sluggish Liver Needs Care

Someone has said that people with chronic Liver Complaint should be shut up away from humanity, for they are pessimistic and see through a "yellow cast." Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Biliousness, Headaches, Dizziness and Constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Life Pills. 25c at your Druggist.

The Retort Courteous

"To what am I indebted for this visit, sir?" said the manager pompously. "To the fact that you are indebted to our company for $7.75, which we are getting tired of waiting for, replied the collector just as pompously.—Detroit Free Press.

Bookkeeping.

The Bride: James, dear, I'm afraid I'll have to ask you to give me $3.75—it's the only way I can make my books balance.—Exchange.

Eat, Drink and be Merry, for Tomorrow Ye Die! .

may be tempting advice sometimes. The only trouble is that you may be a terribly long time dying. During that time you may have leisure a-plenty in which to regre the squandered shekels.

Better take our advice and start a bank account so as to have some comfort during that long tomorrow.

We pay 4% on Savings accounts

Charlevoix County Bank
of Nicholls, Buttars and Bridge
JOHN NICHOLLS, President. A. F. BRIDGE, Cashier.
A. BUTTARS, Vice President. H. O. MORRMANN, Asst. Cashier.

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1916, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

On Misery creek Sally Miller finds George Lescott a bootlegger painter, on the run from the law. Sally's father, Jim, has been killed by a Winchester in the period of the feuds. Samson denies it, but Lescott's pistol is found. Jim is Hickman Smith's foe. Jim Hickman, Jr., is Sally's lover. Hickman, Sr., has Wilfred Horton, a Harvard graduate, for a figure in the feud. Lescott discovers Sally, and Lescott and Sally become friends. Lescott, on the outskirts, meets Jim Hickman, Jr., and Sally. Jim's jealousy and determination kill Samson as the "moonshiner." Lescott, hiding, sees Sally's dress Samson's blood. Sally, fearing Lescott, begins to leave the Cumberlands. Lescott, in New York, meets Hickman Side Silver and Sally in another set. Lescott, jealous, leaves Sally. Lescott and Sally, December 31, find Horton, who is Lescott's friend, at Sally's work in the world. Prompted by Horton, Lescott decides to go back to the Cumberlands. Horton follows, learns the world and becomes well liked by people. Sally's shop is successful. Lescott, Horton, Side Silver, Sally, Sally's social secretary, and Hickman are in company.

CHAPTER X—Continued.

Adrienne Lescott nodded. Her eyes were sweetly grave.

"It's the hardship of the conditions, she said, softly. "Those conditions will change."

A man had come out onto the veranda from the house, and was approaching the table. He was immaculately groomed, and came forward with the deliberate, self-possessed step of a nobleman. His smile, as he bowed, was the possibility of a smile, and his voice was accustomed to approaching kings. His eyes, as he looked at pleased surprise.

The moonshiner recognized Fardish, and, with a quick backpedaling of the face, he recalled their last parting. If Fardish should presume to renew the acquaintance under these circumstances, Samson meant to rise from his chair, and strike him in the face. George Lescott's sister could not be subjected to such meetings. You, it was a tribute to his adornment in good manners that he dreaded making a scene in her presence and, as a warning, he met Fardish's pleasant smile with a look of blank and crushed lack of recognition. The circumstances out of which Fardish might weave unpleasant gossip did not occur to Samson. That they were together late in the evening, or afterwards, in a city house, whose reputation was socially dubious, was a thing he did not realize. But Fardish was keenly alive to the possibilities of the scene. Samson chose to construe the Kentuckian's blank expression as announcing at being discovered a gentleman he could readily understand. Adrienne Lescott, following her companion's eyes, looked up, and to the boy's astonishment nodded to the newcomer, and called him by name.

Mr. Fardish," she laughed, with mock confusion and total innocence of the fact that her words might have meaning, "don't tell on us!"

"I never tell things, my dear lady," said the newcomer. "I have dwelt for long in conservatories in fear pebbles. I'm afraid, Mr. South, you have forgotten me. I'm Fardish, and I had the pleasure of meeting you—"

He paused a moment, then with a pointed glance added—"at the Manhattan club, was it not?"

"It was not," said Samson, promptly. Fardish looked his surprise, but was required to see no offence, since after a few moments of affable and. It must be acknowledged, witty conversation, he drew to his own table.

"Where did you meet that man?" demanded Lescott's sister when he and the girl were alone again.

"Oh, at any number of dinners and dances. His work is inadequate as a reason. She paused, then, seeking very directly at the Kentuckian, inquired, "And where did you meet him?"

"Didn't you hear him say the Manhattan club?"

"I'm sure I knew that he was lying."

"Yes, he was!" Samson spoke, contemptuously. "Never mind where we was. It was a place I got out of when I found out who were there."

The chauffeur came to announce that the car was ready, and they went out. Fardish watched them with a smile that had in it a trace of the Cynic.

The career of Fardish had been as interesting as life in its own peculiar and unfashionable fashion. With no advantages of upbringing, he had overthrown so cultivated the niceties of social usage that his one flaw was a too perfect knowledge. He was letter-perfect where one to the manor born might have blundered some detail.

He was witty, handsome in his satyrine way, and had powerful friends in the world of fashion and finance. That he rendered service to the plutocratic patrons, either than the purveyor of his dinner talk, was a thing vaguely hinted in club rooms, and that these services were not to his credit but more than once been conjectured.

When Horton had begun his crusade against various abuses, he had cast a suspicious eye on all matters therein mentioned, and had, in the case of William Farfish, and now, when Fardish appeared, he eyed him with an astonishing expression, half-quizzical and half-malevolent.

After Adrienne and Samson had disappeared, he explained his companion, a stout, middle-aged person, with a florid complexion, whose chosen outfit was a very masculine walk-out covered a liberal embonpoint. Fardish took his cigar from his lips, and, drawing his second cigar from his vest pocket, stretches in an upward direction, and, with a flip he did so, replied. But Fardish was keenly alive to the possibility of a trap.

"Singular," he mused; "very singular!"

"What's singular?" impatiently demanded his companion. "Flush, or don't start."

"That moonshiner came up here as George Lescott's guest." Where on Fardish, reflectively, "He came fresh from the feud hill, and landed promptly in the police court. Now, in less than a year, he's pairing off with Adrienne Lescott—who, every one supposed, meant to marry Wilfred Horton. This little party tonight, like to put it quite mildly, a bit unconventional."

The stout gentleman said nothing, and the other questioned, musingly:

"By the way, Bradburn, had the Kentucky shooting club requested Wilfred Horton's resignation yet?"

"Not yet. We are going to. He's not congenial, since his hand he raised against every man who owns more than two dollars. The speaker owned several million times that sum. This meeting at an out-of-the-way place Bradburn arranged for the purpose of discussing ways and means of curbing Wilfred's crusades.

"Why the devil shouldn't we? We don't want a democrat in the house."

For awhile, they sat silent, Fardish smiling over the plot he had just devised, and the other puffing with a puzzled expression at his cigar.

"That's all there is to it," summarized Mr. Bradburn, succinctly. "If we can get these two men, South and Horton, together, down there at the shooting lodge, under the proper conditions, they'll do the rest themselves. I think, I'll take care of Horton. Now, it's up to you to have Horton there at the appointed time."

"How do you know there mo hard not already met—and amicably?" demanded Mr. Bradburn.

"I happen to know it, quite by chance. It is my business to know things—quite by chance!"

Indian summer came again to Misery, flaunting woodland banners of crimson and scarlet orange, but to daily the season brought only heartaches and misgivings to Sally. Since when Samson had softened his stolicism as the base hand of Horton's influence was felt, he had sent her a few brief letters—not written, but plainly printed like a schoolboy's copy-book, and as much like the printer as possible, for no one messenger could be trusted. There were times in plenty when he wished to pour out to her torrents of feeling, and it was with feelings that he would have carried comfort to her lonely little heart. He wished to tell frankly of what a good friend he had made, and how this friendship had been more able to realize that other feeling—his love for Sally. There was in his mind no suspicion—at first—that these two girls might ever stand in conflict as to the right of way. But the letters he wished to write were not the sort he used to have read to them by the evangelist-doctor or the district-school teacher and alone she could have made nothing of them. However, "I love you" are easy words—and those he always included.

The Widow Miller had been ailing for months, and, though the local physician diagnosed the condition as being "right speedy," he knew that the secret of tuberculosis which stalks through these badly lighted and ventilated homes was overthrow on its fingers to touch her shrunken chest. This had meant that Sally had to forego the evening hours to study, because of the exactions that followed the day of nursing and household drudgery. Autumn seemed to bring to her mother a slight improvement, and Sally could again sometimes steal away with her slate and book to sit alone on the big cooler, and study.

She would not be able to write that Christmas letter. There had been too many interruptions in the so-called "separated education," but some day she would have time enough. It would take even Samson a long while to become a man.

One day, as she was walking home over here for lonely trysting place, she met the tattered-looking man who carried medicines in his saddle-bags and dispensed them to people, and who practiced both forms of healing through the hills. He was an—no, he does his rag, and three one leg over the pommel.

"Howdy, Sally," he greeted.

"Evenin', Brother Spencer. How air ye?"

"Tolerable, thank ye, Sally." The bandy-legged member studied the girl awhile in silence, and then said blunt-ly:

"Ye've done broke right smart, in the last year. Anything the matter with ye?"

She shook her head, and laughed. "It was an effort to laugh merrily, but the ghost of the old instinctive sadness rippled behind it.

"I've just come from old Spicer South's," volunteered the doctor. "He's sittin' pretty considerable, these days."

"What's the matter with Uncle Spicer?" demanded the girl, in genuine anxiety. Every one along Misery called the old man Uncle Spicer.

"I can't just make out," her informant spoke slowly, and she knew corrugated into something like a frown. "He isn't just to say sick. That is, his organs seems all right, but he can't seem to have no appetite for nothin' and his victuals don't tempt him none. He just pines, that's all."

"I'll go over that, an' see him," announced the girl. "I'll cook a chicken that'll tempt him."

The girl spent much time after that at the house of old Spicer South, and her coming seemed to waken him into a fitful return of spirits.

"I reckon, Uncle Spicer," suggested the girl, on one of her first visits, "you haven't met Mr. South. Maybe he's most do ye good ter see him."

The old man was weakly raising back on his chair, and his eyes were vacantly listless; but at the suggestion, he straightened, and the ancient fire came again to his face.

"Don't ye do it!" he exclaimed, almost fiercely. "I knows ye mean his kindly, gal, but don't ye meddle in my business."

"I did, Uncle Spicer," suggested the girl, "I thought ye'd be pleased."

"No, little gal." His voice softened at once into gentleness. "I know ye didn't, I didn't mean to be short—answered with ye either, but that's just one thing I won't be nobody tor do—an' that's ter send for Samson. He knows my feelin's, an', when he wants ter come, he'll find the door open, but we hadn't agoin' ter send airter him."

* * * * * * *

Wilfred Horton found himself that fall in the position of a man whose course lies through rapids, and for the first time in his life his pleasures were giving precedence to business.

Horton was the most baited and social man in New York, but the men who hated and snubbed him were his own sort, and the men who admired him were those whom he would never meet, and who saw him only through the columns of penny papers. Powerful enemies had ceased to laugh, and began to conspire. He must be silenced! How, was a puzzled question. But, in some fashion, he must be silenced. Society had not cast him out, but society had shown him in many subtle ways that he was no longer her favorite. He had taken a stubborn stand with the massed Mammon, while, from various sources, Horton had received warnings of actual personal danger. But at these he has laughed and no hint of them had reached Adrienne's ears.

One evening, when business had forced the postponement of a dinner engagement with Miss Lescott, he turned her over the telephone to ride with him the following morning.

"I know you are usually asleep when I'm out and galloping," he laughed, "but you pitched me neck and crop into the hardest job, and I shouldn't have to lose everything. Don't have to make breakfast. I want you to try out a new one of mine."

"I think," she answered, "that early morning is the best time to ride. I'm tired you at seven at the Plaza en tenue."

They had turned the upper end of Central Park before Horton drew his mount to a walk, and allowed the reins to hang. They had been galloping hard, and conversation had been impracticable.

"I suppose everyone should have taught me," began Horton, slowly, "that the most salutary thing in the world is to try to lecture you, Dreamie. I've been that guilty myself. Years ago I used to lecture my sisters, and they used to—as you would, if you dared, to me, I think. I'm a bounder, or else I'm as so directly ignorant and crude that he is unfit to associate with you."

"I make no apologies for Mr. South," she said, "because none are needed. He is a stranger in New York, who knows nothing, and cares nothing about the conventionalities. If I chose to work, then, I think it was my right and my responsibility."

Horton said nothing, and, in a moment, Adrienne Lescott's manner softened. She spoke more gently.

"Wilfred, I'm sorry you choose to take this prejudice against the boy. You could have done a great deal to help him. I wanted you to be friends."

"Thank you!" His manner was stiff. "I hardly think we'd hit it off together."

"I believe you are jealous!" she announced.

"Of course, I'm jealous," he replied, without evasion. "Possibly I might have waited—time in the first place by showing my jealousy. I learned now to make amends. I'm green-eyed."

She laid her gloved fingers lightly on his bridle hand.

"Don't be," she advised; "I'm not in love with him. If I were, it wouldn't matter. He was—

"A neater, sweeter maiden,
In a greener, clearer land."

He's solid me all about her."

Horton shook his head dubiously.

"I wish to the good Lord, he'd go back to her," he said.

CHAPTER XI.

One afternoon swinging along Fifth Avenue in his down-town walk, Sam saw met Mr. Fardish, who fell into step with him, and began to make himself agreeable.

"By the way, South," he suggested after the commonplaces had been disposed of, "you'll pardon my little prevarication the other evening about the club."

"Why was it necessary?" inquired Samson, with a glance of disquieting directness.

"Possibly, it was not necessary, from the point of view of the world. Every man knows two kinds of women. It's just as well not to discuss the latter with the ladies of the orchids with the nectarines."

Samson made no response. Just Farfish, meeting his eyes, felt as he had been contemptuously rebuked. His own eyes gleamed with an impulse of resentment. But it passed, as he remembered that his plans involved the necessity of winning this boy's confidence.

At the steps of a Fifth avenue club Fardish halted.

"Won't you turn in here," he suggested, "and arrange your thirst?"

Samson declined, and walked on. But when, a day or two later, he dropped into the same club with George Lescott, Farfish joined them in the grill—without invitation.

By the way, Lescott," said the interloper, with an easy assurance upon which the coolness of his reception had no warning effect, "it wasn't for long—we still durke are flying south. Will you get off for your customary shooting?"

"I'm afraid not," Lescott's voice became more cordial, as a man's will, whose hobby has been touched. There are several canvases to be finished for approaching exhibitions, I wish I could go. When the first cold winds begin to sweep down, I get the fever. The prospects are good, too, I understand."

"The best in years! Protection to the Canadian breeding fields is bearing fruit. Do you shoot, Mr. South?" The speaker included Samson as himself merely out of deference to his physical presence.

Samson shook his head. But he spoke up eagerly: He too, knew that note of the migratory "honk" from high overhead.

"Samson," said Lescott slowly, as he caught the gleam in his friend's eyes, "you've been working too hard. You'll have to take a week off, and get your hand. After you've changed your method from rifle to shotgun, you'll hear your wings and you'll come back fitter for work. I must arrange it."

"As to that," suggested Fardish, "the minister of one requesting the civilities." Mr. South can run down to the Kenmore. I'll have a car made for him."

"Don't trouble," demurred Lescott, quickly. "I can be that up."

"It would be a pleasure," smiled the other. "I stumbled into a shoot last year, at the same time, but I am afraid that, like you, Lescott, I shall have to give business the right of way. However, when I hear that the birds are perfect, I'll call on Mr. South up, and pass the news to him."

Samson had thought it rather sudden that he had never met Horton. If the Lescott house, though Adrienne spoke of him almost as of a member of the family. However, Samson's visits were usually in his intervals between relays of work and Horton was probably at such times in Wall street. It did not occur to the moonshiner that the other was intentionally avoiding him. He knew of Wilfred only through the newspaper descriptions, and, from hearsay, liked him.

The mention of chase application to assail and hooks had begun to tell on the outdoor man in a softening of his stern, a slight, though reflective, pallor. The enthusiasm with which he attacked his daily work had carried him far, and made his progress phenomenal, but he was spending capital of nerves and health, and George Lescott began to fear a breakdown for his protege. Ice blunted the matter with Adrienne, and the girl began to protestin the boy so fervent in the duck-shooting trip—an interest which had already awakened, despite the rifleman's inherent contempt for shotguns.

"I reckon I'm like it, all right," he said, "and I'll bring back some ducks, if I'm lucky."

So, Lescott arranged the outfit, and Samson awaited the news of the coming flight.

That same evening, Fardish dropped into the studio, explaining that he had been buying a picture at Collazzo's, and had taken the opportunity to stop in and leave over the telephone to ride with him the following morning.

"I know you are usually asleep when I'm out and galloping," he laughed, "but you pitched me neck and crop into the hardest job, and I shouldn't have to lose everything. Don't have to make breakfast. I want you to try out a new one of mine."

"I think," she answered, "that early morning is the best time to ride. I'm tired you at seven at the Plaza en tenue."

They had turned the upper end of Central Park before Horton drew his mount to a walk, and allowed the reins to hang. They had been galloping hard, and conversation had been impracticable.

"I suppose everyone should have taught me," began Horton, slowly, "that the most salutary thing in the world is to try to lecture you, Dreamie. I've been that guilty myself. Years ago I used to lecture my sisters, and they used to—as you would, if you dared, to me, I think. I'm a bounder, or else I'm as so directly ignorant and crude that he is unfit to associate with you."

"I make no apologies for Mr. South," she said, "because none are needed. He is a stranger in New York, who knows nothing, and cares nothing about the conventionalities. If I chose to work, then, I think it was my right and my responsibility."

Horton said nothing, and, in a moment, Adrienne Lescott's manner softened. She spoke more gently.

"Wilfred, I'm sorry you choose to take this prejudice against the boy. You could have done a great deal to help him. I wanted you to be friends."

"Thank you!" His manner was stiff. "I hardly think we'd hit it off together."

"I believe you are jealous!" she announced.

"Of course, I'm jealous," he replied, without evasion. "Possibly I might have waited—time in the first place by showing my jealousy. I learned now to make amends. I'm green-eyed."

She laid her gloved fingers lightly on his bridle hand.

"Don't be," she advised; "I'm not in love with him. If I were, it wouldn't matter. He was

"A neater, sweeter maiden,
In a greener, clearer land."

He's solid me all about her."

Horton shook his head dubiously.

"I wish to the good Lord, he'd go back to her," he said.

CHAPTER XI.

One afternoon swinging along Fifth Avenue in his down-town walk, Sam saw met Mr. Farfish, who fell into step with him, and began to make himself agreeable.

"By the way, South," he suggested after the commonplaces had been disposed of, "you'll pardon my little prevarication the other evening about the club."

"Why was it necessary?" inquired Samson, with a glance of disquieting directness.

"Possibly, it was not necessary, from the point of view of the world. Every man knows two kinds of women. It's just as well not to discuss the latter with the ladies of the orchids with the nectarines."

Samson made no response. Just Farfish, meeting his eyes, felt as he had been contemptuously rebuked. His own eyes gleamed with an impulse of resentment. But it passed, as he remembered that his plans involved the necessity of winning this boy's confidence.

At the steps of a Fifth avenue club Farfish halted.

"Won't you turn in here," he suggested, "and arrange your thirst?"

Samson declined, and walked on. But when, a day or two later, he dropped into the same club with George Lescott, Farfish joined them in the grill—without invitation.

By the way, Lescott," said the interloper, with an easy assurance upon which the coolness of his reception had no warning effect, "it wasn't for long—we still durke are flying south. Will you get off for your customary shooting?"

"I'm afraid not," Lescott's voice became more cordial, as a man's will, whose hobby has been touched. There are several canvases to be finished for approaching exhibitions, I wish I could go. When the first cold winds begin to sweep down, I get the fever. The prospects are good, too, I understand."

"The best in years! Protection to the Canadian breeding fields is bearing fruit. Do you shoot, Mr. South?" The speaker included Samson as himself merely out of deference to his physical presence.

Samson shook his head. But he spoke up eagerly: He too, knew that note of the migratory "honk" from high overhead.

"Samson," said Lescott slowly, as he caught the gleam in his friend's eyes, "you've been working too hard. You'll have to take a week off, and get your hand. After you've changed your method from rifle to shotgun, you'll hear your wings and you'll come back fitter for work. I must arrange it."

"As to that," suggested Farfish, "the minister of one requesting the civilities." Mr. South can run down to the Kenmore. I'll have a car made for him."

"Don't trouble," demurred Lescott, quickly. "I can be that up."

"It would be a pleasure," smiled the other. "I stumbled into a shoot last year, at the same time, but I am afraid that, like you, Lescott, I shall have to give business the right of way. However, when I hear that the birds are perfect, I'll call on Mr. South up, and pass the news to him."

Samson had thought it rather sudden

"I Will Arrange So That You Will Not Run Up on Wilfred Horton."

meet Mr. Wilfred Horton. I want you to tell me what it is he is a friend of my friends. You say you've said some crack. I'm sorry you've either said too much, or too little."

Then, very fastidiously and artificially, exactly as he was relaxed and lip cigarette, the visitor proceeded to plant in Samson's mind an exaggerated and untrue picture of Horton's contempt for him and of Horton's resentment at the favor shown him by Mr. Lescott.

Samson heard him out with a face originatically set, and his voice was low and quiet when he said:

"I'm obliged to you."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

LESS HOSTILE TO FOREIGNERS

Lives of European Explorers in Tibet Comparatively Safe—Work is Difficult.

Tibet continues to hold its special fascination for explorers, and it is therefore interesting to learn from the experiences of Captains Bailey and Morshead, who recently cleared up the long-standing mystery concerning the connection between the Tsangpo and Irrahampoo rivers, that a noticeable change has come about in the attitude of the Tibetans toward foreigners. The natives have encountered no signs of hostility or distrust, except when they were mistaken for Chinese, who appear to be held in abhorrence. The difficulties encountered by the surveying operations, and Capt. Morshead asserts that "it is now possible to traverse the country from end to end, openly, with plane-table and theodolite, and without even the formality of a pass from Lhasa." Apparently the Tibetans have learned that the British are their best protectors from Chinese aggression. Apropos of the Tibetan hatred of the Chinese, Mr. F. K. Gebauer, who is now travelling north from Burma along the Chinese-Tibetan border, intends ultimately to strike west to the Tsangpo and follow that river through the passes of the Himalaya.—Scientific American.

To kill flies on the wire there has been invented a pair of hinged wire screens, operated like shears.

American Industry Bound to Benefit by Changes in the Commerce Laws of the World.

The American demand for several minor mineral products will be stimulated by the changes in trade with Europe, with the result of increasing materially the production for 1916 and following years, says a bulletin of the United States Geological Survey. In the case of the mineral products, toward a stronger hold of the domestic market is already well under way. The production in 1913 was the largest in the history of the industry. The underlying cause of this prosperity is no doubt the improvement in the chemical industry in America in the texture, finish, color, decoration, and the production of coating, the higher grades of American pottery equaling if not surpassing some of the best imported ware. For many years the value of the imported pottery exceeded that of the domestic product, but about the close of the nineteenth century domestic production caught up with imports, and since that time it has greatly exceeded them, the production in 1913 being nearly four times as great in value as the imports. There was, however, last year a considerable decrease in exports of pottery, a record which could not be reversed by reason of the changes in the world's commerce that have occurred since.

Of German invasion is an automobile without travels on three sets of movable runners instead of wheels.

SATIRE CONTAINS A MORAL

One's Real Qualities May Be Mure in Demeanor Than Those One Makes Pretense of.

Among the clever satires in Barry Pain's new book, "Stories Without Tears," is one which relates how a publisher went to an employment agency to secure a clever writer.

The agency man told him it would be easy to fill the order.

"We've got 400 clever writers on our books," he said. "I'll send a few dozen of the best around to your office this afternoon and you can pick one. That do?"

"Nicely," said the customer, and rose to go, when he remembered something. By the way," he said, "I also want a boy who can be trusted to take charge of the stamps and petty cash."

"Then Mr. Agency threw down his pen. He did not book that order. He gave a stab like a high-power suction pump. "Do you?" he said in a measured voice. "Well, if you find such a one for me, I want one myself."

"Oh, my poor friends who are trying to be cleverer than you are, remember that the world also wants honest men.

"And, as things stand at present, Patent Pills with the Unmokeyable Odor and a letter marked than Fresh Fertilizers containing Free Phosphorus."

Guard Against Taking Cold.

We all know about wet feet and drafts as causes of colds, but these are only two of the many ways of taking cold, and two to which many people are not in the least susceptible. No two persons are the same in their susceptibilities, and you may continually avoid sitting in drafts and then find that you have taken a bad cold because you have kept your feet cold and heated. The first step to prevention is to study yourself and find out in what you are most susceptible. Here are some of the most common causes for colds: Crowded rooms, crowded rooms, drafts, underheated or overheated rooms, too heavy clothing, that one becomes easily overheated in a warm room, underclothing of wool that leaves one subject to infection; damp clothing, and chill.

TENDER SENSITIVE SKINS

Quickly Soothed by Cuticura. Nothing Better. Trial Free.

Especially when preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap. Many comforting things these fragrant supercreamy emollients may do for the skin, scalp, hair and hands and do it quickly, effectively and economically. For the other, bath and shaving, Cuticura Soap is the ideal combination. Nothing else so much for so little. Cuticura, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Richest Marble Vein.

The greatest marble-producing industry in the world is now to be found in the famous Carrara district of Italy, but in Tennessee the one of the richest veins in the world stretches in an irregular line across the state. So great is the production of marble in this section that the inhabitants have lost much of their appreciation of its value, and use it for such humble and utilitarian purposes as paving, underpinning for barns, fencing posts, stepping stones and drinking troughs for horses. This vein is about fifty-seven miles long, from 1,650 to 2,200 feet in width, and from it is being taken in enormous quantities white marble that is equal to the finest Italian marble, as well as an endless variety of blue, yellow, green and jet black marbles.

Answered.

Juvenile wit sometimes is doubly pointed.

"How many bad boys does it take to make a good one?" a facetious newsworker once asked of a class of lively street urchins.

"One if you treat him well," came the quick reply.

Natural Inclination.

"That fellow doesn't like; he simply vegetates."

"No wonder. He's got a cabbage head, carrory hair, he's a perfect business less and an ill-round beet."

The croaker generally has little to say, but he willing to keep on saying so.—Indianapolis Star.

The man who is pleased with himself is usually easily satisfied.

BILIOUS, HEADACHY, SICK "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10cent box.

Your headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace disordered liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet, and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

Reducing Hilarity.

Only fifteen out of every one thousand children from ten to fourteen years of age in the United States are unable to read and write.

These figures were announced by the federal bureau of education show a striking decrease in child illiteracy during the last decade. In 1900 the number of illiterate children between the ages of ten and fourteen was forty-two in every thousand, in 1910 the number was reduced to twenty-two. Four years have further lowered it more than 33 1-3 per cent.

The decrease in illiteracy of decrease, twenty years more may see the illiteracy of the nation almost or at most cease to exist save among newly arrived immigrants. Indeed, it was the present rate of improvement fall to produce in the same period a marked decrease in the number of illiteracy in the entire population of ten years and over—which in 1910 was 7.7 or seventy-five illiterates for every thousand.

Two Groups of Spiders.

Roughly speaking, spiders may be divided into two groups—the sedentary spiders, who spin a snare for the capture of their prey, and the roving spiders, who employ other methods for obtaining their food. To this last class belong the jumping and wolf spiders, both of which present features of considerable interest. The jumping spiders are an important family, numbering several thousand species, but they do not show to advantage in the temperate climates; their home is in tropical countries, where they abound in great variety of colors, which can vie with the brilliance of the blooming birds. The eyesight of these spiders is very keen, and it is a curious fact that certain species can alter the color of their eyes by a movement of the internal mechanism.

Cause for Thankfulness.

In a Sunday school in a northern town there was one little negro girl in the class

The teacher asked each little girl to think of something that she should be thankful for.

Each girl told of some special blessing that was hers. When she came to the little negro she said: "Now, Sadie, what is your special blessing?"

"Dat my face is black an' I don't have to wash it but once a week," was the reply.

Squeezed.

"Help me on with this overcoat, my peach," said Herbert to Adelin.

"No, Herbert, I'm not your peach, but your lemon. And if you want lemon ade you know what you must do first."

Herbert promptly squeezed the lemon.

That Tired Kind.

Miss Hifle—But, oooooh! my nervous arrows is yets some sort of feeling for me!

Miss Iffle—Oh, yes; the sort people take sarsaparilla for in the spring.

A girl isn't necessarily artful because she paints.

Above Everything Else

a well-fed brain and nervous system are essential to success.

Brain workers especially need food in the morning that will not overload the stomach.

Much depends on the start one gets each day, as to mental vigor and how he may expect to accomplish the work on hand.

He can't be alert and have a clear-working brain and steady nerves on a heavy breakfast which requires a lot of vital energy in digesting it.

Grape-Nuts

FOOD—

made of whole wheat and barley, contains in a most appetizing, easy and quickly digestible form, the Food Elements required by Nature in nourishing brain and nerve cells.

There's true nourishment in Grape-Nuts, and

"There's a Reason"

Postum Cereal Company, Limited, Battle Creek, Michigan

IT WAS REAL LOVE

By MYRTLE PAIRD WEBSTER.

Peter Lowden was a disappointed man. He had been six months in the United States and half that time in Chicago, and it seemed as though that period had been set aside by some cruel destiny as a special purgatorial test for his slavish spirit.

"The world, as I see it, is a sight of sighed Scotia's heather bloom," he sighed as from a deep dark pit of misery and discouragement. "And Jessie—"

That was where honest loyal Peter's power pinched hardest. He could philosophize calmly over high hopes quickly blasted as to sudden wealth and position in the new far country. He was content with a dish of weak broke and an occasional finnan haddie—but Jessie, light of his heart! How he had hoped to wed his pretty modest fiancee and "buck her fine!" silken gown and allier ha' to spare," and now "the brew moon" glistened on a lonely pillow, and Peter penniless and hopeless, and Jessie—

It had come about strangely. She, an orphan, had left the little town where, both had lived both a few months in advance of Peter. She had written him a sweet cozy note to furnish him with the penciled address of the home in Chicago where she would be, and you may well imagine Peter, with this, Peter started to try his luck in the promised land to be near his future bride.

For three months in New York Peter had been unemployed. Immigrants, even in the business era reduced to twenty-two. Four years have further lowered it more than 33 1-3 per cent.

The decrease in illiteracy of decrease, twenty years more may see the illiteracy of the nation almost or at most cease to exist save among newly arrived immigrants. Indeed, it was the present rate of improvement fail to produce in the same period a marked decrease in the number of illiteracy in the entire population of ten years and over—which in 1910 was 7.7 or seventy-five illiterates for every thousand.

Two Groups of Spiders.

Roughly speaking, spiders may be divided into two groups—the sedentary spiders, who spin a snare for the capture of their prey, and the roving spiders, who employ other methods for obtaining their food. To this last class belong the jumping and wolf spiders, both of which present features of considerable interest. The jumping spiders are an important family, numbering several thousand species, but they do not show to advantage in the temperate climates; their home is in tropical countries, where they abound in great variety of colors, which can vie with the brilliance of the blooming birds. The eyesight of these spiders is very keen, and it is a curious fact that certain species can alter the color of their eyes by a movement of the internal mechanism.

Cause for Thankfulness.

In a Sunday school in a northern town there was one little negro girl in the class

The teacher asked each little girl to think of something that she should be thankful for.

Each girl told of some special blessing that was hers. When she came to the little negro she said: "Now, Sadie, what is your special blessing?"

"Dat my face is black an' I don't have to wash it but once a week," was the reply.

Squeezed.

"Help me on with this overcoat, my peach," said Herbert to Adelin.

"No, Herbert, I'm not your peach, but your lemon. And if you want lemon ade you know what you must do first."

Herbert promptly squeezed the lemon.

That Tired Kind.

Miss Hifle—But, oooooh! my nervous arrows is yets some sort of feeling for me!

Miss Iffle—Oh, yes; the sort people take sarsaparilla for in the spring.

A girl isn't necessarily artful because she paints.

Leopard Plush Motor Coat With Hood

No wonder the devotees of motoring are braving the coldest weather. They may envelop themselves from head to foot in the luxurious coats having hoods attached made of the same material as the coat, the fur fabrics that have and so great a vogue this season have been developed in pattern especially suited to midwinter motor costs. These plushes are used more for lining coats of other fabrics, and are as warm as furs.

Perhaps and economical in the cost of leopard plush pictured here. The results of moderate looks as warm as furs in it. It is a long straight garment of the simplest outlines, comfortably roomy. The sleeves and yoke are cut in one, and the skirt part allows plenty of room in walking.

A broadtail plush is used to make deep plain cuffs, and as an inlay on a small neckpiece that fastens about the throat. The hood is a close-fitting cap with a wide boudoiler border turned back at the front and trimmed with a flat bow of broadtail. The coat is double breasted, fastened with a large button at the top and in the front.

Smart coats for warmer climes are made with more concessions to new style features and allow themselves a little frivolity of composition. Drop yokes and flaring skirts, not so long as the figures, are noticeable among them. It is safe to predict that with things military imposing themselves everywhere, the newly designed motor coats for spring will reflect something of military modes.

But to face the sterner requirements of the passing season in the North, coats of plush lined with a plain wool fabric, or of a fabric that lined with plush, with hood attached, provides both comfort and style. And with them the comfortable muff, though, but for one season, be made at a moderate price, and that there is no end of durability in them.

Discard Small Turban.

In Paris the leaders of fashion have discarded the small turban hat for the larger models. Some of the most stunning hats appear in a wide variety of shapes, with practically rolling brims or brims which flare more on one side than on the other. Some hat accessories and strands of pearl beads are used for making hair ornaments, also narrow fancy ribbons and braids. It is making the hat strands described, bright green velvet, instead of crimson color, is used the embroidered of decorations for white hair is the result.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

"What Else Are Ye But a Fine Whistler!"

up enough to pay his fare to Chicago. He was crossing the ferry to take the train to Jersey City, when an unfortunate comrade, a woman passenger, jumped overboard in a desperate attempt at suicide. Peter bravely leaped after and rescued the girl, half-drowned and uncomfortable the first stage of his train journey. Then came the appalling discovery that his soaking in the river has blurred out the precious address that was his only clue to Jessie.

Then came a month in Chicago where the inexperienced lad patrolled the city streets, seeking the lady of his love, to meet with bitter, utter disappointment. He spent his last dollar and was forced to sell his valise. He finally gave up the disheartening quest. Peter shuddered—he then he recalled the wretched woman on the ferry boat. Then again, Jessie might be sick or in trouble, or in danger! All Peter could do now was to try and keep his courage up and plod through odd jobs. At home he had mastered the Scotch bonnet, a specialty lay in Scotch edibles only, and nobody seemed to want such fare at Antoine's restaurant.

Now, this especial bleak evening Peter was at the last extremity. He was cold, sleepy, hungry. As he was passing a large dark building, however, his eye lighted on it. It had two bulletin boards at its front. Each of the bulletin boards was surmounted by the center of which, plainly visible even at a distance, was the monstrously apparent, but it will come very slowly. Add a strong solution of carbonate of soda to the restoring agent and water and the image will fairly leap at you. The reduction of the bromide of silver has been tremendously hastened and it is also more thorough and complete, the negative having much greater density. This is the main mission of a carbonate of soda in the developer. It is to speed things up and complete the action.—Outing.

Their Aspirations.

"Find out what your boys' aspirations are when they are young and help them to the attainment of them," advised a Philadelphia lecturer to the mothers of boys. "Find out it is not hard to do, comments a Texas newspaper. Ask the average boy and he will reveals that if the boys of today can have their way, we shall soon have a generation made up of baseball pitchers and detectives, because it is clear the Indians cannot lost.

A Bit to Think About

On the doorway of an Italian church are three inscriptions. The first, beneath an arch of roses reads as follows: "All that pleases is but one moment." The second, beneath a cross, "All that troubles is but a moment," and under the cross, "That only is important which is eternal.

True Definition of a Pessimist.

"Pa, what is a pessimist?" "A pessimist is a man who, when he sees a good thing, would rather have the money."

"What Else Are Ye But a Fine Whistler!"

Meteskin is Profitable.

Moleskin is being used extensively used in this country during the last two years in place of muskrat and practically all of the supply has been imported from Europe. In the belief that the common mole of eastern United States produces fur of equal value, moleskin was offered to professional furriers, who stated that the quality is superior to the foreign product. A report on the economic status of the eastern species was published during the year. The mole inhabiting the northwestern coast is larger than the common eastern species, and a number of these have been collected in order to obtain a report on the quality of the pelt. If the nature of the fur proves to be as good as that of the eastern species, it will be a reason why trappers should not secure a market for it by capturing moles in mass, as the area they inhabit is extensive. In many localities an acre of ground contains one mole, and in dry individuals, if this mole can be profitably trapped, it will solve the problem of freeing agricultural areas from it will practically be looked.

Hint for Photographers.

Carbonate of soda is an accelerator of the developing agent, hydroquinone, or elogen, when they are dissolved alone in water, the image will slightly appear, but it will come very slowly. Add a strong solution of carbonate of soda to the restoring agent and water and the image will fairly leap at you. The reduction of the bromide of silver has been tremendously hastened and it is also more thorough and complete, the negative having much greater density. This is the main mission of a carbonate of soda in the developer. It is to speed things up and complete the action.—Outing.

Handsome Coiffure Ornaments

It is wonderful what miracles of improvement in looks can be brought about by the use of the coiffure and its decorations. Only beautiful and audacious youth can afford to wear it, however, severe styles of hairdressing. Waves that mitigate the austerity of straight lines, curls which suggest femininity, are almost invariably becoming. And add from beneficiary, a well-groomed appearance (more evident in the coiffure than anywhere) has a cumulative effect on itself.

When the best and most tasteful of hair ornaments are worn

Here's Good news for "tailored" men!

If you want to save a very decided amount on ordinary tailors' prices for clothes tailored to your individual order, have us send you measure to

Ed. V. Price & Co.
Largest Tailors in the World
OF
GOOD made-to-order Clothes

Their immense business permits them to deliver the cream of custom tailoring at a price you can readily afford.

Ask us to "show" you—Today.

Go to ··· LEVINSON'S ··· Get the Habit

C. Danto & Son.
THE · STORE · OF · QUALITY — WHERE · ALL · GOODS · ARE · FRESH

It does not cost any more at our store where everything is fresh and the prices right than it does to trade anywhere else. Our aim is to get what you want at a right price; what we have not got we are willing to get for you.

WE GIVE STAMPS.

Remember, Our Telephone is Number 12.

C. DANTO & SON.
212 Bridge St. Phone No. 12 Phone No. 60

A CUP OF COFFEE.

It Has No Value as Food but It Has a Stimulating Effect.

The infusion of coffee presents practically very little material that is of direct nourishment. Analysis shows it to the London Patent, but by diminishing nervous fatigue, by virtue chiefly of the caffeine present, it has nevertheless that power. It is and then a nutrifier of tissue. The use of coffee after dinner, it is of interest to note, is justified in a large number of cases by the fact of its stimulating effect upon the vital organs, and it is said to serve to some extent as an antidote to alcohol.

It is commonly claimed to remove drowsiness. As a matter of fact, in many subjects it produces drowsiness but this is usually followed by marked wakefulness. The practice of drinking coffee after a meal for the sake of the stimulus which it exhilarating has much to be said in its favor distinctly.

There is no reason for supposing that coffee possesses any value as a food. The berry contains a quite important proportion of fatty substances (12 per cent average), but these are excreted by excretion from the intestine, owing to their insolubility, they remain in the "grounds."

According to our analysis, the protein content of a cup of coffee are small, approximating to 1.25 per well of the coffee actually taken. This amount can save little dietetic significance. There is also a trifling quantity of sugar present, besides traces of aloe bot. which again can possess no important from a physiological point of view.

Deliens.

In the highlands of Scotland and in Ireland May I say entire? Belfast. This was the name of an ancient people famous chiefly of which have not yield to this day. The name is still used for May day in Gaelic, Beltaine. It is said that the druids on that day used to make two fires with great ceremonies and drive their cattle between them as a safeguard against disease.

IT WAS A "HIM" POEM.

But That Was Not the Only Reason Why Riley Liked It.

James Whitcomb Riley and Joel Chandler Harris figure in a story told by a writer in the New York Sun. They had sought rest and recuperation in a hotel among the southern mountains and wished to avoid the attempts of the other guests to disturb them. Much against their wills, however, they were constrained to appear at a "reading" from their own works after having been routed from a secluded spot in the woods to which they retired.

Riley was elocutionist had the center of the stage when they got to the hotel. He led off by announcing a poem by Mr. Riley. She recited it. It was about somebody named Jim Riley loved unloved.

"Would you mind," he said when she had finished, "reading that again?"

She did not mind, and went at it a little wind a tear away as she finished.

"Then he said: "Please recite it again, if you will."

She did it the third time, and Riley was even more affected.

"Do you know" he said after she had ended, "I like that poem. It's a fine poem. I always liked Jim poem. My own name is Jim. I always read Jim poems. I have written several Jim poems myself. But do you know why I like this Jim poem better than other?"

The young woman eagerly asked why. The assembled crowd leaned forward breathlessly to hear the answer.

"I like it" said Riley, "because it always reminds me of my dear old friend Eugene Field. Eugene told me the man who wrote that poem, you know."

When Dark's All Right.

Ha ha! says the Greek, but and the seat of his pants may be shiny, but if a man's children have their shoes fastened again the window pane a half hour before he is due home to supper I say that that is the with anything you have. He is all right.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

CITY ELECTRIC STREET RAILWAYS

Equipment Depends on Condition to Be Met.

THE COURSE OF TRAFFIC.

In Developing a Comprehensive Traffic System Thorough Study of the Flow of Traffic Should Be Made and Its Probable Increase Taken Into Account.

In the operation of a street railway system the equipment will depend, as in the case of the power house, upon the conditions to be met.

If the system is a local one direct current at 600 volts should be adopted, but if the lines run into distant suburbs the best current to adopt is the single phase, and the voltage may run to 11000 or 15000, thus reducing line loss.

The equipment of the cars should be such as to run on either the 600 volts street current in the city or on the single phase, high voltage current in the suburbs, thus passing to and from the city without interruption.

The substations for stepping down the high voltage current should be well situated along the line to obtain the most economical power distribution. They are preferably located around the outskirts of the city on the various lines, so that high voltage current will not be brought into the city. The distribution system in the city itself should be underground, a method which, though more expensive than the overhead distribution system, is often the preferable, due to the many advantages it possesses.

PLANT AT DRESDEN SUPPLYING ELECTRIC POWER TO STREET RAILWAYS.

In developing a comprehensive traffic system thorough study of the flow of traffic should be made and its probable increase taken into account. Where the traffic is heavy or likely to grow to large proportions, especially where the load is long and heavy, the question of subways and elevated roads should be considered, even though the necessity is not imperative, as such rapid and convenient means of access to outlying districts will have the effect of developing such sections and of causing the city to expand much more rapidly than would otherwise be the case. The same is also true to only a less degree in the case of suburban trolley lines.

In the development of a traction system much depends on the comfort and convenience of the traveling public. The equipment should be up to date and attractive in every respect. Cars should be of appropriate design and of neat appearance. Means of access should be easy, the seats should be comfortably designed and preferably transverse in the car, as the public is prone to a seat and should have to sit and not be a crowded bit of a sideboard or a strap to hang on by.

Attend it is customary for conductors calling for tickets on electric lines the systems to receive not only specifications of cars, but also detailed drawings, showing cost whether and to terms description. The companies are thus in position to select the most economical and efficient system, instead of taking whatever our manufacturers may be pleased to turn out.

In handling traffic the convenience and comfort of the public as well as of the operator is best served by having a uniform fare rate instead of a certain number of fares and by the absence of transfers at all intersections. Such transfers should be issued at the time demanded by the passenger, though preferably when entering the car if the number of passengers is not thereby interfered with. If delayed on setting the car traffic is likely to be delayed.

Attend passengers are seldom attowed to stand in cars, and operators are obliged to enjoy sufficient cars so that there will be seats for all. On paying its fare the passenger gets a ticket with the destination punched, number to our system of railroad tickets, and this ticket in many cases entitles the passengers to reach his destination over any line that intervene.

Letter European or Asiatic.

What is it that has made Russia the great enigma, the stranger both to Europe and Asia? Beyond doubt, the fact that she is herself neither one. To the Asiatic she is something of a European; to the European she is something of an Asiatic; yet to both she is not wholly attach the one or the other. She is like a great tree with her ancient trunk rising up out of the Caucasus, the early home of the Slavic people and towering up into the icon of the north and with her branches extending east and west into the sunrise and the sunset.—Century.

HEAT OF OUR SUN

To Measure It Is a Perplexing Problem For Science.

NEWTON ONCE TRIED TO DO IT

He Figured It at the Amazing Intensity of 1,000,000 Degrees Centigrade, While the Latest Estimates Place It at About 6,500 Degrees.

How hot is the sun? The question has been answered in many different ways, and it is by no means certain that we have yet arrived at an even approximately accurate answer. Yet it would seem that as the sun is the only source of the earth's heat, and as we know the exact distance of the sun, it ought to be easy to calculate its heat. That is what Newton thought in 1700 when, finding that a thermometer registered 60 degrees C. in the sun and 25.44 degrees C. in the shade, and applying the law of the square of distance he concluded that the sun's heat was 1,000,000 degrees C.!

In 1837 Sir John Herschel and Pouillet devised special instruments for measuring the solar heat, but at the very beginning disagreed on a fundamental question. Pouillet wanted to estimate that the earth's atmosphere cut off half the sun's heat; Herschel insisted that it cut off only one-third. Herschel reached the conclusion that the sun's heat was two calories per square centimeter per minute. Pouillet calculated it at 1.7262 calories per square centimeter per minute. This means that the sun's rays falling vertically upon each square centimeter of the earth's surface would be sufficient to boil a pint. If it were not for their absorption by our atmosphere, to raise 1.7262 grams of water one degree C. per minute. This number is what astronomers call the solar constant.

Pouillet's figures, 1.7, were generally accepted until recently. Forbes by experiments at the top and at the base of a high mountain calculated that 2.85 was the correct number. Violle made it 2.54, and Crova asserted that it was certainly superior to two calories per square centimeter per minute.

The American Langley invented the bolometer, by means of which he measured the intensity of each ray by the length of its wave before entering our atmosphere. Thus he proved that the rays of shorter length are those that are most absorbed. It is as if we placed two red glasses between ourselves and the sun, one representing the sun's atmosphere and one representing our own.

The Abbe Moreux, director of the Bourges observatory, declares in an article in Cosmos that if there two atmospheres were eliminated the world would see the sun as he really is he would appear to be a brilliant greenish sun.

Langley's calculations placed the solar constant at about three. He proved that scarcely 60 per cent of the sun's rays penetrated to sea level.

Other observers obtained other figures, and at the beginning of this century the tendency was to return to those announced by Herschel and Pouillet.

It is certain that the earth intercepts only about one two-billionth part of the sun's total heat of the sun, but if we adopt Langley's figure, it, we find that the quantity of heat received would be sufficient to melt annually a layer of ice 36.75 feet thick at the equator of the earth. The average power received from the sun over the entire earth is equal to 16,840,000 kilogrammeters a year, or one continuous horsepower for every 1.72 square meters.

The greater part of this heat is used up in keeping the earth warm, but, according to Helmholtz, about a thousandth part of it is absorbed by animals and vegetables and becomes an abundant reserve of energy for the human race.

If we accept the more recent figures, which are the result of the intelligent of Messrs. Abbott, Fowle and Aldrich at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington and which place the solar constant two calories per square centimeter per minute, the heat received from the sun is striking.

If the total heat could be applied to a block of ice at 0 degrees C. an inch in the earth—blank—this block would be entirely melted in a quarter of an hour. All the water thus obtained would be carried in steam at 100 degrees C. 117 minutes later, the whole block of solid ice is thus melted and taken only two hours and twelve minutes.

The most recent estimate of the temperature of the sun's surface is between 6,000 and 7,000 degrees C.—N. Y. Tribune.

Death.

A fearful visitor dwells in the so called "white death" of Alaska. This is a fog in which the whole air becomes full of gummy particles of ice. It is thick beyond relief, and exposure to it for any length of time is the open means certain death to human beings.

A Constant Reminder.

"I notice you have stopped calling on Miss Gushing."

"I had to stop. It kept reminding me that she was worth a part of wind-fall her hat."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Grippy? Feverish? Chest Stuffy? Bad Cough?

Drive those Ugly and Annoying Feelings Away with Dr. King's New Discovery—Pleasant, Soothing, Healing.

No need to suffer those annoying and dangerous symptoms when a 50c bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery. Take a dose to-night, repeat every time you have a spasm of Cough. Notice how you feel to-morrow. Dr. King's New Discovery contains the necessary elements to quickly check your Cold and stop your Cough. So many have used it with gratifying results. Don't put it off, get a 50c bottle to-day and start right in at once.

Mr. A. Cocner, Oswego, N. Y., says: "It is a real pleasure to testify to the excellence of Dr. King's New Discovery. I have for many years been afflicted with a Cough that had become chronic, and nothing could stop it during night coughing until I used Dr. King's New Discovery."

The bottle mailed on receipt of 50 cents.

H. E. BUCKLEN & CO., 439 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CITY MANAGER.

It is sometimes argued that, although the city manager form has the obvious advantage of providing a trained executive head for the city government, the mayor-council form should be really expert in all the diverse affairs of a large municipality. But if the search for such a man would be fruitless it is not equally true to answer under the redistribution form of government such degree and division of expert knowledge among the council men as will enable each of them to become an ideal department head?—American City.

MODEL CITY OF JUVENILES.

Municipality in Illinois Run by Young People of Both Sexes.

When the Educational Club of Ridgewood, Ill., confronted with the fact that their boys, being left to the guide of adults, but was neglecting the children, decided to form a model city of juveniles within the city to train the young to practical citizenship, the idea was adopted by almost almost every the children. The city has been organized with a municipal "Ridgewood-ville" and has the distinction of being the most complete child city in the world.

The children have elected municipal officials, from mayor down, and now have a board of aldermen, police force, street department and all other essentials of the well ordered municipality as a means of interesting boys and girls, yes, girls, too in the responsibilities of citizenship and the art of municipal government the idea has proved a great success.

After the city was declared duly organized and the elimination of every boy and girl it was decided to visit the various city departments and of course the chief of police, Joliet and other neighboring cities to note how the affairs of each were conducted. The children of course, were especially interested in the police and fire department and the municipal officials did not disclose them the operations of each. The chief of the police department went so far as to offer the cadets juvenile city some same apparatus of its fire department, an offer which was regretfully accepted because of the lack of such apparatus and no buildings in which to house the equipment.

When it came to organizing the police department every boy was eager to be elected chief of police, but Herbert Schenk was unanimously chosen The policemen were selected under civil service. The examination was practically the same as that required in the city of Joliet. Eight boys took the "quiz," and every one passed.

Ridgewoodville is governed entirely by its juvenile officials elected at a regular election by its juvenile citizens. No grievances hold office, although they attend meetings of the of the city council. Their boys took the advice the children are not bound to accept. It is in every sense a city of the children.

The youngsters divided the city into three wards. Two aldermen, one boy and a girl, are selected from each ward. The vote was strong for equal suffrage, and the boys insist that the girls shall have a fair division of power in the government and in all other rights and privileges.

The problem of dissolving the juvenile city was one requiring more than ordinary attention. The department of parks and playgrounds came in for special attention. It was found that the only immediate expenditures forced were for athletic supplies, so the children spent their first city cash for athletics. A baseball nine was organized among the boys and a basket ball team among the girls.

Some of the adult advisers wanted an appropriation for streets, but the children replied that all the work would be done by the children, thus saving that expense.

A local bank cashier was secured to deliver an address on the subject of municipal bonds, and the children were taken up to the office of the Bank City government in all its phases is being taught in letters and art.

Over the Limit.

Husband (reading from the paper)—Here, they say, is a comet coming towards the earth, travelling at a rate of a million miles a minute. Wife (awaking from a doze)—Why don't they reinforce the speed laws better?—Exchange.

Every man's house is his safest refuge.—Law Notes.

It Really Does Relieve Rheumatism.

Anybody who is afflicted with Rheumatism in any form should by all means keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. The minute you feel pain or soreness in a joint or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, tender, swollen feeling and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and keep it in the house ready for use. Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and stiffness. Your grandfather's book if not satisfied, but it does give prompt instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.

—FOR—

Furniture, Stoves, Ranges, Carpets, Rugs, Comforts and Blankets

—Go to—

S. M. SEE & SONS,
The Reliable Housefurnishers.

FARMERS if you have

Buckwheat or Rye for Sale- BRING IT IN.-

Rye is worth $1.00 per bu. But only to ship. It is not worth that for feed and we believe this ear will be the last we will be able to get together.

We will discontinue grinding buckwheat in about four weeks. After that buckwheat is only chicken feed. There is nothing so flat as buckwheat after the season is over.

Argo Milling Co.
MANUFACTURERS

It Will Pay You to Watch Blanchard's Bargain Counter

F. S. Blanchard Estate,
F. L. Bartholomew, Administrator.

Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix Homes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock, which consists of everything, such as Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper.

TELEPHONE NO. 22.

(First Publication December 23)

NOTICE

State of Michigan, Circuit Court, Charlevoix County, Michigan. Frederick H. McDonald, Plaintiff,

Lee Howland, Defendant.

Chancery Order. In Lee Howland, Defendant, and all it may concern: Take notice that a writ of attachment issued in the above entitled cause from said court on the 23rd day of December, A. D. 1914, and for the sum of $1,000 with five per cent interest from December 23rd, 1914, and will sue made returnable December 24th, 1914.

Dated December 23rd, 1914.

WILLIAM K. CLUTE
Circuit Court Commissioner.
Business Address: Max Trout Bldg. Grand Rapids, Michigan.

(First Publication February 4th)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, In the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix in said county, on the 2nd day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present: Hon. Jerome A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Charles S. Hug deceased. Insane.

William L. Hug, Guardian having filed in said court his petition praying that he may be allowed to sell certain real estate therein described.

It is ordered that the 22nd day of March A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office be appointed for hearing said petition, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court at said time and place to show cause why a license to Mortgage the interest of said deceased insane person in said real estate should not be granted.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

JEROME A. CORNELL,
Judge of Probate.

A true copy.
SERVETTA A. CORNELL,
Register of Probate.

(First Publication January 21)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Frank E. Wilson and Ella Wilson, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated March 6th, A. D. 1906, to Charles Hayes, of Charlevoix, Michigan, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 8, A. D. 1906, in Liber 3 of Mortgages, on page 4, and covering a power of sale, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, the sum of Twenty-Five Hundred Dollars ($2,500) Dollars and Ninety-Five ($0.00/95) Dollars and Ninety-Five (0.00/95) cents and twenty of 1 Dollars, principal and interest, and no proceeding has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof. Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, on the 3rd day of April A. D. 1915, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, at the place where the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix is held, will at public auction, sell the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so as aforesaid due on said mortgage, with the attorney's fee and all legal costs, and the premises described in said mortgage are situated in the Village of Charlevoix, County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan, and are described as follows: Lots one (1) and two (2) in block one (1) in Hayes Park, according to the plat of said Village of Charlevoix, excepting and reserving therefrom the following described parts of said lots, viz: Beginning at the southwesterly line of Front street, thence northwesterly along said line, 100 feet, thence at right angles to the northeasterly line of said lot, thence southeasterly 40 feet, thence at right angles to said last mentioned line, 100 feet to the southeasterly line of said lot, thence northwesterly along said last mentioned line, 40 feet to the place of beginning, and also excepting and reserving therefrom the following described parts of said lots, viz: Beginning at the southwesterly line of Front street, thence northwesterly along said line, 100 feet, thence at right angles to said last mentioned line, 40 feet, thence southeasterly

FIGURE OF GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS OVERSHADOWS CZAR

THE war has made the czar a changed man. Instead of the invisible aristocrat, concealed from his people behind great palace walls, enormous parks and miles of imperial guards, protected with infinite care from the assassin, he has become all at once a democratic ruler.

Everywhere he appears among his people and among his soldiers, returning their greetings, blessing them and encouraging them. Discretion is thrown to the winds and he has penetrated to the battlefields of Poland and would have crossed himself to the dragon of the Prussians had not his entourage skillfully rendered this impossible.

His dress is simple and he is often seen in peasant garb—that is a suit of some fine material of a peasant blouse style, a bewildering costume of which the true Russian is very proud.

One remarkable still, the queen, always before the most exclusive of royalty, has gone among her people, visiting the sick and wounded. The Russians scarcely know her before.

There is all this enthusiasm centered in little more than the desire to arouse and encourage the fighting men. There is more, for instance, than inspired the visit of King George to his troops in Flandders. This extra element is anxiety, a lively fear and not of German hostility. The victories of Russian arms have their sweetness mixed with bitterness for the czar and his family.

Why? The reason is none other than the malefic figure of the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, the commander in chief of the Muscovite forces. The czar has suffered by physical comparison with his soldier cousin. He suffers in a still more vital way.

If ever there was a king in looks it is Nicholas Nicholaievitch. He is tall and of big bones. His carriage, lean but graceful, with a head to which the keenest intelligence is combined with vast dignity and force.

When he is with the czar the latter by comparison is weak and insignificant looking, a cold, dead monarch. In secret the czar's subjects are not slow to speak of this and many more kinds of the past Romanoffs would have been far different if this tall Mars had been in his cousin's place, that the humiliation of the defeat by Japan would have been spared the proud Russians.

It has to be remembered of the commander in chief has taken his commission to make him dictator of Russia. The proclamations to the Poles (a distinct concession) promise to exchange for loyalty during the war were not signed by the czar but by Nicholas Nicholaievitch. This was astonishing in itself and many have maintained made the promises null and void because the imperial party could never have the power, if he had the will, to carry out his obligations to the oppressed people.

Yet, would the czar dare to oppose his victorious general by refusing to ratify a request to carry out these promises? Such an issue might prove a popular one for Nicholas Nicholaievitch.

The history of Grand Duke Nicholas begins in an unhappy youth. He clung to his German mother, whose Russian husband had unwittingly wronged her and ruined the family fortune. But come to manhood he followed straight in his father's footsteps, for the parent was one of Czar Alexander's famous bold leaders, one of many hated and scorned by the enemies of Russia.

Alexander III was not especially fond of the young Grand Duke Nicholas, for noble and peasant alike commonly considered this young giant the most handsome of the Romanoffs. Nicholas Nicholaievitch, were now the best in the Russian republic. It is entirely clear to that nature Germans, the cadets, supposed to be a nervous invalid, she has suddenly donned the garments of the Sisters of Charity with her daughters and entered the hospital wards. She is even present at operations and has bound up the soldiers' wounds with her own hands. Anyone who knows the almost religious attitude of the Russian peasant to the "Little Mother" can realize the wild enthusiasm aroused among those whom the czar has thus visits.

Can the czarina be striving to win back for her family the personal popularity the grand duke is taking from her husband? It may be so.

Meanwhile the Nicholas family life was not free from the scandal which so often has made the title "grand duke" a reproach. He first married a commoner, the middle-aged widow of a wealthy trader. He did not bring her to court, but left her at Moscow, where she would be safe from the slights her extraction might cast upon her company. She died and her husband, now a rich man, married morganatically the Princess Anastasia of Montenegro, with whom he had long been in love. It was this woman who was the wife of Nicholas Nicholaievitch wooed and won her. She was married to the grand duke to permit her divorce.

Anastasia is a large-framed, vigorous, amiable woman, devoted to the cause of the Slavs. She is a firebrand and unscrupulous in methods to further her ambitions. She aspires to the position of natural leader of the Russian Slavs. It is said her husband is altogether too intimate with a certain lady of the imperial ballet, but this does not seem to affect the relations between the wedded couple. He is always magnificent to her and she is royal in figure as her husband.

Throughout the Japanese war the soldiers hoped Grand Duke Nicholas would be made their leader and he was again and again promoted to rank. He, I believed that disaster would have been averted if the czar had conquered his jealousy of his popular cousin. After the war, when the throne was threatened by the revolutionists, the czar was forced to fall back on the man he had slighted and the grand duke restored order by stern means. He was in danger of assassination, and Japanese agitators in constantly going about streets unattended.

Just what happened when the present war broke out remains to be told. It will be an interesting story. It is known that the czar expressed his jealousy of his

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning, at CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
WILLARD A. SMITH - - EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 8
SUBSCRIPTION.
Three Months - - - - $ .50
Six Months - - - - - .75
One Year - - - - - - 1.00

600 DEAD BEFORE GNEISENAU SANK

British Shell's Tore German Cruiser to Pieces

INVINCIBLE HIT REPEATEDLY

English Officer, Describing Battle Off Falkland Islands, Has Praise For Marksmanship of Foe — Gneisenau Fought Ship Until Went Down Crew Couldn't Stand on Her.

A detailed description of the battle off the Falkland Islands, in which the German warships under Admiral von Spee were destroyed by the British force under Admiral Sturdee, has been received by A. H. MacMullin of Dale, Ont., in a letter from his son, Lieutenant A. P. MacMullin, R.N.

The young man, who was on board the Invincible, Admiral Sturdee's flagship, during the fight, writes that the British squadron made the trip from Plymouth to the Falkland Islands in twenty-seven days, arriving there on Dec 7. The battle commenced the next day.

His letter, dated Dec. 11, says:

"Next morning (Dec. 8) we started coaling at 4 o'clock. There were the Australia, Inflexible, Carnarvon, Kent, Cornwall, Bristol, Glasgow and the armed P. and O. liner Macedonia in the harbor. At 8.30, while we were at breakfast, the Carnarvon signal station reported a four funnelled cruiser in sight. We got orders to raise steam for full speed at once.

"The enemy consisted of the Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Leipzig, Nuernberg and Dresden, with three transports.

Germans Went to Prayers.

"When the Germans saw our tripod masts they got a bit of a shock, but thought they were Japanese at first then that they were Japanese, as some Japanese light ships have tripods, but when they discovered we were British, one of their officers told us, they went to prayers.

"We got within range, 15,000 yards, about 3 p. m. We first fired a few rounds at the Nurnberg and hit her stern. I believe, after which we left the three armored cruisers to our lighter ships and then, with the Inflexible, engaged the Gneisenau and Scharnhorst, opening fire at about seven sea miles. We being the flagship, came in for the greater part of both ships' fire for five hours.

"Although their gunnery was marvelous, we did pretty well, considering chance, as we had the advantage of speed and close the range. The Scharnhorst sank about 6 p. m., but we could not stop to pick up the survivors, as the Gneisenau was still in action. At about 6 o'clock p. m. however, the Gneisenau sank, and we steamed to the spot. I came to the deck for the first time and shall never forget the sight. The water was thick with men and wreckage all around us, and the wailing noise was terrible. We lowered all the boats that would float and five others, but the three others were all absolutely numb, although only fifteen minutes in the water. The temperature of the water was 38 degrees. We managed to save over 100, but brought dead from shock. In all about 190 were picked up by our ships from the Gneisenau crew.

"The Glasgow had the consolation of sinking the Leipzig, and the Kent sank the Nurnberg. The Dresden got away, but whether damaged or not we don't know yet.

Six Hundred Men Killed.

"The German doctor on the Gneisenau—my German officer aboard—told us that 600 had been killed before she sank and that our shells tore the whole side and upper deck away when they hit. He said the ship was so hot that they could not stand on her so they opened a torpedo tube to sink her rather than let it at the end.

"I should think we were hit about thirty times slightly worse, and it through nothing that we did, we were a good deal damaged about the upper works. The mainmast was completely wrecked and an enormous hole pierced in the deck. It was like a paper pot, all the bulkheads being riddled by fragments of shell. The most one saw the greater marvel it is that there is not a single casualty to the ship except the commander, who got foot in very slightly damaged. In all about twelve were killed in the fleet and not many more wounded.

"One of our guns, which was not manned, was shot right in two. Five were promptly dealt with by the survivors fire mainly. Going in the range, none of their shots pierced our armor and only four made a mark on it. I was in the boiler room all the time, and the men worked splendidly although we heard shells hitting the side of the bunkers."

Powerful Liquid Air Bombs.

The Germans are playing fierce with liquid air bombs. They are cylindrical in form and about an hour or a half pounds bottle that is to say, about twelve to eighteen inches—and about five inches in diameter. They are filled with liquid air and are thrown a distance of 200 or 400 yards without any great initial velocity. The effect of their explosion is equivalent to that of 125 pounds of melinite. A single bottle makes a hole forty-five to fifty feet in diameter and from thirty to twenty feet deep.

Made out to unknown waters.—German Proverb.

Northern Michigan

Up to two years ago the Boyne City water works system was being conducted at a loss to the city. For the last two years there has been a profit in this municipal institution that is substantial and the service has been all that the people of the city could hope for. During 1914 the water works will be able to show a gain of over $3,000, according to information obtained from a reliable source.

The mammoth new saw mill at Pellston will begin operations within two weeks, employing a large force of skilled workers. The mill replaces the one destroyed by fire last August, and is owned by Jackson & Tindle. The main drive belt from the engine is 125 feet long and is four feet wide. It requires more than 200 bolts to make it and cost $1,500. The large planing mill at Pellston has also resumed operations and is employing a large crew of men.

Central Lake Torch: John E. Peebles, a pioneer of Bellaire township, died Saturday January 30th at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. Johnson. The funeral took place on Monday, Rev. D. A. Rood officiating, burial at the Antrim cemetery. Mr. Peebles was born April 1, 1836 in Paisley, Scotland. In 1850 with his parents he moved to Ontario, Canada. Mr. Peebles came to Bellaire township in 1870. He was a member of the Congregational church at Atwood. He leaves two sons and one daughter, Herbert and Frank Peebles and Mrs. Alfred Johnson besides many relatives and friends.

Petoskey News: A telegram from Petoskey, calling for a building, has come across the street from the Cushman House, Friday, brought news that they have accepted the offer of the Indians of Harbor Springs and the deal for the purchase of the building by the Boy Scouts for a temple will be completed within a few days. It has been known for some time that this lodge was planning to either purchase or erect a suitable building for a temple and the closing of this deal settles the question. No plans have as yet been made for the remodeling of the interior of the building for lodge room purposes, but a competent architect will soon be employed for this purpose and the work commenced. It will require several thousand dollars to pay for the changes and improvements necessary.

East Jordan Enterprise: Messrs. Ed. Ward and L. E. Table, officials of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Co. were in the city this week with another assessment on old memberships to the old indebtedness. As we are informed this "mutual" company in the years 1903-1911 piled up indebtedness of $13,982 on to a Petoskey bank. On order from the Insurance Commissioner an assessment was levied on the members at that time to pay the debt. Many of the members paid this assessment, which represented their just share of this indebtedness, and expected that the debt was paid from the matter, but this was an error. It appears that many did not pay the assessment. These men never do doubt "exception proof" and to have said and got judgment would have been "taking a beggar to catch a louse." In this condition the Company find some $6,500 for which another assessment was made. This brings to light a feature in the mutual fire insurance companies not usually mentioned by agents—that any man financially responsible who goes in little personally for losses and indebtedness of the company pay not his part of it alone but also what financially irresponsible members neglect to pay what is necessary to get clear of it, then charge up the same to "experience" and govern themselves accordingly.

Samaritan in the Snow.

A remarkable instance of what a rural township can do in succour it makes up its mind to be praiseworthy is given in an article just published by the United States public health service. The Cape Ann township, in New Hampshire, recently, started out and carried out a month's campaign under the combined leadership of the county board of health, the state board of health and the United States public health service. The township is in a small every house in the town who was sanitary.

If there is any other rural township in the entire south that can show a purpose equal to this it ought to come to the fore and let itself be known, now the end of the war. "When a study of seventy four rural communities showed nearly one-third of the farms possessed no sanitary conveniences at all, it is a matter of pride to point to the achievement of a township like Cape Ann, in New Hampshire county, which demonstrates what is being so far about of the average.

While it has been relatively easy for many some sanitary improvements, the month is making more rapid strides in the direction of sanitation than any other part of the country, an examination of the thousands of farms in the south Atlantic states shows that there are yet many localities where the sanitary conditions are less than three out of a score of 100."

Bending the Hot Water Bag.

A hole in a rubber hot water bag can be repaired by the same means as a rubber tire in a bicycle tire. Unscrew some fresh plug into the hot water bag thrusted and through it hole and screw on a thin nut. This will hold indefinitely.

Life is not feel and amusement; life is not even enjoyment. Life is work also.—Turgenev.

Our wealth is often a snare to enterprise and always a temptation to others.—Cotton.

HISTORICAL LINCOLN BANQUET

The Historical Society will have their banquet in detail, not quoted Friday evening, February 19th. This will be held in the basement or dining hall of the M. E. Church where a plenty of room is available. Tickets are now on sale at the Central Drug Store and also at the Ivy Drug Store where only members of the society can purchase them this week. Those not sold this week will be sold to any of the town people desiring to attend and enjoy the evening with the society.

It is reported that the program will be very entertaining at this meeting of the society. Patriotic exercises, depicting the life of Lincoln and something on the order of a patriotic tableaux is being thought of by the committee in charge. As the number of tickets are limited we suggest members secure them early this week.

THE LECTURE COURSE

Yes! I think so. O yes I have a date at the opera house Friday night. The Music Makers' Quartet is a number that I want to hear. They have been on road six years and are today recognized as one of the greatest male quartets on the Lyceum platform.

The four young men, Mr. Garrett, Mr. Platz, Mr. Huff and Mr. Shaw, constituting the personnel of the Music Makers' Quartet—each possesses the marks of noble manhood and musical ability.

The program is varied and should meet the approval of the most critical. Remember the date, Friday, February 12th. Tickets on sale at Central Drug store Thursday afternoon.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

J. L. Crane
M. A. Levinson
A. E. Mason, Dept. Store

Religious Notes

Congregational Church
(STANDING NOTICES)
Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.
Bible School, 12 o'clock.
Young People's Meeting, 6:00 p. m.
Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT HONTON)
Bible School at 1:30 p. m.
Preaching, 2:30 p. m.

Baptist Church
A. M.—Did Jesus establish a church,—if so, is it in existence today and how may it be found?
(On world peace)
P. M.—The Midnight Alarm.
Bible Study Tuesday Evening 7 o'clock
The Doctrine of Gods Decrees.
Prayer Meeting—Exposition of John 15:1-7.
B. Y. P. U.—Leader, Chas. Carey. Topic—The solid foundation of Life. 1st Cor. 3:9-15.
You are welcome—"Come with us and we will do you good."

Christian Science
Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.
Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Soul."
Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.
Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service
8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:00 a. m.—High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.
Masses during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church
Services second and fourth Thursday in each month, by Rev. Harris, of Petoskey.

County Normal Notes

MARIE LAMIMAN

Miss Mae Stewart called at the normal Wednesday afternoon.

Part of the normal class attended the Teachers' Institute at Boyne City last Tuesday.

Cleo Thorne was absent Wednesday on account of sickness.

The class have finished the making of domino cards and begun valentines under the directions of Miss Wilking.

Marie Lamiman was absent Monday on account of sickness.

Clare Thorsen, Fred Gregory, Cleo Thorne, Rose Grosenick and Cora Dragett are doing practice teaching in the training room.

The drawing class is making valentines under the direction of Mrs. Coulter.

NOTICE!

Friday, Feb. 12th being Lincoln Day, and Monday, Feb. 22nd, Washington's Birthday, both Legal Holidays, the banks will be closed all day.

Customers desiring change, currency or other conveniences, will kindly arrange for same before those dates.

CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK,
by W. J. Bishop, Cashier.
CHARLEVOIX COUNTY BANK,
by A. F. Bridge, Cashier.

Corn Abroads.

By mere words reduced by reams children one wanted another the civilized world. It said issue one bu and a quarter of good and eighty eight tons of silver annually.

Japan and the Figure 4.

Thirty-six times on 44 in Japanese telephone directories because the name of the figure four all is the term for death.

Boys in forming life attachments should not overlook the association of that fellow Will Power.—Quincy Bee.

Announcement

William F. Bashaw, for Commissioner of Schools, Charlevoix County, Republican Primaries, March 3rd.

NOTICE

To the owner or owners of any and all interests in, or liens upon the lands hereon described:

TAKE NOTICE, That sale has been lawfully made of the following described land for unpaid taxes thereon and that the undersigned has title thereto under tax deed or deeds of conveyance, and that you are entitled to redemption from such sale within one year from the date of service of this notice, upon payment of the amount of sale, fees, costs, interest, charges of the county of the state, the lands (as of all sums paid upon such purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional interest, and the fee of the sheriff for the service or cost of publication of this notice, to be computed as upon personal service of a declaration as commencement of suit and the further sum of five dollars for each description without other additional cost or charges. If payment as aforesaid is not made, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the land.

DESCRIPTION: The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32), township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) east, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

Amount paid $29.46
Taxes of 1913.

Yours etc.
J. L. CRANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan

State of Michigan, } ss.
County of Charlevoix.

I, Charles Novak, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and make oath after carefully inquiry, I am unable to find the owner of said premises, or place of abode of Daniel Campbell, a person entitled to a notice of the sale within notice and after the careful inquiry, I am unable to find the name or address of any trustee, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Daniel Campbell, upon who service of said notice can be made. I further certify that the above notice was delivered to me for service December 7, 1914, at which time I was under sheriff of said county of Charlevoix.

Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 19, 1915. My fees $1.10.

CHARLES NOVAK,
Sheriff of said County.

MASON'S
Grocery Department
WILL SELL FOR CASH
Feb'y. 11-12-13
One bbl Producer flour... $7.50
Quality guaranteed good---If flour don't suit, purchaser can return flour and get his money. This price is about $1.00 below the wholesale market.
12 Large Oranges.....19c
2 Clothes Pins.....1c
1 Large Boxes Toothpicks.....5c
3 Boxes 5c Ohio Matches.....10c
12 Boxes 5c Ohio Matches.....35c
4 lbs. 10c Prunes.....25c
Bargains in Coats---
Ladies' Coats at . . . $3.00
Children's Coats at . $2.00
Call and See Them
A. E. Mason's Dept. Store

10 Great Serials
foll of life and action, filled with the fire of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make
The YOUTH'S COMPANION
Better Than Ever in 1915
Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the little or world can provide for the home. There is no age limit nor enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.
52 Times a Year —not 12.
Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE
CUT THIS OUT
Send us this slip with your name and we will send you FREE all the issues of THE COMPANION for 1915 with your subscription (cost of 1914.
FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.
THEN The 52 Weekly Issues of THE COMPANION for 1915.
SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

IN RESPONSE TO INQUIRY

I was suffering badly and Cardine came in like a dose. I resized from my position there to enter this contest. Very fortunately I had a dear friend, an Ann Arbor graduate whom I could recommend at that time.

Altho I feel that everyone has a right to his own religion and to his own belief, I yesself attend the Presbyterian church.

As you know, I am making a personal canvas, taking long drives almost daily and so my hearty healthy health enjoys the brisk winter weather. I am enjoying my work. I enjoy meeting people and "getting their ideas, and hope that I may have the privilege of meeting you.

Respectfully,
MAY L. STEWART.

Every Move a Picture.

"That movie star spends a lot time in bed when he isn't acting."

"Is the work that so strenuously auto you?"

"Yes, but he didn't rest to stand around in elegant poses that he don't being paid for."—Pittsburgh Post.

The Only Way.

"I doze three out of three tools of a graveyard robbed in de house of good lord remin' my was," said Brother William, "an I dat I could come to de resurrection and demand was we get my be let go for work for 20 DIM."—Atlanta Constitution.

Limited Dissipation.

"Are you thinking of taking out life insurance, Jim?"

"No, I don't think so, Joe." asked the physician as he made ready for tests. "Not a foul liver or anything of that sort?"

The little man hesitated a moment, heaved a big sigh and said, then replied in a small, meekness voice: "I sometimes chew a little gum."—Collier's Weekly.

Improved Gas Illumination.

Among the numerous improvements in the quality of gas illumination today rises to Arcos candle power and over in single burners.

The gas is now distributed under much higher pressure than formerly. The city of Berlin has adopted the operation as high as seventeen and a half pounds to the square inch. This pressure is obtained by the use of turbines.

Another practice employed abroad is to light whole sections of the city simultaneously. This is accomplished by an automatic lighter for each lamp, which is set to be operated by slight changes in the pressure. These changes are in the mains and are controlled from a central point. The lights are extinguished simultaneously by the same method.

Rock Product Company.
Producers and Manufacturers of
Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Fluxing
Sugar Stone.
Phone 80.

PETER BENSON
CONTRACTOR FOR
Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.
If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10¢
ASSORTED
Best Wishes, Greetings, Lovers, Birthday, etc. Also print mailing list. Our Post Card Exchange free on request, and one sample copy of the Family Story Paper; also Catalogue and Premium List. Enclose 10c stamp for return postage, etc.
FAMILY STORY PAPER
24-26 Vandewater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction
Auto and Boat Supplies.
214 Bridge St. - Phone 134
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Contractor and Builder
Estimates furnished. Phone 333 Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD,
DENTIST
Office in The Sanitarium Block
Over R. A. Levinson & Co's Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Office in Priest's Block.
Charlevoix - Michigan

RHEUMATISM SUFFERERS SHOULD NOTE
5 DROPS
The Best Remedy for all forms of Rheumatism
LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, GOUT, NEURALGIA, AND KIDNEY TROUBLES.
DROPS
STOP THE PAIN
Other Quick Relief Medicines Do Other Things
SOLD AT ALL DRUGGISTS
SAMPLE "5-DROPS" FREE ON REQUEST
Dunsson Rheumatism Cure Co.
140-146 W. Lake St., CHICAGO

IF YOU WANT
TENANTS for SUMMER COTTAGES
Advertise in the
AMERICAN ISRAELITE, Cincinnati, and the
CHICAGO ISRAELITE, Chicago,
the leading Jewish papers of the U. S.
Write for rates.
LEO WISE & COMPANY
Advertising Agents
Cincinnati, Ohio.

NOTICE!
To Whom It May Concern:
My wife, Ida Book Bannigar, has left my bed and board without just cause or provocation. I will pay no debts of her contracting from this date.
Feb. 16, 1915. Johnnie Bannigar
2-18-3t

Insole for liquor and drugs relieved in four days, inquire secretary Petoskey Hospital. 46-2-11-6

Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails. The Original and Genuine.
Bucklen's Arnica Salve
Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

Lisle Shanahan, Attorney at Law.
Office in County Bank Bldg.

First publication February 5th.
Notice for Publication
Department of the Interior,
U. S. Land Office at Marquette, Michigan, January 29th, 1915.
Notice is hereby given that Selina Marie Lee, whose post-office address is Gaylord, Michigan, did on the 30th day of April, 1914, file in this office sworn statement and Application No. 011264 for the S½ SW¼ Sec. 34 Twp 1 Range 5 West, Michigan Meridian, and the timber thereon, within the limits of the Act of June 3, 1878, "Timber Land Law," at such value as might be fixed by appraisement, and that pursuant to such application, the land and timber thereon have been appraised at $10.00 per acre, and the timber estimated to be worth $10.00 and that the said applicant will offer final proof in support of her application and payment of the lands and of said timber before Chas. Novak, Sheriff of Charlevoix County, Mich., at Gaylord, Mich., on the 30th day of April, 1915. Any person is at liberty to protest the purchase before entry, or initiate a contest at any time before patent issues, by filing affidavit specifying the facts which would defeat the entry.
Claimant's witnesses: Jos. Lee, Gaylord; Jr. Herman Lee, Roger Kelley and Benjamin Gaylord, all of Gaylord, Mich.
CHAS. A. BOWER, Register.

First publication Jan. 21st
NOTICE
To the owner or owners of any and all interests in, or liens upon the lands hereon described:
TAKE NOTICE, That sale has been lawfully made of the following described land for unpaid taxes thereon and that the undersigned has title thereto under tax deed or deeds of conveyance, and that you are entitled to redemption from such sale within one year from the date of service of this notice, upon payment of the amount of sale, fees, costs, interest, charges of the county of the state, the lands (as of all sums paid upon such purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional interest, and the fee of the sheriff for the service or cost of publication of this notice, to be computed as upon personal service of a declaration as commencement of suit and the further sum of five dollars for each description without other additional cost or charges. If payment as aforesaid is not made, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the land.
DESCRIPTION: The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32), township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) east, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.
Amount paid $29.46
Taxes of 1913.
Yours etc.
J. L. CRANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan
State of Michigan, } ss.
County of Charlevoix.
I, Charles Novak, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and make oath after carefully inquiry, I am unable to find the owner of said premises, or place of abode of Daniel Campbell, a person entitled to a notice of the sale within notice and after the careful inquiry, I am unable to find the name or address of any trustee, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Daniel Campbell, upon who service of said notice can be made. I further certify that the above notice was delivered to me for service December 7, 1914, at which time I was under sheriff of said county of Charlevoix.
Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 19, 1915. My fees $1.10.
CHARLES NOVAK,
Sheriff of said County.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.
VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, February 18, 1915. — NUMBER 44

In This Age of Reciprocity--

the business man prefers the bank which remembers and performs its obligations to the Public from which it draws its support.

Fully appreciative of these obligations, The Charlevoix State Savings Bank strives in legitimate way to co-operate with the business interests, large and small, of Charlevoix and Michigan.

Extending all the facilities offered by a conservative and progressive institution.

CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. ROBBINS, Vice-Pres.
W. J. BACHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't. Cashier.

J. L. CRANE

New Fabrics FOR Spring 1915.

Our Opening sale on these fabrics has far exceeded our expectations. The Patterns and Fabrics are Beautiful and worthy of your attention. The assortment large.

New all-silk Crepe-De-Chenes 40 inch.....$1.25

Our line of colors includes the new "Sand Shade." Heavy Grade.....$1.50

New 27 in Fancy Dress Silks, Large Line of styles and colors, Special value, yd..50c

New 36 inch Commodore Percales, Special fine finish and new designs....12½c

New 45-inch Embroidered Voiles—white ground with White, Blue, or Lavendar embroidered flowers—Very Beautiful, Extra Wide, Would be a bargain at a 75c price.

SPECIAL PRICE 50c PER YARD

Local and Personal Notes

Judge Mayne is holding court in Lolanan county this week.

Deputy Sheriff Jeffries went to Ionia Tuesday with prisoner Bancroft.

Don't forget the firemen's masquerade ball next Monday night at the Bank Hall.

J. Leahy, the Optometrist, will be here again Monday, March 1st, at Hotel Charlevoix.

Mrs. R. N. Faulkner was one of the Charlevoix guests of Mrs. Ira Adams, at her house party at Bellaire last week.

The Beach Hotel extension is entirely enclosed and good progress is being made on the interior by a large force of men.

We regret to learn that W. J. Pearson, of Boyne Falls is at the Petoskey hospital with a very agravating case of lung trouble.

Old fashioned dance at the Masonic Temple Friday evening of this week. Roast beef, brown gravy and mashed potatoes will be served.

The Dictionary Club will meet with Mrs. Harold Thursday afternoon at 2:30 Subject "Japan." Roll call—Things I have seen made.

Earl Shapton, of the Glenwood Dairy of Marion, left yesterday for Flint to attend the annual convention of the State Dairymen's Association.

The relatives of the late Mrs. Matilda Yettaw request us to tender their grateful thanks for many kind and thoughtful helps during their affliction.

Have you got your tickets for the banquet to be given by the Historical Society this Friday evening. This will be a pleasant evening for all who attend.

Jack Zogarsky, a polish resident of this city, was arrested Monday on complaint of Hazel Bacot, for a statutory offence. He secured bail and will answer to the charge at the next term of court.

At the roller rink Thursday night, in a basket ball game, Mancelona Independents were defeated by the Charlevoix independents by 41 to 32. Mancelona was the claimant of the Northern Michigan championship.

Next Monday, Feb. 22d, is Washington's Birthday, a legal holiday, and public usage will be observed all day. Customers desiring change or other accommodations should arrange for same on Saturday.

The regular mid-winter thaw occured last week Friday, Saturday and Sunday, exposing the bare ground in spots, and nearly another foot of snow melted. Normal winter weather was resumed Monday, however. Lake Michigan to the westward is clear of ice most of the time.

James Perry, janitor at the high school building, slipped on the ice Tuesday and fell with such force that his left arm was broken. After reducing of the fracture at Dr. Wilkinson's office he was able to return to his home, where he is well.

Boyne Citizen: Trainmaster Campbell, of the Boyne City, Alpena & Gaylord railroad, was instantly killed about six o'clock Thursday evening in Boyne City when he slipped and fell beneath a moving freight train. He had evidently stepped on a basis of ice beside the tracks and just as the switch engine with a string of cars passed, slipped and sliding down the back, fell across the track. Both legs were cut off just below the hips and he died almost instantly. The accident happened about a block west of the passenger depot. Mr. Campbell was but recently appointed to that position, having been in the employ of the company for a number of years. He leaves a wife.

A GOOD OLD TIME

A large number of ex soldiers and their wives went to the home of Capt. Bush, on Park avenue, last Saturday evening. After a fine supper that was prepared by the women for the occasion all there joined in some of the simple games that they played in the long ago.

But the climax came on the reading by Mrs. Hattie Bush on the subject "Facts Recent." Then Mrs. D. C. Nettleton gave sketches of the history of "Uncle Jack" and gave a short, but interesting talk on Francis Key at the time he composed the Star Spangled Banner while prisoner on a British man-of-war and looking through the great clouds of smoke during the battle of Fort McHenry, he could at times see the Stars and Stripes wave back and forth filling his heart with patriotism and love of his country.

The entertainment was excellent and much enjoyed by all present and Mrs. Bush and Mrs. Nettleton were highly complimented and the old Vets seem to look as though they were back in days of early manhood.

Geo. Glados is in Cheboygan yesterday and today on a business trip.

The home of Harlow Sweet, near Advance, was totally destroyed by fire the 10th.

Work on the basement vault at the court house was begun Monday morning in charge of Wm. Graham.

Mrs. Harry Taylor, of this city went to Petoskey hospital last week Tuesday for an operation. Reported doing well.

As an indication of what the farmers of this section are doing Henry Kauffman shipped two carloads of wool last week.

Ed. Chaloupka and wife, of Mecca, Oregon, arrived here Thursday, and are the guests at Mrs. S. M. See. They will remain several weeks.

Mrs. O. E. Wilbur was called to Chicago Monday by the illness of her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Cline. The trouble is not considered serious.

A party of thirty Charlevoix Catholics went to Petoskey Sunday at attend a function of the Knights of Columbus. The event closed Sunday evening with a banquet.

The Missionary Society of Congregational Church will meet with Mrs. Fred Butler Friday Feb. 26 at 2:30 p. m. Topic—The Red Man and the Government. Response to Roll Call Favorite Hymn.

Still the procession of logs pass by, and we are told that the mill will continue for two weeks, weather permitting. The company will have the largest cut in five years, and the quality is excellent.

A. T. Stewart, of the U. S. Fish Commission service, arrived from Northville Thursday to prepare the local hatchery for the annual spring output. About the usual quality of trout and whitefish spawn will be hatched.

At the Baptist church next Sunday evening, at 7 o'clock, the pastor will deliver a free lecture, Mono, "The Battle with the Beast," or "The Fight for Character." All are most cordially invited but a special invitation is extended to the teachers of the schools of the city and their students above eight years of age.

C. M. Carson, superintendent of the Cadillac Motor works, at Detroit, spoke to the high school students at Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City last Thursday, making the county round-up runners. Mr. Carson is helping out the Y. M. C. A. in its crusade against the liquor traffic, and that reaks not to dope and booze as an enemy of the human race.

Hymns and tunes and worldlie songs and spoken pieces will be given by men and ye women at the Congregational meeting house Wednesday evening, February 24th, 1915. Ye door will open at 7½ by ye clock and ye music will begin at eight. Ye singers will appear promptlie. Ye all are invited to hear the binge singe. Ye persons who do attend will be given good seats and ye men and ye women may sit together.

The regular convocation of Charlevoix Chapter, No. 141, R. A. M., last Monday night drifted into an occasion of genuine social enjoyment. At the close of routine business Companion W. H. Carter, on behalf of the Chapter, in a felicitous speech presented Dr. Barney, retiring High Priest, with a beautiful gold Past High Priest's jewel. Then a turmoil was heard without, and in the banquet hall the ladies had spread a bountiful feast for the Companions. Music was also there and dancing took up the remainder of the time—we shall not say what time. However, we have been asked to say that the dancing was diafind, modest and proper in all respects. An officer of the Chapter was detailed by High Priest Levinson to see that there was no unnecessary hugging.

CUT SOME ICE

What It Means In The Winter to Keep Cool in the Summer

The ice harvest was completed last week, and without doubt it was the biggest harvest that ever was necessary on record in Charlevoix annals.

Hammond & Simpson had the contracts which filled ice houses of the hotels, Beutel and Booth, besides several smaller jobs and five carloads for the railroad company at Petoskey, and they cut and stored 1970 cords.

To this is added the Winkel-Gill stock for the retail trade, consisting of 875 cords, making a total of 2845 cords.

Imagine the immense mountain of ice piled up in one mass! The ice is sixteen inches thick, and is as clear as the water of Pine Lake itself, from whence it came.

Announcement

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-nomination as City Treasurer, at the Republican city primaries, March 3rd. JOHN COOK.

Beaver Island News

Geo. William went to Harbor Springs last week for grain etc. It is understood that Mr. Williams will haul four loads of grain to Beaver Island.

J. H. Seaman who is getting out cedar on the south end of the Island made a big home to Beaver last week.

The mail carriers Wm. Gibson and Frank Left report fine going on the ice.

Mrs. W. Galiff had a masquerade dance last Monday night.

Perch fishing in the Harbor is fine. The boys are having great sport with hook and line.

Tom Bonner is building a house north of M. J. McCann on the hill.

Geo. Leblanc and W. F. Boyle made a trip to Naubinway last week.

While out fishing last week Peter Nelson, Allen Jensen Willie Wachter and John Gaffney went adrift on the ice. The wind was east. Through the night it shifted to the southward and drove them ashore. They went to Naubinway and came home.

READJUSTMENT ROCK PRODUCT CO.

Corporation Petitions for Receiver—Superintendent Sloan Appointed by Court—Plant to Continue in Operation

The Charlevoix Rock Product Co. on Monday, for purposes of liquidation and the re-adjustment of its organization, went into the hands of a receiver, the court appointing superintendent and general manager R. F. Sloan to that position, with instructions to continue the operation of the plant. Business depression and slow collections added to the slook-jobbing of certain promoters, are the reasons given for existing company conditions.

The plant has been operating at a profit, and has orders on its books aggregating 220 car loads. The plant represents an expenditure to date of approximately $175,000, not including the land. Under its feet is a mine of raw product that spells success under normal conditions. It has contracts—notably the Grand Rapids Water Filtration Plant and the Lake Superior Iron and Chemical Co.—that are profitable and small orders from various localities constitute a safe business outlook, and orders will be filled.

There is no question about the ultimate success of the enterprise, as local conditions, involving favorable costs of production and constantly increasing demand are as near a guaranty as the progress of ordinary human events can furnish.

We are confident that the company will ultimately emerge from its trouble with enhanced vigor.

STATE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Fight Over Regency Was Cause of Trouble—Leland Easy Winner Over Competitors

Leland won the regency nomination without Wayne. Briefly, that was the outcome of the situation which faced the Republican state convention at Grand Rapids Friday and which for a time seriously threatened the unity of the revivified Republican party of Michigan.

Leland's victory, the barring of the Wayne representation in the convention, the nomination without contest of every candidate except those for the regency, and the resolutions adopted by the convention—these were the features of Friday, a political history.

The scathing tone and text of the last named served to lift a formally tame the prominence of political significance. The resolution, flaying the national Democratic administration for reckless extravagance, violation of promises, incapacity in administration and untenable theories, were bitter in tone, and drove the convention into a frenzy of enthusiasm and party zeal. The platform offered by the resolutions committee calls for the restoration of a protective tariff law, favors more adequate coast defenses, an increased navy, complete fortification and control of the Panama canal and a greater army. The convention itself was notable for novel procedure.

Following is the ticket nominated:

For regent of the University of Michigan—Junius E. Beal, Ann Arbor, and Frank B. Leland, Detroit.

For supreme court justice—Flavius L. Brooks, Detroit, and Aaron B. McAlvay, Manistee.

For member state board of agriculture—W. H. Wallace, Saginaw, and I. Roy Waterbury, Highland.

For member state board of education—F. A. Jeffers, Plaindale.

For superintendent of public instruction—Fred L. Keeler, Lansing.

AN EXPLANATION

The failure of the Music Makers to appear at the opera house on Feb. 12th was undoubtedly a disappointment to a great number of people. The fact that word was not received until after 6:00 p. m. made it impossible for the Committee to notify the people in time to prevent their coming to the opera house.

As neither the Redpath Bureau nor the Charlevoix Lecture Committee owe the railroads of the country we will leave it to your own judgment who was to blame in this matter.

All money taken in both for reserve seats and single admissions will be refunded. We ask you to attend to this matter not later than Thursday Feb. 18. The stubs will not be good for the next number which comes on Feb. 26. An entirely new drawing will be made for the Roger & Gridley number which we expect will be a star attraction.

Remember to get your ticket on your stubs at the Central Drug store.

We will substitute a number for the Music Makers the date and the attraction will be announced later. The Lecture Committee was sorry to disappoint the people but it was unavoidable and we ask your indulgence and future patronage. Lecture Committee.

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

MICHIGAN ORCHARDS GOOD INVESTMENT

This State Offers Best Opportunities for the Small Capitalists

Every season additional testimonials regarding the merits of the Michigan apple are secured. Says the Central Lake Torch. One of the latest of these is from J. W. Fisher Jr., who has recently made an exhaustive study of the apple industry as regards Michigan. He has expressed himself as follows:

"In the past three years the writer has visited nearly every important apple producing section in the country in search of one perfect orchard section in the United States. He is frank to confess that he has not found the section which meets every requirement, but his travels have convinced him firmly of one fact. Taking every phase of the commercial orcharding question into consideration, Michigan offers as strong, if not more, opportunities to the young man with a moderate amount of capital, than any other district in the United States. Do not misunderstand this statement. This is made after taking into consideration every phase of the commercial apple orcharding question. Some districts may surpass Michigan in one point, some in another, but when every phase is considered and the final judgment given, Michigan will hold her own with any state."

LAZY FARMERS SHOULD NOT READ THIS

The United States Department of Agriculture, the state boards and the reports all over the country are urging the farmers of America to cultivate every available acre during the coming year. The war in Europe assures the sale of almost everything that can be raised. Every article that is exported to feed the nations and the citiz

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1915, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

On Milton, crest, Rolfe Minor finds George Lowell, a landscape painter, unconscious in his studio. The man's face has been cut and bruised and he is suspected of the crime. Samson enters to find Minor bending over Lowell. Minor, to Samson's horrified gaze, has Hickman's pistol. Jim Hickman, brother of the girl Minor loves, is Samson's son. Minor, to Hickman's surprise, refuses to shoot Samson. Lowell, recovering, tells Minor he was attacked by a man who called him a spy. Lowell and Minor hide in the woods. Samson, to Hickman's surprise, refuses to shoot Minor and pays Farbish a handsome price for the girl. Samson, Hickman, Farbish and Minor go to Samson's home. Minor is left with Hickman's sister, Alice, while Hickman goes to town to get a minister. Minor's work in the world, brought by Lowell, has made him famous. Lowell, in the woods, has found a man who has left the world and is happy. Minor, left by Hickman, sees Samson insult William Lee, a blind veteran, and knocks Samson down. Samson, to Minor's surprise, thanks him for fixing the blind veteran and at the same time, refuses to allow Minor to marry his sister. Hickman returns and Samson orders Minor out of his house.

CHAPTER XI—Continued.

Samson did not appear at the Lookout house for two weeks after that. He had been busy, he said, in the going there gave embarrassment to the girl who had been kind to him, it were better to remain away.

"I don't belong here," he told himself, bitterly, the day before he left that known me in New York, except the Lenoxes, is hugging at me behind my back."

He worked fiercely, and threw into his work such force and energy that he came out again converted into boiler-iron of stroke and an almost savage vigor of drawing. The instructor prodded his head over the sand, and passed on to the next student without having left the defacing mark of his relentless crayon. To the same pupil, he said:

Watch the way that man South draws. He's not clever. He's elementary science and, if he goes on, the first thing you know he will be a portrait painter. He won't merely draw ever and time and time again to character and virtues and vices showing out through them."

And Samson met every page with unrelenting savagery, searching for some one who might be laughing at him openly, or even covertly, instead of behind his back. The long-suffering fighting lust in him craved opportunity to break out and relieve the pressure on his soul. But no one laughed.

One afternoon late in November, a blast of blizzards swept sparling down the Atlantic coast, whipping the gulf flies with wet flurries of snow and sleet. Off on the mountain where the Kenmore club had its lodge, the live-oaks stretched their gnarled wings and raised their arrow necks restlessly with the sob and moaning. With dawn, they had heard, faint and far away, the sent notes of that wild chorus with which the hills would ring until the southerly migrations ended in the beginning of northward backing of shifting water-fowl.

Then it was that Farbish dropped in with neatly folders and Samson, yearning to be away where there were open skies, packed footer Lowell's borrowed paraphernalia, and prepared to leave that same night.

While he was packing, the telephone rang, and Samson heard Adrienne's voice at the other end of the wire.

"Where have you been hiding?" she demanded. "I have to send a truant officer after you."

"I've been very busy," said the man, "and I meant to—"

"Don't tell me I'm afraid I've been wasting your time."

Possibly, the miserable tone of the voice told the girl more than the words.

"You are having a season with the blue devils," she sympathized. "Lowell has cooped up too much. This wind ought to bring the cobs and—

"I'm leaving tonight," Samson told her.

"It would have been very nice of you to have run up to say good-by," she reproved, with a little pout. "If you call me up by long distance, you will get there early in the morning. Tomorrow, I'm going to Philadelphia over night. The next night, I shall be in the Catskills. Call me up after the theater, and tell me how you like it."

SNAKES WERE ALL DROWNED

But Animals, Liberated From Their Cages Just in Time, Swim Ashore Safely.

Tied to tall trees on the banks of the Bangli river is one of the strangest collection of animals ever harbored in this neck of the woods, as the result of the wreck of a scow towed by ragamuffin Indian Texas, carrying the 16 members and full properties, exhibition tents, and cages full of the sound of monsoon rains and gentle breezes for this city.

The launch dragged itself across a snag on the North Fork, but in pulling the scow upon it, a plank was ripped from the bottom and it sank.

The men on the Tagan sprang on the scow and tore open the cages to free the animals, which leaped into the water and swam ashore. Then they scattered in the woods, and kept the showmen busy all day rounding them up.

The scow sank before the snakes could be located, and boxed in the cages, the writhing, writhing reptiles

It was the same old frankness and friendliness of voice, and the same old note like the music of a reed instrument. Samson felt so comforted and reassured that he laughed through the trombone.

"I've been keeping away from you," he volunteered, "because I've had a spare into mayself, and haven't been fit to talk to you. When I get back, I'm coming up to explain. And, in the meantime, I'm telephone."

On the train Samson was surprised to discover that, about all, he had Mr. William Farbish for a traveling companion. That gentleman explained that he had found an opportunity to play truant from business for a day or two, and wished to see Samson comfortably ensconced and introduced.

The first day, Farbish and Samson had the place to themselves, but the next evening could bring others.

The next day, while the mountaineer was out on the farm, the party of men at the club had been swelled to a total of six, for in pursuance of the carefully arranged plans of Mr. Farbish, Mr. Brudburn had succeeded in inducing Wilfred Horton to run down for a day or two of the peace he loved. When Horton arrived that afternoon, he found an unusually cheerful, snapper ruffled by bits of maliciously well-bred gossip, until his resentment against Samson South had been fanned into danger heat. He did not know that South was a guest of the club, and he did not that afternoon go out to the kennels to see the prize winners of his kind in the world. Prompted by a vague curiosity, he had seen the world and knew what it looked like, Samson's room inside Wilfred Horton's mind was a place of ambushes and traps for fleeing memories unhappened at the Wilfred Horton, who had come to others to make Horton jealous and uneasy.

CHAPTER XI—Continued.

Samson did not appear at the Lookout house for two weeks after that. He had been busy, he said, in the going there gave embarrassment to the girl who had been kind to him, it were better to remain away.

"I don't belong here," he told himself, bitterly, the day before he left that known me in New York, except the Lenoxes, is hugging at me behind my back."

He worked fiercely, and threw into his work such force and energy that he came out again converted into boiler-iron of stroke and an almost savage vigor of drawing. The instructor prodded his head over the sand, and passed on to the next student without having left the defacing mark of his relentless crayon. To the same pupil, he said:

"Watch the way that man South draws. He's not clever. He's elementary science and, if he goes on, the first thing you know he will be a portrait painter. He won't merely draw ever and time and time again, to character and virtues and vices showing out through them."

And Samson met every page with unrelenting savagery, searching for some one who might be laughing at him openly, or even covertly, instead of behind his back. The long-suffering fighting lust in him craved opportunity to break out and relieve the pressure on his soul. But no one laughed.

One afternoon late in November, a blast of blizzards swept sparling down the Atlantic coast, whipping the gulf flies with wet flurries of snow and sleet. Off on the mountain where the Kenmore club had its lodge, the live-oaks stretched their gnarled wings and raised their arrow necks restlessly with the sob and moaning. With dawn, they had heard, faint and far away, the sent notes of that wild chorus with which the hills would ring until the southerly migrations ended in the beginnings backing of shifting water-fowl.

Then it was that Farbish dropped in with neatly folders and Samson, yearning to be away where there were open skies, packed footer Lowell's borrowed paraphernalia, and prepared to leave that same night.

While he was packing, the telephone rang, and Samson heard Adrienne's voice at the other end of the wire.

"Where have you been hiding?" she demanded. "I have to send a truant officer after you."

"I've been very busy," said the man, "and I meant to—"

"Don't tell me I'm afraid I've been wasting your time."

Possibly, the miserable tone of the voice told the girl more than the words.

"You are having a season with the blue devils," she sympathized. "Lowell has cooped up too much. This wind ought to bring the cobs and—

"I'm leaving tonight," Samson told her.

"It would have been very nice of you to have run up to say good-by," she reproved, with a little pout. "If you call me up by long distance, you will get there early in the morning. Tomorrow, I'm going to Philadelphia over night. The next night, I shall be in the Catskills. Call me up after the theater, and tell me how you like it."

"I'm Ready Either to Fight or Shake Hands."

chair, gazing into the eyes of his assailant, with an effort at self-mastery which gave his chest and arms the tremors of a man in the throes of stiffening under electrocution. Then, with his hands to his back and his eyes gripped them there. For a moment, the man was held from the wall, girder, but the instrument which sat upon Wilfred Horton was a departure from his ordinary custom.

He had discovered in his college days that liquor, instead of exhilarating him, was an influence under which he grew moodiest and sullen, and that discovery had made him almost a total abstainer. Tonight, his glass was comparatively filled and emptied, and, as he gazed ahead, and thought recurrently of the man at his side, he felt a sense of the unusual.

When the coffee had been brought, and the cigars lighted, and the servants had withdrawn, Horton with the manner of one who had been awaiting an opportunity, turned slightly in his chair, and gazed indolently at the Kentucky.

Samson South still seemed entirely unconscious of the other's existence, though in reality he was detailed to the storm had escaped him. He was sitting in the same place at the same table, and what he saw in them appeared to creep him. Wilfred Horton's cheeks were burning with a dull flush, and his eyes were narrowing in an unmistakable dislike. Suddenly, a silence fell on the party, and, as the men stopped in their cigars, Horton turned toward the Kentuckian. For a moment, he gazed at him, then, with an imperious exclamation of disgust he announced:

"I don't know what I want you to know that Horton would not listen to his confidences. The delegated spokesman warned Wilfred that Samson South had spoken positively to him, and advised cautious caution, in a fashion calculated to infuse.

Samson, it was falsely alleged, had accused him of saying derogatory things in his absence, which he would hardly venture to repeat in his presence. In short, it was put to Horton in addition, his opinion quietly, or sat, the crow of cowardice.

"Fear-tight," when Samson went to his room, Farbish joined him.

"I've been greatly annoyed to find," he said, seating himself on Samson's bed, that Horton arrived today.

"Against that!" Horton struck the mountain man across the face with his open hand. Instantly, there was a commotion of scraping chairs and shuffling feet, mingled with a chorus of exclamations. Samson had risen, and, for a second, his face had become a thing of unspeakable passion. His hand instinctively swept to his hip pocket—and stopped halfway. He stood by his overturned paper, and had read a page, which chanced to be lying face up in chance scrolls, yesterday, it was a copy of which Farbish had known, in advance.

"Don't You See That This Thing Is a Frame-Up?"

"Even if what I said didn't happen to be particularly commendatory," he noted Horton, his eyes narrowing, "I'd be sorry."

"So long," replied the Kentuckian, as he put on his hat and left the room. I don't reckon it would interest me much."

"To point of fact"—Horton was gazing with steady hostility into Samson's eyes—"I prefer to tell you. I have rather generally expressed the belief that you are a damned savage, unfit for decent society."

Samson's face grew rapid and a trifle pale. His mouth set itself in a straight line, but, as Wilfred Horton came to his feet with the last words, the mountaineer remained seated.

"And," went on the New Yorker, flushing with suddenly augmentive passion, "what I said I still believe to be true and repeat in your presence. At another time and place, I shall be even more explicit. I shall ask you to explain certain things.

"Mr. Horton," suggested Samson in an ominously quiet voice, "I reckon you're a little drunk. If I were you, I'd sit down."

Wilfred's face went from red to white, and his shoulders stiffened. He leaned forward, and for the instant, no one moved. The tick of the clock was plainly audible.

"Sit down," he said his trench coming in labored excitement, "defend yourself."

Samson still sat motionless.

"Against what?" he inquired.

"Against that!" Horton struck the mountain man across the face with his open hand. Instantly, there was a commotion of scraping chairs and shuffling feet, mingled with a chorus of exclamations. Samson had risen, and, for a second, his face had become a thing of unspeakable passion. His hand instinctively swept to his hip pocket—and stopped halfway. He stood by his overturned chair, gazing into the eyes of his assailant, with an effort at self-mastery which gave his chest and arms the tremors of a man in the throes of stiffening under electrocution. Then, with his hands to his back and his eyes gripped there. For a moment, the man was held from the wall, girder, but the instrument which sat upon Wilfred Horton was a departure from his ordinary custom.

"I'm Ready Either to Fight or Shake Hands."

He had discovered in his college days that liquor, instead of exhilarating him, was an influence under which he grew moodiest and sullen, and that discovery had made him almost a total abstainer. Tonight, his glass was comparatively filled and emptied, and, as he gazed ahead, and thought recurrently of the man at his side, he felt a sense of the unusual.

When the coffee had been brought, and the cigars lighted, and the servants had withdrawn, Horton with the manner of one who had been awaiting an opportunity, turned slightly in his chair, and gazed indolently at the Kentuckian.

Samson South still seemed entirely unconscious of the other's existence, though in reality he was detailed to the storm. He was sitting in the same place at the same table, and what he saw in them appeared to creep him. Wilfred Horton's cheeks were burning with a dull flush, and his eyes were narrowing in an unmistakable dislike. Suddenly, a silence fell on the party, and, as the men stopped in their cigars, Horton turned toward the Kentuckian. For a moment, he gazed at him, then, with an imperious exclamation of disgust he announced:

"I don't know what I want you to know that Horton would not listen to his confidences. The delegated spokesman warned Wilfred that Samson South had spoken positively to him, and advised cautious caution, in a fashion calculated to infuse.

Samson, it was falsely alleged, had accused him of saying derogatory things in his absence, which he would hardly venture to repeat in his presence. In short, it was put to Horton in addition, his opinion quietly, or sat, the crow of cowardice.

"Fear-tight," when Samson went to his room, Farbish joined him.

"I've been greatly annoyed to find," he said, seating himself on Samson's bed, that Horton arrived today

Wear your Tailor

COME in today and see those handsome and exclusive Spring woolens just received from largest tailors in the world of GOOD made to-order-clothes.

Ed. V. Price & Co.

Get the Clothes Problem Off Your Mind Today

Go to---LEVINSON'S---Get the Habit

C. Danto & Son.

THE - STORE - OF - QUALITY — WHERE - ALL - GOODS - ARE - FRESH

It does not cost any more at our store where everything is fresh and the prices right then it does to trade anywhere else. Our aim is to get what you want at a right price; what we have not got we are willing to get for you.

WE GIVE STAMPS.

Remember, Our Telephone is Number 12.

C. DANTO & SON.

212 Bridge St. Phone No. 12 Phone No. 60

FLOWERS IN WINTER.

Flowers, like people require fresh air. Many of them are disappointed and vexatious for human beings will be found unsuitable for them.

It Won't hurt plants to have a turn occasionally to remove the dust from the leaves and open up the pores. This is best done by passing the plant in the lids of a tub and sprinkling the leaves with water. A damp sponge can be used for this purpose. If never any a little soap may be used.

If the leaves on your flowers get yellow and drop off it is quite possible that you have been overwatering the plant or possibly have been drowning it. Sometimes plants need water every day, and again, once in two days is enough. No exact rule can be given. If you rap your knuckles sharp against the pot and it gives forth a hollow or ringing sound the plant needs watering.

In winter the plants should not be repotted. The best time to repot is in the spring. In winter the roots of many plants lie dormant, and the roots should never be disturbed during this period.

One of the greatest enemies of plants grown indoors is coal-gas. Illuminating gas is nearly as bad. The slightest trace of gas will ruin the growth of the new leaves.—M. F. Anson, Kansas State Agricultural College.

"There's no work so tiring as dogging about an' starin' an' not rightly knowin' what you're goin' to do next."—George Eliot.

Colds Are Often Most Serious—Stop Possible Complications

The disregard of a cold has often brought many a regret. The fact of Pneumonia, Consumption, or Fever should be warning enough that your system is needing immediate attention. Certainly Loss of Sleep is most serious. It is a warning given by Nature. Take man's only assistant—Dr. King's New Discovery. Dr. King's New Discovery is based on a scientific analysis of Colds, so your Druggist. Buy a bottle to-day.

WOOD FOR VIOLINS.

Maple is the Great Favorite in What the Old World Famous Makers Used.

In the finest violins the body is made of white maple. In cheap ones pine is used in some of the fronts, and some attractive eaves of the top are employed. The best wood for the backs of the violins, a tree resembling a fir in general appearance, which grows in Austria and northern Bohemia, and musical instrument makers set great store on that from the Tyrolese mountains. Its wood is most homogeneous and has the advantage over all other that there is scarcely any difference between the sap wood and the heart.

Violet ebony, which comes from Africa, Africa and India, is much used for pegs. This ebony is now so extensive that it is reserved for cuts and twisters.

Spruce maple, somewhat homogeneous than white maple and hence less expensive, is employed chiefly in making instruments.

The wood of trees from high altitudes and a severe climate is much better than that from plains and lowlands, and in Austria and Bohemia the air contains a certain amount of electricity. And it seems that the wood of trees which are 200 years of growth and the mineralized earth should be not more than two or three millimeters apart.

The ancient violin makers, Stradivarius, Amati, Guarnerius, Maggini, etc., used the finest and best wood, and some say that this with their perfect workmanship is why their violins have stood so long.—New York World.

FIRE BOATS AT WORK.

MODERN FIRE BOATS.

New Type of Motive Power Has Appeared in the Burning Engine.

The crisis of fire boats—or at least the use of them as fire extinguishers—has arrived through the efforts of firemen to subdue a stubborn fire on the river front in Liverpool many years ago, writes Thomas A. Cleary in the American Magazine. After working for hours it was suggested that a scow or float be procured, that the land engines be placed thereon and operate back of the burning buildings. This device was the principal factor to set Hopkinshaw the fire. Since that time we have attached our improved river front engine or fire boat, a marvel in its mechanism and an asset of great importance in controlling and extinguishing conflagrations, not only along river fronts, but with the aid of pipe lines at points a mile away.

In the building of fire boats much depends upon the architect chosen to design them. In a modern way, he should be a master of his craft, and he should be given a free hand. Sufficient power of propelling machine and such construction of hull as to enable the boat to force a passage through any ice that may be encountered in the winter season are essential. Abundant capacity to furnish all the water needed under high pressure equipment for at least six twenty-streams, should be assured. A pump could be provided for low pressure where a large body of water is required for distribution on the immediate river front, where it is not so much a question of pressure as quantity.

Within the past few years a new type of motive power has appeared in the oil burning Diesel marine engine. The advantage of the oil engine over steam, especially for fire boats, is that the former consumes only one third of the fuel required to operate a steam plant, and though cost is cheaper than oil, the greater efficiency of the oil engine more than offsets the reduced price of the coal.

SYSTEM IN CITY BUILDING.

Same Principles Apply as in Commercial Development.

An important session of the convention of the American Civic association was recently held at Washington and was devoted to city planning, with John Nolen of Cambridge, Mass., vice president of the association, presiding, introducing the subject he said:

"The subject before the convention is 'City Planning,' which needs in this connection very little explanation for (quote it strikes at the root of so many of our civic problems. I think that it now ranks as one of successful enterprises of magnitude have been planned enterprises. They have not come about by chance. In city planning we recognize that millions of dollars in money and many things more precious than money have been wasted because of a lack of plan. Our streets, our parks, our recreation spaces, our homes and homes give ample evidence of all this. The first step, it would seem, toward the solution of these social industrial problems is a comprehensive plan. We need transportation plans to serve our growing population problems; we need a zone plan to district our cities, to prevent the broken fundamental things in city life we find that really we ought not to begin with the experiment of trying to put the bough in the city, but that after the roots of civil life the two things more matter are the industrial and the residential, as the factories and home life. You can't do it, you can't look forward for the next thirty, forty or fifty years in a city that is four or five times as big as you want to make sure that in the next forty, fifty or sixty years everything who builds a new home will be secured against disease which we have created by anything that can be prevented. You want to make sure that the outbreak of any kind of thing in the good neighborhood as well as in regard to the general civic matter of health.

Mr. Adams emphasized the necessity of proper legislative steps to give our adaptive power to carry out town planning schemes. He pointed out that to have a successful application of so strictly regulations there must be cooperation between the power and the municipality. "If you leave the control of your building developments until the buildings are up the owner is not going to submit to restrictions which will take away his property. If you go to him twelve years before he will join with you in the proper restrictions which will help him property to control and restrict the property so long as he restrict everybody else in the district accordingly."

In closing Mr. Adams said: "Somebody said that you in America have to learn your lesson from Europe. The war with its social degradation and slum life just as we have in Europe and you have to fight it. You have war with all these difficulties that broad preventable disease. With those difficulties that always confront us. I want to appeal to this American city association to be up and doing. Not only be it be said that this association is a place where there are liberty and freedom, politically speaking, but it is also a hospitalize of homes."

AMERICAN ACHIEVEMENTS.

Some of the Big Things to the Credit of This Great Country.

Americans founded the sixty covers, small cotter which all men were equal before the law. Since the Declaration of Independence was published to the world the democratic idea has hourly received impetus until now its march seems irresistible.

Americans were the first to demonstrate the feasibility of relying on a citizen soldiery to defend the land and its institutions against foreign or domestic attack.

Americans were the first to abolish titular distinctions and to derive social eminence of any support save merit or the consent of those who chose to consider themselves superior.

It was an American who invented the steamship.

An American invented the telegraph. An American invented the telephone. An American invented the electric light.

An American invented the reaper which makes it possible to feed the million and more people on the planet. It was an American, too, who invented the sewing machine.

Americans also were the conquerors of pain when they discovered how, by means of sulphuric ether the tenderest human nerves could be made insensible to the surgeon's steel.

Americans opened the ports of Japan to the nations of the world, made a path into mysterious Africa, and an American crowned the geographical achievements of his countrymen by discovering the north pole.—Pittsburg Press.

HUMOR OF LINCOLN.

How the President Sized Up the Confederate Forces.

A visitor cited Lincoln how many men the Confederates had in the field. The president replied very soft and slowly:

"Twelve hundred thousand, accounted for and accounted for."

The visitor pated as he said:

"Good heavens!"

"Yes, sir, 1,200,000. No doubt of it. You see, all of our generals when they first engaged any the rebels reported them from three or five to one. We have always believed we have 500,000 men in the field, and three times four make twelve."

A delegation once waited upon Lincoln to ask the appointment of a certain man as commissioner to the sea island islands. Besides his fitness for the place, they urged his bad health that the president in reply said: "Gentlemen, I am sorry to say that there are a great many applicants for that place, and they are all sicker than your man."

A woman came to the White House one day on an unusual errand when Lincoln unusually was a present, but he took her at her word and gave her his morning one to a major of the quartermaster's department. "My dear lady, I'm only tenant of this says and this two sons who want to work. Set them at it if possible. Wanting to work is so rare a merit that it should be encouraged. A Lincoln."

Bolivia's Electrical Storms.

Owing to the peculiar topographical formation of Bolivia, electrical and other phenomena are of constant occurrence. The principal one, which all disturbances take place being the Altiplanicia, or great plateau. As the atmosphere is charged with electricity both in summer and winter, dry or electric storms are of frequent occurrence both on the plateau and in the valleys. Before the rainy season sets in electrical accumulation becomes considerable on the pastures region. In most violent manifestations taking place toward the eastern section of the Altiplanicia. An electrical storm in these regions is always a most imposing spectacle as its thunderbolts form of the wind, almost equal to a hurricane, and the heavy electrical accumulation at the time produce terrible atmospheric explosions and violent detonations which shake the surface of the ground, starting and cracking.

It Really Does Relieve Rheumatism

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid. Rheumatism in any form should by all means begin a bottle of Sloan's Liniment and kind. The minute you feel pain or soreness in a joint or muscle, bathe it with Sloan's Liniment. Do not rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, forcing the hot, tingling, soothing and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and have it in the house against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. You'll come back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.

Try This For Your Cold.

Coughs and Colds unless checked often lead to serious results.

Colds are caused by germs infecting the mucous membrane and lining of the Nose, Throat, Lungs and Bronchial Tubes. Relief is obtained by killing these germs, then soothing and healing the inflamed parts.

This is just how Dr. King's New Discovery acts. It is Antiseptic—Kills the cold germs. It is soothing and healing, relieving the irritation. Ringe the Cough and Checks the Cold. Get a bottle from your Druggist, start taking it now, you will get quick relief and permanent relief. Here's proof. A. J. Johnson, Otsego, N. Y., says: "My King's New Discovery is the best medicine I ever saw. Coughs and Colds I have it saved my life several years ago when I contracted a severe Cough. Before using all of one bottle I was much better, and several bottles cured me."

Excellent for Children and Delicate Women. It is Mild, Pleasant and effective.

Trial bottle on receipt of 4c in stamps.

W. H. E. BUCKLEN & CO.
529 North Broad St. Phila. Pa.

—FOR—

Furniture, Stoves, Ranges, Carpets, Rugs, Comforts and Blankets

—Go to—

S. M. SEE & SONS.

The Reliable Housefurnishers.

Are You Going to Raise Chicks???

If you will just give them the right start they will give you a profitable finish.

Bowel Trouble cannot exist with YOUR CHICKS if you use our Chick Mash, Milk Mash, Chick Feed and Scratch Feed.

Argo Milling Co.

MANUFACTURERS

Don't Wait Until The Rush Is On--

Come over to F. S. Blanchard's or send your painter in and have your rooms finished in

MURESCO

Or painted. We have them in all colors.

F. S. Blanchard Estate,

F. L. Bartholomew, Administrator.

Charlevoix

Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix Homes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock, which consists of everything, such as Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper.

TELEPHONE NO. 22

AMELIA KAUEN, High School and Junior High School, Boyne City Schools. Republican Candidate for County School Commissioner at the March Primaries.

—WHY?—

Because—I hold the degree, Batchelor of Pedagogics from the Ypsilanti State Normal School.

Because—I hold a state life certificate from the Ypsilanti State Normal School.

Because—I am a Senior of the State University.

Because—I am a graduate of the Ferris Institute.

Because—I have taught 25 years in Charlevoix County Schools.

Because—I hold one of the most responsible positions in the Charlevoix County Schools.

Because—I am Master of Pine Lake Grange.

Because—I am a taxpayer.

TO THE REPUBLICAN ELECTORS OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY

I wish to announce that I will be a candidate for re-election to the office of County Commissioner of Schools.

I believe that my experience in the office and my knowledge of the condition of the schools of the county will make it possible for me to render efficient service.

If elected to the office I will do my best for the boys and girls of the county.

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. MILFORD.

Announcement

To the Republican electoral voters of the County of Charlevoix.

I desire to announce my candidacy for nomination for the office of County Road Commissioner at the primaries, March 3rd.

OAKLEY D. HAMMOND.

Announcement

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for County Road Commissioner at the republican primaries to be held on March 3d, 1916. I refer the voters to my record as highway commissioner of Eveline township for four years. By reason of a long experience in road building I think I can fill the position to the satisfaction of the people.

JOSEPH M. COURIER.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

CITY CHARTER

House Enrolled Act No. 304

An Act to Incorporate the City of Charlevoix, County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan.

The People of the State of Michigan enact:

Section 1. The Village of Charlevoix, in the County of Charlevoix and State of Michigan, is hereby incorporated into a city of the fourth class with boundaries as follows: Commencing on the shore of Lake Michigan, where the east and west quarter line of section twenty-three, township thirty-four north, range eight west, intersects the shore line of Lake Michigan; thence east on said east and west quarter line of section twenty-three and the east and west quarter line of section twenty-four, township thirty-four north, of range eight west, to the intersection of said quarter line with the shore of Pine Lake; thence southwesterly and southerly along the shore of Pine Lake to point on said shore eight and thirteen and one-half hundredths chains north of the east and west quarter line of section thirty-five, township thirty-four north, of range eight west; thence west and along the center of the highway known as the "Stover road" to a point one hundred thirty-two feet six inches east of the section line between sections thirty-four and thirty-five; thence south four and forty-two and one-fifth hundredths chains; thence west one hundred thirty-two feet six inches to

The MANY LOVE AFFAIRS of WASHINGTON

MARTHA WASHINGTON

GEORGE WASHINGTON

THE fair maiden to kindle the divine spark in the breast of George Washington was a young lady, whom he called his "Lowland Beauty," and to whom, at fifteen, he wrote some very reasonable verses. In one doggerel he tells about his "Foot Insulsious Heart," (or rendered in English "Dull's Feathered Dart" and in our "Bleeding Every Hour") for her that "pitties of my Grief and Woes will not on me Pity take."

The identity of this "Lowland Beauty," who was the object of Washington's first love affair, has been a disputed point, leading the historian pronounced her Mary Bland, and some are inclined to the belief that she was a Miss Kilbeck, a beauty of Charles county, Maryland, who married George Mason. Others maintain that she was Lucy Grymes, who married Henry Lee and became the mother of the famous "Light Horse Harry," who was a great favorite with Washington, and who refused to be commander in chief as "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." Those who favor the Lucy Grymes identification point to the affection of Washington for "Light Horse Harry" as a reminiscence of his early love he entertained for Harry's mother.

Others will have it that the "Lowland Beauty" was Betsy Fauntleroy, and base their assertion on a letter written in May, 1752, by Washington to the grandfather of Miss Fauntleroy, in which he says, among other things, he purposed as soon as he recovered his strength (he had been ill with pleurisy) he would call on Miss Betsy in hopes of a revocation of the former cruel sentence, and see if I can meet with any alteration in my favor."

In 1758 Washington became surveyor of Lord Fairfax's lands. He was then but sixteen. In an undated letter, probably written about the end of 1758, on the occasion of his 27th "to his Dear Friend Robin," possibly Robert Washington of Chotank, affectionately mentioned his wife, Patsy Custis, and alludes to the "Lowland Beauty." "My plans of residence in all present at his birth place, where I should, were my heart disengaged, pass my time very pleasantly, as a very agreeable young lady lives in the same house . . . but often and unavoidably bring in company with her revives my former passion for your 'Lowland Beauty,' whereas, were I to live more retired from young women, I might, in some measure alleviate my sorrows by hearing that chaste and troublesome Passion in the grave of oblivion of eternal forgetfulness."

History might have been different had Washington been accepted by the "Lowland Beauty." If the "Lowland Beauty" was Betsy Fauntleroy, and good authorities think she was—she married Thomas Lewis, a kinsman of the "Signer of Virginia" of that name, and became the mother of Thomas Adams, Lawrence, Betsy, William and Mary, author of the articles of confederation, and member of the Philadelphia convention (1787-1788).

The "amiable young lady" mentioned by Washington in his letter from the Fairfax residence, was Miss Mary Cary, the sister of Colonel Fairfax' wife. He turned to her for consolation and it seems her charm mitigated his "troublesome passion." But Miss Cary had no sensuous love for the ardent young man. In 1759 she married Edward Ambler.

After his rebuff of the "Lowland Beauty," he had another charmer, presumably a member of the family of Alexanders, who had a plantation near Mount Vernon.

Washington, while in Barbadoes with his sick half-brother, Lawrence, in Miss Hetherson, who exerted an influence over his tender heart and to whom he refers as "an agreeable young lady," he would seem that nearly all the young ladies were agreeable to him. Miss Robertson, he says, was the only one, however, who really captivated him in Barbadoes. While allowing that all "the ladies seemingly are agreeable," he notes that "by ill custom they affect the negro style."

When returned from his first campaign and recuperating at Mount Vernon, the time seems to have been beguiled by some charmer, for one of his letters written from Williamsburg, "I imagine you by this time plunged in the midst of delight beyond even afford and enchanted by charmers more stranger to the Cupian Dame, and a footnote by the same hand early excites further curiosity concerning this latter personage by indefinitely naming her as "Mrs. Neil."

It is said that at the time and another Washington had had a hundred sweethearts along the banks of the Potomac, the Rappahannock and the James, but even up to the gates of Mount Vernon. Perhaps the number is exaggerated but at any rate we have but scant account of most of the fair sons and are not even told the names of the great majority. This we do know, that

ONE OF THE HOMES WASHINGTON

THE HOUSE IN WHICH WASHINGTON WAS BORN

Washington was a welcome guest with the Fairfaxes at Belvoir, the home of Lord Fairfax's cousin, Colonel William Fairfax, at Eagle's Nest, with the Brutons at Stratford House, with the Carters at Nomini Hall, and with the Lees and Pauntleroys at Richmond.

Through the death of his half-brother, whom he accompanied to Barbadoes in the West Indies in search of health, Washington became master of Mount Vernon. His return journey included at Bermuda, where he had an attack of ague which, according to Parson Weems, "marred his face rather severely than otherwise." He was settled with a military ambition. He had already been a military inspector with the rank of major for the protection of the frontiers of Virginia. At twenty-three he was an aide-de-camp to General Braddock commander in chief of the Virginia forces. Braddock's defeat ended his journeying to Bermuda on military business.

In going and returning he tarried in New York for about a week on each occasion as the guest of Beverly Robinson, a Virginia friend who had married Susannah Philipse. Mrs. Robinson's sister, a very pretty girl, happened to be on a visit, with her relatives. Washington came under the charm of her blandishments. He did not spare expense in seeking popularity. He spent sundry pounds in "treating the ladies," with the object of getting one of them to treat him with favor, but all his efforts were in vain. He gallantly proposed to Miss Philipse and donned his best suit for the occasion, but that cultured and charming lady, concerning deceased husbands, he would thrust upon her. Two years afterwards she married Lieut. Col. Roger Morris.

There is no doubt that Washington was desperately in love with Mary Philipse, and her refusal of his suit was a keen disappointment to him. A curious sequel to his attachment for her is discovered in the fact that her husband's house in Morristown became Washington's headquarters in 1776, both Morris and his wife being fugitive tories. History in this case might also have been materially changed had Mary Philipse become the wife of George Washington.

In the spring of 1759 Washington met his ideal in Martha Custis, daughter of Colonel Fairfax. On this trip he met Mr. Martin (Dandridge) Custis, widow of Daniel Parke Custis, one of the wealthiest planters of the colony. At that time she was twenty-six years old, three years younger than Washington, though she had been a widow seven years. In spite of his ill health he proved the suit with as much ardor as he had done in the case of Mary Philipse and with better success. Though her first husband had been faithful and affectionate, he had not much appealed to her imagination, but the Mr. Martin Dandridge Custis, who had heard by storm she favored his suit, and they became engaged.

He ordered a ring from Philadelphia at a cost of £ 14 (two guineas and sixteen shillings), his price in those days, but they could not be immediately married, as military duty called him away. After several months in the field, during which time they saw each other only three or four times, Washington came back to Williamsburg, and there in St. Peter's church, on January 6, 1759, they were married. It was a grand wedding, attended by all the aristocracy of Virginia.

"MY WIFE'S WRITING!"

Washington, after the marriage, lived at Mount Vernon, in the midst of his slaves, who exerted an influence over his tender heart and to whom he refers as "an agreeable young lady." It would seem that nearly all the young ladies were agreeable to him. Miss Robertson, he says, was the only one, however, who really captivated him in Barbadoes. While allowing that all "the ladies seemingly are agreeable," he notes that "by ill custom they affect the negro style."

When returned from his first campaign and recuperating at Mount Vernon, the time seems to have been beguiled by some charmer, for one of his letters written from Williamsburg, "I imagine you by this time plunged in the midst of delight beyond even afford and enchanted by charmers more stranger to the Cupian Dame," and a footnote by the same hand early excites further curiosity concerning this latter personage by indefinitely naming her as "Mrs. Neil."

It is said that at the time and another Washington had had a hundred sweethearts along the banks of the Potomac, the Rappahannock and the James, but even up to the gates of Mount Vernon. Perhaps the number is exaggerated but at any rate we have but scant account of most of the fair sons and are not even told the names of the great majority. This we do know, that

PRISON PAPER MAKES PLAIN

Quotes Mild Mannered Man in indictment of Society's Treatment of the Unfortunate.

"The Mild Mannered Man sat meditating on a bench, tunneling the embankment with his heel. . . . 'a got a bad attack in the afternoon," he said, when accosted. "I was looking only a case of a prison paper just before we came out. There was a little editorial on—concerning of an editor imprisoned for a welcome guest with the Fairfaxes at Belvoir, the home of Lord Fairfax's cousin, Colonel William Fairfax, at Eagle's Nest, with the Brutons at Stratford House, with the Carters at Nomini Hall, and with the Lees and Pauntleroys at Richmond.

Through the death of his half-brother, whom he accompanied to Barbadoes in the West Indies in search of health, Washington became master of Mount Vernon. His return journey included at Bermuda, where he had an attack of ague which, according to Parson Weems, "marred his face rather severely than otherwise." He was settled with a military ambition. He had already been a military inspector with the rank of major for the protection of the frontiers of Virginia. At twenty-three he was an aide-de-camp to General Braddock commander in chief of the Virginia forces. Braddock's defeat ended his journeying to Bermuda on military business.

In going and returning he tarried in New York for about a week on each occasion as the guest of Beverly Robinson, a Virginia friend who had married Susannah Philipse. Mrs. Robinson's sister, a very pretty girl, happened to be on a visit, with her relatives. Washington came under the charm of her blandishments. He did not spare expense in seeking popularity. He spent sundry pounds in "treating the ladies," with the object of getting one of them to treat him with favor, but all his efforts were in vain. He gallantly proposed to Miss Philipse and donned his best suit for the occasion, but that cultured and charming lady concerning deceased husbands he would thrust upon her. Two years afterwards she married Lieut. Col. Roger Morris.

There is no doubt that Washington was desperately in love with Mary Philipse, and her refusal of his suit was a keen disappointment to him. A curious sequel to his attachment for her is discovered in the fact that her husband's house in Morristown became Washington's headquarters in 1776, both Morris and his wife being fugitive tories. History in this case might also have been materially changed had Mary Philipse become the wife of George Washington.

In the spring of 1759 Washington met his ideal in Martha Custis, daughter of Colonel Fairfax. On this trip he met Mr. Martin (Dandridge) Custis, widow of Daniel Parke Custis, one of the wealthiest planters of the colony. At that time she was twenty-six years old, three years younger than Washington, though she had been a widow seven years. In spite of his ill health he proved the suit with as much ardor as he had done in the case of Mary Philipse and with better success. Though her first husband had been faithful and affectionate, he had not much appealed to her imagination, but the Mr. Martin Dandridge Custis, who had heard by storm she favored his suit, and they became engaged.

He ordered a ring from Philadelphia at a cost of £ 14 (two guineas and sixteen shillings), his price in those days, but they could not be immediately married, as military duty called him away. After several months in the field, during which time they saw each other only three or four times, Washington came back to Williamsburg, and there in St. Peter's church, on January 6, 1759, they were married. It was a grand wedding, attended by all the aristocracy of Virginia.

SPIRITS AND HARRY

By GRACE JENNINGS.

When Harry Penton opened a law office in the metropolis he encouraged himself with the statement he has once read that the average lawyer's income was in the neighborhood of three thousand dollars. That was all right, but it omitted to add that the colossal incomes of the leading lights swelled the average. In other words, that this income was distributed among the profession very irregular-ly indeed.

Three months and three clients had begun to raise in his mind serious misgivings as to his winter's office rent when, one morning, the prettiest girl that he had ever seen entered his little place.

"What can I do for you, madam?" asked the man, bewildered both by the apparition and by the melancholy thought that he could not charge a pretty girl as much as he would charge her father.

"You are a lawyer, are you not?" asked the girl, sitting down and looking helplessly at him. "I am painfully wanted to go to an unknown lawyer. You are, I am well known about here. My father is a lawyer."

"You have come to the right place, madam," said Harry firmly.

"Well, it's like this," said the girl, "My father married late in life. He is nearly eighty now, and he has fallen into the power of a dreadful witch-doctor, Madame Charmeuse, the Medium."

"Have advertises in the Sunday papers?"

"Yes, she claims to put him in communication with his wife—my step-mother, you know, by automatic writing. My mother died when I was born, and father married again, and his second wife died—and—well, last night both of them wrote to him."

Out of the girl's incoherence Harry gathered the following facts: His visitor's name was Lucy Lawrence, and her father had been a noted lawyer in his day. He had begun to investigate Spiritualism, and the "Medium" had begun to ease the old man money, in automatic writing, instructing him to leave all his money to her instead of to his daughter. The old man, who was shrewd enough in other ways, had shown reluctance to comply with his second wife's wishes. Wasrenpon the spirit of the first wife, the girls mother, had appended her name to a similar communication, adding in postscript that not money was to be left to her daughter, since her nature needed to be developed through poverty.

"And if you can help me in some way I shall be so grateful," pleaded the girl. "It isn't that I want the money, but it is terrible that my father's fortune should go to that horrible clairvoyant woman, a dreadfully impostor."

"Have you any letter that your mother ever wrote?" asked the young man.

The girl reflected. "Yes. Father showed her one of mother's letters once," she answered. "I believe I can get it for you.

"Do it—quick!" cried Harry, snatching up the paper under the "Medium" ad. heard.

There certainly was writing on it. "My wife's writing!" exclaimed old Mr. Lawrence, holding up the paper to the gas. "Dear husband," it read, "I am happy to be able to leave all your money to Lucy. The spirits that told me to leave it to you were lying spirits using my hand. Don't give them any further chance to compare my handwriting with theirs."

"Good Lord!" muttered Mr. Lawrence, evidently in amazement at the writing, as the "Medium" slipped quietly out of the room, passing only long enough to make a threatening gesture at Harry.

"How can I ever thank you?" asked Lucy six weeks later. "Father has taken the revelation very hard, and he believes Madame Charmeuse has evil spirits and—and I can't see her again. And you have done all this."

"You can repay me amply," Harry answered. "You say that case I got unexpectedly for the Langbury Corporation has encouraged you to suggest that—do you prefer gold or platinum, dear?"

And Lucy said gold.

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.)

WHAT EVERY HOME NEEDS

Beautiful Things Need Not Be Expensive, but They Should Be Selected With Care

A few simple bits of pottery whose quiet tones are carefully selected to harmonize with the scheme of the room do much to give a home a charm and whose shapes are proportioned and designed for holding flowers are what every household needs. Handsome brass and copper will add a touch toward brightening some gloomy corner of a room and create splendid effects when filled with masses of green or some bold flowers. When purchasing a collection of bowls and vases in which to place flowers, one might take note of these things in order to reflect judgment in such matters.

Plain glass vases, medium tall and graceful, holding heavy bases, make excellent holders for such bulky flowers as peonies, rosy stalks well the rich colors of nasturtiums and geraniums. Tall, slender vases and cut glass are appropriate for holding hollyhocks (long stems that have wood) stalks. Mexican bowls in shell full color enhance the loveliness of chrysanthemums. Goldenrod is very beautiful when placed in tall earthen vases, and should be placed singly with weed, which is also plumelike and makes a suitable background for it.

Locating the Trouble.

The floorwalker said to the manager of the shoe department:

"Jones, I'm sick of this!"

"What is this?" cried Harry, snatching up the paper under the "Medium" ad. heard.

"There certainly was writing on it. "My wife's writing!" exclaimed old Mr. Lawrence, holding up the paper to the gas. "Dear husband," it read, "I am happy to be able to leave all your money to Lucy. The spirits that told me to leave it to you were lying spirits using my hand. Don't give them any further chance to compare my handwriting with theirs."

"Good Lord!" muttered Mr. Lawrence, evidently in amazement at the writing, as the "Medium" slipped quietly out of the room, passing only long enough to make a threatening gesture at Harry.

"How can I ever thank you?" asked Lucy six weeks later. "Father has taken the revelation very hard, and he believes Madame Charmeuse has evil spirits and—and I can't see her again. And you have done all this."

"You can repay me amply," Harry answered. "You say that case I got unexpectedly for the Langbury Corporation has encouraged you to suggest that—do you prefer gold or platinum, dear?"

And Lucy said gold.

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.)

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Don't Look Old! Try Grandmother's Recipe to Darken and Beautify Gray, Faded, Lifeless Hair.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant. Adv.

Don't Give Up!

Nowadays deaths due to weak kidneys are much more common than they used to be according to the coroner. Doan's Kidney Pills are now in great demand. The kidneys don't always get sick in a day.

An Illinois Case

Mrs. Marcellus Waggoner, Sidney Ave., Carterville, Ill., says: "My back was so lame I had terrible backaches and could hardly move without suffering agony. My kidneys were disordered, too, and I could hardly rest day or night. I was nervous and my sleep was broken. Doctors said I had kidney trouble and I took medicine from them without any good. I finally began using Doan's Kidney Pills and they soon cured me. I now feel stronger than I have for years."

Get Doan's Kidney Pills at any store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N.Y.

Don't Persecute Your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are harsh, habit-forming, weakening.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Easily vegetable. Act mildly on the bowels. Gentle laxative. Stop after relieving constipation. Small, easy to take. Small price.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine must bear Signature

Neuralgia

There is no need to suffer the agonizing, maddening, distracting pain of neuralgia; Sloan's Liniment laid on gently will soothe the aching "bad" like magic. Don't delay. Try it at once.

Hear What Others Say:

"I have been a sufferer with Neuralgia for years; your liniment has cured me." Elizabeth Ann Sloan's Liniment is the best medicine I have used in my household. I always keep it handy." Mrs. Ruth C. Grand, Independence, Mo.

"Mr. Earl S. Sloan, Dear Sir: I tried your Liniment for a severe case of rheumatism and it gave me immediate relief. It is wonderful what it does for man or beast." Mr. Thomas Hodgkins, Ashland, Ohio.

"Mr. Earl S. Sloan, Dear Sir: I tried your Liniment for a severe case of rheumatism and it gave me immediate relief. It is wonderful what it does for man or beast." Mr. Thomas Hodgkins, Ashland, Ohio.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

is the best remedy for rheumatism, backache, sore throat and sprains.

At all dealers, 25c.

Send four cents in stamps for a TRIAL BOTTLE

Dr. Earl S. Sloan, Inc.
Dept. B. Philadelphia, Pa.

BLACK LEG

LOSES SURELY PREVENT

Dr. Dorset's Blackleg Pills. Low price, reliable, effective. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Write for Veterinary Advice Free. Dr. Dorset's Blackleg Pills (8 cent dose) Blackleg Aerine (Aerogen Method) Blackleg Vaccine (Aerogen Method) Dr. Dorset's Hog Cholera Serum. Dr. Dorset's Hog Cholera Virus. Dr. Dorset's Hog Cholera Virus-Serum (Simultaneous Method). Dr. Dorset's Pink Eye Vaccine. Dr. Dorset's Pink Eye Vaccine (Aerogen Method). Dr. Dorset's Pink Eye Vaccine (Aerogen Method) Dr. Dorset's Pink Eye Vaccine (Aerogen Method) Dr. Dorset's Pink Eye Vaccine (Aerogen Method)

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9.

SUBSCRIPTIONS:

Three Months	$ .40
Six Months	.75
One Year	1.50

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, February 15th, 1915.

The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date. Mayor Nicholas presiding.

Aldermen present, Sess, Priest, Cartier, Shapton and Carey.

Absent, Barney.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The Finance Committee submitted the following report: Having examined the following bills report the same correct and recommend that they be allowed out of the several funds as herein stated.

General Fund
F. L. Slight, salary	$ 62.50
Highway Fund
Nat Hayes, services	1.50
Chas. Harrington, services	12.00
Geo. Cook, services	12.00
E. S. Sherman, supplies and services	1.50
Cemetery Fund
Vic. McLain, salary	35.00
Bridge Fund
Elmer Johnson, salary	60.00
Police Fund
Chas. Jeffords, salary	30.00
Fred Coon, Lodgings, meals & feed	1.75
W. A. Sherman, supplies	1.00
Light Fund
H. W. Winkfield, coal	2.00
Charlevoix Lumber Co., supplies	2.50
Jos. Jordan & Son, supplies	35.30
Michigan Lighting Co., Arc Lamps	75.00
F. S. Bettes, supplies	1.00
F. H. Marston, services	3.00
Helen Mills, services	3.00
Electric & Water Fund
F. S. Bieschke Est., supplies	1.50
F. S. Blanchard Est., supplies	3.50
A. J. Dennis, services	30.00
Gunson Dixon, salary	30.00
Jos. Jordan & Son, supplies	1.50
H. Hagerman, services	30.00
H. Mueller Mfg. Co., supplies	114.05
F. S. Bettes, supplies	1.00

Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Shapton that the report as read be accepted and the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to issue warrants on the City Depositories for $520.12, and the Clerk be instructed to draw orders on the various funds for the amount of each respective bill. Motion carried by the following ayes and nays vote: Ayes, Sess, Priest, Cartier, Shapton and Carey. Nays none.

Moved by Alderman Sess and seconded by Alderman Priest that the salary of the Deputy City Clerk (F. L. Slight) be placed at $100.00 per month taking effect March 1915; Mr. Slight to pay for all extra clerk hire in clerk's office. Motion carried.

The Mayor appointed the following Primary election commissioners.

First Ward—F. S. Hammond.
Second Ward—R. F. Sloan.
Third Ward—Ed. Ward.

Moved by Alderman Sess and seconded by Alderman Priest that the Mayor's appointments of Primary Election commissioners be confirmed. Motion carried.

The Mayor made the following appointments of Primary Election inspectors:

First ward—J. S. Baker, R. W. Paddock, D. F. Meech, R. C. Hammett.
Second Ward—Wm. Pinconi Sr., John Zeisler, Carl Hosmer.
Third Ward—Ed. Ward, Bert Carey, George Anderson.

Moved by Alderman Sess at 7 seconded by Alderman Shapton that the Mayor's appointments of Primary Election Inspectors be confirmed. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Shapton and seconded by Alderman Cartier that the State of Charlevoix Co. See be used as polling place in the third ward. Motion carried.

There being no further business the council adjourned.

P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

SIBERIAN VILLAGES.

Life of the Peasants, Their Cottages No Vases and Their Stove Beds.

An interesting account of the characteristics of Siberian villages is given in a book, "Siberia," by M. F. Price:

"The village through which we travelled on the way were Russian in every respect. Streets were wide and full of ruts and slime. The houses had log frames and rough hewn boards for the roof. They had a clean and well kept appearance and were surrounded by fences of wooden boards. Through the fence a gateway opened into a court yard where the live stock were kept.

"Every gateway was unique in the village, and the manure from the yards is pitched in heaps along its banks, being carried away each year by the spring floods.

"There is a large room with a brick stove, taking up perhaps a quarter of the room. In this the family eat, live and sleep—some on the stove and some on the floor—while a separate small room is kept and reserved for visitors or others who are not members of the family. The rooms are whitewashed, and each member of the family has a starch bath every week in a hot kept for the purpose outside.

"The bathos that the Russian peasant is habitually dirty is now mistaken. Have, at all events, the average Siberian peasant's home could compete with the best cottages in rural England. The temperature of the rooms is generally rather a trial to such as are not used to entirely cold outside and sealed windows with stove inside.

His 'Junior Partner' Entered.

Lithuania was telling the young bachelors at a recent affair uptown just how to unhook a wife.

"Now, most young fellows are married, you know, before they begin to think," he said. "Nothing makes so much difference. Take your wife unawares, that, though, you may bet and so forth she is the junior partner. If necessary, resort to the effective methods of our ancestors—the Lucretia Borgias and Catherine de Medicis and so on. Why, when I speak to my wife—

Lithuania never finished. Why? Because—New York Times.

High School Correspondence

Mancelona fell before the onslaught of the Charlevoix quintet last Thursday evening to the tune of 44-26. The result of the game was a surprise to the visitors who were booted to be one of the fastest aggregation in this part of the commonwealth, that is before their appearance on the local court. The Mancelona basket ball stock fell perceptibly before the first half was well under way.

From the first blast of whistle the home five loosed from the scoring and began making the best of the time. Baskets rained specifically for 20 minutes until Charlevoix was well on the way to safety. The first half finished with 23 chalked up on the credit side for the locals and visitors 9 points in the rear. The second half opened with a renewed spirit on the part of the visitors and a little lack of endurance for Charlevoix. It took a few minutes for the local boys to round into the speed of the first half which was Mancelona's chance to make good. A chance which the readily grasped and got away with. With the spectators giving the local men some real enthusiasm and support they renewed the former attack and before the time limit was reached were far from danger zone. It was by far the fastest game ever played on the local court, at least that's what old timers say.

The High School made a trip to Northwood Saturday and succeeded in taking the second scheduled game from the country lads. The score speaks for itself. The fellows had a real old fashion supper and a good clean game although a closer game would have been appreciated.

Bellaire Independents come here Thursday on return trip. The boys for the game honor that Mancelona was unable to grasp last week. The Bellaire team is considered one of the many fast teams in the surrounding counties and should give the local men a nice speedy run for the big end of the score. The game will be called at 8:00 sharp and a curtain raiser by the high school teams will start at 7:45. The success of the local team depends on the supporters. Don't forget that part of the program, we want a full house.

A spelling league has been organized among the three leading high schools in Charlevoix county having for its purpose the promotion of better spelling in the schools. East Jordan received the highest percentage in the first lesson last Wednesday, Boyne City second and Charlevoix third. The contest will be held every week for three months.

LOST—Feb. 12, A Lady's Gold Watch, open face, monogram (M. L. W.) on the back, and a four-leaf clover green enamel clothe-pin. Please leave at Lumber Co. office—Reward.

MRS. HARRY NICHOLS.

Announcement

The Seven Wise Men of Greece
The seven wise men of Greece were Thales of Miletus (Miletus) of Athens, Chilon of Lacedemon, Bias of Priene and Pittacus of Mitylene. Some Schemers of Mitylene said a draft of cotton in a Gittsfield, Mass., mill was "Bias." When the Mitylene schemers said it contained a golden fleece, was the government claim? It was his, while the fishermen contended that they and only they took that name be in the sea. The dispute was referred to the oracle of Delphi, who awarded the crown to the wisest man in Greece. Thereupon it was taken to Thales, who declined it and suggested that it be given to Bias. He in turn refused to accept it, and thus it was unanimously decided by all the seven, and they were thereafter known as the seven wise men of Greece.

First publication Jan. 21st.

NOTICE

To the owner or owners of any and all interests in, or liens upon the lands hereinafter described:

TAKE NOTICE, That sale has been duly made of the following described land for unpaid taxes thereon, and that the undersigned has title thereto under tax deed or deeds issued therefor, and that you are entitled to redemption thereof at any time within six months after return of service of this notice, upon payment to the commissioner of the treasury in charge of the county in which the lands lie of all sums paid upon such purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional thereto, and the fee of the sheriff for the service of notice of publication of this notice, to be computed as upon personal service of a summons in an action, upon receipt of said the further sum of five dollars for each description without other additional cost or charges. If payment or tender is not made, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the land.

DESCRIPTION: The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32), township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) west, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.

Amount paid $29.46
Taxes of 1892

Yours etc.
J. L. CRANE,
Chalevoix, Michigan

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix, ss.

I, Charles Novak, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and return (after carefully reading) I am unable to ascertain the whereabouts of John Daniel Campbell, and a person entitled to be served with the within notice and after the exercise of diligence and inquiry I am unable to find the name or address of any trustee, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Daniel Campbell, upon whom service of said notice can be made. I further certify that the above notice was delivered to me for service December 7, 1914, at which time I was unable to serve it.

Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 19, 1915. My fee $1.50.

CHARLES NOVAK,
Sheriff of said County.

Religious Notes

Congregational Church
(STANDING NOTICES)
Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.
Bible School, 12 o'clock.
Young People's Meeting, 6:00 p. m.
Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT IRONTON)
Bible School at 1:30 p. m.
Preaching, 2:30 p. m.

Baptist Church
A. M.—"World Peace as taught by the Bible."
P. M.—Lecture, "The Battle with the Beast" or "The Fight for Character."
B. Y. P. U.—Topic, "Favorite Chapters of the Bible and Why."
Leader, Cecil Pool.
Bible Study.—"The Doctrine of Divine Preservation."
Prayer Meeting—"Difficult Scriptures made Easy."—Heb. 3:9-11 and Heb. 4:1-2.

Christian Science
Christian Science Society, Van Felt Hall.
Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Mind."
Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.
Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m., also 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service
8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:00 a. m.—High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Benediction service.
Masses during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church
Services second and fourth Sunday in each month, by Rev. Harris, of Petoskey.

Methodist Church.
A. M. "Scientific Faith."
P. M. "The War."

Resident of Charlevoix Co. since 1879. Graduate of East Jordan High School. Held an endorsed First Grade Certificate. Have had 14 years actual teaching experience.
County Treasurer Officer for seven years. Supervisor of 1st ward, East Jordan, 4 consecutive terms.
Taxpayer and patron of the Public Schools.
The "School of Experience" is as essential as graduation from any other school, and I believe that my experience in connection with the schools of Charlevoix County for the past twenty-one years has amply qualified me for the position of County Commissioner of Schools.
If nominated and elected I promise to show no partiality, and to give my entire time to the duties of the office.

Miss May L. Stewart,
Republican Candidate for Commissioner of Schools.

By canvassing throughout the county on different propositions, I have become acquainted with the local conditions in every district. If elected, I believe this will make it possible for me to begin the work of the office to advantage and to continue to render efficient service.

Sincerely,
MAY L. STEWART

Registration Notice

To the qualified electors of the city of Charlevoix, State of Michigan:

Notice is hereby given that at the places of holding the General Primary Election in the several wards or Election Precincts of said city, on WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, A. D. 1915 the Board of Primary Election Inspectors, in accordance with the provisions of act No. 281, Public Acts of 1909, as amended, will register the name of any person who shall on that day appear and make oath or affirmation to the effect that he is a qualified elector in such ward or election district, or when they personally know him to be such. Any person registered on any primary day, as above prescribed, shall be entitled to vote at the succeeding election without other registration.

Any qualified elector may be registered and be eligible to vote at any primary election if he shall appear in person before the city clerk and take the oath required as to qualifications for registration, and request that his name be registered.

Blanks for this form of registration can be obtained at the city clerk's office.

C. P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

The Liver Regulates the Body + Sluggish Liver Needs Care

Someone has said that people with chronic Liver Complaint should shun anyway from humanity, further they say "Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness and Constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Life Pills. 25c at your Druggist.

GLASSES FITTED
CONSULT
J. LEAHY
Optometrist
Expert on Eye Strain
Headache, Dizziness, Nervousness, and all other symptoms of Eye Strain cured.
Proper Eyes Straightened Without an Operation.
Fitting Children's Eyes a Specialty.
Difficult Cases Solicited.
Glasses Guaranteed to Fit.
Monday, March 1st
One Day
At Hotel Charlevoix

MASON'S
Grocery Department
WILL SELL FOR CASH
Feb'y. 18-19-20
One bbl Producer flour... $7.50
Quality guaranteed good---If flour don't suit, purchaser can return flour and get his money. This price is about $1.00 below the wholesale market.
12 Large Oranges.....19c
12 Clothes Pins.....1c
3 Large Boxes Toothpicks.....5c
3 Boxes 5c Ohio Matches.....10c
12 Boxes 5c Ohio Matches.....35c
4 lbs. 10c Prunes.....25c

Bargains in Coats---
Ladies' Coats at . . . $3.00
Children's Coats at . $2.00
Call and See Them
A. E. Mason's Dept. Store

10 Great Serials
The YOUTH'S COMPANION
Better Than Ever in 1915
Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and a ton of fun, Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everybody in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.
52 Times a Year —not 12.
Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for THESE GREAT ISSUES—FREE
CUT THIS OUT and send it for your name and $2.00 for The COMPANION for 1915, and we will send
FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914.
FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.
THEN The 52 Weekly issues of THE COMPANION for 1915.
SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

Grand Rapids Evening Press
DAILY
AND THE
Charlevoix Sentinel
BOTH ONE YEAR FOR
$ 3.00 $

Charlevoix Rock Product Company.
Producers and Manufacturers of
Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Fluxing
Sugar Stone.
Phone 80.

PETER BENSON
CONTRACTOR FOR
Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.
If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10¢ ASSORTED
Best Wishes, Greetings, Lovers, Birthday, etc. Also your name on our Post Card Exchange free on request, and free sample copy of the Family Story Paper; also Catalogs and Premium List. Enclose 10c stamps for return postage, etc.
FAMILY STORY PAPER
24-26 Vandewater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction Auto and Boat Supplies.
214 Bridge St. - Phone 134
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Contractor and Builder
Estimates furnished. Phone 888 Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD,
DENTIST.
Office in Dr. Pinconi's Dental Parlors
Over R. L. Lewis' Jewelry Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Office in Priest's Block
Charlevoix - Michigan

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS SHOULD USE
5 DROPS
The Doctor's Remedy.
For all forms of Rheumatism
LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, COXY, RHEUMATISM AND KIDNEY TROUBLES.
DROPS
STOP THE PAIN
SOLD AT ALL DRUGGISTS
Sample FREE on request. Address Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co. 180-186 W. Ohio St., Chicago.

LEO WISE & COMPANY
Patent Attorneys
Washington, D. C.
Highest References. Best Results. Three Offices. Write for Terms.

NOTICE!
To Whom It May Concern:
My wife, Ida Beak Bannigar, has left my bed and board without just cause or provocation. I will not be debts of her contracting from this date.
Feb. 16, 1915. Johnie Bannigar
Resto for liquor and drugs relieved in four days, inquire secretary Petoskey Y. M. C. A.
adv.—$11.40

TENANTS FOR SUMMER COTTAGES
Advertise in the
AMERICAN ISRALITE, Cincinnati, and the CHICAGO ISRALITE, Chicago.
The leading Jewish papers of the U. S.
Write for Rates.
LEO WISE & COMPANY
Patent Attorneys
Washington, D. C.

Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Sores, Wounds and Piles quickly healed with Arnica Salve. It prevents infection, is antiseptic, soothing, healing. Try it once. Money Back If It Fails.
The Original and Genuine
Bucklen's Arnica Salve
Heals the Hurt
All Druggists and Dealers, 25c.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, February 25, 1915. — NUMBER 45

A HOME BANK THE STATE SUPERVISION
In This Age of Reciprocity--
the business man prefers the bank which remembers and performs its obligations to the Public from which it draws its support.
Fully appreciative of these obligations, The Charlevoix State Savings Bank strives in legitimate ways to re-operate with the business interests, large and small, of Charlevoix and Michigan.
Extending all the facilities offered by a conservative and progressive Institution.
CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARBHA, Vice-Pres.
W. A. RACHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't. Cashier.

J. L. CRANE
Final February Clearing Sale--
Women's and Misses Coats
PRICED FOR ONE DAY ONLY-
Sat. Feb. 27th Only
Absolutely regardless of Cost or Value these final Clearing Prices are made.
One Lot Women's & Misses Coats $1.95
One Lot Women's & Misses Coats $3.95
One Lot Women's & Misses Coats $4.95
We offer for this day only—Standard Prints 3 3-4 cents yd.
10 Yards to Each Customer.

Local and Personal Notes

Frank Ackert returned home Friday after a ten day's visit in Chicago.

Mrs. Ira Adams, of Bellaire, has been visiting her parents the past week.

Miss Mary O'Leary has accepted a position as teacher in the Detroit schools.

Jules Eckert's Goodman's great play in moving pictures at the Majestic, Wednesday evening.

The Ben Hur Court, in a body, will attend services at the Baptist church next Sunday evening.

H. E. Aldrich, of Cadillac, was here over Sunday, visiting his parents, Capt. and Mrs. A. G. Aldrich.

Capt. O. E. Wilbur goes to Chicago today or tomorrow, and will return with Mrs. Wilbur sometime next week.

F. A. Kenyon, of Mackinac Island, was in the city for a short time last Thursday.

Hon. H. J. McMillan, representative, was here last Thursday, on his way home from Lansing.

S. M. See & Sons, the enterprising furniture dealers of this city, have the contract for furnishing the Beach Hotel extension.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Rachow visited Grand Rapids last week, at a celebration of the 10th anniversary of their marriage.

Custodian Gaskin complains that teams and automobiles are taking liberties in driving over the golf links, cutting up the sod thereof. He gives notice that such trespass is prohibited.

Married, at the home of the bride, on Antrim St, Monday evening, William S. Stinson, age 28, of Hayes township, to Miss Beulah Hammond, age 18, Rev. Lloyd C. Vineyard officiating.

F. E. Frasier and family who have been in Manitoba a good portion of the winter, are expected home next week. When last heard from they were in Winnipeg. Miss Frasier has fully recovered from her illness.

Congressman-elect Frank D. Scott, of Alpena, is in Washington attending the present session of congress as a member. He hopes to familiarize himself with the routine work of the house and thus be prepared for active work. He also has his office in Alpena.

Capt. Chas. Roe, of Harbor Springs, was in the city yesterday on business. Capt. Roe will sail the Columbia on the ferry route again the coming season. The Columbia had a 85,000 repuild at Manitowoc last fall and will come out this spring practically a new boat.

Manager Milca, of the Majestic Theatre, has booked a fine moving picture attraction for Wednesday evening next, in "Monica," a most touching play, teaching a most wholesome lesson. The star of the play is Miss Emma Dunn, one of the best interpreters of "Mother" characters on the American stage.

The M. E. Sunday School of our city is still showing an increase in their attendance. High water mark reached last Sunday with attendance at 320. George Sinclair and Jake Gaidecheaux are the hustlers that are doing the business and the entire city is enjoying the benefits of increased interest in Sunday School work.

It is rumored that the N. M. T. Co. are negotiating for the purchase of the steamer Missouri, now docked at Manitowoc. The officials of the "no recently looked her over. The Missouri is a steel boat considerably larger than the Manitou. One thing is certain, the line must either buy or charter something to take the place of the Manitou, lost last fall.

The weather is punning the prophets. The past week has given us a continual spring breakup, suspending lumbering operations and making travel difficult, a downward movement of the mercury Tuesday night stiffened up the roads some and there was snow in the air, but Wednesday gave the break-up continues. We are reminded that last year we had zero weather in March. Lake Michigan to the westward is clear of ice.

It is probable that Michigan farmers will plant a liberal acreage of beans next summer because of the high price of this necessary commodity. If the war continues the price bids fair to keep at a high point and if it ends there is no reason to believe that there will be any sudden drop. Beans are a staple article of food and at the present time there is no reason that a surplus will be raised. Michigan is the leading bean growing state and good money has invariably been made from the crop in past years. In this section beans can be grown at a profit, while wheat cannot be made a real paying crop on a large scale on account of the nature of the land and the cost of growing and harvesting. Next season will be a good one for the farmers and by raising crops that are most in demand that will make good money.

"Mother," at the Majestic Theatre Wednesday evening. Don't miss it.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hartwell died last Friday.

Capt. A. G. Aldrich went to Chicago Tuesday for a week's stay.

Mrs. F. M. Sears returned home Friday after a three weeks visit in Port Huron and Detroit.

Mrs. W. J. Rachow, left Saturday for Detroit, and Toronto, Ont. where she will visit friends for several weeks.

Mrs. J. S. Baker was in Chicago all last week on business connected with the furnishings of the Beach Hotel extension.

It is a positive fact, vouched for by most reliable authority, that a robin was seen near the Chicago Club last Thursday.

Patience, kindness, tenderness, love and forgiveness, are all combined in the noble word—"Mother." See the play at the Majestic, Wednesday evening, in motion pictures.

The first automobile to venture out made its appearance last Thursday. On Sunday several local cars made trips to Boyne City on the ice and found good going, but several creeks were seen.

The annual banquet of the Shakespeare Study Club, took place at the Bartlett House Tuesday evening, and was a pronounced literary, social and gastronomic success. Details next week.

Frank Wood has a valuable relic in the shape of a geography printed in 1797. The book was used by Mr. Wood's grandfather. The volume gives the date of Washington's birth as February 11th.

The firemen's masquerade ball Monday night was a big success. The boys cleaning up over $25 net. Clarence Barnett, as "Uncle Sam," won first gentleman's prize; Miss Minnie Heise won ladys' first prize; William Walters won first prize on gents' comic; Miss Louise Macy won first lady's comic.

Prof. and Mrs. Hewitt Milton Marsh, Entertainers, Impersonators, and Reel Singers will give a concert for the M. E. Church, Saturday evening, March 6th at 8:15. Prof. and Mrs. Marsh are artists of exceptional ability. Originality is their motto, to please, their goal. They appeared every night last week, on the Oakland City Chautauqua program. The Church is to be congratulated on securing such talent. Tickets while they last will be 15c & 25c.

An old fashioned spelling bee will be held at the Baptist church, Wednesday, March 3rd, at 7:30. You are invited to attend, dressed in old fashioned costume. Prizes will be voted to the lady and gentleman who is dressed in the most old fashioned style. Judge Correll will be school-master, using spelling book of fifty years ago. The spellers will spell and pronounce by syllables. Price of admission 10 cents. Tickets on sale by committee. Better buy early as the number is limited.

Sunday last being a balmy spring day, West Dixon avenue was the scene of a sleigh procession nearly all day to the new Beach Hotel, which now shows signs of completion. The fact is evident—it will be one of the front-rank summer hotels of northern Michigan, and, in point of location it beats them all. That magnificent lake view, and the brilliant sunsets, will make the house most popular with those who know and appreciate, that is saying much. The big dining room, from which will be an unobstructed west and north lake view, is a star feature of the house. The premises are a beehive of industry, and will continue to be, for the next three months, "after which the deluge."

The following opinion has been rendered by the attorney general: In the case of children who are unable to attend school because their parents cannot provide food and clothing for them, it is the duty of the supervisor of the township or the county superintendents of the poor to render the assistance necessary. The burden rests upon those officials whose duty it is to furnish necessary assistance to poor people, rather than upon the board of education. Act 138 of the public acts of 1911, authorizes the board of education to grant such relief as will enable children to attend school where the services of the children are required for the support of themselves or the assistance of the parents. This act, however has no application to cases where children are kept from school because of lack of clothing or proper food.

Announcement

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-nomination as City Treasurer, at the Republican city primaries, March 3rd.

JOHN COOK.

Announcement

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for re-nomination as City Treasurer, at the Republican city primaries, March 3rd.

JOHN COOK.

CHAS. NETTLETON IS DEAD

Charlevoix Boy, For More Than Thirty Years Chicago Business Man Died Sunday

On Monday morning D. C. Nettleton received a telegram that his eldest son, Charles died in Chicago the day previous. Mr. Nettleton states that he was unaware of the illness of his son, which makes it presumable that he died suddenly.

Charles Nettleton was born in Charlevoix. He was a grandson, on his mother's side, of the late John S. and Phoebe Dixon, and was a little more than 42 years of age. He leaves a wife and a two year old daughter.

Deceased spent his boyhood days in Charlevoix, where he received his education. In 1887 he went to Chicago and entered the employ of J. L. Hurd, in the restaurant business. He soon became a partner, and for a quarter of a century has been associated with Mr. Hurd. At one time the firm had three restaurants, but later concentrated its efforts in a very successful place near the board of trade.

Mr. Nettleton went to Chicago Tuesday morning.

ATHLETICS

The high school boys were disappointed in their game with Harbor Springs last Friday, but for that all are rounding into good shape.

The high school quintet will couple up with East Jordan Saturday night at the rink and have hopes of humbling their fast basket ball friends from the other end of the lake. East Jordan claims she has a formidable foe for any high school in this section of the state and a right smart contest is looked for.

Considerable interest is being manifested by the members of the different local fraternities in organizing basket ball teams and holding a fraternal league during the next few weeks. The Masonic fraternity and Odd Fellows have already stated their intentions and have gone so far as to have teams on their hooks, practicing. The first one of these real games will be heard and seen at the rink this week. Other organizations are asked to fall in line. Petoskey has an indoor base ball league. Why can't Charlevoix have a fraternal basket ball league?

Superiority in basket throwing and a better caliber of team work was the cause of Bellaire losing a fast basket ball game last Thursday night at the local court to Charlevoix by the score 36-19. The Bellaire contest was the third consecutive victory that the local independent quintet have chalked up for themselves in the past three weeks. The Bellaire contingent presented an entirely different class of basket ball than either of the two teams that fell before the attack of the Charlevoix men. Mancelona and Petoskey played more of an offensive game while on the contrary from the start the Bellaire team showed by their methods that they were here to play a defensive game and hold the locals to as low a count as possible. In the first half Charlevoix started with four field baskets to their credit before the visitors were ready on their feet. As soon as Bellaire found themselves the game took on a different color and before the close of the twenty minutes of play Charlevoix was in the lead only by three points.

The second half was a repetition of the first with the locals outvoting the Bellaire men in all stages of the game. In the basket throwing phase of the game Kirby coupled anything that yet been produced on the local court making the majority of the counts and playing his opponent to a stand still. Charlevoix threw nine field baskets during this half to Bellaire's four.

The quality of the game as displayed by the visitors is undoubtedly the best that has been seen on the local floor this season.

The outcome of the game was in doubt until the last three minutes of play when a sudden spurt of passing and basket throwing the home team were able to creep away for a satisfactory margin.

Announcement

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for city treasurer at the republican primaries to be held March 3d. I have resided in Charlevoix 30 years and have never before sought office. My upright and resulting illness justify me in asking support for the office. If elected I will give my best attention to the duties of the office. WM H. COOPER

The Liver Regulates the Body + Sluggish Liver Needs Care

Someone has said that people with Chronic Liver Complaint should shun anyway from humanity, further they say "Why? Because mental states depend upon physical states. Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness and Constipation disappear after using Dr. King's New Life Pills. 25c at your Druggist.

HISTORICAL BANQUET

Pioneer Society Honors Lincoln's Natal Day In Annual Feast —Enjoyable Event

The Lincoln Banquet given by the Charlevoix Historical Society at the parlors of the M. E. Church on the evening of the 19th proved to be one of the best entertainments ever held in this city.

The life of Abraham Lincoln from infancy to manhood was portrayed in story and estimate in a manner most attractive and entertaining.

The Old "time melodies" by the quartette awoke the echoes of the long ago and received most hearty encore.

The story of Lincoln: the boy Lincoln, Lincoln the rail splitter, the lawyer, the cash of office as President, the address at Gettysburg, the decree of emancipation, interspersed by most happy and appropriate references by the toastmaster, all reflected credit on the various participants and amply demonstrated that we have in our whole talent abundant material with which to present a first class entertainment.

The various episodes in the life of Lincoln were most ably presented but it remained for the last grand tableau to present a scene to fire the heart of youth and stir the stagnant blood of age whereon Lincoln as President and Commander-in-Chief of our army and navy gave the command to Mars and the Goddess of Liberty to sheathe the keenest blade while liberty justifies and the Angel of Peace glorifies this final, though related act of justice to a downtrodden race.

"The stars in our banner shone brightly." The scene disbanded and the work of the immortal Lincoln was finished.

To the Executive Committee of the Charlevoix Historical Society, is due unstinted praise of every person who witnessed this most superb production.

BEAVER ISLAND GIRL MARRIED

Miss Anna Gallagher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Gallagher became the bride of Capt. Peter Green of St. James, Mich., at St. Patrick's church, Chicago, at 8:00 o'clock Tuesday morning, Feb. 16th.

Miss Josie MacDonald, a cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid while Capt. Ben Gallagher attended the groom. Miss Leona Gallagher, sister of the bride acted as flower girl and Leo Gallagher, brother, as ring bearer.

The bride was gowned in a beautiful dress of white satin with a chiffon overdress and carried a shower bouquet of roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in pink crepe de meteor.

After the ceremony the bridal party went to the family home of the bride at 319 North Oak street, where an elaborate wedding breakfast was served to their many relatives and close friends. The home was tastily decorated with smilax and white hyacinth and presented a very beautiful appearance. Miss Jessie MacDonald caught the bride's bouquet.

The happy couple left on the 10:50 train for a wedding trip to western points.

Mr. and Mrs. Green received many beautiful gifts. The bride has been a resident of Ironwood for the past few months and has won many friends, while the groom is a lake captain. After the social couple left on their journey the guests returned to the home of the bride where the afternoon and evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner, many musical selections were rendered and all the guests joined in dancing.

A GREAT CLUBBING OFFER

To new subscribers, or those paying one full year in advance we will send the SENTINEL and the Grand Rapids Daily Evening Press for $3.00.

To this we will throw in one of those handy kitchen implements.

OAKLEY D. HAMMOND

Republican Candidate for Nomination for the Office of County Road Commissioner

To the Voters of Charlevoix County:

As a candidate for re-election to this most important office, I would like to call your attention to the work I have done during the past two years:

During the year 1913, I built three and one-fourth miles of 9-foot macadam road on what is known as the Charlevoix and East Jordan road, for which this county received a check for $5,253.00 as state reward. I was appointed $7,227.70 for the building of this road, and after the work was done, had $2,505.07 left over.

During the year 1914, I built two miles of 15 foot screened gravel road, for which the county has already received $1,600.00 as state reward. This was built on what is known as the Emmet and Grand Traverse state road. I was appointed $5,035.94 for the building of this road, and after the road was completed, had $1,326.41 left over.

During the year 1913 I built one-fourth of a mile of road more than was given me to build that year, and in 1914 I also completed the two miles given me. Whether this was due to "good luck" or my ability as a road builder, I leave to the voters of the county to decide at the ballot box. When the question is asked of me how I accomplished this, there is but one answer, and that is that I am on the job when the men start to work in the morning, and also there when they quit at night. There is but one boss on the job, and that is the man whom the people pay as county road commissioner.

In asking for re-election to this office, I believe I am better qualified to fill it than I was two years ago. Due fact that I desire to call your attention to, is that the knowledge of road building I have attained during the past two years will be of great value, not only to me, but to the tax payers of Charlevoix county.

It has been impossible for me to see every voter in the county during the present campaign. If the office of county road commissioner paid a salary of two years' running, I might be in a position to devote more time and money to by campaign. As it does not, I ask you to carefully look over my record while in office. If in your opinion I deserve to be re-elected, your support at the primary March 3rd will be greatly appreciated.

Oakley D. Hammond.

THE LECTURE COURSE

The Charlevoix Lecture Course has a treat in store for the patrons on Friday night, March 26, 1915. Rogers & Grilley give a recital that has not been equaled on the lecture platform for many years. Their program is selected with special care, and embraces what is best and choicest in the realm of literature and music.

The program opens with a selection in the harp, followed by a group of impersonations and original selections from Mr. Grilley in which the listener is carried from the sublime to the ridiculous.

Rogers & Grilley has played in all the large cities of the United States with marked success. Both men are artists in their line of work and they make a unique and delightful evening.

Reserve seats at the Central Drug Store, Thursday at seven p. m. Remember that new reservations must be made for this number and that the old slips for the Music Makers cannot be used for this number.

No definite arrangements have as yet been made with the Redpath Bureau in reference to the substitution or appearance of the Music Makers. We are trying this matter and hope to make announcement at Rogers & Grilley on Friday night. Lecture Committee.

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harbha.

Eat, Drink and be Merry, for Tomorrow Ye Die!
may be tempting advice sometimes. The only trouble is that you may be a terribly long time dead. Meanwhile you may have leisure a-plenty in which to regret the squandered shekels.
Better take our advice and start a bank account so as to have some comfort during that long tomorrow.
We pay 4% on Savings accounts
Charlevoix County Bank
of Nicholls, Buttars and Bridge
JOHN NICHOLLS, President. A. F. BRIDGE, Cashier.
A. BUTTARS, Vice President. H. O. MORRAN, Asst. Cashier.

MEXICO LOOKS IN VAIN FOR STRONG MAN

MEXICO'S plight is more serious than it has been in the glorious days of Madero or Huerta. Mere war over the spoy is a blood-petty leaders, subject to the loot of wandering irregular troops, governed only by chiefs having the allegiance of a section of the populace, the intelligent men and women among her fifteen millions see no ray of sunshine, no light at Juarez appearing to restore order with a strong hand. Disputes from the agents of the United States government to the officials of the Mexican government are not pleasant reading for the friends of Mexico.

If there is one man of whom the Americans interested in Mexico have hope it is Senor Villarreal. He enlisted early in the cause of Carranza's constitutionalists and was fighting steadily up to the date of the taking of Monterey, the capture of which he assisted. Then he was appointed governor of Nuevo Leon. He was mentioned many times for his part in the conference at Torreon, which followed the first open break between Carranza and Villa and later Carranza offered him the post of war minister.

He acted as president of the second or Aguascalientes convention, it will be remembered. Carranza, when he began his short period of glory in Mexico City, made Villarreal minister of finance, but Villarreal became disgusted with the ineptitude of the Carranza crowd and resigned.

Villarreal is quiet and unassuming in manner, and this music more in Mexico than it would in the United States. He is thirty-eight years old, well educated, and speaks good English, having been a school teacher.

When a youth he became involved in a dispute with a rival to a certain woman's affections and killed him.

He served four years in the penitentiary. But with this he has the cleanest record of any man in Mexico who is in a position of power.

Villarreal once was editor of a Spanish paper published in Texas. He is daring and at the same time tactful. He is not anti-patriotic toward Americans, either, and frequently goes out of his way to accommodate them. In his bold Yankeeism and hatred of shams he is much more like an American than any of the other Mexican leaders.

Carranza and Villa both like Villarreal, and he is the only man that they both like. Villa he has always protected foreigners and even forbade the publication of anti-American articles in Monterey, he was much hurt by the presence of American troops in Vera Cruz. This was the one thing which stood in the way of his approval of things American.

As to Villa, he has long ago become familiar in ability and character to Americans. He is a great military genius but not civil executive, and he knows it. His game now is to be the power behind the throne—to rule through the de facto Mexico City president, Eulalio Gutierrez. If Villa ever succeeds in overcoming the presidential chair he will probably travel the rest of the road of Diaz, Huerta and Carranza in short order.

Before the present trouble started Gutierrez was a watchman employed by the big Mazapil Copper company of Zacatecas. This concern owns factories, mines and railroads. It is the property of Rockefeller.

Gutierrez made himself a power in the constitutionalist party rather by destroying property than by actual hard fighting. He became dictator of the Zacatecas district and set out to vamp his old employer, General Manager Perey Carr of the Mazapil Copper company, who, of course, had never heard of Gutierrez while the latter was a humble watchman.

The copper company was the proprietor of the railroad running to Zacatecas and had made that road its main line to the sea. Gutierrez' specialty of ruining houses, bridges and railroads earned for him the title of "the Destroyer." He never dreamed any such military ability as Villa; but destruction is popular with the Mexican soldiery, it must be remembered.

Gutierrez plundered and robbed with slight heed to what Carranza and Villa were doing. He seized property of Americans and got it to his own purposes, while Carranza ignored protests, despite his title of first chief.

Last July he sent word to Carr, ordering him to resume all the Mazapil industries at once. It must be remembered that the British company had been closed down for months. There was no fuel, no cars, no railroad tracks, and there was no financial basis. In the order from the watchman road to "start up the works, as North Mexico is now pacified and there is no excuse for delay."

It was a physical impossibility, so Carr went to Gutierrez and explained the situation. Carranza informed Carr he could delay resumption, and for this Gutierrez seized 3,000,000 worth of cattle owned by the company and sought to sell it to a contraband, in which he probably succeeded.

Carranza has degenerated into the head of a band of looters. The scenes accompanying his evacuation of Mexico City, it is learned, were disgraceful. The national treasury was robbed of all except 100,000 pesos, which must have been overlooked. Every ounce of gold and silver in the mint was taken. Also there went printing presses, plates and the entire stock of bank notes paper in the government printing office. The public offices were stripped of furniture, inkstands, typewriters, furniture, rugs, carpets and curtains. Even the huge presidential chair in the National palace was seized and borne off. It is estimated that automobiles valued at three million pesos at least were taken out of the city, many of them commandeered from private citizens and foreigners.

At the Buena Vista station of the Mexican railway train after train drew out in the direction of Vera Cruz laden down with every conceivable sort of plunder—motors, furniture, horses, pianos, paintings and safes. Even Huerta was not thorough.

The now ridiculous Carranza is set up at Vera Cruz. His causes is hopeless from the start. Among remaining leaders, however, Gen. Alvaro Obregon looms large. He is undoubtedly a strong man. He has kept Gen. Lucio Blanco in line for Carranza and saw that the retreat from Mexico City was not a rout. However, Obregon is a plunderer like the rest.

Another man who should not escape mention is Governor Jose Maria Maytorena of Sonora, whose men have been resisting the Carranza general, Hill, in Nogales. Maytorena is supreme and he is half Indian, and he is not friendly toward Americans, and there is a wholesome respect among the American army officers along the border that Maytorena could by a word have prevented the snipers' bullets which killed and wounded 12 persons from coming over the international boundary line at Naco. So far he has controlled his Sonoran followers, but if Maytorena ever decides to follow the path from the north of most of Mexico's conquerors from the time of Juarez it may be with no mean army.

SCIENCE IN ITS EARLY YEARS

Efforts of Truly Great Men Largely Nullified by the Work of the Sophists.

And so it happened that about 450 B. C. there arose Socrates, who, by his wide sagacity and the persistent enthusiasm with which he carried on investigation, earned the title of the father of sciences. And so, also, shortly after, Hippocrates, by communicating his knowledge to writing, brought into existence the first scientific manuscript. The sixth century, like the seventh, was still a period of origins. It saw the physical researches of Pythagoras, and the historical studies of Hecataeus. In the fifth century Greek learning reached its climax. This age was predominant with the names of Thucydides, who wrote history with critical care; of Heraclitus, who conceived of a universal reign of law, and of Hippocrates, the Father of Medicine. Its greatest character was Democritus, the Democritus, questioning sage of the market place of Athens. With ever burning enthusiasm for truth, this great teacher attempted, by wit and rapier dialectic, to aid men to make their concepts clear, and to give words definite meanings, trusting that through the correct use of the reason they would arrive at a recognition of superiority of right actions. The fourth century was both an advance and a decline; it comprised the work of Plato and Aristotle, the one elaborating the concepts of Socrates with poetic power, the other systematizing his knowledge in truly scientific form. But in this age the demand for brilliant superficial learning as an asset for climbers led to the rise of the Sophists. These people, by their careless, sweeping generalizations and their rhetorical embellishment, turned the Greek mind aside from the simple pursuit of truth, and enhanced it in unprofitable speculations.—Engineering Magazine.

American Dentist in Europe.

But let me tell you about the American dentist in the European war. The hospital physicians told me that he is noticed early in his war work that many of the soldiers were suffering from toothache more than from their wounds. So every wounded man was examined by a dentist before he was taken to the ward. It was discovered that a large percentage of the men from the trenches had swollen gums, and that by treating their mouths they were cured and ready for the front ten days earlier than in cases where their teeth were allowed to go. The English, he said, had the worst teeth, the Arabs the best.—"Here and There in Belgium," Contributed by Peter Mac Queen, in National Magazine.

Botanical Curiosity.

Since 1893, when Prof. John Muirhead Macfarlane, now director of the botanical garden at the University of Pennsylvania, found that the leaves of the plant known as the Venus fly trap still close up, off if the bigest bugs are disturbed twice in succession, very little has been learned about the physiology of this curious insect-catching plant. During the past year, however, some new experiments have been made that bring its behavior into line with the behavior of animals in certain respects. The leaves are sensitive to mechanical disturbances, to electrical stimulation and to the sudden increase in temperature as through the application of warm water. At ordinary temperatures it takes two stimulations to get up the response, but at higher temperatures one "shock" will cause the leaf to close. At ordinary temperatures the electric shock will produce the effect if it is strong enough.

Wonderful Wireless.

There is apparently no limit to the future possibilities of the wireless. Wireless storm warnings and general weather forecasts for ships at sea, covering conditions 100 miles off shore along the entire Atlantic coast, was inaugurated by the United States navy department on July 15, 1913. Direct wireless communication between America and Asia was established by the completion of stations in Siberia and Alaska, the stations being about 100 miles apart. Today no vessel of any consequence plies the oceans without its system of wireless, and it is fortunate for humanity that the news of the present European war is well known.

London's First Ambulance.

London, which has never yet had an ambulance, has at last ordered six of them, and expects them to do all the work for the entire city. In one of most accidents the policemen have had to commandeer the nearest wagon, depending on the generosity of the driver, so they were not able to offer him anything.

TRACED TO PHYSICAL CAUSES

Experiments Concerning Sleep and Kindred Unconsciousness Are Interesting.

Experimental investigations do not yet wholly prove—because they are not yet completed—but go far toward showing that the analogues to animals, hypnosis and mesmerism in some man and the human sleep in everybody are induced by releasing into the flowing vital stream of blood and lymph some peculiar juice or fluid. There is in the living organism some secret "hormone" or gland stuff which is freed at night in the case of normal sleep. Ever release the other stuff that is "hypnotic and suggestion, as well as fear, cause a the floodtide in the matter of catalepsy and hypnosis.

Hypnotic sleep is certain, type of insanity, such as dementia praecox, thyroid insufficiences and others where post-catalepsy and true catalepsies occur, it has long been understood that various parts of human physiology were out of order. The thyroid, parathyroids, adrenals and other glands are often then found in distress.

First "Typewriter."

So long ago as 1714 a patent was taken out in England by Henry Mill for "a machine for impressing letters singly and progressively as in writing, whereby all writings may be engraved in paper so exactly as not to be distinguished from print." His machine was very clumsy and practically useless, however.

MARRIAGE AS A VOCATION

Writer Thinks, However, That Preparation Should Be Made for It by Training.

Marriage should be looked upon as a profession and not a mere avocation, argues one who signs herself "Feminist" in a recent letter addressed to one of the daily papers. The writer, who had married a teacher, but who is now a mother, has been surprised that because a wife and mother is a "profession, she should be expected to do all of those duties requires all way at first and all her time. "Feminist" thinks that women generally do not realize this or refuse to face it, that young women contemplating matrimony should be made to realize that they are choosing a profession quite as important as medicine, law or business, and that if possible, a preparatory course should be required before granting the contents to practice the profession of wife and mother. This sounds very well and would be admirable if it could be carried through. But as there are two paths in marriage it would be very easy indeed if the woman received all the training. A good, stiff preparatory course for the young man contemplating the profession of husband and father would be quite as useful in order. If we have one, let us have the other, sir.—Francis Fraser in Leslie's Weekly.

Seek Treasure in Paris.

Wealthy Parisians have sought an entire block of houses in that city, and will tear them down to build a Roman and Gothic treasure.

Attacks Taney's Pet Log.

Attacked by a tramp whom she had allowed to enter her home to drink a cup of coffee, Mrs. Peter F. Loree, of Rosemont, North side, was rescued by a large English setter, the property of her friend.

The dog, which answers to the name of Victor, viciously attacked the tramp and tore his wooden leg from the stump. Unable to stand on the sidewalk he was captured by the police.—Pittsburgh Dispatch to Philadelphia Record.

TOUCHED BY ROYAL APOLOGY

Great Painter Appreciated Act of English Prince, Afterward King William IV.

Audacity irresistibly attracts me and the man of striking, original character is an object of universal interest.

In the economy of his household Jamie Northcote, the English portrait painter, was sordid, yet lords and ladies fed at his cheerless board. Impoverished, litterbugged and ill-swept studio with an exceedingly popular young actor sat in him. The favorite was convoked by the duke of Clarence (afterward William IV) to Argyll place in his own carriage, and his royal highness lingered to see the progress of the work—and probably to study the painter.

"The dose gown in which he paints sat," says one of Northcote's biographers, "was grimmedly made of the shreds and patches, and might perchance be half a century old; his white hair was sparingly bestowed on each side, and his cranium was entirely bald.

"The royal visitor, standing behind him while he painted, first gently lifted, or rather twitched, the collar of the gown, which Northcote resented by suddenly turning and expressing his displeasure by a frown; on which his royal highness, touching the professor's gray locks, said:

"You don't devote much time to the toilet, I perceive.

"Sir, the painter instantly replied, I never allow angels to have royal liberties with me; you are the first that ever presumed to do so, and I beg your royal highness to recollect that I am in my own house."

The man who presented his painting: the prince stood silent for a minute or two, regretted the liberty and took away. The royal carriage, however, had not arrived, and rain falling, he was compelled to borrow an umbrella, and departed.

"Year 'ence," Northcote, said one of the ladies, "I fear you have offended his royal highness."

"Madam," said the painter, "I am the offended party.

"The next day, about noon, Mr. Northcote was alone, when a gentleman was heard, the sitting door opened, and in walked the prince.

"Mr. Northcote, he said, I am come to return your umbrella; I brought it myself, that I might have an opportunity of saying that yesterday I thoughtlessly took an unbecoming liberty with you, which you properly resented. I really am angry with myself, and hope you will forgive me, that I may be easy in mind.

"And what did you say?" inquired a friend to whom he recounted the story.

"Say!" repeated Northcote. "What could I say? I only bowed; he might see what I felt. I could at that moment have sacrificed my life for him. Such a prince is worthy to be a king."

The prince afterward, in his blunt manner said, "He is an honest, independent little old fellow."—Youth's Companion.

Noise That Least Annoys.

The question of the effect of noises on people is a practical point of view, and with special reference to automobile horns and whistles, Dr. Lefessor Marage at a recent meeting of the academy of medicine, in Paris, suggested the subject by executing pieces of music upon ancient and modern instruments, including the bagpipe, the hurdy-gurdy, the cornemuse, the violin, the flute, the trumpet, the horn, the tuba, the cornet, the clarinet, the saxophone, the bassoon, the hautbois, the tambourine, the drum, the cymbals, the triangle, the castanets, the tambourine, the drum, the cymbals, the triangle, the castanets, the tambourine, the drum, the cymbals, the triangle, the castanets

Double Stamp Day Saturday, Feb. 27th

On all purchases made on SATURDAY, FEB. 27th we will give Double "S & H" Green Stamps. This means that you will get double the amount in "S & H" Stamps that you purchase. No matter if you buy a Ladies Coat at half price you will get DOUBLE STAMPS.

Go to ---LEVINSON'S--- Get the Habit

BERLIN GUARDING FOOD SUPPLIES

Seeking to Avoid Possibility of a Bread Shortage.

PARIS FAMINE RECALLED.

France Did Not Expect Wonderful Succession of Victories in 1871 by German Invasion—Fate of All Kinds Went From Cage and Kennel to Oven and Soup Kettle.

While an order for an extraordinary limitation of the amounts of flour and bread to be sold at Berlin and other German cities sounds somewhat startling, it seems to be generally accepted as new evidence of the methodical policy of the Germans to prevent all waste and thus avoid the possibility of a bread famine at any time previous to the harvesting of this year's crop of cereals. No mention is made of limitations of sale and consumption of other food material, but it is a matter of statement that, while there is an abundance of vegetables and roots, a new spring production of which will soon be due, the supply of all kinds of meats is rapidly decreasing with meager means for replenishment.

While this condition at Berlin is in no way parallel, nor any approach to it, of those months of 1870-71 when the German armies besieged Paris, it cannot fail to recall that memorable season of extreme distress in the French capital. France declared war against Prussia July 19, 1870. Germany accepted the challenge and promptly threw into the field three armies, totaling half a million men, with strong reserves. King William, Crown Prince Frederick, Von Moltke and Prince Frederick Charles at once took command, and Emperor Napoleon III. appointed Empress Eugenie regent and also took the field.

Succession of Defeats.

The first battle was at Weissenberg, Aug. 4, and the French suffered a disastrous defeat. At Worth, Aug. 6, the Prussians, under the crown prince, gave Marshal MacMahon's forces a terrible drubbing. Seven fierce battles led to the culmination with the surrender at Sedan, Sept. 2, and the capture of Napoleon, and the subsequent victories of the Prussians at Strassburg and Metz, and by Sept. 19, exactly two months after the French declaration of war, Paris was completely invested.

Little or no effort had been made to lay in stores of food. No such order as that now given at Berlin was made for the conservation of food materials. France did not expect and the world did not expect the marvelous succession of lightning like victories scored by the Germans. It was unprecedented warfare and seemed like some terrible act of magic.

Within a few weeks starvation stared Parisians in the face on all sides and among all classes. The Germans had cut off all supplies. Government notably in hands the capitulation which came Jan. 28, 1871. By that time Paris was starving, and the outbreak of the communists following the declaration of peace, with its transfer of Alsace and Lorraine and a money mulct of 5,000,000,000 francs ($1,000,000,000), did not mend the precise condition.

Of breadstuffs there was little to be had for any price. Somewhat more were broken into by the starving populace. Forays were made upon suburban truck gardens, but these had been denuded by the investing armies. It was almost impossible for the members of the new Thiers-Gambetta government at Versailles to get half adequate supplies for themselves and for the soldiers who were fighting the revolutionists in Paris. Ordinary sources of meat supplies had been exhausted for weeks.

Horses Killed For Food.

Horses of the city and those that had been brought in from the defeated army, emaciated as they themselves were for want of fodder, were killed for human food, but that was no new thing for Parisians, nor is it in this day. Dogs mysteriously disappeared and proportionally meat as mysteriously appeared on some of the tables of homes and restaurants, and no questions were asked.

Pets of all kinds went from cage and kennel and corner to oven and soup kettle. It is an old story of a Pittsburgh student coming in the Latin quarter that the rats grew fewer and fewer every day. At last the only live thing in sight was a pet cat. That disappeared one night and there was "rabbit" for dinner the next day. No history could ever tell the tale of that amazing period in "Gay Paree." It is doubtless impossible that with the most successful and tragic of invasions of any enemy Berlin can ever have an experience approaching that which Germany threat on the French capital in 1871.

From Belgian Trenches!

A cartier pigeon dropped from the roof of a building in Wilkesbarre, Pa., and Fred Jacobs, who found it, discovered a message tied about the bird's neck, which purported to have been written by a German soldier in the Belgian trenches. It read: "Dear Wife: I am alive and well in the trenches of Belgium, but your brother has been killed."

...A... CAREER

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Edward Wilkins was a farmer boy who when he was but seven years old showed signs of a towering ambition. Even at that tender age he discerned that, while there were a number of sources of power, the one that covered the widest field was wealth. At any rate, he saw persons living in fine houses and driving about in style, and he not only envied them, but resolved that as soon as he was able to accumulate money it should be the object of his life.

When Edward was fourteen he said good by to his father and mother and went to the city to begin a career. Being bright and ready at all times for work, he found a situation and not only kept it, but advanced rapidly. As he grew older there was no desire in him for money in itself, but for the power and prominence it would give him. Except for the first few years he spent in the city, he did not accumulate by saving. The fortune that came to him was the result rather of daring operations, for which he seemed to have a genius.

After a while Edward Wilkins had accumulated so much money that it seemed impossible he should ever be poor. His safety lay in having so much capital that he could carry through any scheme he undertook. If he wished to buy all the corn in the country and hold it at his own price he was able to do so. Did he choose to buy a railway he could first depress the stock, then purchase it and hold it at his own valuation.

Wilkins had no desire to exercise the power his wealth gave him. He was content with knowing that he possessed it. He did not care for political preferment, he took no interest in influencing the course of the government. When the great number of his years of age he had reached the summit of his ambition. All his life he had enormous power through his wealth, but since the exercise of that power would give him no enjoyment he had come to the end of his desires. He was like Alexander, who complained because there were no more kingdoms to conquer.

When an active brain tires of what has occupied and fed it there comes a craving for something to take its place. One such person will spend years building a sumptuous residence, which is more likely to be a sepulcher than a home. Another will turn on their taking comfort in giving to the world theories for which it has no use. Wilkins, now that he had reached his goal in half a lifetime, began to wonder what would be the end of the other half. After a continued rise to the summit would he descend again to end his career in the valley?

One thing he had lived long enough to recognize. Life appeared to him a constant shifting. Nothing seemed to endure unless it was insolvent, and even that, though short, was continually changing its form. There were mountains where there had been valleys and valleys where there had been mountains. Cities had been buried for centuries, forgotten, then uncovered to serve as curiosities. Whole sections of land had slid down from the sea and passed out of sight.

What would become of his great fortune? He knew that after his death it would pass into the great ocean of wealth. But would he retain it for the rest of his life? Now that he had achieved it he no longer valued it and cared not to much what was to become of it as what was to become of him. Enough to give him the ordinary comforts essential to old age was all he desired. But that much was of great moment to him.

One night he dreamed a vivid dream. He dreamed that he returned to the farm and was a boy again. Yet he possessed all the experience he had acquired. His ambition was gone. He kept it, but admired reality. As he grew older there was no desire in him for money in itself, but for the power and prominence it would give him. Except for the first few years he spent in the city, he did not accumulate by saving. The fortune that came to him was the result rather of daring operations, for which he seemed to have a genius.

After a while Edward Wilkins had accumulated so much money that it seemed impossible he should ever be poor. His safety lay in having so much capital that he could carry through any scheme he undertook. If he wished to buy all the corn in the country and hold it at his own price he was able to do so. Did he choose to buy a railway he could first depress the stock, then purchase it and hold it at his own valuation.

Wilkins had no desire to exercise the power his wealth gave him. He was content with knowing that he possessed it. He did not care for political preferment, he took no interest in influencing the course of the government.

When the great number of his years of age he had reached the summit of his ambition. All his life he had enormous power through his wealth, but since the exercise of that power would give him no enjoyment he had come to the end of his desires. He was like Alexander, who complained because there were no more kingdoms to conquer.

When an active brain tires of what has occupied and fed it there comes a craving for something to take its place. One such person will spend years building a sumptuous residence, which is more likely to be a sepulcher than a home. Another will turn on their taking comfort in giving to the world theories for which it has no use.

ONE MAN'S TRIUMPH

By CLARIBEL WILSON.

"Jim Halsey, six foot two, broad, stalwart, was the most picturesque figure that ever walked into Wall street. At the age of thirty-two he had gone out of Alaska with a cool fifteen million, gained during a period of seven years that had elapsed since he went North from Idaho, a country storekeeper's assistant with a longing for adventure.

The same qualities of nerve which had stood him in such good stead among the miners continued to accompany him when he came to New York. Finally, however, a combination was set on foot against him. And, after a Homeric battle of seven days, in which sums were staggered at a rate unknown before, Jim found himself with the price of his hotel bill, a ticket back to Nome and $200 in bills.

"Jim Halsey was wiped out. The evening newspapers announced it in red type. And Jim was pondering over the situation.

For himself he cared nothing at all. But for Anne McLaughlin he cared everything. And he had to tell her McLaughlin had been a picturesque figure—too picturesque to be admitted into New York's entire but the needy of the widow, aided by a million dollars, had won a way for herself and her daughter.

Mrs. McLaughlin had spent her capital in a year. A million will go a good ways in a three-years' campaign, if it is supposed to be supported by other millions behind it. Nobody knew that the McLaughlin fortune was down to the last fifty thousand. But everybody knew that Agnes McLaughlin had been the most beautiful eligible of Forrest and America during the last three years. Incidentally, that is her Jim.

He was admitted to the rented house on 79th Street. He thought the butler looked a little cordiality at him. The maids, in fact, peered at him through of the bannister. Mrs. McLaughlin, who had condoned a very little wrong in the light of previous failures and her dwindling capital, had the sense of a second triumph.

"Are You a Fool, or What's the Matter With You?"

or of a man who has staked his last penny on the favorite at the races, and lost.

The mother sailed into the room, alone he had met her last, and said all her resentment flashed out in her bitter reproach.

"Is it true, what the papers say that you are a pauper?" she demanded in accents of indescribable indignity. All the cancer of 20 years had vanished, and she was again—well, the type of woman that she had been when McLaughlin fascinated with her bold beauty, had married her.

"Yes, it's true," admitted Jim, with a smile. "I didn't take it to heart, Mrs. McLaughlin. Of course, this will mean the postponement of our marriage. And I shall have to scrape together another million in Alaska."

"Postponement!" shrilled the woman, roughly. "Do you suppose Anne is going to marry you now?"

"Why, of course, I do," answered Jim, looking at the woman in bewilderment.

"A penniless pauper!" she sneered. "Of course it is hard on her," admitted Jim. "But really, Mrs. McLaughlin, there were no monetary considerations involved in our engagement."

Mrs. McLaughlin actually snapped her fingers under Jim's nose.

"See here, young man, I'm going to talk straight to you," she said. "I don't know whether you're bluffing or just a fool, but I mean Anne to marry a man with a wad of money. What do you think she took you for? For your good looks? Are you a fool, or what's the matter with you?"

Jim felt as helpless before this outburst of rage as a wild beast in a trap.

"If your daughter release me, of course I shall accept the decision," he answered quietly.

"Will we'll soon see about that!" screamed the woman. She pushed the bell and the butler appeared. Upon his face was a most hardly disguised. It was evident that he had been listening to the conversation at the door. "Tell Miss Agnes to come here at once," she said.

Agnes McLaughlin came in and her mother turned to her with a furious gesture.

"This man is a pauper, Agnes," she said. "And he thinks he is going to marry you. He won't take the truth from me. Tell him what you have just told me, Aggie."

The girl turned to Halsey. "I cannot marry you," she said. "I understand that finally. I never loved you."

"Then you—you only wanted my money," demanded Jim.

"Me for myself!" cried the girl with a sudden vehement outburst. "For my mother! I have been on her knees years. Everybody has known it but you."

"Aggie! What are you talking about?" cried her mother in amazed wrath.

"I will speak now," answered the girl. "I have been taken round the matrimonial showrooms of Europe and America for three years. My mother has spent nearly a million dollars on me, in the expectation of getting it back, and more. You were the last chance, for our money is nearly gone."

"How dare you speak like that!" cried Mrs. McLaughlin furious.

"Because it is the truth," replied the daughter. "Did I love you, Jim? I never thought of love. I only thought of doing my duty and repaying the money that has been advanced on me. We don't love, we of the fashionably rich class. We marry to sell ourselves to the men we can intoxicate. That was why I accepted you."

"The girl has gone mad!" exclaimed Mrs. McLaughlin, with upraised hands.

"Transcript."

But if Timmons was listening discreetly at the door, he evidently judged this an inopportune moment to enter in answer to the call.

"That was why I became engaged to you, Jim," continued Agnes McLaughlin. "And I thought I was doing my duty. But I found her voice softened involuntarily—it was only when I thought that you were going to Jim, that I realized, that I began to realize what it would be like to break the heart of an honest man. For you would have found me a poor marriage. Jim, I was ready to do you the greatest wrong a woman can do a man. I realized that when I saw that yours was not the veneer of courtesy, which I have grown accustomed to, but the love of a good man. And many and many a time I was half tempted to call Jim to you and confess. Now you know all and there is nothing left to say."

She turned toward the door, and Jim, gazing the mother, who stood apparently paralyzed, beside the table, followed her and caught her by the wrists.

"And now—you will sell yourself to some other man?" he demanded hoarsely.

"Oh, I suppose so," she answered wearily. "But I'll get the money"—she gave a hysterical little laugh—"if the mater does not give out before mother can find one."

Jim slatery suddenly laughed, and he was at that moment that he showed best the qualities which had given him success. For to his hearer there was the challenge of a strong man who refuses to accept the buffet of fate, and it rallied her from her despair.

"Too poor child!" he said tenderly. "Do you suppose that I am going to let this happen to you? I am going to marry you—do you understand that, Agnes? I am going to marry you, and I am going to earn you fifty—"

"I came here tonight with the intention of offering to release you. And not believing that your love, in which I believed, was false—because I planned to tell you that in two or three years I could come back to New York with another fortune. I was going to ask you to wait two years. Now I am going to take you away with me, if—"

"Timmons! Timmons!" exclaimed the mother feebly, as she clung to the table. But Timmons did not come. In fact, he was not even at the door. The discreet butler was, instead, recounting the incident to the servants' apartments.

"If what!" whispered the girl, raising her eyes to his with an expression that Jim had never seen in them before—it was love.

"If you think that you can learn to love me some day," said Jim, "if you think you can do that, instead of love, that I know what you have gone through! Why, many and many a man sells himself, too, back and forth, in the struggle of life. But if you can love me, dear—"

"Oh, I can!" cried the girl impulsively. "I love you, Jim. I think I have always loved you. But I didn't know what love was until—you taught me, Jim.

And that was Jim Halsey's greatest of all triumphs, which he remembered afterward when his career was upon all lips as that of the man who had "come back."

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

Garden of Eden.

The idea and imagery of a Garden of Eden, as the cradle of a race, came from the Sumerians, who had far more imagination than the Semites in the early tablets prove. The Semites, who came from the northwest and invaded eastward, placed their Garden of Eden on the upper Euphrates, as the real cradle of their race, between Ashi and Hilt, and upstream of the division into four branches in the plain.

Bitter Plaint.

Being without money and friends, the accused was assigned an attorney by the court. Despite his lawyer's efforts a conviction resulted. Calling the convicted man before him, the judge asked: "Have you anything to say before I pass sentence?" "Yes, your honor. It looks to me like some people were—nothing so damned—are in cahoots. I am not forgetting who inflicted that lawyer on me."

Difference in Will Horses.

Wild horses in Arabia will not admit a tame horse among them, but the wild horses of South America endeavor to decoy domesticated horses from their masters, and seem eager to welcome them.

Forward Movement Feared.

"Why did the new cook quit in such a hurry?" "Guess she saw me look at her mashing."

New Model in a Dress for the Miss

CAN you imagine anything more simple, more novel, or more chic than this dress of brown broadcloth and sand-colored crepe de chine, for a young girl? If you can, listen to reduce your imaginings to concrete form, for you have thought out something for which womanhood is always in waiting. This is one of several new models launched for the maid from sixteen to twenty—or more.

The foundation is crepe de chine and high-necked, and could hardly be plainer. The high collar has wings fitted with brown, sand-colored beaver, down the front, seem to show a surprise mindedness of purpose to be only use full. Narrow cuffs bound with brown finish the long sleeves. Altogether the waist seems to bespeak a lack of self-consciousness in the wearer; it is so devoid of frustrous.

The skirt is moderately full, smartly short and slightly flaring. The skirt too bodice is plain, with bound edges, and the belt is made of the same fabric as the dress. The waist line is a little higher than the normal and a fairly wide belt is supported by slides of the 6 brie which hold it securely.

The side seams are perfectly free from sagging by stitched-on straps of the material, the seal machine stitching and accurately placed straps aiding an elegant finish. Buttons like those at the front of the bodice, but smaller, finish the cuffs and extend above them on the sleeve for the space of six inches.

The fascinating feature in the composition of this charming little dress is, of course, the successfully real pockets at each side of the front. They are there, but for just what purpose, beyond that of furnishing a novelty in design, remains to be seen.

There are curved diagonal slits in the skirt, with edges bound, with dorfully well finished. The dress is faultlessly tailored and made of an excellent quality of broadcloth. The waist, although so plain, is entirely up to date and depends upon the crepe of which it is made, as much as upon design and execution, for its elegance.

Night Dress With Cluny Lace and Embroidery

ALL the big stores and, quite likely, the smaller ones are having their annual white-goods sales. Counters are piled high with dainty linens in sheer fabrics, trimmed with exquisite lace and embroidery, manufactured especially for the finishing of underunslins.

Slips change in underunslins and night dresses are in other clothes though not so radically. The new designs for spring reveal narrow laces, very sheer embroideries, much beading, small tucks and the use of ribbon in the new garments. Small fine patterns in embroidery are used much better than heavier designs, and new tricks in placing yokes, shaping sleeves, letting in medallions, reward the searcher after something new.

One of the newest patterns in night dresses is shown here so plainly that it needs scarcely description. The body of the gown is made of two widths of nainsook folded together along the sides. At the center of one width at the top a cluster of twelve tucks is run, each about a quarter inch deep and six inches long. At the back the material is laid in box plats an inch wide, in a cluster at the center. Six or seven plats are laid according to the size of the neck opening.

The pretty yoke at the front reaches across the shoulders an inch and a half wide finished at one edge with a band of swiss embroidery in an open design. This, in turn, is edged with the narrow beading which extends all around the neck. Narrow lace insertion is stitched along the lower edge of the beading in the yoke and a second row of the same insertion outlines the yoke and joins it to the body of the gown. In making the yoke the wide beading is to be stitched to the row of swiss embroidery at one side, and to the row of cluny insertion at the other and then cut into two pieces of equal length to form the two sides. The second yoke is made in the same way but with no plats.

The neck opening is finished with a narrow cluny edging sewed to the narrow beading below the yoke. Short sleeves are finished with both insertion and edging of cluny.

A narrow satin ribbon run in the beading about the neck adjusts it to the figure. A wide ribbon is run through a buttonhole slit at the front and tied in a generous bow.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Italy's Great Statesman.

Antonio Salandra, premier of Italy, who steers his country in neutral channels despite war pressure, is the man, comes from the southern region of Puglia, and has 20 years of parliamentary training to assist him in the undertaking. He is in the prime of life, and his intense legal training, his quick sense of humor, and a quiet, aristocratic contempt for insincerity and demagogic politics of every kind, give him the happy manner which strength itself does.

Niagara Falls.

It is generally understood that the Falls of the Zambesi, on the east coast of Africa, are in every way much larger than those at Niagara.

Must Live Up to Them.

After the library gas has made a hit he must keep right on turning out stuff to live up to his picture in the tobacco advertisements.

Dr. Marden's Uplift Talks

By ORISON SWETT MARDEN.

Copyright by Medium Newspaper Syndicate.

THE ELEMENTS OF TRUE GREATNESS.

A lawyer who recently died in New York gave his last instructions in his will that one-half of his income for 1916 should be devoted to establishing and maintaining a free school for the bunnery of the city.

Obsessed with the idea of perpetuating his name, he stipulated that it should appear in raised letters on each end every load of bread delivered. How dare we speak ill of the poor and needy who might apply for aid.

It is said that this man had often expressed the opinion that the only immortality of which the individual can be certain is in the perpetuation of his name and acts through bequests in one form or another to posterity. Thus we can account for the desire of this man to have his name so prominently associated with his good deed.

While we would not belittle this man's philanthropy, which will undoubtedly prove a blessing to many a poor unfortunate, yet we cannot help regret that his idea of gaining "immortality" and contrast him with the two men who have chosen to celebrate this month—Washington and Lincoln—who have lived 100 years and more after all these years, and yet without any self-laudation, or advertisement of their acts.

They gave themselves to their country, and the country has built a monument on the hearts of their countrymen, and immortalized themselves for all time.

Abraham Lincoln, one of the world's greatest and most beloved characters, was a man who was the opposite of modesty and simplicity.

Lincoln's great humility of character shows that his marvelous career was due more to the moral qualities than to any intellectual brilliancy or genius. Lincoln illustrates in a remarkable degree the power of common qualities, everyday virtues, and a great, big manhood. His great horse-sense, his intensity of purpose, his force of character, his keen sense of humor, and his power of self-expressing: these were the foundations upon which he reared his great life structure.

When we think of Lincoln we form a picture of a great, hearty, kindly, helpful, accommodating, sympathetic soul, more like that of a great humanitarian than of a great intellectual genius.

To this sort of a man the world builds its monuments. Pure genius without a heart which enriches it with human sympathy and kindness, is not loved, without the virtues which are common to humanity, or more accurately speaking, without the virtues which are common to humanity, or more accurately speaking, without the virtues which are common to humanity, or more accurately speaking

The Charlevoix Sentinel

Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.

WILLARD A. SMITH - - EDITOR

Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Three Months	$ .50
Six Months	.75
One Year	1.00

Northern Michigan

Petoskey News: James Pozek, of Charlevoix, who died in this city from cancer of the stomach, was buried from St. Francis church at 11 o'clock Tuesday and interred in St. Francis cemetery. He was a native of Bohemia and leaves a wife and family in his native town in that country. His only friend in the United States, Will Pesek, of Charlevoix, came for the funeral.

Two accidents which resulted fatally have been reported at Hope City. A G. Von Platten's lumber camps Joseph Reamer was killed by being crushed under a load of logs which the log chain broke. About five o'clock Tuesday afternoon while coming down the Vogel street hill with a big load of logs Archie Smith, aged thirty years, living near Horton Bay, had a similar accident and was killed.

Petoskey News: Beaver Island residents have made a number of trips to the mainland during the past week or two. One was three to Bellaire last week and another made a trip to Harbor Springs for grain and provisions and it is said others will make trips for provisions if the ice bridge continues in good condition. Provisions are not plentiful on the island, but many kinds of fresh food are desirable.

Traverse City Record: County Commissioner of Schools, Lee Hornsby has received a letter from a teacher in Central Louisiana, who report that seed potatoes are now bringing three dollars a bushel in that part of the country. This information presents the idea that it might be profitable for Grand Traverse county to follow in the footsteps of her sister county, Wexford, and arrange to sell a part of the annual potato crop for seed purposes.

Contractor Thomas Haw, Jr., has closed a contract with the Portage Point Inn company for the construction on an addition to the Portagepoint Inn, which will make the Onekama resort one of the greatest caravan series in the western Michigan resort region. The use of Portage lake harbor by the Northern Michigan Trans. Co. as a port for the steamers of that line has materially added to the attractive resort in great demand, necessitating the extensive additions.

Petoskey News: Few fish have been caught from the docks of this city for some day this winter and old fishermen can give no reason why the large lake trout have not frequented their former grounds this year. Some few fish are being captured off Cross Village, Macki-naw City and Beaver Island, but nowhere in the bay. The fish shanties are being moved farther out from shore as the ice becomes more safe there, and several shanties are now off the shoals of Nine Mile point.

Traverse City Record-Eagle: The most valuable tree ever sold in this region was disposed of when the Traverse City Wagon works paid $100 for the lumber sawed from a single ash tree grown on the Hurlburt farm in Leelanau county. The tree, before it was cut, stood ninety feet high and was sawed into six twelve-foot logs. After going through the sawmill the lumber scaled 2,300 feet that was perfectly clear. For years it has been asserted that this tree was the most perfect specimen in the state.

County Normal Notes

CLAUDE WATERMAN.

County Commissioner Milford called at the room Thursday afternoon. Mr. Milford gave us some interesting facts for early years work.

Caroline Ross, Clarence Hanshaw, Leila Cornett, Marjory Hall and Dower Jones were Normal visitors last week.

Marie Brickelson, a member of the class of 1915, who is teaching near Bay Shore, sent the class a message last week.

Miss Whiting has been showing the class some pictures of the White House and telling us some thing about the things she saw when she was in Washington.

The House of Representatives discussed the bill providing for a State Normal School in Pinckney. The class became so interested that they nearly had a filibuster. When the bill was voted on it was lost, the vote being 6 yeas and 7 nays.

Speculative Life Insurance

A puzzle for speculative insurance on the lives of public personages prevailed in England during the early ninth century. Warren Hastings, the governor-general of India, and the unfortunate Admiral Byng answered equally the purposes of speculation and there were long odds against Nelson and the lives of notorious highwaymen, Sir Robert Walpole at one period of his career, when his life was endangered by popular tumults, was insured for many thousands, and when George II fought at Dettingen 20 per cent was paid against his return. Such speculative insurances were, however, largely checked by the gambling act of 1774, which made insurable interest a necessary condition for a valid policy.

STANDARD SCHOOLS IN RURAL DISTRICTS

The Department of Public Instruction has outlined certain conditions which, in their judgment, should be met and maintained in every rural school in the state in order that the pupils of the rural communities might enjoy school advantages on a par with those offered in the city schools.

Some of the requirements of the Standard School are as follows:

A roomy playground, properly graded and provided with ample aprons for the children to use.

Some trees on it. Separate toilets, same to be sanitary. School grounds not too close to public highway and centrally located relative to the population of the district.

School gardens are advised though not made a requirement.

Open walls are condemned. A drinking fountain is required.

The building must be in good repair inside and out. Must be of such dimensions as will give ample floor space and air space for the pupils of the school. Exits should open out.

Lighting should be ample. Glass area should be 20 per cent of floor area. Light should come from one direction.

Room should be evenly heated in all portions and should have proper ventilation.

Seats should be adjustable as an adjustable seat can be made to "fit" the pupil. A seat that will fit the child means to his health and comfort than any other one thing in the school room.

Blackboards, maps and other equipment of the school must be ample and up-to-date.

The Department has been working on this proposition for some time but could not, of course, cover the entire state in a single year.

Last September they sent to a number of counties Charlevoix being one of said counties, a Score Book covering every detail of the existing conditions of the schools of the county.

I have made a very careful record of every school in the county and a copy of same has been sent to the Department.

There are in the county four schools that will very easily meet the requirements of the Department in every particular and they are now awaiting the arrival of the member of the Department who passes on the fitness of things and confers the honor. About ten other schools in the county could, by the expenditure of a very small amount of money, be placed on the standard list.

Very few buildings in the county are too small for the standard and it is the matter of seating and light that brings the score of a majority of the districts below that required by the Department.

The Advance School, No. 1 fractional, Eveline Twp. will be the first standard school in the county. They have put in new boards, new seats, re-arranged the lighting and put in new windows, graded the grounds and made several other improvements in order to meet the requirements.

Every patron of the school who is there someday in April when the plate is given will be proud of the fact that he had something to do with it.

It is certain that the example of this district will be followed by many others in the county.

Respectfully submitted,

J. H. Milford.

LINCOLN'S KIND HEART.

It Showed Itself in His Aversion to the Death Penalty.

It is related that one day a man came to Lincoln with a sad tale. His son had been sentenced to death, an only son too. Lincoln said kindly:

"I am sorry I can do nothing for you. Listen to this telegram I received from General Butler yesterday," and he read the following:

"President Lincoln: I pray you not to interfere with the sentence of court martial of Jones. You will destroy all discipline in our army."

Lincoln stopped the old man's grief for a minute and then exclaimed:

"My time! Butler or no Butler, here goes!"

Then he wrote:

"Let Jones be not to be shot until further orders from me."

"Why," said the old man sadly, "I thought it was a pardon. You may order him shot next week."

"My old friend," replied Lincoln, "I see you are not very well acquainted with me. If you are, you never due this unless come from me to whom him we will live to be a great deal older than Methuselah."

One day a woman, accompanied by a senator, called on President Lincoln. The women was the wife of one of Mosby's men. Her husband had been captured, tried and condemned to be shot. She came to ask for the pardon of her husband. Lincoln heard her story and then asked what kind of a husband her husband was.

"He is worthless, and has left the children and best you?" asked the president.

"No, no," said the wife. "He is a good man, a good husband; he loves me and he loves the children, and we cannot live without him. The only trouble is that he is a foot short politics. I love to the north and was born there, and if I get him home he will do no more fighting for the south.

"Well," said Lincoln, after reading the papers, "I will pardon him and turn him over to you for safekeeping."

The woman, overcome with joy, began to sob as though her heart would break.

"My dear woman," said Lincoln, "if I had known how badly it was going to make you feel I never would have pardoned him."

"You do not understand me," she cried between sobs.

"Yes, yes, I do," answered Lincoln. "And if you do not get away at once I shall be crying with you."

FIRE INSURANCE IN MICHIGAN

The Proposed Bill Would Wipe out the Entire System of Rate or Inspection Bureaus

Former Representative George Holloway, of Grand Rapids, who has made quite a study of the fire insurance situation in Michigan, is author of a bill of revolutionary provisions affecting the system of rate fixing throughout the state, which will be presented next week.

In brief, the proposal wipes out the entire rate system of fire insurance rate or inspection bureaus now maintained by the companies, and puts this in the hands of the state insurance commissioner. It applies a tax of one-quarter of one per cent of all premiums collected in Michigan and provides for a sweeping system of annual reports to be made to the insurance commissioner. The assessment is to defray the expenses of the various state bureaus of inspection, and the reports are designed to show the comparison between premium totals and losses under various classifications of property in the state.

Announcement

William F. Bashaw, for Commissioner of Schools, Charlevoix County, Republican Primaries, March 3rd.

Resident of Charlevoix Co. since 1879. Graduate of East Jordan High School. Hold an endorsed First Grade Certificate. Have had 14 years actual teaching experience.

County Truant Officer for seven years. Supervisor of last ward, East Jordan, 4 consecutive terms.

Taxpayer and patron of the Public Schools.

The "School of Experience" is as essential as graduation from any other school, and I believe that my experience in connection with the schools of Charlevoix County for the past twenty-one years has amply qualified me for the position of County Commissioner of Schools.

If nominated and elected I promise to show no partiality, and to give my entire time to the duties of the office.

First Publication February 25th

Order for Publication

STATE OF MICHIGAN, The Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix

At a session of said court, held at Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 22nd day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present: Hon. Frank E. Spaulding, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Evelyn Bell, Deceased. Richard Lewis having filed in said court his petition praying that the time for presentation of claims against said estate should be limited.

It is ordered that the 19th day of March, A. D. 1915, be allowed for the creditors of said deceased to present their claims against said estate to be by him or her duly authenticated, for examination and adjustment, and that such claims against said estate be heard before said court, at said time and place, on the petition of said creditors, and that notice of said time and place and of said petition and hearing be published and circulated in said county.

A true copy. HERBERT L. CORRELL, Judge of Probate.

First publication Feb. 25.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Jacob E. Wise and Barbara K. Wells, husband and wife of Charlevoix County, Michigan, to Charles Nowak, of Chicago, Cook County, Illinois, dated the 1st day of October, 1913, and recorded in the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on February 19th, A. D. 1914, in Liber 36 of Mortgages on page 300, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, February 25, 1915, the sum of Two Thousand Twelve and Eighty-Three cents ($2,012.83) of principal and interest, and an attorney fee of Twenty-Five Dollars and Ten cents ($25.10) and in the Mortgage is taken and the property therein described is situated in the Village of Traverse City, Michigan, and no suit or proceedings at law having been instituted to recover the money secured by said Mortgage, or any part thereof or for any money paid for taxes, insurance or assessments, and the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and duly recorded in said County of Charlevoix, has become operative, and the premises described in said Mortgage, and all that part of the northwest quarter of section thirty-four (34), township thirty-four (34) north, range seven (7) west, which lies to the south of the Grand Traverse River, and all that part of the northwest quarter of section thirty-four (34), township thirty-four (34) north, range seven (7) west, which lies to the south of the Grand Traverse River, and the south half of the northwest quarter of section thirty-four (34), township thirty-four (34) north, range seven (7) west, which lies to the south of the Grand Traverse River, and the south half of the northeast quarter of said

SELLING THEM OUT

By H. M. EGBERT.

When Allan Gray walked out of the office of Smith's Weekly, after having applied successfully in response to an advertisement for an assistant, he thought that his future was assured. Twenty-four, just out of college, with all the enthusiasm of the young man facing the struggle of life, he appealed to Smith, although for different reasons than those which Smith outlined.

"Guys here to fight corruption in Bender," said the middle-aged editor and proprietor, thumping his fist down on the table. "And we're going to clean up the filthiest town in the whole state. That is my purpose, and that's what we are going to do—do it, father, Mr. Gray.

"There was a girl in Allan Gray's life. Her name was Mildred and she was twenty-two. She was earning a living in the metropolis two hundred miles away. Each of them was putting by money toward the day—the great day when Allan would be able to earn an income for both of them.

At the end of his first month of service Gray's salary was raised from fifteen dollars to twenty-five. Smith was rapidly heading over his head the charge of the Weekly. The young man's editorial contents in particular earned the editor's approbation.

"Give it em hell," said Smith. "Well done, young man! I see I made no mistake in taking you."

When more sophistication Allan might have suspected that something was wrong. Nothing he was delight ed. He detailed the entire situation to his sweetheart in his twice-a-week letters.

"It's this way, dear," he wrote. "We are putting not shot into old Gregory, who has been boss of Bender for the last twenty years and has everyone in his power. We are exposing his graft in connection with the street, gas, chlorine, ice and other departments of the city government. We are advocating the form of government by commission. And by hick! as Smith says, we are going to win."

Certainly the appearance of the new weekly created a prodigious sensation in a town of 10,000 souls. Men in groups on the street and Allan assailed the boss with homeopathic doses of invective. What had his gut for th- franchise tradition? Why was a convict manager of the waterworks department? Why was the pinnacle of popularity the gown of a boy? Why was the boss, Gregory, and his satellites, the only people who could read with ease the Weekly? Why was Smith's Weekly the only paper published.

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.)

Dangerous Bridges.

According to the Engineering Record, many states have a large number of inferior bridges, of both wood and steel. The town and county officials who have charge of the work of building the bridges, because they prefer to spend the money of their disposal in improving the surface of the roads, work that the public is much quicker to notice and praise than the improvements from the point of view of safety it is wise to improve no road until every bridge on it is put into proper shape for smooth, metalled roadways and weak, poorly maintained bridges form a dangerous combination. In cases in which the road commissioners have little control over the bridges the conditions are likely to be even more dangerous. Perhaps the solution of the money into the bridges rather than into the roads may not be practicable in every case, but in every case enough money should be put into the bridges to make them safe beyond question.

Elaborate Chinese Funerals.

Funerals in China are most elaborate, no expense being spared to give the departed a grand send-off, no matter what his station in life. Indeed, extravagance, owing to the lavishness of a burial ceremony, is no uncommon thing. The never-ending train of ceremonies that follows the death of a near relative is not, in many instances, to take not only all the time of the descendants, but all their money. For 100 days after the decease an altar is maintained in the home of the surviving relatives, at which they bow and weep, not once, but thrice daily. Relatives are dispersed from far and near and quartered on the already afflicted family. Priests are retained for many days to aid in the ceremonies.

"I've Got a Lunch Appointment."

Who got the contract for the roads, and why? On the day following the appearance of the first issue of the Weekly the leading merchants made their appearance and announced that Smith need look for no patronage from them. Smith was not counting on advertisements. He launched them out of his office. When the circulation ran up to 20,000 he guessed.

Weekly was a success beyond all doubt. Everyone bought it, from Boss Gregory to the high school boys.

At the end of three months Allan was writing nearly all the editorials, under Smith's guidance. The older man confessed that the youngster could beat him at his own game.

Then Allan wrote greatly and disturbed.

"The time is number four. After the approaching election we shall have a new government. Then business will flow our way. Gregory and his satellites will be consigned to the outer darkness. I shall be raised again, and we will be married. Think of that! Married!"

Four weeks before the elections, to his amazement, the young fellow was waited on by a deputation of citizens of his boardinghouse. They wanted him to run for the office of sheriff, having Allan's name.

But I don't know anything about the work!" exclaimed the boy, demurred.

"I am afraid, Mr. Gray, there is very little chance of your election," said the chief of the deputation candidly. "The sheriff's office has always gone to a Gregory man. You know, Tom Vincent has an enormous following of his backers. He had the position ten years now. Still, there must be a turnover—nominally, that is, you may get in. Let us put you on the ticket?"

Gray accepted and told Mr. Smith philosophically next morning. "I, his surprise he was delighted. He overenthusiastic. To his greater surprise, that the Smith told him to create a reaction."

"We mustn't overdo it, he explained Smith. "We don't want to create a reaction."

Within Allan stared at him, speechless in surprise, Smith put on his coat and hat.

"I've got a lunch appointment," he said. "See here, young man, are you prepared as you appear to be dim-?"

He got as further, for at that moment he was struck down with amazement. An ambulance was called and the doctor took the man away to the hospital.

"He'll probably get well," he said. "But—it will be some time before he can use his pen or do any work again."

Allan, left alone in the office, did not know what to do. Therefore, he started to do his work exactly as though the unexpected had not happened. He was hard on a billing editorial when the shadow of a man in a silk hat fell across his desk and caused him to start round.

Behind him, immaculately dressed, his heavy jowl set in a sneering smile, stood Gregory himself.

"Well, sir!" said Allan, rising.

"Think I had news about Mr. Smith," said the boss.

"I should hardly expect you to take the trouble," suggested Allan.

"The old boss took a chair at his side. "So you are the young man that has been holding me up before the public gaze as a scoundrel?" he said.

"I am, sir," answered Allan, "and I believe conscientiously that—"

The boss laid a hand on his arm.

"Now, if I had a young man like you with me," he said, "what wonders I be able to do!"

"You'd be bought, Mr. Gregory," said Allan.

"I don't need to buy you my boy," answered the other. "At least, I don't think I do. But Smith can't talk, and what's the good of owing him?"

"I don't understand—" Allan began.

"I know you don't," answered the other. "I never thought you did from the beginning. Your editorials had the ring of truth in them. Well, I'm your friend—Jim Smith started this paper, I get your drift now. Understand that? I wouldn't buy at his price. I didn't believe he could hart me. He couldn't. I was too strong for him in my life. When I came up to his terms he got higher. So we played poker till four weeks before election day. Yesterday we agreed on terms. Well, I'm ready to sign."

Allan listened in horror, and grew pale. He began to understand the things that had been mysteries to him. The boss was talking, he realized, and asked him to write more stinging invective—till that same morning.

"You will show me on the agreement," suggested Allan.

"Mr. Gray," said the boss, "I never bluff. It wasn't signed by Mr. Smith. He can't do have signed to my office today, after lunch."

"Then," said Allan calmly, "I shall run the paper alone. I shall be true to what I believed my employer's principles to be."

"Wait a minute," said Gregory, pulling a letter out of his pocket. "Read this, young man. Do you think this letter, offering to accept my terms, would read well in the newspapers? And this, you see, is signed."

Yes, that was Smith's signature. Allan sank back helplessly in his chair. He could say nothing more.

"Now, my young friend," Gregory continued, "how much longer do you suppose will remain to 'Smith's Weekly' when this letter is published and you are jointly involved with our friend in what you would call a shameless conspiracy?"

"None," admitted Allan.

"Then," said the boss, "will you suspend publication or making of drug man's name down to infamy to gain a reputation for sincerity in which no one will believe?"

Allan thought hard. Then, "I will suspend for that letter," he answered.

"Now you're talking sense," the answered the boss. And he placed the letter in Allan's hands. He knew that he had not misjudged his man.

There was a good deal of quiet talk about Bender during the period preceding the elections. The story of his dishonesty became gradually known. But nobody ever suspected the integrity of Allan Gray.

That doubtless was why he secured the election as sheriff by a majority of nearly four hundred votes. Be that, too, was why he was enabled to write to Mildred not two days after ward. "Come, dearest," he said.

And when he came, among the crowd assembled at the wedding he did not feel anything but gooddoisedness. He even took the boss' hand.

"Ex-boss", rather, For Gregory would have had power in Bender even though Smith's Weekly had perished.

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.)

Hat for a Formal Occasion

Blouses of Chiffon for Dressy Wear

STANDING at the pinnacle of popularity the pretty blouse of flowered chiffon faintly has a rival among blouses designed for dressy wear. It is not as fragile as it looks, but it is fragile enough at that. The women who have made chiffon having a light-colored ground over which rather large flowers are scattered in many beautiful colorings and shadings.

Bunches of flowers, however, there are others showing Persian designs in wonderful colors, and also conventional patterns rather difficult to describe. In any case the chiffon is draped over a foundation of plain chiffon, very thin silk, plain or figured net, or thin lace.

By way of decoration the waists are made up less elaborately with garnishment or less elaborate and brilliant buttons, and especially with tiny flat bows made of satin folds or narrow velvet ribbon.

Inclined for a less brief reign in favor are the plain blouses of crepe de chine made with sloping shoulders and long sleeves fitted into a regulation armhole. Narrow cuffs in bands of the fine lace, or simply collars and cuffs of organdie finish these elegant blouses. They are shown in light pink, mauve, blue and sand color. Often a little vestee is worn with collar fitted lace standing at the back finished with a narrow band of black velvet ribbon which supports and holds the collar in place and ties in a bow at one side. Of course the throat is very low when this is worn, but a little touch of black adds tone to the water.

Waists of this kind are very practical, standing the washings that are necessary to keep the immaculate quality as well as saints of fine cotton fabrics.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Filet Lace Lamp Shades.

Have you seen the new filet lace lamp shades?

They are beautiful. They are run with colored threads and edged with fringe of the same colors.

One for a large lamp is made of white filet run with various dull shades of blue. There is a pattern of griffins and somewhat conventionalized rose trees in pots and the edge is finished with a blue fringe.

The shade is mounted over yellow silk, and the effect of the light shining through the yellow and the dull blue is delightful. The shade costs about fifteen dollars.

Inris Number as Eraser.

Inris rubber, it is believed, was used for the first time as an eraser in 1770. It was, however, nearly years later before it was put in general use. Prior to this, pieces of bread were used for erasing purposes.

BRINGS TALE: LEAVES FOOT

Eskimo Arrives at New York With Thrilling Account of Encounter With Grizzly Bear.

Blubbering with joy, Awatuk, an Eskimo, to be known on the Pennsylvania farm, whither he has gone, by the stern persons of Morris Levy, is released from Ellis island in charge of Miss Sadie Lonsinger, friend of the Grenfell mission, in Labrador, says the New York Herald. Awatuk still he reaches Ellis island he has only one foot. The other, the left, was chewed off by a grizzly bear, wherein lies the story.

Awatuk—which means "the chilly hole" in a dialect years old, but, according to the story, he's so brave that Labrador probably believed to be rid of his daring spirit.

Miss Lonsinger, who brought him back with her, had trouble getting him into the country, but finally appeared Washington and Pennsylvania and Awatuk is off to the farm.

But to the fate of that missing foot. On a cold, unsurvey night in Foister's Rock, Labrador, little Awatuk and his mother huddled about the whale oil lamp, wondering if Papa Awatuk, the daring hunter, was riding the rake. Suddenly from outside the igloo there came a scrabbling and the feet of Awatuk and his mother congealed. They knew it was the dreaded footfall of a polar bear scratching his way in to make a meal of them.

Huddled in the way of dried moose meat and mission tracts were used to bolster the last vestiges of their feeble igloo, but all in vain.

Through a ragged aperture glowered the hoarse face of a grizzly bear. He yawned in anticipation of little Awatuk—a plump and juicy morsel. He kicked with his left foot. The foot reached the open mouth just as he closed, and just as Awatuk's mother dropped the whale oil lamp on the bear's head. There was a groan of pain and anger the grizzly jumped lightly away, leaving behind a foot and a little still clinging to Awatuk's foot.

Awatuk was taken to the hospital at the end of six days, where he recovered sufficiently to be brought to his own tribe. The tale of Awatuk as told by himself.

Teaching Under Difficulties.

Whatever teaching was done during the Civil war was carried on under difficulties, in so far as ordinary school supplies were concerned, if we must be judge so from the following extract from an article in "War Time Expedients" in a North Carolina paper:

"For pens we used goose-quills, unless one was fortunate enough to possess a gold one. Ink was homemade, also, generally the juice of some astringent berry, like poke or elder berry, with the addition of copperas. For pencils we sometimes used the charcoal end of a burnt stick. Schoolboys made slate pencils by cutting a brittle slate into narrow strips and whittling them round with a pocket knife. A small piece of chicken was burned in the fire until almost calcined, and so used as a slate pencil, but it was too soft. To break a good school slate by accident was quite a misfortune to them, as the school books were those used by the former generation of children, and sometimes there would be hardly two alike in a class."

Says His Wife Could Tell.

Most men are queerer than some are queerer, especially in New York. A prize winner in the second class drew the eyes of the entire company upon him in amazement as they sat around a table in a downtown restaurant at luncheon. They had been discussing apartment house life, when one of the party turned to the man next to him and asked: "By the way, Jim, how many rooms have you in your flat? New York flats are so small you would imagine that any man who had to pay rent for one could answer right off. But Jim said—I guess I'd have to ask my wife to tell you—I can't. Never counted 'em." Well, a whispered a man opposite, "isn't he a dear? Wonder if he knows how many fingers and toes he has?"

Accidents to War Aviators.

It is interesting to learn that is made by a French publication that the number of deaths of aviators in the war service by accident was very small as compared with the records in time of peace, and the explanation is made that in this service only the cream of men are accepted, and moreover they do not indulge in the acrobatic exhibition stunts that have brought disaster to many. It may be noted that it is this same acrobatic tendency that has not given the general public many eyes over the aviation of rolling the big machines that will sooner or later prove an injury to aviation.—Scientific American.

Mining Tin One Woman's Work.

Mining tin to produce her operating and protecting operations to secure money to hold on to her Alaskan tin mines is the double profession of Miss Emma B. Hunter, who, left to run down by her nearest efforts in New York, went to Alaska to recuperate. Here she was struck with the gold fever, while her health improved. She staked tin and not gold, it promises to bring her in its weight in gold, especially in view of the prospective need of the smelters in Belgium, which has all Europe at its disposal, and of the first American smelters in Bolivia, much nearer to her Alaska than Belgium is the way of transporting raw material.

Not the Right House.

It had been a hard day for the book agent. Sales were desperately slow, and as a last resort he decided to try a worthy house despite its shabby appearance. "Have you a Charles Dickens in your house?" he asked politely. "No," she snapped. "Or a Robert Louis Stevenson?" "No." "Or a Walter Scott?" "No, we ain't, an' what's more, we don't run a boarding house either, so if you're looking for them fellows you might try the house across the street. I understand they keep boarders."

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully run down state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very tired in the morning and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I shall be happy to tell her what a wonderfully helpful thing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is."—Mrs. Frank Clark, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Women Have Been Telling Women for forty years how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when everything else failed. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast. If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It will pay you to do so. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

BLACK LEG LOSES SURELY PREVENTED by Cutter's Blackleg Pills. Endorsed by Leading Stockmen. Protect your herd. Write for booklet. Cutter Laboratory, Berkeley, Cal. Use Cutter's Pill for Black Leg, Cutter's Dehorning Powder, Cutter's Tick Powder, Cutter's Calf Scours Powder, Cutter's Calf Scours Tablets, Cutter's Antiseptic Powder, Cutter's Antiseptic Ointment, Cutter's Pocket Ointment, Cutter's Pocket Powder, Cutter's Pocket Tablets, Cutter's Pocket Pills. The Cutter Laboratory, Berkeley, Cal.

900 DROPS
CASTORIA
ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT
A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of
INFANTS CHILDREN
Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral
Recipe of Old DR. SAMUEL PITCHER
Aperfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.
Fac Simile Signature of
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK
At 6 months old
35 DOSES—35 CENTS

Black Copy of Wrapper.

For DISTEMPER Pink Eye, Epizootic Shipping Fever
Horses and mules preventive, no matter how long horses are exposed, one dose of Spohn's Distemper Specific lasts 1 year, 50 doses $1.00, 100 doses $1.75, 250 doses $4.00, 500 doses $7.50, 1000 doses $12.00. Sold by druggists, or delivered by us. Spohn's Distemper Book, 3 Stamps. Spohn's Medicine for Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Pneumonia, Fever, Germ Killing Fluid, Kills Germs in Sick Rooms. Veterinary Medicine Catalog, Free. Spohn's Stock Tonic, Blood Purifier and Appetizer, 50 doses 50c, 100 doses $1.00. Spohn's Liquid Worm Medicine, 50 doses 50c, 100 doses $1.00. Spohn's Liquid Worm Medicine for Dogs, 50c. Spohn's Dog Distemper Specific, 50c. Spohn's Dog Tonic, 50c. Spohn's Dog Pills, 50c. Spohn's Dog Wash, 50c. Spohn's Dog Dip, 50c. Spohn's Dog Liniment, 50c. Spohn's Dog Ointment, 50c. Spohn's Dog Soap, 25c. Spohn's Dog Book, 3 Stamps. Spohn's Medicine for Cattle, Horses, Sheep and Hogs. Spohn's Medicine Chart, Free. Spohn's Medicine for Poultry, Chart, Book, Free. Spohn's Medicine for Hogs, Book, Free. Spohn's Medicine for Sheep, Book, Free. Spohn's Medicine for Cattle, Book, Free. Spohn's Medicine for Horses, Book, Free. Spohn's Medicine for Poultry

Boys' Norfolk Suits

We have just received a new line of Boys' Norfolk Suits
From 10 to 17 years. Exceptional value at $5.00.

New Spring Goods arriving daily.

Go to ---LEVINSON'S--- Get the Habit

The Store of Quality

and good service. Everything in the line of Groceries is fresh in our store.

—SPECIAL—

For Saturday in Our Meat Dept.

Pickeled Pigs Feet, per lb.	8c
Choice Pork Liver, per lb.	8c
Choice Pork Spare Ribs, per lb.	11c
Swifts Shoulder Hams, per lb.	11½c
Swifts Skinned Hams, Half or whole, per lb.	15c
Swifts Bacon	18c
Force Fed fowls, per lb.	12½c
Choice Salt Pork, per lb.	12½c

We have Choice Oranges, Bananas, Fancy Grape Fruit, Apples, Celery and Lettuce.

Courteous Treatment — Prompt Delivery

C. DANTO & SON.

212 Bridge St. Phone No. 12 Phone No. 69

Will You Help Save the Pere Marquette?

The Pere Marquette is being operated at a loss for one reason—because the state law has fixed its passenger rates at an amount less than the cost of operation.

The road is now in our hands as Receivers appointed by the United States Court. We have cut down expenses to the limit of safety, but economics, helpful as they are, will not save the situation. It has been necessary to borrow money to operate the road, even without paying interest on bonds. The Court, without authorizing us to make a renewal operation, but following the suggestion of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has directed us to lay the matter before the Legislature for such relief as it may find to be merited, and we have done so.

Why You Should Help Save This Railroad---

You need its freight service in your business.

You require its passenger service when you travel.

You know that this railroad is necessary to the prosperity of this community.

You know that this railroad is one of the greatest assets of the state.

You know that the Pere Marquette is an important factor in your life, directly or indirectly, every day in the year.

It serves this country, this town—it serves you.

It cannot longer continue its business at a loss and furnish the service you need and require.

It has reached a crisis in its affairs. Foreclosure and dismemberment are staring the road in the face.

On The Average, We Lose—

A quarter of a cent every mile we carry a passenger.

Ten cents on every passenger we carry.

Twenty-two cents every mile a passenger train runs.

This does not mean that we do not want your patronage. We do; we appreciate it. Our loss is greater if you do not give it to us, because we have to run the trains anyway.

The Interstate Commerce Commission decided after an investigation of these conditions that 2 1/2 cents is a fair rate, and therefore fixed it as the maximum rate. This does not help us greatly because we have not little passenger service outside Michigan. The Legislature of Michigan, however, by making 2 cents a mile in local, isn't it worth as much to carry you inside the state as it is to points outside, or from points outside to points within? It is, and in some cases more, when you consider the speeds asked and allowed by the Pere Marquette.

HOW YOU CAN HELP---

Take this matter up right away with your Legislator. See him personally, if possible; if not, write him at once. He is entitled to your views and it is necessary to get action at this session. The matter has been presented to the Legislature and we are now laying the conditions before you with a view of getting your assistance. The railroad is so much entitled to living rates as an industry as to living wages. Urge your Legislator to act favorably at this session, and

Help Us Preserve The System Intact to Michigan

PAUL H. KING,
DUDLEY E. WATERS,
Receivers.

NOVELIST TELLS OF POLAND'S RUIN

Author of "Quo Vadis" Describes Suffering.

BROTHER FIGHTING BROTHER

Fifteen Thousand Villages Wrecked, 1,500,000 Poles Killing Each Other and Refugees Dying by the Thousands—Not a Grain of Corn, Scrap of Meat or Drop of Milk For Civilians.

Berne, Switzerland.—Henryk Sienkiewicz, the famous Polish novelist, author of "Quo Vadis," is the latest victim of the conflagration, a refugee driven from home by the war.

He is now at Vevey with the members of the committee on relief for war victims in Poland, of which he is president, and Ignace Paderewski, the famous pianist, is vice-president.

No more appalling picture of death, destruction and devastation has ever been drawn than that outlined by Sienkiewicz, who declares it is unique in history. He said:

"Poland has nothing to do with the war. Conquered and partitioned, she is not one of the belligerent nations, yet 1,500,000 of her sons are fighting fratricidal battles in the armies of three different warring states. Our country is made a cockpit and is devastated from end to end.

"Think what this means when the order for a charge is given. Hordes of soldiers rush on each other, and when they get within striking distance commence cutting one another down. They find the implements with which they are equipped inoperative in the common metal foundry.

"It frequently happens when the Red Cross forces go to collect the wounded they lift from the heap one man in a German uniform, another in the Austrian, a third in the Russian, all three Poles.

HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ.

"The misery is really very great. In the kingdom of Poland alone there are 15,000 villages burned or damaged and 1,000 churches and chapels destroyed.

"Homeless villagers have sought shelter in the forests, where women and children are dying of cold and hunger by the thousands daily. In the whole 60,000 square miles of territory in possession of the armies not a grain of corn, a scrap of meat or a drop of milk has remained for the civil population.

"The material losses are estimated at $2,000,000. Agriculture is ruined, industry destroyed, and 400,000 workers have lost the means of livelihood.

"The sons of things in Galicia is just as dreadful. The Russians have confiscated enormous horses and 2,000,000 horned cattle and have seized all the food. Galicia will be a desert. Over 1,600,000 inhabitants have sought refuge in other parts of Austria in other destitution.

"I was at my home in Oblegorsk, government of Kielce, during the early part of the war working on a new novel. I was forced to leave my home without even my papers. The last I heard of it, house was ransacked, I was being dug around it, even in the garden.

"I made my way to Vienna. There I was arrested. I had been arrested by the Austrians, but it was not true. After some difficulty they accorded me a permit to come here to Switzerland.

"There has been a committee for the relief of Polish distress created in Berlin, of which the Prince Lucien Ambrosio is a member. But America can tell no more cum, and Russia would not sell to the Berlin committee for fear it might be used to feed the German troops. It is only to our committee established in neutral Switzerland that the unfortunates are likely to supply corn."

Valuable Statuary Moved.

London.—The Elgin marbles from the Parthenon, the most valuable collection of statuary in the world, have been removed from their room in the British museum for the first time since 1815, when they were taken from Greece. They are now in the basement as a precaution against German zeppelin raids.

Spain's Arbitration Court.

"The most unique and interesting institution for the settlement of civil suits on mass, writes Thomas W. Palmer, jr., in Case and Comment, is the arbitration court. All controversies or disputes before or after the commencement of litigation, no matter how engagged, can be submitted to an arbitration tribunal by agreement of all the interested parties. The exceptions to this are those suits involving political and civil rights, etc., of those matters in which the state is especially concerned. The arbitrators, whose number must not exceed seven, are men of well-rounded character and full knowledge of rights; in some instances the result has been to create amicable relations rendered. Appeal is made from this tribunal, direct to the permanent court. This method of dealing claim has proved successful and is enjoying considerably."

Great Success.

"Were the greatest theoretical good." "Splendid! I never saw anything worse."—Life.

A Belgian War Romance

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

One quiet evening in the summer of 1913 a pair of young lovers stood on a bridge that crossed the river Lys in Belgium. They were there for a parting. The young man was going for the coast early the next morning and thence for America. Nothing could be more peaceful than the scene about them. A young moon stood in the west. If an occasional breeze stirred the leaves on the trees they were still and lightly. As for sound, there was only a light gurgle beneath them as the current passed the abutment of the bridge.

"Mina," said the young man, "about us. I will not be gone long. Before I shall have saved enough money to send for you. That we shall have a definite time to be reunited I promise you that one year from today, if not before, you shall receive the passage money to bring you to me."

"And I, Hans, will work and save so that if you do not succeed in gathering enough for me you may have enough for the journey."

When the year had passed a great change had come over Belgium. The Germans were coming into the country from the east the French from the south. Wilhelmina had received a letter from her lover in New York that money would be sent her for her passage, but before it was dispatched the war had closed the mails.

The anniversary of their parting at evening. Wilhelmina went to the bridge on which they had stood a year before. It was now a ruin, more than half of it having been destroyed. Here and there across the flood were flashes followed by a distant roar of guns. The moonlight was not the mellow light of a year before the sky like the tints of nearby omens.

What should she do? Her home had been that day in the line of the engagement. Before leaving it she had snatched up her savings, and these she had with her. Reading there in the identical spot where she had stood in quiet with her lover, she resolved to go to him if possible.

There was no way of announcing her coming beforehand. She had neither writing materials nor a way to send a letter. Indeed, it was doubtful if even she could break through the lines of war to reach the coast. If she arrived in a port would she find a vessel? Nevertheless she turned her face toward Holland and set off in the dark mass.

The adventures are a long story in itself. Fortune favoring, she reached Rotterdam in safety and there found that she had the means to buy a steerage ticket on an outgoing steamer to New York.

On the arrival of the vessel the refugees were landed at Ellis Island and Wilhelmina among others was brought before the immigration commissioner. There she was asked how she would be provided for in America, and when she said that she had no money she was told that she would be sent back to Holland.

Her modesty, the consciousness that she was coming to marry a man without a special bidding, had caused her to conceal that she expected to join her lover. Hans had changed. But the prospect of being sent back to land running in blood, which grew the little home in which they had been born and where lived had been level, overcame her reticence, and she told a love story that no pen, however inspired, could put on paper.

Hans must be found.

Such were the instructions given to a messenger, who departed on the morrow.

There is a committee of Belgians in New York whose purpose it is to look after their incoming fellow country men. The head of the committee was found, and he in turn started a hunt for Hans.

Ever since the war had broken out Hans had been anxious about his Wilhelmina. He had sent her to send her his savings for fear they would be lost indeed, one of the contributions made by the war was the inability to send funds. Hans could write to a friend but without expectation that she would receive his letters. As to receiving letters from her, he had no faith in the other.

Hans was at work one afternoon when a fellow workman came to him and told him that the boss wished to see him in the office. Hans laid down his tools and reported as directed. He was being dug around it, even in the garden.

"Is you Hans Wichtel?"

"Yes."

"There is a girl on Ellis Island who came over from Belgium. She says you will marry her."

"Where?"

"She says her name is Wilhelmina."

"Marry her! Of course I will marry her. Where can I find her?"

Hans wished to go at once to Ellis Island, but somebody remarking that so many in overalls was not in wedding costume called himself to the office of to join his sweetheart.

If the authorities had any doubt about Wilhelmina's story it was dispelled by the fervent embrace of the lovers. But there was enough of romance in this case so many in pursuance of law and the rules of the island to promise in this large family. A man went with the couple to the city hall in New York, where a license was procured. Then the pair went to the office of the German consulate, where the marriage ceremony was performed.

ANCIENT GREEK TRAINING.

What It Did For the Boy Physically and Intellectually.

The moment in which the Athenians brought up their children is worth remembering.

At seven years of age the Athenian boy entered the school which was essentially a playground. All the first and better half of the day was spent in gymnastics, dancing, games and play. In the afternoon there were lessons, some writing, some reading, all in the open air and then came a long period of play again. Early was the schooling of the Greek and up to the age of ten or eleven and it did not end abruptly at the age of sixteen except in the severity of the discipline.

And yet the world has not ceased to marvel at the results of this primitive education. It produced the highest type of man physically and intellectually that the world has ever seen when Clarion says was as far in advance of the Modern Englishman as the modern Englishman is in advance of the native African.

In physical beauty, courage and prudence in philosophy literature, architecture and art, the Greeks surpassed the unsurpassed models of the ages and are still the inspiration of all nations today. But they proved the emphasis upon extreme exercise gymnastics and play which are too much neglected in these days.—Kansas City Star.

THE PLANET MERCURY.

It Is Difficult to Weigh and Its Orbit Eccentric.

Though Mercury is one of the small fry in the planetary family, it is pretty big in comparison of all to the asteroids.

It lies so close to the sun that it is never but seldom in conjunction with the sun, and when it is it is so utterly overcome, and it experiences distortions by the attraction of the sun's bodies in a way not yet fully understood.

A special difficulty has also been found in the attempt to place Mercury in the working orbit. We can weigh the whole earth we can weigh the sun and we can even weigh Jupiter and Saturn, but Mercury presents difficulties of a peculiar character. Yet it has been convenient to devise a method of weighing it.

It is generally agreed that our earth is attracted by this planet, and he showed by the amount of attraction may be discovered by observations of the sun so that from an examination of the disturbances we can make an approximate determination of the mass of Mercury.

Le Verrier's result indicated that the weight of the planet was about the 6 millionth part of the light of the earth in other words if our earth was placed in a balance and three globes, each of the same size as Mercury were laid in the other the globe would hang evenly.—Story of the Heavens.

Scandal Boys' Game.

Scandal tells have a game which they call "Hobbledoff," and it has something on the American game of hobbledoff according to those who have seen it. The boys of Malmo and other Swedish cities "fit an amusement consist of 18 opponent and amusement in mock encounters with the hobbledoff, which is merely a framework mounted on wooden wheels and has a pair of arms tilted to be forward and. Armed with a scarlet cloak, one of the boys lifted the hobbledoff and rushes with it against the other. The amusement of an amusement of

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1915, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

On Missey creek Sally Milner sends romantic Jesse Percy to the Hollman place to tell Tamarack Spicer that Jim Hollman is shooting smoke talk into his sweetheart, Sally. Tamarack is a legendary character in Salmon Rapids, Ky., because of his prowess in the Hollman feud. He leaves the South river camp to go home to New York. Samson and Jim Hollman are sitting on the porch when Tamarack comes. Samson and Jim are at odds. Jim's sister, Adrienne, is a girl of fifty, wrapped up in her brother. Samson, a Yankee, lately purchased the Hollman mill. Jim's mother is dead. Tamarack's mission is to make a man of Jim. Samson's mission is to make a man of Jesse Percy. Jesse is a "furriner" who has come into the business world and becomes well acquainted with Sally. Jim's mother, Adrienne, Samson and Jesse are at supper when Tamarack comes. Jesse begins with others to make Hollman feel that Samson's mill is a boon to the community, building lodge, and Jesse an agent and so on the political and financial trend. Tamarack, Samson and Jesse are left alone. Tamarack tells Samson he has come to Jim to persuade him to quit drinking. Sally goes to school. Jesse is left behind. Sally goes to school. Jesse is left behind.

CHAPTER XII—Continued.

"No," she said, "we haven't done that yet. I guess we won't."

"I think that's mighty suitable. Will fried. If I was sure I loved him, and that he loved me, I'd feel like a fool not to get married right off."

"And, besides, I'm not sure what I want yet," she said. "I'm just a little afraid I'm going to end by losing you boys."

Horton stood silent. It was the time, and from below came the strains of the night's overture. A few sisters muffled passengers gloomily paced the deck.

"You won't lose us both, Dennie," he said, steadily. "You may lose your choice—but, if you find yourself able to fall back on substitutes, I'll be there, waiting."

For once he did not meet her accusing look of pity. His own eyes were fixed on the slow swing of heavy, gray-green waters. He was smiling. "It's as a man proposes when he confronts despair and pretends that everything is quite, quite right. The girl looked at him with a choke in her throat.

"Wilfred," she said, laying her hand on his arm, "I'm not worth worrying about. I'm not. If Samson Routh proposed to me today, I know that I should refuse him. I am not at all sure that I am the least little bit in love with him. Only, don't you see I can't be quite sure I'm not? It would be horrible if we all made a mistake. Suppose I have left Christmas to make up my mind for all time? I'll tell you then, dear, if you care to wait."

CHAPTER XIII.

Tamarack Spicer sat on the top of his car, swinging his legs over a high side. He was clad in overalls, and in the pockets of his breeches repposed a quintal fund of red liquor, and an unbulging pay envelope. Tamarack had been "railroading" for several months this time. He had made a fair record for sustained effort and industry, but now alone was beckoning him to the mountains with vague promises of freedom and letsure. Many things had invited his soul, whose feet had passed at times Samson had left the mountains, and in four years a woman can change her mind. Sally Milner when they met on the road arrest him once more as kinsman and agree to forget his forty method of courtship. This time he would be more diplomatic. Yesterday he had gone to the boss and "called for his time." Today he was paid off, and a free lance.

As he reflected on these matters a fellow railroaded came about the top of the car and sat down at Tamarack's side. This brakeman had also been a peripatetic "railroaded" man, drifting from another section—over toward the Virginia line.

"So yer quittin'?" observed the newcomer.

Spicer nodded.

"Goin' back than on Missey?"

Again Tamarack answered with a jerk of his head.

"I've been hearin' off (or tell ye some thin', Tamrack."

"Cut her loose."

"I kind o'reckon Hilton last week, an' some fellers that used fer know my mother's folks took me down in the cellar of Hollman's store, an' give me some licker."

"What on hit?"

"They was talkin' 'bout you."

"What did they say?"

"I seen that they was enemies of yours, an' they wasn't in no good humor, so, when they axed me if I knowed ye, I lowed I didn't know nothin' good about ye. I lowed that ye ot, or gil in trouble myself."

Tamarack turned the whole Hollman tribe, and his companion went on.

"Jim Asberry was thar. He lowed they'd found out that you done shot Purvy thut time, an' he said"—the brakeman paused to add emphasis to his conclusion—"thet the next time ye come home, he lowed ye'd git yo plumb shore."

Tamarack growled.

"Mich obliged," he replied.

At Hilson Tamarack Spicer strolled along the street toward the court house. He wished to be seen. So long as it was broad daylight and he did no harm he knew he was safe—and he had plans.

Standing before the Hollman store were Jim Asbery, and several companions. They greeted Tamarack affably and he paused to talk.

"Hidin' over in Missey?" inquired Asberry.

"Lowed I must as well."

"Kind of a place with ye as far as Jesse's place?"

"Plumb good ter have company," drawled Tamarack.

They chatted of many things, and Tamarack was, now and then, cast to those narrows where they could not see strings to stirring each jockeyed for the rear position, and the man who found himself forced into the lead turned to his saddle and talked back over his shoulder, with wary, though seemingly careless, eyes. Each knew the other was bent on his murder.

At Percy's side Asberry waved farewell and turned to go. Tamarack rode on, but shortly he hitched his horse in the concealment of a hollow, walked with huge rocks, and disappeared into the woods.

He began climbing, in a crouched position, branching each foot down cautiously and making cities to Hilton. Jim Asberry had not been outwardly jocular in his leave taking. But, once the brakeman's delicately attuned ears caught a sound that made him lie flat on the trail for a great long where he was masked in clumps of flowering rhododendron. Presently Asberry passed him, also walking cautiously, but hurriedly and cradling a Winchester rifle in the hollow of his arm. Then Tamarack knew that Asberry was taking this cut to head him off and waylay him in the gorge a mile away by road but a short distance as the crow flies. Spicer held his heavy revolver cocked in his hand, but it was too near the Hilton house to risk a shot. He waited a moment, and then, rising, went on noiselessly with a snarling grin, stalking the man who was stalking him.

Asberry reached a place at the foot of a huge pine where the undergrowth would cloak him. Twenty yards below was the crooked road, winding from its long horseshoe deviation. When he had taken his position his faded butternut clothing matched the earth as inconspicuously as a quail matches dead leaves, and he settled himself to wait. Slowly and with infinite caution his intended victim stole down, guarding each step, until he was in short and certain range, but, instead of being at the front, he came from the back. He, also, lay flat on his stomach and raised the already cocked pistol. He arranged it in a two-handed grip against a tree trunk and trained it with deliberate care on a point to the left of the other man's spine just below the shoulder blades.

This he aimed the stranger! He did not go down to inspect his work. It was not necessary. The brakeman's fashion with which the head of the unknowns fell forward on his face told him all he wanted to know. He slipped back to his horse, mounted and rode fast to the house of Spicer South, demanding asylum.

The news came word that if Tamarack Spicer would surrender and stand trial in a court dominated by Will Hollman the Hilton boys would let him alone. Otherwise the "war was on." The counsel flung back this message:

"Come and git him."

But Hollman and Purvy, hypocritically clamoring for the sanctity of the law, made no effort to come and "git him." They knew that Spicer South's house was now a fortress, prepared for sieges. They knew that every trail leading thereto guarded. Also, they knew a better way. This time they had the order of the law on their side. The circuit judge, through the sheriff, asked for troops and troops came. Their tents dotted the river bank between the Hilton hotel and Jesse's, for a while the week went out after Tamarack Spicer. The militia captain in command, who knew neither feudal nor death, was courteously received. He had brains, and he assured them that he acted under orders which could not be disobeyed. Unless they surrendered the prisoner, galling guns would follow. If necessary they would bombard the house, and, if necessary, be dragged behind ox teams. Many millionaires might be killed, but for each of them the state had another. If Spicer would surrender, the officer would guarantee him personal protection, and, if it seemed necessary, a change of venue would secure him trial in another circuit. For hours the case deliberated. For the soldiers they felt no enmity. For the young captain they felt an inadvertive liking. He was a man.

Old Spicer South, restored to an echo of his former robustness by the call of action, gave the clan's verdict.

Hit hain't the cote we're skeered of. If this boy goes ter town he won't never git into no cote. He'll be murdered."

The officer held out his hand.

"As man to man," he said, "I pledge you my word that no one shall take him except by process of law. I'm not working for the Hollmans or the Purvys. I know their breed."

For a space old South looked into the soldier's eyes and the soldier looked back.

"I'll take yore handshake on thet bargain," said the mountaineer, gravely. "Tam'rack," he added, in a voice of finality, "yo've got ter go."

The officer had meant what he said. He marched his prisoner into Hilton at the center of a hollow square, with muskets at the ready. And yet, as the procession filed into the courthouse yard, with a soldier rubbing elbows on each side, a sturdy aimed shot sounded from somewhere. The smokeless powder told no tale, and with blue shirts and army hats circling him, Tamarack fell and died.

That afternoon one of Hollman's benchmen was found lying in the road with his lifeless face in the water of the creek. The next day, as old Spicer South stood at the door of his cabin, a rifle roared from the hillside, and he fell, shot through the left shoulder by a bullet intended for his heart. All this while the troops were hopelessly camped at Hilton. They had power and inclination to go out and get men, but there was no man to get.

The Hilton boys had used the soldiers as far as they wished; they had made them pull the chestnuts out of the fire and Tamarack Spicer out of his stronghold. They now refused to serve out additional warrants.

A detail had rushed into Hollman's store as instant alarm for the shot which killed Tamarack was fired. Except for the clerk, who was standing in the door, all the men had taken cover behind the counter. "Nothing like a train down, ma'am," he reported. "The only thing we have in a gittin' that the sensational manager picked up and turned in here was this hand grenade. I'll bet it was the train jare. Joe had missed. Pretty soon it was fired through the one-step, but its ordinary couplings had been re-enforced with small safety pins.

Stimulating Better Farming.

The average production of corn per acre is still under twenty-three bushels while the best farms in the country locality yields of 100 bushels per acre have been reported. The department will issue a bulletin which will contain 12 lessons. The department thinks "rural school teachers, especially, in the great corn-growing states, will find this a valuable aid in the work of stimulating the boys to change a healthy interest in sound agriculture."

Scenario.

"Scenario" is a plausible foreign-born word that we accept gradually from the "movies." It fits its niche. Although we would prefer to see the place less completely occupied by "film." "Scenario," we feel, we accept "scenario," and possibly we may become entirely habituated to it in the passage of time. But may we not protest against expressing "the ability to write scenarios" by the barbaric short cut "scenarioing."

Busily Engaged.

"That the ad of mine is mighty successful, said the proud father. "He makes a terrible racket," replied the old maid aunt. "Yes. He has the whooping cough." "But he couldn't cough all the time." "No. That's why I had to give him a woman buying a card of buttons and a fair-haired clerk waiting on her, they found the building empty.

"Tam'rack, Yo've Got to Go."

"Hit looks mighty suspicious," he said, in a low voice, to his companion.

Old Spicer South would ten years ago have put a bandage on his wound and gone about his business, but now he tossed under the patchwork quilt, and Brother Spencer expressed grave doubts for his recovery. With his counsel unavailable Will McCager by common consent, assumed something like the power of a regent and took upon himself the duties to which Samson should have succeeded.

That a Hollman should have been able to ride the streets and penetrate the heart of South territory to Spicer South's cabin was both astounding and alarming. The war was no longer question now, and there must be counsel. Will McCager had sent out a summons for the family heads to meet that afternoon at his mill. It was Saturday—"mill day"—and so according with ancient custom the lanes would be more traveled than usual.

Those men who came by the wagon road afforded no unusual spectacle, for bobbed such saddle nagged a sack of grain. Their faces bore no stamp of unwonted excitement, but every man balanced a rifle across his pommel. Noise the last, their purpose was grim, and their talk when they had gathered was to the point.

Old McCager, himself sorely perturbed, voiced the sentiment that others had been too courteous to express. With Spicer South bed-ridden and Samson a runaway, they had no advocate leader. McCager was a solid man of intrepid courage and honesty, but grunting grist was his vocation, not strategy and tactics. The enemy had such masters of intrigue as Purvy and Judge Hollman.

SAVED TRAIN BY SAFETY PIN

New-Fangled Gown Caused Something of a Confusion at New York Dance.

One of those new-fangled trains became entangled at a recent dance at the Claridge, according to the New York Times, and when the owner discovered her loss she and the man at the hotel desk had a lot of trouble. It seems that the train had to be made so that it can be worn or not worn, just as the wearer pleased, and it was held in place by safety pins. When her friends expressed their admiration of Mrs. Camille Rose's new frock, all went merry as a marriage bell until one of these friends became so enthusiastic over the way Mrs. Rose managed her new train that the latter drew out of the dance to explain.

"You see, it is like this," she began, catching at her skirt. She caught in vain. There was nothing but the skirt left. The train had left the room. After a hurried search about the room, Mrs. Rose went out to see if the train had arrived at the desk.

"I've lost my train," she announced, somewhat breathlessly.

The clerk immediately got out his train guide. He thought the train was due about two, but overslept the time limit in town, and that she wished to catch a later train.

"We have at the New York Central, ma'am" he inquired, sympathetically, "a very pretty train leaving over the leaver."

The lady explained. The clerk rummaged among the things under the counter. "Nothing like a train down, ma'am," he reported. "The only thing we have in a gittin' that the sensational manager picked up and turned in here was this hand grenade. I'll bet it was the train jare. Joe had missed. Pretty soon it was fired through the one-step, but its ordinary couplings had been re-enforced with small safety pins.

Stimulating Better Farming.

The average production of corn per acre is still under twenty-three bushels while the best farms in the country locality yields of 100 bushels per acre have been reported. The department will issue a bulletin which will

UNHONORED AT HOME

LIST OF THE GREAT UNAPPRECIATED BY COUNTRYMEN.

America Has Had Many, Even in Recent Years—Germany's Ingratitude to Those Who Made Her Immortal in Literature.

Poe was chiefly a drunkard to his contemporaries; the gentle Emerson, for one great philosopher, was abused for his candor; Walt Whitman was bowled down, and our one genius of a painter, Whistler, lived abroad his life long. Thoreau was considered as an great "shaker," and Henry James is a dweller under foreign tents.

Germany, too, has a little list. Goethe, who was early damned as "immoral" and as a revolutionist when his land was occupied by Napoleon (the Little Corporal knew better; "Volk on hommes!" he exclaimed.) Heine died in exile at "M. Henri Heine, poete et mecanicien" at Paris. Schopenhauer and Nietzsche abused their native country in language that still glitters with frosty and hatred. Richard Wagner had no reason to love Germany, and, like Beethoven, died in Vienna. Handel, an Englishman by adoption, Schumann, and many others, who spent their money lent. In our own day Richard Strauss and Arnold Schoenberg have suffered.

In France the number of discoverers, thinkers, lyrical, Rousseau-Voltaire, was too sensible. Voltaire too pagan-minded to be crucified, Victor Hugo, Baudelaire, Flaubert (the two last named were publicly prosecuted for "obscene" writings—stupendous), Berlioz (adjudged a madman), Balzac, Pasteur, Verlaine, Manet, Monet—how many more? Mind you, I don't say that these men were all model citizens; Hugo was a bad husband, Balzac a Mohammedan, Berlioz a bad husband, Manet is bitterly as was Richard Wagner.

Italy: Dante, august name, mighty poet, "solitary pacer of the shore," Columbus, Galileo, Marconi, Carducci. Even little Holland allowed Rembrandt, Vermeer and Hobbema to die obscurely, leaned among dishes can show James Clarence Mangan—now don't say, "it's a pity he drank!"—and John M. Synge. Scotland has Burns as an "awful" example, while England is first in the field as the mother of poets: Milton, Blake, Shelley, Keats, Byron, Browning, Swinburne, Meredith, Lander and Harvey. Yet, in Dr. Johnson one could all tell tales of neglect, continuely, even to-day.

Spain scorned her greatest writer, Cervantes; Sweden her mystic Swedenborg; her great philosopher, Heine like Dante, lived in exile, solitary and abused by the world. Lenau of Hungary died mad.

Hinds was not too gentle in her handling of Dostoievsky—who was shipped to Siberia ten years ago. Tolstoy was hated by his countrymen; Turgeniev was solicited, but organized a protest against his coming to his country; Pushkin, the patriotic. Poland's hard. Adam Mickiewicz, fled to Paris; even the spiritual Chopin, psychically brave, as his music proves, left Warsaw for the Seine.

This list might easily be lengthened. A good summary of Spaniards, Jacob Christ, Mahomet, Moses, Maimonides, Luther, Loyola and Savonarola, because they are victims to the worst intolerance of mankind—that which arouses by theological odium. Such persons as Shakespeare, Cervantes, Velasquez, Montaigne, never became enrolled in politics or religion. Even if you are never assaulted with any of the great names, simply reply with the question: "How were treated during their lifetime by their fellow countrymen?"—Puck.

Preventing Soil Erosion.

Soil erosion causes immense damage constantly, and few people know how to apply preventive measures. In a single month, the U. S. Department of soils of the department of agriculture has made about 100 reports on cases of erosions is described. This is the case where the soil is being washed away by rains, and it is necessary to build a dam across the incipient gulley. Sometimes, which is worse, the damage is done by the rushing of a big stream, and the dam must be made strong enough to withstand the force of the water. The hollow formed by the dam will fill with water in flood conditions until the top of the upright pipe is reached, when the excess of water runs off quickly into the next field or into another impounding space below. The rushing current of the draining water is stopped and the sediment carried in it is deposited. It is necessary to repair the damage previously done. A suitable tile drain located under the dam will dispose of the water. Sometimes a pipe is used as a drain. Sometimes a "gulch" example, while England is first in the field as the mother of poets: Milton, Blake, Shelley, Keats, Byron, Browning, Swinburne, Meredith, Lander and Harvey. Swift, Dr. Dee, Dr. Johnson could all tell tales of neglect, continuely, even to-day.

Spain scorned her greatest writer, Cervantes; Sweden her mystic Swedenborg; her great philosopher, Heine like Dante, lived in exile, solitary and abused by the world. Lenau of Hungary died mad.

Hinds was not too gentle in her handling of Dostoievsky—who was shipped to Siberia ten years ago. Tolstoy was hated by his countrymen; Turgeniev was solicited, but organized a protest against his coming to his country; Pushkin, the patriotic. Poland's hard. Adam Mickiewicz, fled to Paris; even the spiritual Chopin, psychically brave, as his music proves, left Warsaw for the Seine.

This list might easily be lengthened. A good summary of Spaniards, Jacob Christ, Mahomet, Moses, Maimonides, Luther, Loyola and Savonarola, because they are victims to the worst intolerance of mankind—that which arouses by theological odium. Such persons as Shakespeare, Cervantes, Velasquez, Montaigne, never became enrolled in politics or religion. Even if you are never assaulted with any of the great names, simply reply with the question: "How were treated during their lifetime by their fellow countrymen?"—Puck.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy

is a reliable and successful remedy for kidney and liver troubles. Its success has covered a period of 37 years, giving relief and remedy when other medicines have failed. It is pleasant to take, and is sold by all druggists.

Two sizes, 50c and $1.00, at your druggist, or direct, postpaid on receipt of price.

Write for Booklet.

Warner's Safe Remedies Co. ROCHESTER, N. Y.

ABSORBINE, JR., STOPS LAMENESS from a Bone Spavin, Ringbone, Splint, Curb, Side Bone, or similar trouble and gets horse going sound. Does not blister or remove the hair and horse can be worked. Pint $2 in pamphlet with each bottle tells how. $1.00 a bottle delivered. Horse Book 9 R. free.

ABSORBINE, JR., antiseptic liniment for mankind. Reduces Swellings, Painful Enlarged Glands, Goitre, Wens, Bruises, Varicose Veins, Varicosities, Varicocele, Allays Pain. Will tell you more if you write. $1 and $2 a bottle at druggists. Book "Evidence" free. Manufactured only by W. F. Young, P.D., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

Give some people their pick and they'll proceed to pick flaws.

DON'T LET GRAY HAIRS

Make You Look Old. Restore Natural Color by Trifling Expenditure.

Thousands of men and women with grey, faded or streaked hair are experimenting, thought it is an expensive, lengthy and uncertain process, with the various preparations claiming to restore the original youthful color. Absolutely harmless sulphur still remains the best and most economical agent for restoring the natural color and beauty to grey, faded or streaked hair. Now it is known you can secure this sulphur in a convenient form ready for use by asking any druggist for a 2 oz. bottle of Wyeth's Sulphur Compound. This will last a long time and is so much better than the ordinary home mixtures that it is the only one most druggists now sell. Now it will not rub off, is not sticky or greasy, and does not interfere with the most delicate hair dressing. Your druggist will not sell you this unless you request it, but if you want your hair to be free from grey, faded or streaked appearance, you will find this the most satisfactory and convenient way to secure the desired result. Adv.

Pimples Disfigure Your Face

Make you feel cheap and mean. Why not get rid of them? Why not clear your skin of all blemishes and have a clear, smooth complexion? Why not? Because you don't know that Sulphur is the best medicine to use internally and Cuticura Ointment the best external application. For a time, Cuticura Soap and Ointment are all you need. Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere. Sample each free with 32-p. skin book. Address "Cuticura," Dept. 21, Boston.

DISTRESSING PIMPLES

Removed by Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Trial Free.

Smear them with the Ointment. Wash off in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue the treatment some minutes. Repeat on rising and retiring. These fragrant, superscrumy emollients do much for the skin, and do it quickly.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XV, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

WHAT TO EAT.

When ideas seem to be scarce as to food combinations and one does not know what to serve try the following suggestions for dishes.

Ham and Bean Casserole.—Cover a two-quart dish with ham, add milk and let stand for several hours. Put the beans in a casserole and cover with a can of kidney beans which have been seasoned with mustard, sugar, salt and a bit of onion. Cover with the milk and bake until done. Season the cabbage well with butter, salt and vinegar, and put into the baked beans. Serve with steaming hot.

Apple and Cranberry Salad. — Divide the grapefruit into halves and take out the pulp, crushing it in a bowl. Add to it one-half the connecting fillers and one to the fruit and the juice of one orange. Add a French dressing, pile high in the shells of grapefruit and garnish with slices of cranberry jelly and serve in the shaken surrounded with cracked ice.

Frozen Fruit Cup.—A rosy ice with the meal course is a great favorite with many. Put a spoonful of raspberry, lemon or orange ice in a sherbet glass and add a few fruits covered with chopped ginger on the lemon or orange ice, and a spoonful of whipped cream over raspberry. Garnish with very thin slices of bananas and grapes and serve at once.

Jellied Apples.—Pare and core large apples, fill the cavities with jelly, currant jelly, sprinkle with sugar and lemon juice. Place a little water in the pan around the apples and let this bake in the oven until candied but not too brown. Preserve ginger may be used in place of jelly if so desired.

Tomato Jelly.—Stew together twenty minutes a two-pound can of tomatoes, six cloves, eight pepper corns, a blade of mace, one bay leaf, one onion and eight sprigs of parsley, a half cupful of chopped celery, strain and add one-half package of gelatin, softened in a little cold water, season with salt and a dash of red pepper. Set in ice water to cool, pour into a mold and set in a cool place to form. Serve with roses of mayonnaise and olives.

Nellie Maxwell.

New Industrial Disease.

A curious industrial disease has been reported by Dr. F. Koelsch as arising in certain electro-chemical factories from inhaling the dust of calcium cyanamid. The train of symptoms developed was tasting of metal in the mouth, dryness of the throat, a sensation of constriction of the upper part of the body, inflamed eyes, rapid pulse and breathing, lowered blood pressure, and a sense of oppression in the chest. The attack which usually lasted two days passes in an hour or two.—Exchange.

Russian Priests Must Marry.

While the Catholic priest must be celibate, the Russian priest must be married when he gets a position. As soon as he loses his wife he has to give up his position or go into a monastery. There is no celibacy in the Russian church, but this exists only in the monasteries. A monk can never be a parish priest.

Dust That Hurts.

To the generous mind the heaviest debt is that of gratitude, which we put in our power to repay it.—Franklin.

HELPFUL HINTS AND TASTY DISHES.

When putting a roast into the oven, add a small amount of vinegar and use it to baste the meat. It will not only keep the meat from burning, it will soften the fiber and make it more tender, and add a delicious flavor to it. A teaspoonful of vinegar to a five-pound roast will be sufficient.

Creamed Eggs.—Cook six eggs until hard. Make a plan of white sauce, using four tablespoonfuls of flour and the value of butter; a half teaspoonful of salt and a pint of rich milk. Put six slices of toast on a hot dish, put the eggs on the toast, cover the eggs with the sauce, then with butter, then cut the eggs in strips and add a layer of them. Rub a part of the yolks through a sieve for a garnish, place in the oven for a few minutes and then serve hot.

Ham Cutlets.—Have ready a half cupful of chopped nuts, using Brazil, walnuts and almonds, add to them a cup of bread crumbs and a cupful of mashed potatoes, with a little chopped parsley and onion juice. Add enough milk with other ingredients; add salt and pepper and form into cutlets, place in butter, egg and crumbs and fry a golden brown.

Ice Cream Pie.—Mix equal quantities of chopped boiled beets and crushed pineapple, add a boiled dressing and serve on lettuce leaves.

Devil's Oysters.—Drain and cut oysters in two, place a dozen in the shell, add a tablespoonfuls of vinegar, half a teaspoonful of mustard, a dash of cayenne, a pinch of sugar and salt, with two tablespoonfuls of butter, simmer together; add about a pint of oysters and cook until well curled. Place on a hot dish and serve with a piece of lemon.

Grape Mousse.—Add to a quart of grape juice a half teaspoonful of clove extract, the juice of a lemon and three qts. of ice. Then stir in two stiffly beaten whites, pack in a mold and let stand in ice for an hour two or more hours. Serve with small cake.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

Cut the center from a firm cabbage and boil the shell until tender, mince the part taken from the center and boil that with the shell. Add enough salt and pepper, one egg and a little butter and as much veal as cabbage. Put one cupful of cooked rice into a baking dish, pour over it the mixture and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with a sauce made of one cupful of cooked rice, one cupful of milk and two tablespoonfuls of butter, seasoned with salt and pepper, one egg and a little butter and as much veal as cabbage. Put one cupful of cooked rice into a baking dish, pour over it the mixture and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with a sauce made of one cupful of cooked rice, one cupful of milk and two tablespoonfuls of butter, seasoned with salt and pepper.

Apple and Grapefruit Salad. — Divide the grapefruit into halves and take out the pulp, crushing it in a bowl. Add to it one-half the connecting fillers and one to the fruit and the juice of one orange. Add a French dressing, pile high in the shells of grapefruit and garnish with slices of cranberry jelly and serve in the shaken surrounded with cracked ice.

Good Place to Keep Away From.

Bacon—Didn't some of the warring factions on the other side try to get into Greece?

Lemon—I believe so.

"What for?"

"Needed to."

"Here's a paragraph in the paper that says the cost of living in Greece is said to be fifty per cent higher than in England and twenty per cent higher than in the United States."

Like the Implication.

Some men like to be considered fickle because the implication that they have money when they haven't—Houston Post.

KNOW NOW

And Will Never Forget the Experience.

The coffee drinker who has suffered and then been completely relieved by changing from coffee to Postum knows a something valuable. There's no doubt about it.

"I learned the truth about coffee in a peculiar way," says a California woman. "My husband was for years a boon of a bilious temperament, forced to leave off coffee and give Postum a trial, as I did also on account of trouble of making two beverages for meals I concluded to try Postum, too. The results have been that while my husband has been greatly benefited, I have myself received even greater benefit.

"When I began to drink Postum I was thin, in a nervous, run-down condition. Now I actually weigh 18 pounds more than I did at that time and I am stronger physically and in my nerves, while husband is free from all his ills.

"We have learned our little lesson about coffee and we know something about Postum, too, for we have used Postum now steadily for the last three years and we intend to keep on to do so.

"We have a more use for coffee—the drug Postum.

"Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the "Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the new one? Is true.

Good Reasons for Low Prices.

Regular Postum—must be well boiled, 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

"The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

—sold by Grocers.

Pimples, Blotches, Rashes

Cuticura Ointment stops itching, burning, scaling, and clears the skin and scalp of eczema, rashes, itchings, and other skin troubles. Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere. Sample each free with 32-p. skin book. Address "Cuticura," Dept. 21, Boston.

Pimples, Blackheads, Red, Rough Hands

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are the best for the skin, scalp, and hands. Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere. Sample each free with 32-p. skin book. Address "Cuticura," Dept. 21, Boston.

Shaving Soap

Cuticura Soap shaves without mug. Sample free. Address "Cuticura," Dept. 21, Boston.

Pimples, Blackheads, Chafings

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are the best for the skin, scalp, and hands. Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere. Sample each free with 32-p. skin book

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 7
SUBSCRIPTION RATES
Three Months .... $ .45
Six Months .... .75
One Year 1.00

CZAR NEARS COAL BY BRITAIN'S AID

It Puts Constantinople Within Reach of the Russians.

CITY DESIRED FOR AGES.

Muscovites Have Waged Ten Wars For Possession of Seating Ancient Byzantium, Ultimate Object Being Winning of a Port With Access to the Mediterranean.

The declaration of the British foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey, that Great Britain is willing to abandon her historic opposition to Russian access to the Mediterranean, shows that a crisis which threatened last from time to time for centuries has culminated by force of arms has been reached. The policy was to keep Russia from having unobstructed access to the Mediterranean, and to keep from her the idea that such access might at any time be employed to build up the United Kingdom from the Indian empire, which would then fall a prey to Russia operating from Finland.

On the other hand, Russia, with a vast area of as yet undeveloped resources, has so constantly sought a southern outlet that it could be free from ice the year around. Imagine the United States in the present attitude, but with twice its interior area and with no port south of Portland, ore., and you have a fair idea of the commercial geographical position of Russia. The reduction of the Dardanelles forts protecting Constantinople has added materially in advancing Russia's aims.

For two centuries Russia has sought to reach the eastern Mediterranean through Turkey and is now fighting her tenth war in the effort. After each defeat she has turned her attention elsewhere. The Russo-Japanese war developed from an attempt of Russia to secure the coveted port on the coast of Asia. The delicate condition of Anglo-Russian diplomacy during the latter half of the last century was due to Russia's desire to obtain a foothold on the Persian gulf. Russia's efforts were finally disjointed, however, by the Anglo-Russian treaty of 1907, which paved the way to the present Triple Entente. Russia's attention then reverted to the near east and Turkey.

Here is a brief record of Russia's attempts for the last 200 years to reach the sea via Turkey:

In 1710 Russia attempted to reach Turkey via the Black sea and was defeated.

In 1739 Russia, aided by Austria, tried to reach Turkey through the Balkans, but at the close of the war the Turks had taken Belgrade from Austria.

The war of 1768-74 was in retaliation for that of 1739. Russia invaded northeastern Turkey and seized the Turkish ships from the Black sea. All that saved Constantinople then was the plague which broke out in the Russian army.

In 1788 Russia attacked Turkey along the Danube, and her troops had reached the southern confines of Bulgaria as it was prior to the late Balkan war, when Turkey sued for peace.

The war of 1806-7 was brought about by the intrigues of Napoleon, who, at the court of the sultan, was designed to divert Russia's attention from the march of the French on Moscow. Russia had come to the support of Russia against the French, and was defeated through the Dardanelles and threatened to bombard Constantinople unless Turkey joined England and Russia against Napoleon. The Turk was still making ready to carry out his threat when he capitulated.

In 1829 a Russian army advanced as far as Bazarjik, but could not proceed on account of disease and the lack of provisions.

A similar invasion was repeated in 1853, with great preliminary demands on Turkey, and with the conditional objective of Constantinople. This was the famous war in which Greece gained her independence and by which Russia freed part of what is now Roumania from Turkish rule, but it was cut short by the plague.

Then came the Crimean war of 1853-4, in which Russia's avowed objective was again Constantinople and which drew England, France and even the kingdom of Sardinia to the defense of the Turks. In this war the allies carried hostilities into Russian territory north of the Black sea, and, in the end, even Austria rose and forced Russia to evacuate the part of Roumania she had freed from Turkey thirty years before.

In the war of 1877-8 Russia, thinking to allay any apprehensions in western Europe, declared herself to be the champion of Christendom, but her objective was, as ever, the same—Constantinople. As a result of the Crimean war Russia had been prohibited by the allies from maintaining a fleet on the Black sea, and so she was compelled to key through Roumania and was actually served from Gunatz by the Roumanian troops at Plevna. The new Servian state also aided Russia, and her victory caused Austria, when again England intervened by sending a fleet through the Dardanelles to the defense of Constantinople. Disease, lack of provisions and the threatening British fleet brought the campaign to a close, and again, and perhaps for the last time, saved the ancient capital of Turkey from the Russians.

Now, for the tenth time, Russia is attempting to reach Constantinople, and, if she succeeds, she will be in a position to dictate to the world, for she will be able to close the door of her own house against the world, and, with her ally, Turkey, she will be able to dictate terms to the world. Russia's attention then reverted to the near east and Turkey.

MYSTERY OF MATTER.

Editor Politics of the Manual That Forms Our Bodies.

Mr. Gladstone recently has written a treatise on chemistry from which we take this paragraph from the chapter on "Matter."

"The endless circulation of matter in the universe is perhaps one of the most wonderful facts with which chemistry has to deal. It is this and was change that causes the history of the most common and unpalatable substance about us to be more astonishing than any fairy tale.

"What a wonderful story, for example, could be written of the material that forms our bodies! It came into existence in the immense depth of space millions upon millions of years ago and wandered for ages through darkness and void until it reached our earth. Perhaps it fell upon the earth in a dry meteorite, or perhaps it were by passed the huge fire mist from which our solid world condensed. Since then it has run round and round after sun in its orbit, one of a band.

"First it formed part of that red vapor of which we know that surrounded the sun and blew in mighty winds round our planet; then it was absorbed into the body of some living thing, and, when the living thing died and its body decayed and the matter passed into the rich mother earth. Thence it passed into some plant by means of its roots, and from the plant it passed by the process of being devoured into the body of some animal, and from the animal again it passed to earth and plant and animal and animals again, and so on through an endless cycle of changes, constantly, for hundreds of innumerable multitudes of living things, it has passed this little speck of dust, unending vista into the depths of time.

"Matter is reached man. Yes, the very atoms that thrill and flash in our brains have once been part of some of a living plant or animal millions of years ago and will again pass into the living flesh or animal millions of years hence. In some form or other the matter of our bodies must exist and will exist long after the whole present order of creation has passed away. Indeed, it may well yet blow in the winds of space and be incorporated into fresh forms of life not yet evolved."

Household Hints

If the kitchen range gets a spot of rust one shopper on a Friday, it can be quickly removed by a work with whiting on a moist cloth.

Tea and coffee pots may be made by free lustrousness around the nose and then rinse in with turpentine stick. This should be done with thread matching the gloss.

Tar may be removed from the hands by rubbing with the outside of fresh orange or lemon peel and then rinse in warm water.

Rust may be removed from the hands by rubbing with the outside of fresh orange or lemon peel and then rinse in warm water.

Northern Michigan

George E. Gerr, aged 76, one of the oldest settlers in this section died at his home near Alden on Friday.

East Jordan Enterprise: Mr. Charles L. Amos, who with A. H. Frost and W. P. Porter comprise the East Jordan Lumber Co., died at his winter home at Pasadena, California, on Wednesday last, after a brief illness, in his eighty-first year. For about a quarter of a century he has been identified with East Jordan's industries, and has many friends here. The funeral was held Friday at Pasadena, and during the funeral hour the East Jordan Lumber Co's mills and store were closed.

Central Lake Torch: Last Monday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Henderson were returning from Bellaire, the horses they were driving became skittish when another team tried to pass, and promptly ran away. Both Mr. and Mrs. Henderson were thrown from the cutter, but not injured. The horse continued its way unmolested until it came to Central Lake, when it started north down the railroad track. On reaching the bridge, in some way it fell off, breaking its neck. The horse belonged to the telephone company.

Between 40 and 50 men are now at work overhauling the steamer Peters, now stationed at Manistee dry dock. The boat is owned by the Noesen line. The Peters will be widened 12 feet by the addition of two false sides, five feet each side, giving her a total beam of 44 feet, which, it is believed, will make her the widest boat on the lakes. The false sides will greatly increase the lumber capacity of the boat. Besides this addition she will receive many new deck beams and other improvements which will make her practically a new boat. When more lumber arrives it is expected that the force at the yards will be increased to about 60 men.

A Washington dispatch says: "William Paul, of Omena, and Joseph Nyi, of Petoskey, two Michigan Indians, have presented claims to valuable tracts of land in Grand Traverse county before the bureau of Indian affairs. The claims were presented through Congressman J. C. McLaughlin. The Indians contend that they have certain rights in lands granted by treaties made with their tribes in 1836 and 1855. They these treaties certain tracts of land were set aside in Michigan on which the Indians were given the right to reside, entries within a given time. Many members of the tribes failed to take advantage of the right within the period and the time was later extended. A few failed wholly to make entries. Now the question arises as to whether they have any claims against the government either in money, to the lands in question, or rights to make entry on other land. The matter has been referred to one of the legal experts of the bureau."

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. House and lots in any part of the city, and 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

Religious Notes

Congregational Church
(STANDING NOTICES)
Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.
Bible School, 12 o'clock.
Young People's Meeting, 6:00 p. m.
Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT HONTON)
Bible School at 1:30 p. m.
Preaching, 2:30 p. m.

Baptist Church
A. M.—"The Battlement Around the Home."
P. M.—"The Mid-night Alarm."
Bible Study.—Tuesday evening 7:15.—"The Doctrine Concerning Sin."
Prayer Meeting.—"Difficult Scriptures made plain as day."
B. Y. P. U.—Topic, "How to Make This World a Happier Place." Prov. 3:13-18. Leader, Beulah Bowdish.

Christian Science
Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.
Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Man."
Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.
Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m., also 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service
8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:00 a. m.—High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.
Masses during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church
Services second and fourth Thursday in each month, by Rev. Harris, of Petoskey.

Methodist Church.
A. M. "Miracles."
P. M. "Why I am a Methodist."

The Largest Reptile.

The largest existing reptile is the mud-eating salt water crocodile of southern Asia and Australia, which when full grown, measures thirty feet in length from end of nose to tip of tail. One man makes hardly more than a mouthful for this ravenous creature.

She Knew It.

He—Didn't it offend you to see that I was in love with you? She—Certainly not. I haven't you ever noticed me laughing to myself?—Topeka Journal.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, March 1, 1915.
The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date—Mayor Nicholls presiding.
Aldermen present, See, Priest, Cartier, Barney and Shapton.
Absent Carey.
Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as corrected.
Enter Alderman Carey.
The Finance Committee submitted the following report: Having examined the following bills report the same correct and recommend that they be allowed out of the several funds as hereinafter stated.

General Fund
Jos. Cook, salary	$ 25.00
A. Hagelstein, salary	25.00
Bridge Fund
Elmer Johnson, salary	50.00
Cemetery Fund
Wm McLain, salary	25.00
Police Fund
John Jefferies, salary	30.00
Highway Fund
Frank Pennell, services	30.00
C. W. Harrington, services	3.75
W. Dougall, services	3.75
C. D. Ward, services	12.00
Fire Fund
F. S. Bettes, supplies	2.50
Chas. Hayes, services	15.00
Charlevoix Fire Dept., Golden Fire	15.00
H. D. Marshall, coal	7.25
H. C. Cartier, stamps	.10
Northern Street Sewer L. I. No. 3
Wm. J. Cook, 1st repayment on bonds No. 3	7.74
Jos. Cook, 1st repayment on bonds No. 3	15.48
Electric & Water Funds
F. S. Bettes, supplies	2.75
Henry Bechtold, February current	70.00
Jos. Cook, services	75.00
Samuel Lewis, salary	50.00
Morris Ackett, services	30.00
Sheldon Adams Co., fuel on hand	15.00
R. W. Kane Agy., insurance premium	10.00
Moved by Alderman Priest and seconded by Alderman Shapton that the report as read be accepted and the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to issue warrants on the City Depositories for the $1147.33 and the Clerk be instructed to draw orders on the various funds for the amount of each respective bill. Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote: Ayes, See, Priest, Cartier, Barney, Shapton and Carey. Nays, none.
There being no further business the Council adjourned.
F. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

He Knew.

The professor of the class in English literature was telling his young men of the impressionistic age about the Elizabethan era when, suddenly turning to one of the young men who seemed to be in a dream, with a faraway gaze, he said:
"And now old was Elizabeth, Mr. Cass?"
"Thirteen last birthday," came the instant reply.

First publication Jan. 21st

NOTICE

To the owner or owners of any and all interests in, or liens upon the lands herein described.
TAX NOTICE. That sale has been lawfully made of the following described lands for unpaid taxes thereon and that the undersigned has title thereto under tax deed of deeds issued therefor, and that you are entitled to redeem therefrom at any time within six months after return of service of this notice, upon payment to the undersigned or to the register in chancery of the county in which the lands lie of all sums paid upon such purchase, together with one hundred per centum additional thereto, and the fees of the sheriff for the service or cost of publication of this notice, to be computed as upon personal service of a declaration as commencement of suit and the further sum of five dollars for each description without other additional cost or charge. If payment is not made as aforesaid, the undersigned will institute proceedings for possession of the land.
DESCRIPTION: The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section thirty-two (32), township thirty-two (32) north range seven (7) west, South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan.
Amount paid $29.46
Taxes of 1912.
Yours etc.
J. L. CRANE,
Charlevoix, Michigan

State of Michigan,
County of Charlevoix, ss.
I, Charles Novak, sheriff of said county, do hereby certify and return after carefully inquiry, I am unable to ascertain the whereabouts of post-office address of Daniel Campbell, a person entitled to be served with the within notice and after like careful inquiry, I am unable to find the name or address of any trustee, guardian, executor, administrator or heir of said Daniel Campbell, upon who service of said notice can be made. I further certify that the above notice was delivered to me for service December 7, 1914, at which time I was under sheriff of said County of Charlevoix.
Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 19, 1915. My fees $1.00.
CHARLES NOVAK,
Sheriff of said County.

Lisle Shanahan,
Attorney at Law.
Office in County Bank Bldg.

It Really Does Relieve Rheumatism
Everybody who is afflicted with rheumatism in any form should by all means keep a bottle of Sloan's Liniment on hand. The minute you feel that no soreness in a joint or muscle, bath it with Sloan's Liniment. Don't rub it. Sloan's penetrates almost immediately right to the seat of pain, relieving the hot, tender, aching and making the part easy and comfortable. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sprains and all ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.

For Saturday Only-
A. E. Mason's Dept. Store WILL SELL FOR CASH

25 pounds Producer Flour	95c
One barrel Producer Flour	$7.25
3 packages 10c Jelly Con	33c
12-25c Oranges	10c
12 Clothes Pins	19c
3 Large boxes Tooth Picks	1c
3 Boxes Ohio Matches	5c
10 yards 6c Calico	10c

MASON'S Department Store

Charlevoix Rock Product Company,
Producers and Manufacturers of
Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Flux
Sugar Stone.
Phone 80.

PETER BENSON
CONTRACTOR FOR
Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.
If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10c ASSORTED
Best Wishes, Greetings, Lovers, Birthday, etc. Include your name in our Post Card Exchange free on request, and free sample copy of the Family Story Paper; also Catalogue and Premium List. Confine 1c stamps for return postage, etc.
FAMILY STORY PAPER
24-26 Vandewater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction
Auto and Boat Supplies.
214 Bridge St. - Phone 194
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

10 Great Serials
Full of life and action, filled with the fire of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make
The YOUTH'S COMPANION
Better Than Ever in 1915
Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.
CUT THIS OUT and send it for none of this paper with $2.00 for The COMPANION
FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remainder of 1915.
FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1916.
THEN The 52 Weekly issues of THE COMPANION in 1917.
52 Times a Year —not 12.
Send today to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for THREE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE
SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

Grand Rapids Evening Press DAILY
AND THE
Charlevoix Sentinel
BOTH ONE YEAR FOR
$ 3.00

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Contractor and Builder
Estimates furnished. Phone 333 Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD, DENTIST.
Office in the Hamilton Block. Over R. A. Lamson & Co's Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139.

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Office in Priest's Block.
Charlevoix - Michigan

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS SHOULD USE
5 DROPS
The Best Remedy For all forms of Rheumatism
LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, GOUT, NEURALGIA, AND KIDNEY TROUBLES
5 DROPS
STOP THE PAIN
Given Quick Relief
No. 50 Sent Free
SOLD AT ALL DRUGGISTS

TENANTS for SUMMER COTTAGES
Delivered free in the AMERICAN ISRAELITE, Cincinnati,
CHICAGO ISRAELITE, Chicago,
the leading Jewish papers of the U. S.
LEO WISE & COMPANY
Advertising Specialists, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Lisle Shanahan,
Attorney at Law.
Office in County Bank Bldg.

Coughs
Kill If You Let Them.
Insist on your Cough with DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY. It heals irritated Throat and Lungs. Thousands in last 40 years benefited by
Dr. King's New Discovery
Money Back If It Fails
All Druggists 50c. and $1.00

Desire for liquor and drugs relieved in from 5 to 10 days, require secretion Potenko Hospital.

VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, March 11, 1915. — NUMBER 47

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

Safety First-
YOUR pocket is not a very good depository for your money. It does not pay interest and it allows your money to be constantly subject to loss by theft or accident.
We will not only protect your money against loss but will pay you 4 percent interest, so that the money you save will be constantly increasing.
With the Opening of the Springtime, open an account with the bank.
CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250.000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
V. J. RACHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Asst. Cashier.

J. L. CRANE
"Lindquist" "Pure Fabric" Norfolk Suits for $3.95-Boys-$3.95
PURE WOOL MATERIALS.
NAVY BLUE SERGE—
BROWN CASSIMERE—
GRAY CASSIMERE—
$3.95 We ask you to inspect the quality of these garments before buying. $3.95
Men's Suits All Wool Materials—
$6.95 - $8.50 - $9.75 - $12.50 - $13.75 - $15.00
—All "Lindquist" "Pure Fabric" Goods—
MEN'S AND YOUTHS Trousers—
Wool Mixed $1.50 - $1.65
All Wool $2.50 - $3.75
Satisfaction Guaranteed.

∴ ∴ Local and Personal Notes ∴ ∴

Mrs. Henry Hilton, of Norwood township is in Ohio visiting a sister.

"When Broadway Was a Trail," next Wednesday evening, at the Majestic.

F. E. Frazier and family returned home from the northwest last Thursday.

Hon. H. A. Putnam, of Ludington, visited friends here a few days last week.

The editor spent Saturday and Sunday at Bellaire with his daughter, Mrs. Ira A. Adams.

Ford P. Robbins, of Boyne Falls, was in town Tuesday talking Studebaker automobile logs.

H. O. Cerlzen, the well known ladies tailor, has an ad in this issue that will interest the ladies.

Chas Munyon left Saturday morning for Muskegon to attend the funeral of his brother-in law.

Don't forget that the pot-luck supper at Odd Fellows' Hall, Friday evening of this week is for the Maccabees and their families.

The auto deliveries are all out, and one by one "gas-wagons" are appearing. With fear and trembling we are daily expecting to see Capt. Cook.

The W. C. T. U. will serve supper Friday evening March 12 from 5:00 o'clock until all are served. At Congregational Church dining room. Price 25 cents.

Geo. A. Crouter, agent for the Buick automobile, received three fine new cars from the shops last week, and proposes to push that excellent car for all they it is worth.

Andrew Timmer, of whose serious illness we spoke last week, died Wednesday night. He leaves a wife and two children. The remains left here Friday morning for interment at Ionia.

The St. James mail carriers are still doing business. The mail went to Crooked Village Monday, returning Tuesday. They leave St. James again this (Thursday) morning. They report the ice good. They hope to make still another trip—perhaps two.

Mr. Mather, of the Waller farm, Charlevoix township, calls the attention of farmers to a treatise on orchard pruning, which may be secured by addressing, "New York Agricultural Experiment Station, Geneva, N. Y." Call for "Circular No. 13, of Jan. 15, 1910."

Co. I, third regiment, Michigan National Guard, located at Manistee, has been officially mustered out of the service, which leaves a vacancy in the 3rd regiment. We would like very much to see Co. "X" of East Jordan mustered into the service, and a strong effort is being made to get it accepted.

The W. C. T. U. will meet in the parlor of the Congregational Church, Friday P. M. March 12. There will be good music and several short addresses on the subject for the day, "How may our union be a vital force in our community?" After this will be election of officers for the ensuing year. All members are requested to attend.

Last Friday afternoon Sam Hamilton and wife, with Mrs. H. H. Huber as a passenger, went to Boyne City with an ice boat. They had a fine run up, and Friday with a fair wind, were making easily 50 miles per hour. Off Sequanota the outfit struck a bad "hump" in the ice. The boat was thrown upon its three edges and passengers were thrown out. Mrs. Huber had her side injured, and suffered quite a severe shaking up. But he managed to get ashore at Cobbetts farm, from whence he telephoned for a rig, which brought them home.

Harley Oakes, assistant pharmacist at the Central drug store met with an accident Sunday that came near permanently depriving him of his eyesight. He was filling a bottle with carbolic acid. Unnoticed by him it was a cracked bottle, and the bottle burst, the acid flying into his face, some of it reaching his eyes. Here is where his expert knowledge came into play. He managed to quickly reach the alcohol bottle, and with this bathed his eyes, and the following day later with water. He is laid up, but is doing well.

Preparations for the Second Annual Color Boys Conference are under way and the arrangements will be such as to warrant the convening wide interest which is manifest even at this early date. Local committees have been appointed in East Jordan where the conference is to be held. These committees will keep matters in their charge up to date thus eliminating confusion and friction as the time for this important event draws near. Attendance at the conference is not restricted to Y. M. C. A. members. Any boy who is fourteen years of age or over may attend provided his registration card is mailed to the chairman of the entertainment committee on or before the 10th of April. The registration fee of 25c will be due at the time delegates are assigned to their places of entertainment and are provided with their banquet tickets and other conference printed matter.

The Charlevoix Coast Guard Station will open next Monday at midnight.

Capt. Ava Smith, of Chicago, joined his wife here Friday for a short stay.

Capt. Pete McCafferty and family will move into their renovated home this week.

David Howard left Monday for Muskegon to resume service as a surfman in the Coast Guard crew.

Everybody, including father, is at work. There is not a town in Northern Michigan, of the same population, that fills more dinner pails.

Allie Moore, of this city, former champion roller skater of the world, left Wednesday of this week for New York to fill an engagement at Madison Square Garden.

There will be a ten cent tea at the home of Mrs. Harry Nicholls on Thursday afternoon of this week, for the benefit of the Charlevoix Equal Suffrage Association.

"When Broadway Was a Trail," is the next big attraction booked for the Majestic Theatre. Wednesday evening of next week is the date. This is said to be a marvelous moving picture production.

The Charlevoix Lumber Co. succeeded in yarding all its logs last week, during the temporary freeze. We are told by Andrew Ross, superintendent, that the Company's cut will be the largest for five years. The mill will have work for a long time to come.

John Race, an old settler of this section, was found dead in his home in Eveline Sunday. Heart disease is given as the cause of his death. He is survived by a daughter and son—Mrs. John Glass, of Hastings, Mich., and Jay Race, of Marinette, Wis.

The eighth grade Y. M. C. A. met in the high school building on Monday night, March 8th. Twenty minutes was devoted to Bible Study and afterwards in the presence of the 6th and 7th grades Mr. Nels Palmer and David Howard gave talks chiefly on first aid to the drowning.

There is one citizen of Charlevoix who is of German antecedents, and who speaks the language as fluently as the Kaiser himself, who has no use for the "hyphen." He says emphatically that he is not a "German-American" but an "American, and is proud of it. His sympathies are with the Fatherland, but that is his business. When it comes to allegiance that is another matter, and he just as soon tell the Kaiser of that fact, if the Kaiser asked him, which he probably won't. No hyphen for Charlie.

That Charlevoix Hardware Co. show window is a joke, and yet it is not. As an exhibition of ingenuity it is a masterpiece. How on earth Mr. Bogart thought of it is a mystery. It is a burlesque on a millinery window, and spring hats are there in profusion, with latest Easter adornments. One far side of the joke lies in the fact that every article is a piece of tinware—washbasins, baking tins and the like, in all shapes, and each "trimmed." Some have a point break erected on one side, some have a gear braided about them, in fact for counterfeit adornment they are "perfectly killing." But you are brought to a realizing sense of cold facts when you note the heart breaking prices that are marked on the goods, which have made many a man a pauper.

The Grand Rapids Herald of a recent date has this to say about the country editor: There is no class of professional men who stick to the grind more closely throughout an entire year than the editor of the daily of the smaller city or the county seat weekly. They work tirelessly for the interests of the community in which they spread news and educational influence broadcast and none is more patriotic and unselfishly loyal to the wisdom of the founders of his particular town. The country editor, as he is generally indeed, expends more energy than the preacher or the school superintendent or the doctor or other of his professional conferees and he is not bound by creed nor red tape nor dignity nor ethics. His is the task to boost and take "Thank you" as his remuneration in most cases."

CONCERNING RAILROAD PASSENGER RATES

Passenger business done by Michigan railroads yields approximately $9,000,000 less than the amount necessary to pay the interest of the funded debts of bonds in the state. Half a cent per mile fare increase will net the roads approximately $3,600,000, or only $500,000 more than enough to meet the six per cent interest charges. These were the figures presented by Chairman Hosmer of the Michigan Railroad commission to the joint railroad committee of the house and senate in the rate hearing. The effect of Hosmer's figures was nullified somewhat when in reply to a question from Representative Hollman of Sandusky he admitted that the commission had no figures other than those furnished by the railroads themselves.

THE EUROPEAN WAR

There is very little change in conditions at either front. In the west the allies are at least holding their own; but claim progress.

In the East the Russians are keeping a big German-Austrian army busy which of itself means a daily weakening of German strength.

The chief interest is now centered in the seige of Turkish fortifications in the Dardanels. The allies claim certain progress toward Constantinople, both from the Black and Agean seas.

The downfall of the Turkish empire seems certain.

Ask The Invigorating Whiff of the Pine Forest

How it clears the throat and head of its noxious ailments. It is this spirit of Newness and Vigor from the healthful living Piney Forests brought back by Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey Antiseptic and healing. Buy a bottle today. All druggists, 25c.

THE PRIMARIES

MISS STEWART WINS SCHOOL COMMISSIONERSHIP

"IN A WALK."

O. D. HAMMOND LANDS THE ROAD JOB FOR ANOTHER TERM

City Republican Ticket Framed Up With Capt. Wilbur at the Head

After a whirlwind campaign, the first in Charlevoix county in which a woman won, Miss May Stewart carried the county for School Commissioner in last Wednesday's primaries by over one thousand plurality. Mr Mifford came in second, Bashaw third and Kaden fourth. If the energy and tact displayed by the winner in the campaign by her opponents, Miss Stewart will make an excellent educational supervisor. There is no question about her scholastic attainments.

"Hat" Hammond, of this city, won the road commissionership over Mr. Courier by something over three hundred majority.

The City.

In the city Capt. O. E. Wilbur won the mayoralty over Harry Nicholls by twenty-one majority. A. E. Vandermade was renominated by sixty-six majority over Chas. Emery, and Geo. Cook cleaned up on Wm. Cooper by ninety-six majority.

The ward nominations are as follows: All present aldermen renominated—1st, See in the first; F. E. Cartier in the second, and R. S. Shapton in the third. First ward supervisor F. J. Mooch; second, Chas. Zettler; third, H. Bennett.

It is understood that the Socialists will come out with a full ticket.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, March 4, 1915.
This Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met in special session on the above date for the purpose of canvassing the vote at the Primary Election held on Wednesday, March 3rd, 1915.—Mayor Nicholls presiding.
Aldermen present See, Priest, Carey, Cartier, Barney and Shapton.
Absent none.
Alderman See, seconded by Alderman Priest moved the adoption of the following resolution:
Resolved that whereas the Board of Election Inspectors for the 2nd ward failed to complete the statement of the vote on city officers and ward officers and made no return thereof—Therefore be it resolved that when we adjourn we adjourn until Wednesday, Mar. 10, 1915 at 4 o'clock p. m. at which time the statement of vote sent to the County Clerk will be available for use in canvassing the vote.
And further be it resolved that the statements of the vote from all wards be sealed by the Council and left in care of Deputy City Clerk and that after sealing the Mayor and each Alderman affix their signatures to each envelope that the same were sealed in their presence and contain the documents that were contained therein when offered.
Carried unanimously by the Council.
There being no further business the Council adjourned.
F. L. SLACHT, Deputy City Clerk.

FIRST FISH BOAT OUT

It is safe to say that the commercial fishing season has begun. Tuesday morning the tug Parmelee went out in the direction of the straights to set nets. Only floating ice was visible to the west and north. Other fishing craft will follow.

Traverse City Record: Sunday morning the fishing tug Lillian A. of Northport started for the South Fox island to bring back the owner, Captain George Fisher who had been forced to stay on the island all winter, having been caught there when the lake froze over early in the winter. The tug reached the island all right, but in making the return trip eight miles from the Northport light she encountered a field of ice and broke her shaft and wheel. Some of the party on board came ashore in a row boat and secured the services of a launch, which went out and towed the tug safely into port. There is no ice in the lake in that vicinity at the present time, the field that was struck happened to be a chance floe that was drifting.

SPEAR-HEADS STEAL OUR STEELHEAD ASSET

Rainbow Trout, Despite Misnomers, Establishes Its Identity—"Next to Agricultural and Wood Products is Bringing Sectional Wealth," Says Warden.

"One thrust of the spear in the gravel shallows of a stream may destroy embryo in the spawn, which, granted the privileges of nature, might be ten thousand legal-length rainbow trout in the second year of their swimming energy," declared Deputy State Fish Warden Jones, Jr. H. McGillivray, in an address on wild life and its wardership, at the Hiawatha Chautauqua, 1916.

"A lunge of steel prongs in the hands of a reckless poacher, the quivering mother fish is drawn from her God-given bed of maternity, nature's designs are frustrated and this western Michigan community has been robbed by one lawless person of tons of future trout which are, by every legal and moral right, the property of us all."

Reviewing the rainbow—steelhead controversy he represented the cause of game, fish and forestry department said:

"Rainbow fry is planted in the upper reaches of your streams. In the fourth year they have matured and have in several pounds and drop down stream after their spawning season, to where the kinds of food and the living conditions are more suitable to their requirements and size. They no longer do pound or minute water feeding, but have appetites and capacity for crayfish, grubs, minnows, small trout, turtles and the like. Now the fish is one of your Steelheads.

"In the ninth year the fish may weigh eight, ten, perhaps twelve pounds. Nature takes to the fish and tells it of the greater water below, as she tells the carrier pigeon the direction for return flight home. In Lake Michigan a year, one environment has changed the pigment of the fish and its appearance. Now you have your land-locked salmon.

"Take your steelhead or your land-locked salmon to any State hatchery and the eggs will bring you a number fry and the fry will develop into exactly the same type of rainbow trout which you had before in the upper reaches of your stream.

"It has been said that the rainbow of your steelhead will not take the bait. We will admit that he will not be apt to take a bait of your choosing, but, if you the right bait, or cast the right fly, right, and any experienced fisherman can secure all the food and recreation to which he is entitled as one individual for the head of a family table. This has been proven on all but one of your streams to my personal knowledge, and residents near the excepted stream admit that they have not yet tried the baits which have been effective on other streams.

"The lumbermen cut away your streamside foliage or left on his logging grounds branch litter to start the fires which destroyed it.

"Lack of shade and the food which formerly multiplied in the over-hanging trees, especially the grubs, as such, or in the transformation to moths and millers, spoiled our streams for the grayling trout. The hardier brook trout survived it. Still less shade and less of the delicate foods and the brook trout found fault with his home. Beaver dams have been constructed in its shinning, warmed the waters past his endurance.

"The brook trout never ate the grayling; the rainbow trout never ate the grayling. The rainbow trout reserved themselves to the lesser and colder tributary brooks or dwindled out from lake of vitality to reproduce themselves, on account of poor homes and starvation.

"The rainbow is your trout of the future, both for food and for recreation. On this account bring thousands of dollars into your counties each year and the presence of your rainbow is the prime attraction.

"Presuming, for example, that you had a boat law which allowed the spearing of these trout; the local fishermen would be a small factor in the extermination which would surely result from the influx of outsiders who would come in prong-armed regiments to despoil your streams. Then your paying tourists trade would dwindle away like the grayling.

"Next to your agricultural and wood products, the rainbow trout, in its appeal to summer visitors, is your biggest commercial asset. You payed a tax to secure this asset; you pay a tax to protect this asset. Are you good citizens, going to let your own money go by default when you are called on a jury? Is it your desire that the game law violator pick your pocket with his spear?

DEATH OF WELL KNOWN PIONEER LADY

Mrs. Amelia Ferguson, wife of Wm. Ferguson, died at her home in Hayes township early Thursday morning, aged 69 years, after a protracted illness.

Mrs. Ferguson was an early pioneer settler of Charlevoix, having come here with her husband in 1870. For many years they conducted the Ferguson House in this city, retiring to their farm in Hayes about ten years ago.

She was a woman of most amiable nature, and of rare devotion to her home and family. Her death is sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends.

Besides her devoted husband she leaves one son by a former marriage, William Russell, of Chicago.

THE MEXICAN TROUBLE

Trouble in Mexico is "worse and worse, and more of it." A state of absolute anarchy prevails, and it looks more like U. S. intervention than it has since the troops were withdrawn from Vera Cruz.

We cannot see how the American government can much longer permit the present condition of affairs to continue.

STATE WIDE PROHIBITION IS IN SIGHT

Gov. Ferris will sign a statewide prohibition bill if such a measure is enacted by the legislature. He announced Tuesday that if the legislature wants to submit the question to the people he will not oppose it. The governor announced his position when asked to define his position toward the straight state-wide prohibition measure scheduled for presentation that day. Senator Stringfellow's new bill will make the state instead of the county a unit for voting on the liquor question. Grant Hudson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, who in a three hour conference made an

LOVE BY TELEPHONE

By LUCY GORTON BARROWS.

"Now" shouted Hetty in a thunderous tone, crushing out the fondest of human hopes, immortals as a rock.

His pretty niece, Hetty, covered her face with her hands and broke down utterly in a storm of tears.

"Cruel—cruel" she sobbed.

"And a last meeting with this gay gallivanting young man—understand" pursued her uncle unrelentingly.

"You are breaking my heart!" moaned Hetty, and really believing it.

"It isn't because Ned Monroe is after your little fortune, as most young fellows are nowadays"

"What—what is it, then" faltered poor Hetty.

"It's because he's an electrical maniac. Hydrophobia! Who heard of such a thing in my young days? Gossip-breeders, I call 'em! Worse than—catarrhs in autumn. Tried to get me to put one in my house. I'm no sucker! Not! No! I said my way. Drop this beau, or I'll send you off a thousand miles to my sister, where you can see him."

Antiquated, narrow-minded Simon Barclay had invented a new name for the most estimable young man in Hickory. He hated all innovations, especially a telephone. There was a reason. Simon had bargained too slowly in the purchase of a piece of property he coveted, a shrewd neighbor had got in a telephone and outbid him. He hated telephones after that, and Ned Monroe to—in despite. For was not that energetic young man the head lineman of the district telephone plant?

Hetty moped around the house all day. She was miserable. If ever a girl loved a bright intelligent young fellow, it was she. As to Ned, she knew she was her ideal of a high spirited fellow, she dreaded meeting him, but she was loyal to anyone she had made to her uncle that there would be no further of going on clandestine meetings. Hetty knew that promptly at 5:30 Ned would pass mission of the double wire loop running from the fence up into the old apple tree.

For three consecutive evenings Hetty sauntered carelessly down the road. Her uncle supposed she was going to visit the daughter of his farmer just east to them. Hetty had noticed him standing at the door of the house the last evening of the three, watching her. He was not at home, she made a cautious detour to reach the old tree.

The fourth evening Hetty did not stact away until she saw Mr. Barclay town in his hat he called his little office, looking over his business papers. It was quite dusk by the time she reached her destination.

She had climbed into the tree and had herself comfortably disposed, when she was startled by a low quick whistle. A sad name over the frank, rough looking and sinister. He stood directly beneath her leafy shelter.

It was he who had uttered the whistle and in a few moments a couple of the same type joined him.

"Well, how's the outlook" queried the first comer.

"Capital."

"Girl gone"

"Half an hour ago."

"And the old man?"

"In the room where his safe is, all right. There's a rich haul, partner! Come on!"

"Hurry!" gasped the startled Hetty, as the two strangers disappeared in the direction of the farm house. "They are going to rob uncle!"

Her wits worked quicky. She was aware that the men folks on the neighboring farm were not at home. Then a bright idea occurred to her. She snatched free the receiver of the telephone.

"EX—ch, quick, please! please!" she breathed frantically.

And then as the connection was made: "Ned, Ned come quick, with help. There are two burglars here and they are going to rob uncle!"

"Will they never come?" she cried, standing out in the road and looking towards. Then her heart took hope. Two distant sparks grew brighter, the angry roar of a speeding automobile. Then she could hear the chug-chug of the motor cycle, as it ran out into the road and waved her neck scarf.

Two town officers accompanied her lover. One guarded the front door of the house as they rushed in "Ned and the other man went around to the porch that opened into the office of old Simon.

"Just in time!" exclaimed Ned, as he and the officer entered the room. One of the burglars was guarding their retreat with a revolver. The other had just lifted his strong box from the safe.

The officers departed with their prisoners. Ned explained.

"Brazen idea of it!" muttered old Simon, closely hugging his treasure box. "Just for that—Hetty! he said abruptly. "I'm converted, Hetty. This young man may put in a phone in the morning." Ned's face fairly became regular, I fancy he's earned the privilege."

And so love by telephone led to love directly after the ceremony.

(Copyright, 1914, by W. G. Chapman.)

DR. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES

His Important Medical Discovery Should Be Recorded in His Memorial.

There has been a suggestion that a memorial to Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes some worthy recognition be made of his incomparable service to mankind in the discovery and propagation authoritative that would have deterred a less honest and sympathetic mind of the contagiousness of childbed fever and its remedy. Lay persons and unfortunately many in the profession are unaware of this epoch-making discovery by a man whose memory is beloved and honored for his literary attainments only. A disease which considered thousands of recent mothers to untimely graves was suddenly deprived of its malign presence by the discovery of Doctor Holmes that it was contracted by contact with the doctor or nurse and that simple precautions by them would prevent its occurrence. Persuaded in his own country by the ridicule of great professors in that specialty, Holmes carried the even tenor of his way until his idea was accepted in England. Thence it was carried to the continent, where it was taken up by European physicians who reduced the mortality in the Vienna hospitals enormously. To the latter his countrymen have erected a monument in Budapest, and annually homage is paid to his memory. Why Holmes is hardly remembered in the United States for this scientific discovery, when it is said he valued more highly than his literary fame.

Human Vanity.

We all try to be wise; and inasmuch as most of us have very little to win about of our own composition, we endeavor to be wise through the medium of communicated ideas and precepts; if you make a statement to the ordinary man, and that statement seems to him to have elements of information or understanding or novelty or wisdom, he repeats the same statement when he gets an opportunity—not as your statement, but as his. The same man remarking on the prevalence of human vanity for some thousands of years.—Samuel G. Blythe in Saturday Evening Post.

Military Funerals.

It is not unknown for women what is meant by a funeral "with full military honors." In such a funeral the coffin is borne on a gun carriage. If the dead soldier was a cavalryman his sword and helmet are fastened to the saddle of his horse, which is led immediately behind the gun carriage, and his top-boots, with spurs attached, are fastened in stirrups, with the toes pointing backwards. A firing party, drawn, if possible, from the deceased's regiment, fires three volleys over the grave, and the "Last Peal" is rendered by buglers.

Among Requirements of the Baby Girl

ALTHOUGH the baby girl disports herself nearly all the time in plain white slips of various sheer materials she requires occasionally finery of the finest kind. Wee tucks and narrow valenciennes lace are used liberally (sparingly used and in the daintiest of patterns), are relied upon for the little decorative finishings to her frocks for dress wear. And no matter how persistently repeated, these things never grow tiresome. Every mother delights in small garments finished with fine hand work. The painstaking care with which every stitch is set in them bears witness to the mother's care, whether the stitching is done by her own or other's hands.

Although the baby will look as sweet in the plainest of slips as in anything else, there are times when she requires extra finery to suitably honor a special occasion. Then the wits must be set to work to use the means at hand to make her rest "dressup" clothes. Sheer, fine fabrics in cotton or linen, dainty hand embroidery and narrow valenciennes lace continue to provide the materials. But a little oddity of cut, a little extravagance in embroidery, the introduction of a bit of any ribbon, and the employment of the finest fabrics give the holiday air that make her dress for state occasions.

A fine dress of sheer batiste for the little lady is shown in the picture. It is simply cut, having the bottom of the waist trimmed into points, the sleeves flaring and also finished with shallow points. All raw edges are cut into small scallops. These have first been stamped and buttonhole stitched with faultless exactness of needlework. At the front a pointed panel at the bottom and top is outlined by the embroidered scallops, and the two panels are connected by a wide band of lace. In these panels beautifully made French knots are set close together in narrow rows. A small panel of the same kind adorns the top of each sleeve.

At intervals of about four inches along the waist and the batiste sashes are cut in the batiste and their edges buttonhole stitched. Through these a sash of wide soft ribbon, in light blue or pink, is threaded and tied in the back in the simplest and dainty of bows. A narrow edging of fine valenciennes lace outlines the neck and all edges of the dress. It is set in a ruffle back of the scallops, with fine lace and insertion.

Worn under this fluffy frock is a petticoat having a ruffle at the bottom made of alternating rows of valenciennes and narrow bands of batiste decorated with a row of French knots. The bottom is finished with the narrowest of edgings of valenciennes lace.

In such a frock the little wearer is as splendidly arrayed as it is possible for her to be. Does an this finery is within reach of any mother who knows how to do fine needlework, very little material is required, and this is not expensive. It is the exquisite hand-wrought decoration that makes these little dresses valuable. In such a dress must be bought really work. It will mean a considerable outlay or money; if made at home it means an outlay of time—which no one begrudges the baby.

Worn at the Afternoon Concert

TWO odd and attractive hats are shown here. Consider them in two views. Now that spring is near these are about the last winter designs, and the pretty baretta finished with a tassel at the side cannot be said to belong to one season more than another, for it is made of silk in twine color piped with black and having the oddest of tassels of silk fiber which looks much like iron glass.

Many similar hats, including those called "Tiptoeing" hats, are made of silk. They are the smallest of turbans, with very scant soft crowns, narrow ribbon sashes with hanging ends and decorations of small flowers and fruits made of silk. These, worn with short jodet veils, in course not bound with ribbon, are harbingers of spring which appear before the earliest robin.

The second turban shown is made of panne velvet over a round frame. The velvet is managed so that row upon row of ribbon is set through it. In this way—with a pretty plaid ribbon—it has been made to resemble a tam o' shanter in worsteds. This novelty also added value to some attractive toilet boxes which are sold in some of the shops. They are made—these boxes for handkerchiefs, gloves, veils and other knickknacks—of black and white plaid ginghams, and around the edge of each box there is a band of embroidery in worsted. They are to be bought unmade, stamped ready for working, but the ingenious woman could easily cover boxes for herself in that way—with a pretty plaid gingham of black and white worked with a band of green and red and blue wool, in dark shades, all around the edge.

Worn on Gingham.

Word comes from Paris that many of the newest hats are trimmed with embroidery done in worsteds. This novelty also added value to some attractive toilet boxes which are sold in some of the shops. They are made—these boxes for handkerchiefs, gloves, veils and other knickknacks—of black and white plaid ginghams, and around the edge of each box there is a band of embroidery in worsted. They are to be bought unmade, stamped ready for working, but the ingenious woman could easily cover boxes for herself in that way—with a pretty plaid gingham of black and white worked with a band of green and red and blue wool, in dark shades, all around the edge.

The Best Objective, Salvation

By REV. J. H. RALSTON
Secretary of Correspondence Department World Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.—Phil. 3:14.

I, seeking an objective, the principle that nothing should be accepted but the best, should be adopted. When men were thinking deeply and the great doctrines of the Protestant faith were being put into creeds form, it was declared that the chief end of man was the glory of God, and nothing has taken a stepping since to show that this way an error, but every time most emphatically that the statement was justified. A man who lives with the glory of God in view will not cheat.

The Thoughtless Multitudes.

Nothing is much more disheartening than to watch the multitudes, especially in our crowded cities, who seem to have no goal in view. They seem to exist for the moment—butterflies that flit before you for an instant and then are gone. If other companies of people are created, the fact will confronts one. If bread and butter can be secured, there is no more concern; the animal gets to that point. Young people in the schools may have a somewhat larger appreciation of their mission or goal, but most go forward in this same way.

In a small volume recently issued there is this quotation: "The world will be the same two hundred years from whither he is going." That man has no goal in view, a goal, commensurate with the world, and the world gives him nausea. If this sermon falls into the hands of some young person, whether he is a Christian or not, let him know that he must have a goal in view or he will fail in life and if the goal is not one that is worthy of God the failure will be the greater and more deplorable. And if a person has a goal and resolutely keeps his eye on it, he will not be diverted by anything. If the goal is that set before him by Paul's "fullness of the stature of Christ," he will not be diverted by any of the many religions now seeking the attention of people throughout the world. To him the religion of Paul, Luther, Calvin and Wesley will be accepted as religion and worth of following until the goal is reached.

Having a goal of life in view is not to jostle or injure others who may also have a goal. There is room for all. It is also other a question of individual effort and merit. If twenty should start for the goal together they would all reach it if they kept their eyes upon it. In our Christian life there is no competition between those who are in it; some may win but only those who keep the goal before them win it, and if none do so, none wins.

Paul's Objective.

In the text, Paul, who was a man doing only one thing at a time, said that he pressed toward the mark for the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus. Without considering the strictly theological bearing of these words, let us notice the three items he has in mind with him and conquered him even more completely. The prevailing master of Saul's life was the author of standard scientific works on American ethnology, General Scott is quite an old man now, but he is notably as in his profession.

Lacking political influence or powerful friends, General Scott was thirty years in the army before the country at large came to know his name at all. Then, unknown to him, he was drawn out of the public eye. He did not have the faculty of pushing himself forward. But in recent years the reward has come. Promotion, so long delayed, has come to him at last over his head, has been rapid. And now he heads the army.

Observe him at his desk in the war department, his bulletins hands, sky several fingers. Stay with the multitude of papers presented to him, giving his orders in gentle, conversational tones, his appearance his manner, his attitude precisely the same as when he was a major of the line those few years ago, modest, democratic, kindly. The erect head, the keen, searcher eyes, the strong jaw proclaim the man who is master of himself, of his commands.

In spite of the dignity of Uncle Sam's face, he is more better than the clothed folk know him. With the Indians of the West and with the native peoples of the Sulu archipelago the name of Scott is held in reverence. Their faith in him is absolute their devotion unswerving.

Away back in 1891 there occurred through all the West the last serious Indian outbreak, when, in some mysterious manner the Indians from the Canadian line to the Mexican border, suddenly fell victims to the Messiah craze, went to ghost dancing and their reservations for the war path, the grim jest that was bandied about through the army posts ran:

"The United States army is holding down the Indians in the Northwest; Scott is holding them down in the South-west."

It was generally admitted that Scott did the better job of the two.

Every since then, wherever the Indians anywhere get with serious ants and words, there Scott is called in. Scott is the man of the Interior department, which has jurisdiction over the Indians, and the war department set up the cry, "Send for Scott!"

Experience has shown that it is far better, cheaper and more efficient to put Scott on the job of bringing peace to the troublesome Indians than to allow a second-rate regiment of cavalry, as was done in ancient days.

Back in 1908, when Scott was serving as superintendent of the military academy at West Point, the Navajos in New Mexico and the Mescalero Apaches in Arizona started trouble. Scott was ranked away from West Point, next among the hostiles practically alone, and presently the trouble was all over.

Again in 1912 when the Hopi Indians in Arizona flew the track, Scott went down and brought them back. Only a year ago, when more of these sporadic disturbances were in the air, Scott was ordered to the West had to leave his cavalry command on the Mexican border and adjust matters. These are but a few instances.

How does he do it? Because he knows the savage chief. He knows the hands of the chiefs appointed over them, of that indignity which in the Indian has been put upon them.

"My heart bleeds for you," he tell them, "my grieve that this trouble has been made between you and the great father at Washington, whom soldiers are as the leaves of the trees. I do not want them to come among you and hurt you. In there not some manner in which we can adjust the differences? Let me see what I can do. I will ship between you and the great father who wishes you well."

Then they go down to a settlement.

One of General Scott's ancestors was Benjamin Franklin, and he inherited from his great grandaughter of the immortal Ben. It would appear that some of the wisdom of the diplomacy and the conciliating powers of this, the first American diplomatist, has descended upon the shoulders of staff.

But, like old Ben, whose phrase on the sleeve of the declaration of independence, "We must all hang together, or we shall hang separately," is immortal, General Scott knows when to abandon pacific measures and to fight.

So it was when, in 1903, he became governor of the Sulu archipelago he determined that this was no time and no place to "brother" the belligerent natives. The Moslem mind he mastered in no uncertain and unmistakable manner. In less than a year he had brought affairs in that part of the country to a peaceful plainly was the course marked out for him.

And such a fighting he gave them!

Scott was called upon to the task of breaking up the slave trade in the islands of the archipelago. After many "conferences" with the sultans, Scott achieved his purpose. He wiped out slavery absolutely.

And when, in 1906, he came to leave the people weep. Here was a man they could understand; a man whose word always was kept. They asked, through their chiefs, that he remain to rule over them, but his time of duty was ended.

Back he came to the states to instill other lessons as superintendent of the military academy at West Point, for a year and a half.

Adaptability, that is one of his qualities. He is adaptable, he can move from one, civilized man as well as savage men. He is any wonder he is called upon in times of the emergencies?

Seldom does it occur that a young officer just out of West Point—a shavetail, as the army knows such an officer—is called upon in the first years of his graduation. Scott is one of the few.

UNCLE SAM'S STAR PACIFIER

GENERAL SCOTT IN CAMPAIGN UNIFORM

GEN. HUGH L. SCOTT, CHIEF OF STAFF OF THE ARMY

GEN. HUGH L. SCOTT was just getting the chair of chief of staff of the army comfortably warmed when, the other day, he was hurriedly dispatched to the Mexican border to persuade the contending bandits to take their civil war out of Arizona's front yard.

That's always the way. Scott never gets well started on an army job anywhere but what he is yanked away to go somewhere and do some pacifying.

He is Uncle Sam's star pacifier.

Dark-skinned people, whether they be Mexican or straight Indian, or Cuban or Filipino, take to him as children take to a food uncle. Some times he has to lick them first. When he does, he licks them thoroughly. But that is only on rare occasions. As a rule he has them eating out of his hand within a week.

Two years ago, with a lifetime of experience behind him, he went down to the Mexican border as colonel of the Third United States cavalry. There he remained until last April, when he came to Washington to become assistant chief of staff and a brigadier general. Only a few weeks ago he moved up to be chief of staff.

Three long years in the Southwest made him, obviously, the man to settle the new trouble that has arisen. All through his long career he has made it a rule in all problems with which he has had to deal to "study the personal equation." So he studied the personal equation of Pancho Villa, for one, and of Benjamin Hill, the Carranza general, who has been making most of the recent fuss near Naco, Ariz. He came to know both men well, and then he knew how to handle them.

"What is the world has happened, of the party," "Have you broken your neck or what?"

Uncle Rastus!" solicitously asked one of the boys.

"Yes, sah, boss! Yes, sah!" was the mournful reply of Uncle Rastus, as he pointed to the broken bottle. "Dar' Eastah com-an' sore."

Her Difficulty.

A young lady who liaped very badly was tested by a specialist and after diligent practice and the expenditure of some money, learned to say, "Sister Susie's Sewing Shirts for Soldiers."

She repeated it to her friends at a private rehearsal, and was congratulated upon her masterly performance.

"Yes," she said dubiously, "but it is thuch an exthedingly difficult remark to work into a conversathion ethphethically when you onthider that I have no thither Thuthie."

Same Old Story.

Crossbe—Do you remember that stock I bought in a gold mine last summer?

Brown—Yes. How did you come out?

Green—Mine.

OWNER EXPECTED TOO MUCH

Borrowing Neighbor Considered He Had Done His Fair Share in the Transaction.

A few days ago saw Gl McMahon borrowing a hatchet or other implement to drive or draw nails at Sherman's hardware store, says the Topeka (Kan.) Republican. And that brought to mind a "borrowing" story of Uncle Gl.

A great number of years ago Herbert Leonard owned one of the few automobiles hereabout. Uncle Gl was farming some and went up to borrow it. Herbert always would loan anything he had, but he wanted it brought home. So he waited a reasonable time for the harrow to be brought back, and finally, having to use it, went after it. As he drove along he began to get rolled over the thought of going after his own harrow and by the time he got it loaded into his wagon was downright mad had he. "Oh, I thought you was neighbor enough to bring home what you borrowed."

"Bring it home!" shouted Gl, with a great show of indignation. "bring it home! Why, heavens to Betsy, man, I went after it. Are there much do you expect of a neighbor, anyhow?"

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair, also ladies, remember or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp, and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Now, however, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of the famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay grey! Try it. No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.—Adv.

Hard to Land.

An English correspondent said in Washington:

"I once tried to interview Lord Kitchener, the Kitchen war minister. I tacked him after dinner in a hotel lounge as he sipped his coffee and puffed on a blue cigar. He stared at me when I proffered my request, then he blew a cloud of smoke and said:

"'I never gave an interview in my life and I never intend to.'

"That seemed positive enough. I felt myself getting red, and I stammered as I prepared to go.

"'Well, then, Lord Kitchener, will you at least give me your autograph? It would be worth having.'

"He blew another cloud of smoke and he answered:

"'You'd better go off and make your own autograph worth having.'"

Never Good at Mathematics Anyhow.

"This our town is getting to be too thundering mathematical for comfort!" grumbled old Dad Bing. "Futher-day, as I was standing on a corner a stranger run over my land, and then stopped just beyond me.

"'Here, confound you!' says I to the shover. 'Thase your cows that you just chased are mine!'

"'Well, why didn't you drag 'em out of the way?' he asked.

"'Drag the devil!' I yelled. 'How did I know how far they protruded. Expect a victim to leap fair city to do nothing all the time but figger up his own feet?'"—Kansas City Star.

The Proof.

"Is that a joke?"

"Yes, certainly."

"How do you know?"

"Why, a professional humorist said it was."

"How did he know?"

"Why, he wrote it himself."

Quite Happy.

"Did the girl have a happy ending?"

"Comparatively so. All money was returned after the second act.—Pun."

MEAT CLOGS KIDNEYS THEN YOUR BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You—Drink Lots of Water.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

HE GOT THE TWELVE CENTS

Pointed Argument of Old Colored Tollman Was Too Much for Motor Tourists.

One of the pioneer manufacturers of motor cars, he was a pioneer of the motor story

"On one of the old turnpikes which the motor tourist occasionally runs across, I was stationed. I had once rushed through the gate without paying toll. The third time they made the attempt I had a constable on them short-the gate and brought them to a standstill. The language the occupants of the large touring car were very indignant at being so delayed, I thought they were entitled to ride free.

"Look at your own board, said the driver, "I made three trips, carriage, cart or wagon drawn by one beast, two cents. Were not drawn by any beast at all.

"No sah, but here's where ye come in," replied the old colored man, as he pointed to another clause, which read: 'Every half dozen hogs, four cents,' and he added, 'An' three times four is twelve'

"Twelve cents was paid."

The Flight of Time.

Uncle Robert lived in a pleasant little bungalow on the outskirts of a large town. Everything in his way Saturday evening before Easter he slopped as suddenly as colliding with a safety gate, and he was off disney

Three long years in the bungalow, obviously, the man to settle the new trouble that has arisen. All through his long career he has made it a rule in all problems with which he has had to deal to "study the personal equation." So he studied the personal equation of Pancho Villa, for one, and of Benjamin Hill, the Carranza general, who has been making most of the recent fuss near Naco, Ariz. He came to know both men well, and then he knew how to handle them.

"What is the world has happened, of the party," "Have you broken your neck or what?"

Uncle Rastus!" solicitously asked one of the boys.

"Yes, sah, boss! Yes, sah!" was the mournful reply of Uncle Rastus, as he pointed to the broken bottle. "Dar' Eastah com-an' sore."

Her Difficulty.

A young lady who liaped very badly was tested by a specialist and after diligent practice and the expenditure of some money, learned to say, "Sister Susie's Sewing Shirts for Soldiers."

She repeated it to her friends at a private rehearsal, and was congratulated upon her masterly performance.

"Yeth," she said dubiously, "but it ith thuth an exthedingly difficult remark to work into a conversathion ethphethically when you onthider that I have no thither Thuthie."

Same Old Story.

Crossbe—Do you remember that stock I bought in a gold mine last summer?

Brown—Yes. How did you come out?

Green—Mine.

HAD TO BE TAUGHT FRENCH

English Horses in Service of Gallic Owners, Unable to Understand Words of Command.

A French writer tells a quaint story of the war. He says that the English cavalry in France found themselves in possession of a number of horses which were not found suitable for cavalry work. By arrangements with the French government they sold them off to French peasants for agricultural work. The farmers were delighted, though the horses were not adapted for cavalry work, they were better than they had been accustomed to have for farm work. But when they came to work them a difficulty arose. The horses did not understand French. When addressed with "Hue" or a "Dia" (which is idiomatic French for "Gee up" and "Way, whoa") they did not budge. No doubt carters in France, as in England, have a whole vocabulary of horse talk. Apart from the starting and stopping, there are special cries which tell the horse to turn to the right or left or to take up a particular position when it is being groomed.

Even in England these carters' and ploughmen's words differ in different counties, but probably that would be no difficulty in the way of transferring a horse, say, from the north of England to the south. For, as the experimental psychologists tell us, animals do not really understand articulation; what they do understand is the tone in which words are spoken. There has been said even of dogs, which are much more intelligent than horses and much more attentive to the words of man, that dog lovers, however, deny this, and say that dogs understand the spoken word in whatever tone it is uttered or however spoilt. However that may be, it would not help the English horses in France, since the French tones expressing the words would be quite unintelligible even more from the Kingish than does the pronunciation of the words. The horse is not the only animal to which French would be a foreign tongue. The cat is said to be as not by a hissing sound, "Tsh,'sh!" "Pussy" is said to be not a cat but a thing between a kiss and a whistle. Hence in France the vocative of "cat" is not "Puss" but "Tiffie."

Aeroplanes of Russian Make.

Sukhomlinoff now has a weak point in the Russian army, was that the stock of his regiment came from abroad—a vulnerable situation in war such as the present shapes. To be set himself boldly building up army factories, calculated to turn out, on an within the boundaries of Russia, and at the same time established a central laboratory where new mechanisms, explosives, inventions might be tested.

He also organized—and this gives us the measure of his capacity—a first class school of military aviation, and set the best Russian mechanics at the development and manufacture of aeroplanes, which today take the place of cavalry in the reports of the war. The result is that for the last four or five years Russia has been making her own aeroplanes and training a large staff of officers able to use them. Sukhomlinoff was accused of treason, of sale of army automobiles, for the round sum of "twenty thousand roubles."—American Review of Reviews.

The Dutch at Whitby.

Whitby's last experience of naval warfare was rather curious. In June, 1665, two Dutch warships chased a merchant ship into the harbor, and, though in neutral waters, fired shots at her with both combatants, lowered their boats to board the Spanish vessel. The governor of the town, Sir Hugh Cholmley, protested, but the Dutch carried out their design and drew the enemy's ship. Thus set at defiance, he (Sir Hugh) ordered the Dutch lands, took boats, recaptured the Spanish ship and took prisoner one of the Dutch captains.

Whitby's chief fame is that from its abbey emerged the first English singer, Caedmon. He was remarkable for a thing unknown to Homer and the rest of such simple skill in the art of song as belonged to the modes of those days.—Bell's Gazette.

Another Edison Marvel.

When the telephone was nothing more than an experimental toy in 1876, Mr. Edison predicted that this form of communication would not be perfect until established with the phonograph so that telephone messages would be recorded automatically. And now, forty-five years later, when fifteen million conversations are carried on daily over the telephone wires, Mr. Edison is ready to exhibit at the Panama-Pacific fair for the first time a telearchic, a combination of the telephone and dictaphone which will put upon a cylinder for reproduction every syllable uttered into the transmitter. It is thought will enable pay one to realize what a revolution will be wrought in commercial and legal affairs when a telephone conversation can be repeated beyond dispute as readily as a written document.

Crocodiles Live Long.

Crocodiles are very interesting because they are survivals of an ancient and outdated species. They resemble already some of the animals we have walked on the earth and swam in the seven during that age of reptiles which, according to geologists, came to an end many millions of years ago. It is probable that these creatures live longer than any other animal in the world. There is a crocodile in the embassy garden at Mutwal, in Ceylon, which is known to be 155 years old, though its age when first captured could not be ascertained.

Woes of an Author.

"How's your new book coming on?"

"Passably well. The demand isn't what it should be. I mean among purchasers. And, of course, if people don't buy the book there's nothing in it for me."

"I see. By the way, I'm reading it now. Blake handed me a copy that I promised to return from Brussels. Pretty fair story."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Right Food Works Wonders

It is often the case that people drift into wrong habits of food, although they should know better.

When one gets into trouble of this sort it's a fine thing to know how to get out of it. The "food route" is the common sense way back to health and comfort.

Grape-Nuts
FOOD

is made of wheat and barley, so perfectly cooked that it is partially pre-digested and contains the vital tissue-building elements required for the daily rebuilding of body and brain.

Grape-Nuts food is delicious and economical; and for breakfast regularly, helps mightily to put one in mental and physical condition for a good day's work.

"There's a Reason"

Grocers everywhere sell Grape-Nuts.

LAND A PRECIOUS POSSESSION

Peasants of Europe Cling Tenaciously to the Few Acres They Own and Cultivate.

In a story from the western battle front the following bit of information was gleaned.

One of the most striking features of the battlefield, and one entirely incomprehensible to the man in hand, was the sight of peasants plowing their fields as if war were hundreds of miles away. These farmers are apparently a hardy race, of the stolid, phlegmatic variety, but keenly concerned for their homes, many of which have been destroyed by shell fire.

How tenaciously these poor peasants cling to their property! Today their cottages are in the battle zone. Not even the machine guns and the artillery fire can dislodge them. They have plowed and sowed and harvested from their little patches of ground for years, and they know the meaning and the value of the possession of a piece of land. Europe the landowners are the solid and stabilizing leaders. How important the ownership of land is to the peasants of Europe is demonstrated by the fact that when European financiers show a setting hold of forms in this country they labor diligently to obtain land, and when they secure it they cling to it with bulldog persistence.

But the phenomenon noted in the war is not the cheerful side. The peasants who have been made poor by the war, who have been made to lose their hold on the land, and continue to cultivate it even within sight of bringing peace to the troublesome Indians than to allow a second-rate regiment of cavalry, as was done in ancient days.

Back in 1908, when Scott was serving as cadet-in-chief at the military academy at West Point, the Navajos in New Mexico and the Mescalero Apaches in Arizona started trouble. Scott was ranked away from West Point, next among the hostiles practically alone, and presently the trouble was all over.

Again in 1912 when the Hopi Indians in Arizona flew the track, Scott went down and brought them back. Only a year ago, when more of these sporadic disturbances were in the air, Scott was ordered to the West had to leave his cavalry command on the Mexican border and adjust matters. These are but a few instances.

How does he do it? Because he knows the savage chief. He knows the hands of the chiefs appointed over them, of that indignity which in the Indian has been put upon them.

"My heart bleeds for you," he tell them, "my grieve that this trouble has been made between you and the great father at Washington, whom soldiers are as the leaves of the trees. I do not want them to come among you and hurt you. Is there not some manner in which we can adjust the differences? Let me see what I can do. I will ship between you and the great father who wishes you well."

Then they go down to a settlement.

One of General Scott's ancestors was Benjamin Franklin, and he inherited from his great grandaughter of the immortal Ben. It would appear that some of the wisdom of the diplomacy and the conciliating powers of this, the first American diplomatist, has descended upon the shoulders of staff.

But, like old Ben, whose phrase on the sleeve of the declaration of independence, "We must all hang together, or we shall hang separately," is immortal, General Scott knows when to abandon pacific measures and to fight.

So it was when, in 1903, he became governor of the Sulu archipelago he determined that this was no time and no place to "brother" the belligerent natives. The Moslem mind he mastered in no uncertain and unmistakable manner. In less than a year he had brought affairs in that part of the country to a peaceful plainly was the course marked out for him.

And such a fighting he gave them!

Scott was called upon to the task of breaking up the slave trade in the islands of the archipelago. After many "conferences" with the sultans, Scott achieved his purpose. He wiped out slavery absolutely.

And when, in 1906, he came to leave the people weep. Here was a man they could understand; a man whose word always was kept. They asked, through their chiefs, that he remain to rule over them, but his time of duty was ended.

Back he came to the states to instill other lessons as superintendent of the military academy at West Point, for a year and a half.

Adaptability, that is one of his qualities. He is adaptable, he can move from one, civilized man as well as savage men. He is any wonder he is called upon in times of the emergencies?

Seldom does it occur that a young officer just out of West Point—a shavetail, as the army knows such an officer—is called upon in the first years of his graduation. Scott is one of the few.

THE SANDMAN IN STORY

By MRS. F. A. WALKER

WHAT SNOWBALL SAW

Of the three kittens, one of them, Snowball, used to go to the city with his master to watch his team while he went to the stores. He had just returned from one of his trips, and Puff and Kit wanted to hear all about the things he had seen, for it was Christmas week, and they were sure he had seen strange sights.

"Did you see Santa Claus" asked Kit.

"Lots of them," answered Snowball.

"Them?" Kit said. "I never heard of more than one Santa Claus.

"Neither did I," said Snowball, "but I saw one in a window when I was on the street, and one stood on a corner and he had a bell. He said 'Ring for saving money.'"

"I always thought that one man could never go to all the places in one night," said Puff, and this explains it. "There are a number of them."

"Do they all look alike?" asked Kit. "You could tell them apart," said Snowball.

"Did you ask for anything for us?" inquired the mischievous yard at Snowball.

"I didn't have a chance," Snowball replied. "I had to watch masters team, and meanwhile he did not stop near any of the Santa Clauses."

"What else did you see?" asked Kit.

"Yes, a little man running around the street, and a dog."

"Oh," said Puff.

"And mice too," Snowball said.

"Did you catch one?" asked Kit.

"Of course, I did," Snowball scornfully "They were tiny."

"Did you eat?" said Kit and Puff. "Think of it! How do the city cats year on them? Do they like them?"

"They do not eat them, silly," Snowball said. "They let them go to their children to play with. And you should see the Christmas trees in the shop windows, all hung with white tinsel, strings and dolls and books and dogs and cats and beautiful girl dolls, too."

"Dogs and cats!" asked Puff. "I should have thought you would have been afraid that they would catch you and hang you on the tree, too."

"You are the most stupid kittens that I ever saw," said Snowball. "They were to eat dogs and cats for the children to play with."

"Oh," said both kittens moving uneasily, "I wonder if we will get anything in our stockings this year," said Puff. "I do not think I deserve a present."

"We had better sit up and tell Santa what we want, the same as we did last year," said Kit.

"One of you will have to be the asking this time," said Snowball. "I will stand up with my mouth open."

"I would like to have a big ball that I can chase around the room," said Puff.

"I want a pretty blue ribbon to tie around my neck," said Kit.

"With a bell on it?" asked Snowball.

The kittens laughed.

"No," said Puff, "the mice are scarce enough now."

"Christmas morning, when the three kittens sat in a row for their breakfast, there was the little girl who lived in the house, with three dishes of cream, and when they had eaten it she called Snowball and put a collar around his neck.

That is for watching father's team and sleeping with him, she said, "and your name is on it, too. And there was a big basket for all three. Kit fitted with soft woolly cloth. I think you have fared well for kittens, and not as she went away.

Snowball walked proudly around the yard with his collar and Puff went into a corner of the room, and sat down to think.

"It is just as I thought," said Kit. "He did ask Santa Claus for a bell, and all the good boys seem to be as much as it is for us as you see so well provided for. Snowball is a good girl and not one thing for either of us."

"Going to the city has spoiled him," said Puff. "Not even a bowl and jump over the basket. Will stretch out and take all the room and have a good nap. He is so proud of his new collar, let him walk and show it."

Not That Kind of a Girl.

Starkness, aged four, was in the library when her father, who lived in a city, was experimenting the preparation of a telephone. The silence of the hour of the house was attracted by a scrutching sound and he looked up to find his daughter at work with a pair of scissors on top of the polished table.

"Markie!" he said sternly, "an'tit you know that you mustn't do that?"

"I won't do it, papa," she said. "I'm only think I am a little tattletale!"—Judge.

A Shortened Visit.

"Did the little girl from next door have a good time?" inquired Mrs. Jones.

"I'm not sure, mamma," said the wise child. "Her nurse said she could stay two hours, but I have her some cake on her, so perhaps when she visit, and I tried to her several charades from that four little book you gave me called Puzzlitions Points for Polite People," and she went home an hour earlier."

Getting Ready

Ladies' Coats and Suits

(Sunshine Garments)

Will be glad to show them.

Go to ---LEVINSON'S--- Get the Habit

The Store of Quality

AND :: GOOD :: SERVICE

When in want of anything that will make lovely meals and first-class goods if you cannot come telephone No. 12 or 69 and we will bring it to your house.

When you are down town step inside. Whether you buy or not the same courteous treatment will be given to you.

Do you know that we sell the finest loaf of bread in the city and at 10c and eggs strictly fresh at 20c per dozen.

In our Meat Department we have anything and everything and at reasonable prices—We give S & H stamps.

OUR MOTTO —"Quality, Service and Honest Prices."

Courteous Treatment — Prompt Delivery

C. DANTO & SON.

212 Bridge St. Phone No. 12 Phone No. 69

The YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Address, Bird Talks, Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds of the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

CUT THIS OUT

and send with the name of a new subscriber and this notice

FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914.

FREE THE YOUTH'S COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.

THEN The Companion for 1915, issues of 52 weekly numbers, all for $1.75.

52 Times a Year — not 12.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for

THIS CALENDAR FREE—THIS

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

SIBERIAN VILLAGES

Life of the Peasants, Their Houses and Their Stern Rules

An interesting account of the organization of Siberian villages, from the pen of M. P. Sibiryakov, in the Russian Review, is published in a translation by Leonard Stecher. Streets were laid out in the form of two rows of houses, with a fence between each house. Every family had its own yard where the cattle were kept. A stream generally ran behind the village, and the manure from the yards was pitched in heaps along its bank, being carried away each year to the spring floods.

"There is a large room with a brick stove, taking up perhaps a quarter of the room. In this the family eat, live and sleep—some on the stove and some on the floor—while a separate small room is kept and reserved for visitors or others who are not members of the family. The room are white-washed and each member of the family has a steam bath every week in a hot kept for the purpose outside.

"In notice that the Russian peasant is habitually dirty is most mistaken. Here, at all events, the average Siberian peasant's house could compete with the best cottages in rural England. The temperature of the rooms is generally rather a trial to such as are not used to extreme cold outside and sealed windows with a stove inside."

Change in the Moon.

Boarder (Here's a nickel I found in the hash. Landlady. Yes I put it there. You've been complaining I underchange about lack of change in your meals. Boarder. Thanks.

Our wealth is often a snare to our severe and always a temptation to others.—Cotton.

—FOR—

Furniture, Stoves, Ranges, Carpets, Rugs, Comforts and Blankets

—Go to—

S. M. SEE & SONS,

The Reliable Housefurnishers.

Another Break in Flour Prices

This will possibly be the last break before the new crop. If you are not supplied for a couple of months, get your supply now.

Your home flours are cheapest and best. Iron Duke cannot be beaten by any flour on the market. Get one of the new sanitary sacks of Iron Duke and try it.

For sale by all dealers. If your dealer is out call up either mill. The one nearest to you.

Argo Milling Co.

MANUFACTURERS

Don't Wait Until The Rush Is On--

Come over to F. S. Blanchard's or send your painter in and have your rooms finished in

MURESCO

Or painted. We have them in all colors.

F. S. Blanchard Estate,

F. L. Bartholomew, Administrator.

Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix homes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock, which consists of everything, such as Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper.

TELEPHONE NO. 22.

Condition of Various Funds and Accounts

Of the City of Charlevoix

At Close of Business February 28, 1915.

ACCOUNT	Debit Balance October 1, 1914	Credit Balance October 1, 1914	Charges to Funds & Acc. in During Period	Credits and Appropriations During Period	Debit Balance March 1, 1915	Credit Balance March 1, 1915
	$	$	$17704 42	$17704 42	$	$
City Treasurer, cash			7970 58	10769 58	4522 16
Charlevoix County Bank Depository	2851 09				3000 00
Char. Co. Bank, Mich. & Dixon Fwy L.I.S.F.	1651 21		419 30	1661 21	419 30
" " " " " " L.I.S.F.	11 26		116 59		128 85
" " " " " Sewer L.I.S.F.	82 99			10 00	72 99
" " " Nettleton St. Sewer L.I.S.F.	8 84				8 84
" " " Mosch & Poty Sewer L.I.S.F.			9092 94	8892 24	3726 20
Char. State Sav. Bank, Depository	4547 60		32 74		32 74
" " " " Mich & Poty Pav. L.I.S.F.					296 09
" " " " Mosebh&Chi Sew. L.I.S.F.	296 07				19 06
" " " " Grant St. Paving L.I.S.F.	19 06			2293 01	479 12
" " " " Mich &DixonPav. L.I.S.F.	2772 13				177 43
" " " " North Mich. Pav. L.I.S.F.	177 40				356 90
" " " " Harm's Ave.Sew.L.I.S.F.	1716 60		68 20	1228 00	3000 00
Investment Bond account	3000 00				15 00	1207 99
City Treasurer, petty cash	15 00
Special Improvement Collection account		6982 57	1774 59	01
City Treasurer Collection taxes 1914-1915	6245 80		01	4977 01	1298 80
County Treasurer, Delinquent Taxes	4498 53			4498 46	3990 07
				2209 48	170 55
Water Fund		2945 71	5246 74	5576 08		6282 75
Electric Light Fund		4843 09	4416 92	4705 03		135 88
Health Fund		1171 57	1703 32	278 84		4399 13
Cemetery Fund		5852 61	1703 32	1703 32		401 05
Sewer Fund		1016 50	2932 04	443 65	1433 49
Highway Fund		454 90	2932 04			112 49
Street Fund		207 67	95 28			109 31
Bridge Fund			380 15	1 00
Poor Fund	407 17		631 68	1040 21	58 04
Fire Fund		1284 89	914 65			230 44
Dog Fund		492 38	5 60	10 25		497 04
Park Fund		262 27				262 27
Bond & Interest account		6977 50	1493 75			2505 75
Accounts Receivable	149 89				149 89
Petoskey Ave. Sewer L.I.S.F.		38 05				38 05
Mason Street Paving L.I.S.F.		61				61
Michigan & Petoskey Paving L.I.S.F.				32 74		32 74
Michigan & Dixon Sewer L.I.S.F.		11 26		115 59		128 85
North Michigan Ave. Paving L.I.S.F.		177 40				177 40
Mosch Street & Petoskey Sewer L.I.S.F.		8 84				8 84
Mosch Street & Chicago Sewer L.I.S.F.		236 07				236 07
Nettleton Street Sewer L.I.S.F.		26 49	10 06			16 42
Grant Street Paving L.I.S.F.		19 06				19 06
Michigan & Dixon Ave. Paving L.I.S.F.		16553 34	4974 22	419 30		6888 42
Alice Street Main Sewer L.I.S.F.		248 35	707 86	17 29		38 76
Bridge Street Main Sewer L.I.S.F.		121 72	78 06	16 14		62 89
East Hurlburt & Alice Sewer L.I.S.F.		1580 33	303 86			1884 19
West Hurlburt & Bridge Sewer L.I.S.F.		228 23	141 19	34 77		121 96
Bridge St. Bet. Ave. May & Alice St. Sewer	111 25				111 25
State & Newman St. Sewer Dist. L.I.C.A.	167 00				167 00
Michigan & Dixon Paving L.I.C.A.		27 68				27 68
Boyne Street Sewer L.I.C.A.	50				50
Belvedere Ave. Sewer	16 26				16 26
North Michigan Ave. Paving L.I.C.A.	1247 27		10 00		1247 27
Mosch St. & Chicago Ave. Sewer L.I.C.A.	238 33				238 33
South Side Sewer District L.I.C.A.	993 03			30	242 02	691 31
Grant Street Paving L.I.C.A.	74 52					74 52
Nettleton Street Sewer L.I.C.A.		116 46				116 46
Mosch Street & Petoskey Sewer L.I.C.A.	340 98				340 98
Interest & Sinking Fund		611 28				611 28
East Hurlburt & Alice Sewer L.I.C.A.	1499 50		1243 08	2794 15		142 07
Alice Street Main Sewer L.I.C.A.	36 80		2252 32	2252 32		138 66
Bridge Street Main Sewer L.I.C.A.	36 80		360 00	360 00	22 35
West Hurlburt & Bridge Sewer L.I.C.A.	31 05		669 67	705 80		14 28
General Fund Surplus		33 82				33 82
	$40607 15	$40607 15	$67633 98	$67633 98	$25450 96	$25450 96

Respectfully Submitted. P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

It is really a blessing not to have much money to spend for window curtains because expensive lace curtains are not in vogue just now nowadays, while window nets and scrims of all sorts that cost but much more than a dollar a yard are the most acceptable sort of window curtains.

If should be borne in mind in hanging one's window curtains that the curtains should be placed very close to the window pane. For this reason they hang on a rod of their own placed very close to the window at the top of the sash. The material should be measured carefully, so that it does not reach below the sill, and at the same time it should not be any shorter than the sash. The obvious purpose of the thin gauze curtain is to shield those in the house from outsiders, to soften the light and possibly to hide any unpleasant outlook. This being the case it is obviously absurd to drape it back with cords or tassels. If more light is needed one must get out and do the necessary work. Curtains should never be used as an excuse to shield those inside from slight then don't have any gauze curtain at all.

The same side drape curtains serve quite another purpose. Their purpose is to bring the window into harmony with the interior, to correct the ugliness of the window frame and to give a personal character to the room. These side curtains should either extend all the way to the floor or should extend to the bottom of the window sill. They should never be as short as the glass curtain. If they are short there should be some piece of furniture placed beneath the curtain, as a table, a chair or a fern or other plant.

In the matter of these side drapes there need be no great expense. In a cotton fabric from they are usually lined. Chintz lined with a harmonizing satin is is exceedingly good taste. For bedrooms sateen chintz may be used to advantage. In certain rooms there is nothing more interesting for the side drape than some colored drapery net, as green Nottingham curtain material or one of the interesting brown silk and linen curtain materials.

Nowadays sunlight is much in favor, and there is almost a necessity for having a bowl of geranium or some sort across the top of the window. This may be simply a piece of the side drapery about six or eight inches wide run on the curtain pole between the two side pieces or it may be pieces of a frieze of wood made especially for that purpose which is nailed to the window frame over the side drapery. His there really is nothing so difficult in any of this certain hanging for any ordinarily ingenious housewife to attempt. Half the battle is being your own interior decorator is to keeping your eyes open. The next time you see a curtain arrangement that suits you study it and then with the aid of a little pencil, a little scissors and themselves, needle and thread, scissors and tacks you or any other woman can do wonders in hanging curtains.

HOW TO MAKE SEVERAL SORTS OF CAKE.

If a cake crooks open while baking it contains too much flour. Use half a cupful less next time.

If you want a very fine grained cake heat well with a silver fork after mixing.

If you want a spongy, light cake use sour milk; if a heavier one, use sweet milk in it.

For a small cake or cookies have a hot oven and for a large, rich cake a slow oven.

Never stir your batter measuring. Sift the baking powder with it to insure thorough blending.

In making fruit cake add the fruit before putting in the flour and it will not fall to the bottom of the cake. This is better than flouring the fruit, which often leaves unbaked flour clinging to the fruit after it is baked.

In creaming butter and sugar where the former is hard never warm the butter. Warm the bowl or the sugar to make the butter blend; otherwise the flavor and texture of the cake will be changed.

ADVICE FOR THE BRIDE.

How to Successfully Conduct Church and Home Weddings.

At a church wedding the groom, with his best man, generally arrives the bride at the altar. On entering the church the ushers come first, two abreast, the bridesmaids next, also two abreast; the maid of honor, matron of honor or flower girl next, and finally the bride, leaning on the arm of her father or some other male relative.

On leaving the church the bride and groom go first, the flower girl or matron or maid of honor next, then the bridesmaids, the best man and the ushers. The best man goes out should never be as short as the glass curtain. If they are short there should be some piece of furniture placed beneath the curtain, as a table, a chair or a fern or other plant.

In the matter of these side drapes there need be no great expense. In a cotton fabric from they are usually lined. Chintz lined with a harmonizing satin is is exceedingly good taste. For bedrooms sateen chintz may be used to advantage. In certain rooms there is nothing more interesting for the side drape than some colored drapery net, as green Nottingham curtain material or one of the interesting brown silk and linen curtain materials.

Nowadays sunlight is much in favor, and there is almost a necessity for having a bowl of geranium or some sort across the top of the window. This may be simply a piece of the side drapery about six or eight inches wide run on the curtain pole between the two side pieces or it may be pieces of a frieze of wood made especially for that purpose which is nailed to the window frame over the side drapery. His there really is nothing so difficult in any of this certain hanging for any ordinarily ingenious housewife to attempt. Half the battle is being your own interior decorator is to keeping your eyes open. The next time you see a curtain arrangement that suits you study it and then with the aid of a little pencil, a little scissors and themselves, needle and thread, scissors and tacks you or any other woman can do wonders in hanging curtains.

she throws her bouquet back among the guests and the girl who catches it is supposed to be the next bride in the party.

Guests at a wedding must call on the bride promptly after the latter's first day at home is announced. If evenings at home are announced earlier couples and men are supposed to call on the evenings named. Single girls can call during the day.

The groom gives souvenir gifts to his best man and the ushers. If he so desires. The bride performs a similar office for her attendants. The groom's gift to the bride is generally some good piece of jewelry, which is the only ornament she wears at her wedding.

The glare on the finger which is to receive the ring may be spoil the effect for the ceremony, thus saving confusion.

The bride may carry a white prayer book instead of flowers if she so desires.

How to Make a Very Small Bedroom Attractive.

When a bedroom or small dressing is papered with anything but a plain or neutral paper bright colored or flowered chints should never be used, but often a little color is needed to add zest to the room.

In a case of this kind one of the new bedspreads, which are so pretty and inexpensive, will be found just the necessary color. Select a plain white spread of a good quality and rather heavy. Cut from chintz a bunch of roses and sprays of any colored flower and paste one in each corner with a mirror one for the center. Sew to the spread and finish the edge with a wide fringe matching in with a shade in the flower or leaves.

This idea can be carried out for scarfs to cover the dressing table and bureau, in the shape of an oval to fit the top of each and finish the edge with a narrow ruffle or a small fringe like the spread. The effect is very pretty and inexpensive.

Keeping Mustard Leaves Mustard.

Mustard, when once mixed, will soon lose the property of for a long time in cold storage if placed in well-sealed notes of not more than three cubic feet capacity at a temperature of from 32° to 40° and in order F. The statements set them just as if they were fresh. New York World.

Commonness.

"Dear me! everybody seems prettier every day."

"Yes, you exaggerate all."

"Well then let me say every other day."—Map Lover.

Mending the Hot Water Bag.

A hole in a hot water bag can be repaired by the same means as a puncture in a bicycle tire. Drop a small brass plug into the bag, work the threaded end through the hole and screw on a thin nut. This will hold indefinitely.

Are You Rheumatic?—Try Sloan's

If you want quick and real relief from Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, thousand other people are doing—whenever an attack comes on, bathe the sore muscle or joint with Sloan's Liniment. No need to rub it in—just apply the Liniment to the surface. It is wonderful. No penetrating. It goes right to the seat of trouble and draws the pain immediately. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

First publication Feb. 11

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present, Hon. Norman A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Mitchell Lajoie, deceased.

It appearing to the court, that the time for presenting claims against said deceased should be limited, and that a time should be appointed for examining and allowing said claims and hearing said petition.

It is ordered, that all persons interested in said estate are required to present their claims against said deceased to our said court, at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, on or before the 10th day of March, A. D. 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court, on the 10th day of March, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock, a. m.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

First publication Feb 11

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present, Hon. Norman A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of John Fish, Deceased.

Robert R. Lawson having filed in said court his final administration account, and his petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate, and for the discharge of sureties on his bond.

It is ordered that the 8th day of March A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be appointed for examining and allowing said account and hearing said petition.

It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

First publication February 11th

Notice to Publication

State of Michigan, The probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present, Hon. Norman A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Ann Hewlett, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that four months from date hereof have been allowed for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to the probate office in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, that hearing on claims will be held on the 10th day of March, 1915, at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon of said day, and that claims presented shall be heard on said date. Notice of said hearing shall be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

First publication January 28th

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Jacob Wolf, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to George F. Sherman, of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated the 3rd day of March, 1913, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, in the city of Charlevoix, said mortgage containing also a power of sale, and being duly recorded in said county, and the statute in such case made and provided, and no suit or proceedings having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, and the sum of One Thousand Five Hundred Twenty Six Dollars and Twenty Five Cents ($1526.25) principal and interest, and attorney fee of Twenty (20) dollars, and no other proceedings at law or in chancery have been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, and the sum of Twenty (20) dollars being the amount of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, on the 3rd day of March, A. D. 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, there will be sold at the front door of the court house in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, the place where the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix is held, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and the attorney fee and the costs of sale, which premises are described in said mortgage as follows: Lot 7, Block 2, Assessor's Plat of Charlevoix, Michigan, subject to the rights of the public therein, and being a part of Government Lot 1, section 1, T. 34 N., R. 7 W.

Dated December 3rd, 1914.

GEO. F. SHERMAN, Mortgagee.

Assignment for Mortgage.

Hunsberger, Conklin & Hunsberger, Attorneys for Assignee, Charlevoix, Mich.

First publication January 28

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Jacob Wolf, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to George F. Sherman, of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated the 3rd day of March, 1913, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, in the city of Charlevoix, said mortgage containing also a power of sale, and being duly recorded in said county, and the statute in such case made and provided, and no suit or proceedings having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, and the sum of One Thousand Five Hundred Twenty Six Dollars and Twenty Five Cents ($1526.25) principal and interest, and attorney fee of Twenty (20) dollars, and no other proceedings at law or in chancery have been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, and the sum of Twenty (20) dollars being the amount of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, on the 3rd day of March, A. D. 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, there will be sold at the front door of the court house in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, the place where the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix is held, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and the attorney fee and the costs of sale, which premises are described in said mortgage as follows: Lot 7, Block 2, Assessor's Plat of Charlevoix, Michigan, subject to the rights of the public therein, and being a part of Government Lot 1, section 1, T. 34 N., R. 7 W.

Dated December 3rd, 1914.

GEO. F. SHERMAN, Mortgagee.

Assignment for Mortgage.

Hunsberger, Conklin & Hunsberger, Attorneys for Assignee, Charlevoix, Mich.

First publication February 25

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present, Hon. Norman A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Frank C. Burnell, deceased. Alice V. Burnell, having filed in said court her final administration account, and her petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate, and for the discharge of her bond.

It is ordered that the 15th day of March, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear before said court, at said time and place, and show cause why said petition should not be granted; and that said administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by publishing a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

First Publication February 25th

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present, Hon. Norman A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Frank C. Burnell, deceased. Alice V. Burnell, having filed in said court her final administration account, and her petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate, and for the discharge of her bond.

It is ordered that the 15th day of March, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear before said court, at said time and place, and show cause why said petition should not be granted; and that said administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by publishing a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

First publication February 25th

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, The Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present, Hon. Norman A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Mary Ann Gaskill, deceased.

It appearing to the court, that the time for presenting claims against said deceased should be limited, and that a time should be appointed for examining and allowing said claims and hearing said petition.

It is ordered, that all persons interested in said estate are required to present their claims against said deceased to our said court, at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, on or before the 10th day of March, A. D. 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court, on the 10th day of March, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock, a. m.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

First publication Feb. 25.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Ella Gaskill, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Lucy A. Moore of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated the 10th day of July 19th, and recorded in the Charlevoix County Records, in Liber 50 of Mortgages, on page 305, and containing a power of sale, and being duly recorded in said county, and the statute in such case made and provided, and no suit or proceedings having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, and the sum of Five Hundred Twenty Five Dollars and Twenty Five Cents ($525.25) principal and interest, and the further sum of Twenty (20) dollars being the amount of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and an attorney fee of Twenty (20) dollars, and no other proceedings at law or in chancery have been instituted to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage, or any part thereof, and the sum of Twenty (20) dollars being the amount of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided on the 3rd day of March, A. D. 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, there will be sold at the front door of the Court House in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, the place where the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix is held, the premises described in said Mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and the attorney fee and the costs of sale, which premises are described in said mortgage as follows: Lot 16 of Block 2 of Assessor's Plat of Charlevoix, Michigan, subject to the rights of the public therein.

Dated Charlevoix, Michigan, January 28, 1915.

CHARLOTTE SAVINGS BANK, R. W. Kane Mortgagee

Attorney for Mortgagee, Charlevoix, Michigan.

First publication February 25

Order For Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present, Hon. Norman A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Frank C. Burnell, deceased. Alice V. Burnell, having filed in said court her final administration account, and her petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate, and for the discharge of her bond.

It is ordered that the 15th day of March, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear before said court, at said time and place, and show cause why said petition should not be granted; and that said administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by publishing a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

First publication February 25th

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, The Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present, Hon. Norman A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Mary Ann Gaskill, deceased.

It appearing to the court, that the time for presenting claims against said deceased should be limited, and that a time should be appointed for examining and allowing said claims and hearing said petition.

It is ordered, that all persons interested in said estate are required to present their claims against said deceased to our said court, at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, on or before the 10th day of March, A. D. 1915, and that such claims will be heard by said court, on the 10th day of March, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock, a. m.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

First publication Feb. 11

Notice to Publication

State of Michigan, The probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1915.

Present, Hon. Norman A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of John Fish, Deceased.

Robert R. Lawson having filed in said court his final administration account, and his petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate, and for the discharge of sureties on his bond.

It is ordered that the 8th day of March A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be appointed for examining and allowing said account and hearing said petition.

It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.

NORMAN A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

First publication January 28th

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Jacob Wolf, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to George F. Sherman, of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated the 3rd day of March, 1913, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, in the city of Charlevoix, said mortgage containing also a power of sale, and being duly recorded in said county, and the statute in such case made and provided, and no suit or proceedings having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, and the sum of One Thousand Five Hundred Twenty Six Dollars and Twenty Five Cents ($1526.25) principal and interest, and attorney fee of Twenty (20) dollars, and no other proceedings at law or in chancery have been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, and the sum of Twenty (20) dollars being the amount of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, on the 3rd day of March, A. D. 1915, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at said office, in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, there will be sold at the front door of the court house in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, the place where the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix is held, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and the attorney fee and the costs of sale, which premises are described in said mortgage as follows: Lot 7, Block 2, Assessor's Plat of Charlevoix, Michigan, subject to the rights of the public therein, and being a part of Government Lot 1, section 1, T. 34 N., R. 7 W.

Dated December 3rd, 1914.

GEO. F. SHERMAN, Mortgagee.

Assignment for Mortgage.

Hunsberger, Conklin & Hunsberger, Attorneys for Assignee, Charlevoix, Mich.

First publication February 11th

NOTICE

State of Michigan,

County of Charlevoix County, Michigan.

Frederick H. McDonald, Plaintiff.

Lee Hoyland, Defendant.

Charlevoix, Mich., Feb. 10, To Lee Hoyland, Defendant: Take notice that on the 10th day of February, 1915, a writ of attachment was issued in the above entitled cause, for the sum of $100 and costs, on the 20th day of November, A. D. 1914, at the office of the Circuit Court Commissioner, in and for the city of Ellsworth, in and for said county, for the period from September 16th, 1914, and that the said writ was made returnable December 10th, 1914.

Dated December 10th, 1914.

ALBERT E. CLUTE, Circuit Court Commissioner.

Hunsberger, Conklin & Hunsberger, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS DESIGNS COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

WINTER KILLING OF ALFALFA.

No Plant Yet Found Proof Against All Degrees of Temperature.

Agents of the Department of agriculture have spent much time in Siberia searching for some north Asia species of alfalfa that cannot be winter killed. There has been much complaint of the winter killing of alfalfa, and it is probable that there always will be some such complaint. The agents of the department of agriculture have not found a plant that is proof against all manner of temperature changes common to northern regions.

Now and then an alfalfa field will be pretty well killed out by cold weather, and another field on the same kind of soil and just across the road will come through the winter in very good condition. When this happens, you may set it down that the winter killing bed has been badly handled by the grower in the summer before.

Here are some of the reasons for the winter killing of alfalfa. Pasturing it down to the ground before winter cuts in; cutting it too closely late in the season and setting it go into the winter while making a heavy growth. The heavy, green growth caused by warm fall weather and long continued fall rains is a frequent cause of winter killing.

There are some winters, too, when the snowfall is very light and the weather is very severe, and when this combination occurs alfalfa is likely to suffer greatly. Like wheat, alfalfa needs a good covering of snow to keep it from the cold, cutting and freezing winds. Many growers stick to the practice of mowing down the last crop, letting it lie as it falls and refusing to pasture the field after this cutting.

A soil better pine and one that is very popular is to not cut late in the fall, but to leave a growth of from six to eight inches high. This holds the snow, helps to keep the roots cool and prevents the heaving and settling of the soil that comes from alternate freezing and thawing. This freezing and heaving of the soil are among the reasons why alfalfa winter kills, as it loosens the roots and causes them to die from exposure.

Drying Seed Corn.

Drive nails into a barrel or short tier about every three inches, and on to each one push the cob end of an ear of corn. Many bushels of corn may be got in a big barrel in this manner.

Hang the barrel of ear, as the case may be, from a rafter or other strong support in a well-ventilated room. Corn dried in this manner is in excellent condition in the spring.—Farm and Fireside.

INDOOR GARDENING HINT.

How to Have an Indoor Garden in Winter Time.

The culture of plants in plain water is an interesting diversion for the indoor garden. This is a much more extensive matter than most persons imagine, and the scope of the garden without soil is quite surpr

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman)

CHAPTER XIII—Continued.

"Dear Samson: The war is on again. Yamarack Spicer killed Jim Asberry, and the Hollmans have killed Tance Hall. Uncle Sidney is shot, but he may get well. There is nobody to lead the Souths. I am trying to hold them down until I hear from you. Don't come if you don't want to—but the end is near. With love,

"SALLY."

Slowly Samson South came to his feet. His voice was in the deep-level pitch which Wilfred had once heard behind. His eyes were as clear and hard as transparent flint.

"This will be a lot of trouble, George," he said quietly; "that you must get me to New York at once—by motor, must take a train south tonight."

"No, Sam, I hope, sincerely hope—"

For an instant Samson forgot his manners in the intensity of his concern; a prematurely bald Hollman broke out fiercely. He was seeing things in a strange and terrible light. He stood, his face flushed and his fingers twitched.

"This will be on my hands, George," he said quietly. "If you must get me to New York at once—by motor, must take a train south tonight."

"No, Sam, I hope, sincerely hope—"

"I'm sorry, Sam, very sorry, but—"

"Shut up!" he said absently, and Samson finding himself from his reverie looked at the speaker curiously. "This was surprise, alone, ordinarily, I'm—I'm—sorry, Mr. Purvy." Samson's manners recovered for a moment to which the man had. Just now the guard should regretfully be doubled. Samson South wore his eastern clothes—for he usually was in them—and he was enough like an Indian south he could not count his threshold either way. But he must be stopped up on the trains and watched warning before he struck, and he meant to strike. If his were rising mind, well—he shrugged his shoulders.

But as he stood on the outside, wiping the perspiration from his forehead, for the ride had been warm, he heard voices within. They were loud and angry voices. It occurred to him that by remaining where he was he might gain more information than by hurrying in.

"I've done been your executioner for twenty years," complained a voice, which Samson at once recognized as that of Aaron Hollis, the most trusted of Purvy's personal guards. "I hain't never done nothin' yet. Me an' Jim Asberry killed old Henry South. We done his boy, an' could I go kin' of you'd only said thar word. I went over Hiram an' killed Tance's kinsfer, with soldiers all round me. There hain't no other damn fool in these mountains wud a look such a long chance as that. I'm tired of it. They're agin' yer git me, an' I wants fer leave, an' you won't come clean with the price of a railroad tick.to Oklahoma. Now, dame yore stingy soul, I gits that ticket or I gitts you!"

"Aaron, you can't escape anything doin' nothin' I ain't aimin' to do." The old baron of the cumberlands spoke in a cold, metal voice. "I tell ye I ain't quite through with ye yet. In does an' proper time I'll see that ye get yer ticket." Then he added, with coruscating soft-ness: "We've been friends a long while. Let's talk this thing over before we fall out."

"Thar hain't nothin' to talk over," stormed Aaron. "Ye're jest tryin' ter git time. If the boys ain't hyar, and I don't reckon ye 'lows ter have me kill 'em, I'll git out ter hitt them critters. Hit ain't no use. I've done sent 'em away. When they gits back hyar, either you'll be in hell, or I'll be on my way onles the mountains."

"Shoot him right, Sam." Here was the confession of one murderer, with no mind to another. The truce was over. Why should he wait? Cataracts seemed to thunder in his brain, and his mind was bent in his own corner, contending the grip of a maniac. Samson South knew this old, and Samson South the new were writing the last chapter of a friendship of long years.

Then, before decision came, he heard a sharp report inside, a dull thud, a muff of a body to the floor. A wildly excited figure came plunging through the door, and Samson's left hand went out and seized its shoulder in a sudden vise grip.

"Do you know me?" he hissed, as the mountaineer pulled away and reached back with startled surprise and vicious frenzy.

"No, damn yer! Git outen my roads!" Aaron had reached his pistol against the stranger's face. From somewhere came the sort of a smile of frightly burned powder. "Git outen my road afore I kills ye."

"Yer name is Samson South?"

Before the astounded finger on the trigger could be crooked, he had snatched some scraps from the pocket, and as though in echo, the rifle blared, a little blue ball of a shade too high, over his head, as the dead man's arms went up. Always for those two reports there was no sound. Samson stood still, another hole in his coat, and he knew he should doubtless have to pay with his life for by-in the deaths, which would be long and painfully drawn out, tributed to his agency. But, strangely enough, no chance came. The door ajar side had been muffled, and those outside, broken by the sudden tragedy, did not dare, across the house. Purvy's bodyguard had been cut away by lead on a false alarm. Only the "wooden-tolds" and children remained indoors, and when they ventured with a pause and an inquiry that might have come from whisper.

Now Samson South stood looking down, uninterrupted, on what had been Purvy. He was in his mechanical at his foe. There was a powder-burned hole in the buttoned shirt, and about it a little circle of blood trickled into the dirt-stained cracks between the floorboards.

Samson turned to the darkened door. He was conscious of a presence on the other body, which had crumpled forward and face down across the hearth, and he had recognized the voice of Aaron Hollis. Aaron was sure the sudden death of his master, and he was armed.

Samson paused only for a moment into survey. His score was clean. He would not again have to agonize over the blood of a stifled man. Tomorrow the word would spread like wildfire along Misery and Cripplepole that Samson South was back and that his coming had been signalized by three two deaths. The fact that he was responsible for only one—and that a dead man—

They would prefer to believe that he had killed the two and killed Purvy and that Hollis had fallen in his master's defense at the threshold. Samson did not stop to verify one or the other. He had come and, with a terrible clarity and distinctness, she realized how pitifully little she had been able to accomplish. Would she ever see her? She stood there before him, frightened, self-conscious and pulsitating, then her voice came in a whisper.

"I Have No Promises to Take Back."

"Samson, dear, I'm not holdin' you to any promise. Those things we said were a long time back. Maybe we'd better forget 'em now and begin all over again.

But again he crashed her in his arms and his voice rose triumphantly.

"Sally, I have no promises to take back, and you have made none. I'm ever going to let you take back—not—not little Jessie!"

Her laugh was the delicious music of happiness.

"I don't want to take them back," she said. Then, suddenly, she added, importantly, "I wear shoes and stockings now, and I've been doin' a little. I'm awfully—awfully ignorant, Cousin Sam, but I'm learning to be less ignorant every day."

"Jessie Purvy's dead."

"The girl drew back, with a frightened gasp. "Dead! Do you mean that she meant, or thought she did.

"Jessie Purvy!" she repeated. "Oh, Samson, did you—" She broke off, and covered her face with her hands.

"No, Sally," he told her. "I didn't have to. He recited the day's occurrence, and he spoke of Jessie, and, in spite, until the moon had sunk to the ridge top.

"Sal, Sidney Calloway's had been dismissed from the command of a militia company to spell the trouble in the mountains, should have been a school by profession. All his enthusiasms were spent.

The deep-set sorrow and mortification he had ever known was that which came to him when Tamarack Spicer, his prisoner of war and a man who had taken advantage of the strength of his personal guaranty, had been an executed before his eyes. In some measure he must make amends. He realized, too, and it rankled deeply, that he had been used as a tool, a pawn, in the game, and, as he had seen enough to distrust the Hollmans. Here, in Hixon, he was seeing things from only one angle. He meant to learn something more impartial.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

FOOD FOR STRANGER

SOUTH AFRICAN NATIVES HAVE A HUMANE CUSTOM.

Field is Set Aside on Which Supplies Are Grown and Stored in Readiness to Appease Hunger of Any Chance Visitor.

In South Africa, among the natives, there is a custom which has never been adopted by the white people in his place. In the Transkei, Basutoland and Bechuanaland, nearly every fair-sized village has a field set aside for strangers. In a village where the kins reside, usually the chief's wife is told off to cultivate this field and store away all the produce in the upper part of her hut, and if an any adjacent village some chief woman is selected for the work, no one of the tribe is permitted to touch any food thus stored.

The king's wife or whoever cultivates the land, takes her share of the product and makes her living out of it, but until such time as the moment actually consumed must be set aside and reserved. She is the trusted agent with any other wife of the king.

This field is known as the "Strangers' Field." Whenever a stranger comes to the village he makes known the fact to the chief, and he is immediately relieved. The best hut in the village is set aside for him, he eats the food of the stranger's field, and the wife of the king prepares for him one hut with her own hand. He remains a week, or a month, or any reasonable length of time, and he departure is never hastened. Sometimes he is a man of some other tribe, or a member of the tribe.

An amusing feature of this custom is that the chief and the members of the tribe occasionally leave the village and go on a visit themselves, leaving strangers, so that very often when a "Stranger's Field" is established in a certain village and anyone asks where Sam-Sam-Sam went or what happened to him, the answer comes gravely in formed that Sam-Sam was poor and reasonable length of time, and he departure is never hastened. Sometimes he is a man of some other tribe, or a member of the tribe.

An amusing feature of this custom is that the chief and the members of the tribe occasionally leave the village and go on a visit themselves, leaving strangers, so that very often when a "Stranger's Field" is established in a certain village and anyone asks where Sam-Sam-Sam went or what happened to him, the answer comes gravely in formed that Sam-Sam was poor and reasonable length of time, and he departure is never hastened. Sometimes he is a man of some other tribe, or a member of the tribe.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy

will afford you the same benefit it has given many sufferers for more than 37 years. It is nature's provision for mankind against kidney disease and its ofttimes terrible effects. It is pleasant to take. 50c and $1.00 sizes at all druggists. Sample and booklet free if you write, Warner's Safe Remedies Co. Rochester, N. Y.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by one LITTLE LIVER PILL.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A toilet preparation of merit. Promotes cleanliness. Stops scalp diseases and hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at druggists.

SYRUP OF FIGS FOR A CHILD'S BOWELS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics, or "a little of something, then, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers learn that a single dose of fig syrup stops, don't realize what they do. The children love it. It is pleasant to take. Mothers know it is a laxative that is perfectly safe and gentle on the little tots. Ask your druggist for a 50c bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Adv.

Quite So.

"Now they are advertising dreadnaught envy. They count not to drag the various colors into this imbroglio."

"What do you mean?"

"Gray has always been considered a good color for a dreadnaught."—Kansas City Journal.

LADIES! LOOK YOUNG

How Thousands Retain Youthful and Natural Color. Dandruff Removed.

Gray hair is evidence that age is advancing unless the glandes are invigorated to produce their natural color. This cannot be done by any "hair dye" or other artificial coloring, which at best can only temporarily darken the hair. Sulphur has been the well known and time honored remedy for restoring color to gray hair, and when sulphur is combined with other ingredients it is a most wonderful hair tonic. Dandruff is also a sign of a weak scalp, which should be invigorated. The following is a simple home formula: Take one ounce of Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one half ounce of sulphur. Any druggist can supply the ingredients. Apply a few times until the color is satisfactory. This will not interfere with bathing, shampooing or any other good toilet preparation, and is entirely free from any injurious or poisonous substance. Barbo Compound improves the health of the hair and scalp, and makes the hair fluffy and beautiful. Barbo Compound, 50c and $1.00 bottles at drug stores or direct, if dealer can not supply you, from Barbo Manufacturing Co., Kenosha, Wis. Proper pronunciation of Barbo—Ber-bo.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Hidden sweets are always sweeter
Stolen kisses much sweeter
Stolen looks are nice in church
Stolen, signed by your aspen
—Thomas Hardcastle.

VALUE OF WATER AND FRUIT JUICES.

Water is not a food, but a carrier of food to all parts, and wants from all parts of the body. Without the drinking of fresh, pure water we are taught. Too little drinking of fresh, pure water is the cause of much physical disturbance (frontal ing and little drinking of water to

Dr. Marden's Uplift Talks

By ORISON SWETT MARDEN

Copyright by Medical Newspaper Syndicate

CULTIVATE THE HABIT OF CHEERFULNESS.

A woman in California, who, because of crushing sorrow, had fallen a victim to despondency, hopelessness and kindred ills determined to throw off the gloom which was making her life so heavy a burden to her, and established a rule that she must laugh at least three times a day, whether occasion presented or not. Accordingly, she trained herself to laugh heartily at the least provocation, and would retire to her room and make merry by herself. She was soon in excellent health and buoyant spirits, and her home became a happy, cheerful abode.

To people who have lost the laughing habit I would say: Look yourself in your room and practice smiling. Smile at your pictures, furniture, bedclothes, anything, but see that your muscles are brought into play again.

In order to become normal, the natural fun-loving forces within us must be released. Laughter is one form of exercise which sets them free, rescues men from the "blues." Nothing is so gloomy, "cheer up! Get your mind off your troubles. Do not think about them. Think of the bright side of life. Think gratefully of the good things you have. Wake up, and be cheerful.

Stop Heat Rays.

An international chemical paint which has the property of intercepting the heat rays of the sun, has recently been put on the market by a German concern. It may be applied to tin, corrugated iron, slate or wooden roofs, or any material used in the roofing of buildings, and by its peculiar quality it leaves the room beneath the roof comparatively cool. It is stated that the temperature of workrooms may be reduced from 15 to 20 degrees Fahrenheit. Experiments in the surface which can be covered, and the added advantage of the workmen thus promoted in a direct and measurable gain. The paint is black; blue in color, so that if applied to glass, it does not appreciably influence the light. Its cost is reported at present a trade secret, but the fact that many large electric and manufacturing companies in Germany are using it seems to prove its value.

Ancient Corn Mills.

These peculiar rock formations are hand made—the most ancient of grist mills for grinding American corn. They have been used by the Navajo Indians of Arizona from time immemorial up to within a comparatively few years. There are 35 to 40 of them in the group, the lava rock in which they have been cut has worn smooth from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

More Meat Next Season.

Advantageous terms secured from the secretary of agriculture to graze on the national forests of California for the season of 1915, 212,283 cattle and horses, 566,750 sheep and goats, and 1,250 swine. Compared with the grazing season of 1914, these numbers constitute a considerable net increase, during the year approximately 835,000 acres in the national forest permit were eliminated from the forests.

Winter Chills Bring Kidney Ills

A spell of cold, damp weather is always followed by a fine crop of lumbago troubles and backache.

Colds and chills damage the kidneys. Other troubles common to winter weather are just as bad. Grip, tonsilitis, quinsy, pneumonia or any other infectious disease hurts the kidneys by overloading the blood with poisons. The kidneys get worn, weak and inflamed trying to work it off.

If isn't hard to strengthen weak kidneys though. If you act quickly. At the first sign of backache, dizzy spells, headaches, loss of weight, nervousness, depression and painful, irregular kidney action, start using Doan's Kidney Pills. Rest the kidneys by simple rules, avoidance of overwork and worry, and getting more rest and sleep. A milk diet is fine.

The simple treatment should bring quick benefit and prevent serious kidney diseases like dropsy, gravel and Bright's disease.

Clip this advertisement and mail it to the address below for a free trial of Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended kidney remedy in the world. You'll decide it worth a trial when you read this enthusiastic testimony.

Health Was Wrecked

Doctors Said He Could Live But a Short Time

Edwin Conker, Western Ave. R. F. D. No. 3, Mexico, Mo., says: "My kidneys were badly inflamed. I was in a terrible state. Doctors gave me up. I had to sit up the most of the back and I could hardly stand down. The kidney secretions passed too frequently, were profuse and discolored. I went down hill in weeks. My health failed and I lost weight steadily. My condition was critical. I was in bed most of the time. Doan's Kidney Pills finally stopped my trouble and I became a strong, active man. I have had no kidney trouble since." Doan's Pills have lasting treatment from different physicians and tried many remedies, but Doan's do more for me than any other kidney medicine I have taken. I believe Doan's Kidney Pills are good, and my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills and some more my neighbors have taken, have convinced me that they are the best. I have spoken highly of them and was cured of kidney trouble."

"Three Pictures Tells a Story"

"I'd be all right only for my back"

"When You Back Is Lame—Remember the Name"

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Sold by all Dealers. Price 50 Cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N.Y., Proprietors

RISKS OF RED CROSS WORK

Doctors Who Operate on the Field Under Fire Relate Adventures That Are Steady.

In the fighting area Red Cross workers face something greater than they have ever faced before, and greater than those who succor the wounded do not underestimate the end of a battle to live through. Some of the hardships and dangers they encounter are set forth in a recent address by Dr. Hugh Cabot, one of the members of the wounded in modern battle are too placed with blood and bones, must be given to them on the battlefield, but they are hard and shell wounds—gunfire. Surgeons now make their way along the trenches under heavy fire, carrying small surgical cases which contain a number of absolutely necessary medicines. These include pain-killing drugs, such as morphine, antiseptics and styptics. On the wounded soldier himself a first-aid outfit can be found, and the military surgeon with his knapsack a little pack of antiseptic gauze and a roll of bandages. Two surgeons, when the patient as comfortable as possible and if he can, drags him to a point where the bursting shells are not likely to injure him. Then, on his hands and knees, the plucky worker makes his way back to the place of duty and wounded, taking as many, if not more, with him as he can carry on his shoulders.

Of course, nothing under such trying conditions the surgeon can do all he would wish for the wounded. By means of injections from his hypodermic syringe he temporarily alleviates their pain, and in serious cases stops bleeding by tightly knotted bandages placed round the injured limb, while broken bones he puts in place and splints. Dr. Cabot, speaking of the stricken soldier's bayonet.

An Institute of Agriculture.

More attention farmer resulting in lower food prices in Ohio is the avowed object of the free institute of agriculture which has been in progress in New York city throughout 20 weeks of the present year. The institution depends upon cooperation between the national department of agriculture, Columbia university and the New York state department of agriculture. It is intended that persons who intended to go into farming shall be better prepared for this purpose, while those who are not fitted for that occupation may be deterred from attempting it. It is also the hope that abandoned farms near the city may be subjected to proper development.

Helpfulness Sometimes Resented.

Dr. Johnson, the lexicographer, in "Passing of the Third Floor Back" made a deep and lasting impression on Kansas City. It stimulates a fine desire to be more charitable and kindly. "We remember," writes Brandon P. Adams of New York, "the morning after seeing "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," we felt more than usually unworthy, and spiritual reform went into our reluctant heart. A young woman, carrying an arbitrary heavy suitcase was waiting up the subway stairs. Let me help you, we said. Don't touch that! she cried, as one shot to life. 'If you don't stop annoying me,' she added, 'I have you arrested.' So, during the handling, Hard Guts Jail Term for Mashing. We ran away, like the coward we were."—Kansas City Star.

Not a Thanksgiving Proverb.

"Japanese bravery is perhaps due to Japanese pessimism," said the Japanese consul in San Francisco. "Yes, Japanese have a black strain of pessimism in their blood. It is evidenced by their proverbs.

"There is one proverb which, in its disparagement of the human lot, is perhaps the most pessimistic proverb in all the world.

"To revenge yourself on your enemy, let him live."

Development of Heat by Plants.

The development of heat by plants in Dower Banks has been studied recently by H. Molisch. The flowers, leaves, and fruits of a large number of plants showed great continuous in the amount of heat developed. Most leaves and flowers developed considerable heat; possess, algae, and a number of common fruits, very little. Mushrooms, however, showed a wide range in this respect.

Birds Fly From Battle.

One of the war correspondents has noticed the remarkable fact that from the battlefields of northern France and the contiguous portions of spiders and other cognate crawling things. Birds always desert scenes of heavy gunfire and, what is more, they often do not return for many years. Not a bird was in the theater of war in South Africa, and it is only now—14 years later—that they are returning. Meanwhile South Africa has suffered from a vertiginous plague of ground insects. Not a bird was left there even there. It is not supposed that the African birds have perished, but that they merely retired to some remote and peaceful part of the veldt.

Different Now.

"He's a fool that the people can't be trusted to act wisely in great public matters."

"That so? Only last week I heard him telling that he believed in the initiative."

"I know. He was running for office then, and most of those who had the other pillow."—Detroit Free Press.

Changed Views.

"Time makes a big difference."

"What are you thinking of?"

"My wife's father. I used to think he was stubborn. Not. Now I respect his judgment."

"What's happened?"

"Nothing, except he did his dandest to prevent my eloping with his daughter."—Detroit Free Press.

Activities of Women.

New Jersey is the only state in the Union which has no suffrage organization.

Less than 10 per cent of the young women in a large city have normal health.

Approximately 6,200 women are employed in the garment factories of Indianapolis.

Fifteen women to every 100 are employed in the industrial world by labor.

France has 15 women inspectors of labor—more than any other country.

Mrs. E. J. Clinton of Portland, Ore., is conducting an expert on card filing systems.

Women very often do farm work in Sweden while their husbands sit back and smoke.

If New York state grants equal suffrage nearly 3,000,000 women will share in the franchise.

Missouri has over 60,000 women workers, of whom about 10,000 live away from home.

Moisture Absorbed by Granite.

A coat made of granite, while perhaps not the most comfortable article of wearing apparel—although granite in thin sheets is flexible—might be thought to be storm proof; yet granite will absorb a considerable amount of moisture. If a cube, yard of granite that had been completely dried out were immersed in pure water, it would, according to the United States Geological survey, after a short time take up four gallons of water.

Pipefish Has "Pocket."

The pipefish, as it is called, from the shape of its head, has a pouch on the under side of its body nearly half its length. It is found in the main channel of the Nile, and is long, slender, and its body is unprotected by large scales, as is the case with most fishes, it relies on its protective armor. In this pouch the young fish are carried until they are able to swim.

Covered.

"Isn't that a fine door-mat you have? Strength I didn't realize it before."

"You were standing on it before."

When Your Eyes Need Care

Murine Eye Remedy Relieves Eyes Troubled by Exposure, Dust, Wind, Glare of Sun, Reading Fine Print, Sewing, Work or Prolonged Use of Eyes. Murine Soothes and Refreshes. Murine Is Not a Medicine but a Scientific Preparation. Murine Is Compounded by Registered Pharmacists. Murine Is Not Sold in Bulk but Only in Sealed Packages to Insure Purity and Cleanliness. Murine Is Guaranteed to Be Free from Germs. Murine Is Not Injurious. Murine Is Not Advertised to Cure Anything. Murine Is Not Sold by Druggists at Less than Full Price. Murine Is Not Sold by Peddlers. Murine Is Not Sold by Mail. Murine Is Not Sold by Department Stores

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 45 | Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, March 18, 1915. | NUMBER 48

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH — EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 8

SUBSCRIPTIONS:
Three Months — 45
Six Months — 75
One Year — 1.50

RATE INCREASE NECESSARY

FARMERS' UNION OFFICIALS THINK RAILROADS ARE ENTITLED TO MORE REVENUE.

Products of Plow and Farmer Who Lives at Home Should Be Exempt From Increase.

By Peter Radford.
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The recent action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in granting an increase in freight rates in the eastern classification of territory; the application of the roads to state and interstate commissions for an increase in rates, and the utterances of President Wilson on the subject bring the farmers of this nation face to face with the problem of an increase in freight rates. It is the policy of the Farmers' Union to meet the issue affecting the welfare of the farmers squarely and we will do so in this instance.

The transportation facilities of the United States are inadequate to effectively meet the demands of commerce and particularly in the South and West, additional railway mileage is needed to accommodate the movement of farm products. If in the wisdom of our Railroad Commissions an increase in freight rates is necessary to bring about an improvement in our transportation service, and an extension of our railways, then an increase should be granted, and the farmer is willing to share such proportion of the increase as fairly belongs to him, but we have some suggestions to make as to the manner in which the increase shall be levied.

Rates Follow Lines of Least Resistance.

The freight rates of the nation have been built up along lines of least resistance. The merchant, the manufacturer, the miner, the miller, the lumberman and the cattleman have had their traffic bureaus thoroughly organized and in many instances they have bowed to the railroad without mercy and with the power of organized commerce they have hammered the life out of the rates and with unrestrained greed they have eaten the vitals out of our transportation system and since we have had railroad commissions, these interests, with skill and cunning, are represented at every hearing in which their business is involved.

The farmer is seldom represented at rate hearings as his organizations have never had the finances to employ counsel to develop his side of the case, and as a result, the products of the low base are unequal burden of the freight expense. A glance at the freight tariffs abundantly proves this assertion. Cotton, the leading agricultural product of the South, already bears the highest freight rate of any necessary commodity. It comes and goes, and the rate on agricultural products as a whole is out of proportion with that of the products of the factory and the mine.

We offer no schedule of rates, but hope the commission will be able to give the railroad such an increase in rates as is necessary without levying a further toll upon the products of the plow. The measure seems to present an opportunity to the Railroad Commission to equalize the rates as between agricultural and other classes of freight without disturbing the rates on staple farm products.

What is a Fair Rate?

We do not know what constitutes a basis for rate making and have never heard of anyone who did claim to know much about it, but if the property of the farm is a factor to be considered and the railroad commission concludes that an increase in rates is necessary, we would prefer that it come to us through articles of consumption on their journey from the factory to the farm. We would, for example, prefer that the rate on rope remain as at present and the rate on mule feed be increased, for any farmer can then avoid the burden by raising his own mules, and a farmer who will not try to raise his own mules ought to be penalized. We think the rate on coal and brick can much better bear an increase than the rate on cotton and flour. We would prefer that the rate on plows remain the same, and machinery, planos and such articles as the poorer farmer cannot hope to possess bear the burden of increase.

The increase in rates should be so arranged that the farmer who lives at home will bear no part of the burden, but let the farmer who boards in other states and countries and who feeds his stock in foreign lands pay the price of his folly.

When honesty is merely a good policy it is a poor virtue.

Lazy farmers are just as useless as dead ones and take up more room.

When the soul communes with the spirit of nature the back to the farm movement prevails.

There are two kinds of farmers. One tries to take all the advice he hears and the other won't take any at all.

ATHLETICS

Boyne City will send a team this week to couple up with the Charlevoix team at the rink Thursday. While Boyne City has not been playing independent ball this season the team that will represent her this week will be composed of some of the best individual players in this section. The locals contemplate a hard proposition and are making preparations for the same.

The management of the local independent team has just completed arrangements with the management of the Traverse City team for a game to be played on the local court sometime in March. The date will be announced later. Traverse City has one of the fastest teams in this part of the state and will give the locals the most interesting game of the season.

Hampered by the small floor and the determination to lay Charlevoix out cold, Bellaire held the locals 32-19 at Bellaire last Friday night. At times the game was fast, but at no time was there an demonstration of the real game as has been seen on the local floor this winter. Bellaire saw there was no chance to defeat Charlevoix playing real basket ball and undertook tactics that were far from the right sort.

The county spelling contest between Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix is developing into one of the best contests ever participated in by these schools. Last week Boyne City received first honors with an average of 90.21; Charlevoix was second with 89.15 and East Jordan third with 89.03. Some very beneficial results are also being noticed in the general ability of the local students to master the good spelling habit.

Boyne City High School basket ball team were given a good hard run for the game on Boyne's floor last Saturday night when Charlevoix high made good her threat and held the North Arm lads 10-22. The game was fast and clean throughout. The local boys were somewhat to a disadvantage owing to the crowded quarters, although they argue nothing to offset the defeat. After the game the team and faculty members feasted at the Wolverine Hotel at a luncheon given by the Boyne City team. Toasts were heard and a general get together time was had by everybody who attended. Charlevoix had the best time ever in Boyne City and are planning on giving a like reception when March 20 sees Boyne City lined up on the local court. Several townspeople and also high school fans accompanied the team to Boyne City and assisted in the old time way.

In whirlwind fashion Charlevoix Independents administered the usual trimming to Kalkaska last Wednesday night that they have been doing out to the other independent teams in this section during the past four weeks. The final count was 62-18. Kalkaska came here having in their mind visions of the southern realm and was confident of whipping the local quintet from the championship throne. From the opening of the game to the side lines there was doubt as to the outcome of the affair as Charlevoix started in for blood and the way the baskets rained in from the fowl line and also from the floor was a pity to behold. Kalkaska soon changed her tactics and undertook to play merely a defensive game. In this phase of the game she was as weak against the clean and fast passing of the locals as in any other. The second half witnessed a marked improvement in the team work of the local men and resulted in most of the points of the second half coming through field baskets. Kalkaska scored six field goals and six counts from the fowl line.

THESE ARE THE ASSETS THAT MAKE CHARLEVOIX FAMOUS

Charlevoix has:

A first-class sewer and drainage system.
Absolutely pure water, with an excellent circulating system for domestic and fire purposes.
A splendid electric lighting system.
Paved and macadam streets.
A twenty acre public park along shore of Lake Michigan.
Five prosperous churches.
Excellent schools.
A $25,000 Masonic Temple.
Inland Lake with 60 miles of navigable coast line.

Report of the Condition of
THE CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
AT CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN
at the close of business March 4, 1915, as called for by the Commissioner of the Banking Department.

RESOURCES

Loans and Discounts, viz.:
Commercial Department	$99,714.56
Savings Department	37,268.00	136,934.56
Bonds, Mortgages and Securities, viz.:
Commercial Department	73,726.00
Savings Department		27,625.00
Overdrafts		1,000.00
Banking House		11,000.00
Furniture and Fixtures		3,000.00
Other Real Estate		1,500.00
Items in Transit
Reserve	Commercial	Savings
Due from banks in reserve cities	$ 1,663.91	$10,774.70
Exchanges for clearing house	811.02
U. S. and National bank currency	1,336.00	4,000.00
Specie		1,000.00
Silver Coin	400.00	300.00
Nickels and cents	98.15	190.00
Checks and other cash items		22,471.15
Total		213,005.72

LIABILITIES

Capital stock paid in		25,000.00
Surplus fund		2,000.00
Undivided profits net		3,384.32
Dividends unpaid		100.00
Commercial deposits subject to check	$47,291.70
Commercial certificates of deposit	41.50
Savings deposits book accounts	3,000.00
Savings certificates of deposit	152,787.20
Notes and bills rediscounted	68,472.95	181,593.35
Bills Payable	None
Total		213,005.72

STATE OF MICHIGAN } ss
County of Charlevoix }
I, W. J. Rachow, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear, that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief, and correctly represents the state of the several matters herein contained, as shown by the books of the bank.
W. J. RACHOW, Cashier.
Subscribed and sworn to before me this 9th day of March 1915.
ROBERT W. HANE, Notary Public.
My commission expires Dec. 26, 1916.
Correct—Attest:
J. L. Crane
H. S. Harsha
John Weston
} Directors

County Normal Notes

CORA B. DRIGGETT

Miss Hazle Pearl entertained the normal class with an ice-boating party Monday night. It was the first ride on the ice-boat for many of the class. The sail was most delightful.

Mr. Ward Gemrt was absent Wednesday on account of a bad cold.

Miss Kathleen Bulgree and Miss Edna Srigley, class of '14, were visitors Thursday afternoon.

The training room children have been studying about daffodils and have learned Wordsworth's poem by that name.

Miss Cora B. Driggett gave a class party Saturday, February 27, at her home. The rooms were decorated in green and white, the class colors.

Miss Ruby Hooker was elected assistant clerk of the House of Representatives last Tuesday.

NOTICE

To the qualified electors of Marion township.

A caucus will be held at Marion township hall, Thursday, March 18th, 1915, for the purpose of nominating township officers, and such other business as may come before the meeting.

Wm. WITHERS, Township Clerk.

ART IN ITS DAWNING.

Primitive Man's First Crude Efforts Toward the Beautiful.

In the beginning man went forth each day—some to do battle, some to the chase, others again to dig and delve in the field—all that they might gain and live or lose and die—until there was found among them one, differing from the rest, who stayed in the tents with the women and traced strange devices with burnt stick over a gourd.

This man, who took no joy in the ways of his brothers, who cared not for the conquest and fretted in the field, this designer of queer patterns, this dreamer of the beautiful, who perceived in nature about him curious portions, or forms not seen in the tribe—this dreamer spirit was the first artist.

And when from the field and from after there came back the people they took the gourd and drank from out it.

And presently there came to this man another man in like attire—one like nature chosen by the gods, and they stayed together and soon they continued from the undecorated utilitarian forms resembling the gourd. And with the power of creation, the heritage of the artist, presently they went beyond the mere conception of nature, and what to a disadvantage owing to the crowded quarters, although they argue nothing to offset the defeat. After the game the team and faculty members feasted at the Wolverine Hotel at a luncheon given by the Boyne City team. Toasts were heard and a general get together time was had by everybody who attended. Charlevoix had the best time ever in Boyne City and are planning on giving a like reception when March 20 sees Boyne City lined up on the local court. Several townspeople and also high school fans accompanied the team to Boyne City and assisted in the old time way.

Religious Notes

Congregational Church
Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.
Bible School, 12 o'clock.
Young People's Meeting, 6:00 p. m.
Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT CHINTON)
Bible School at 1:30 p. m.
Preaching, 2:30 p. m.

Baptist Church
Denominational Day.
A. M.—"The Divine Mission of the true Church."
P. M.—"Is one Church as Good as the Other;" or "Why I am a Baptist."
B. Y. P. U.—Honorary Members Meeting.
Topic—Tested by Christianity.
Leader—Laura Howard.
Class Address—Mrs. Moser.
Bible Study, Tuesday evening 7:45.
The Doctrines of Total Depravity.
Prayer Meeting—"Difficult Scriptures made plain as day."

Christian Science
Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.
Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Substance."
Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.
Reading Room, open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m., also 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service
8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:00 a. m.—High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.
Masses during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church
Services second and fourth Thursday in each month, by Rev. Harris, of Petoskey.

Methodist Church
A. M. "Some Things that I Know."
P. M. "Charlevoix's Golden Calf."

THE ELLSWORTH REAL ESTATE AGENCY

Will get out new property lists soon. Prospects are fine for this season. If you have lands to sell or rent write me at once. Terms are easy. I have the names of 150 good prospects in my office right now. Get in with an Agency that is doing lots of good advertising. Do it now.

Yours truly,
E. R. HARRIS,
Ellsworth, Michigan
3-11-4

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

County Normal Notes

CLEO THORNE

Miss Hinman took the normal class to a tea card tea given at the home of Mrs. Harry Nicholls. The tea was given for the benefit of the suffrage cause.

Miss Cleo Thorne spent Saturday and Sunday at her home in East Jordan, returning Monday morning.

The members of the normal class and the fifth grade went down to the telegraph office last Friday morning when the time was received from Washington at eleven o'clock.

The normals also made fudge Friday afternoon in domestic science work.

The class has been doing work in nature study, stories, pictures and artists under the direction of Miss Winting.

The training room children have finished the study of Europe in the subject of geography.

The children in the training room have begun the study of birds and spring flowers.

AT DANTO'S— Large California Navel Oranges, 25c per dozen.

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

For Saturday Only-

A. E. Mason's Dept. Store WILL SELL FOR CASH

25 pounds Producer Flour	95c
One barrel Producer Flour	$7.25
49c, 45c and 50c Brooms	33c
3 packages 10c Jelly Con	10c
12-25c Oranges	19c
12 Clothes Pins	1c
3 Large boxes Tooth Picks	5c
3 Boxes Ohio Matches	10c
10 yards 6c Calico	50c

MASON'S Department Store

When Broadway Was a Trail

at the--Majestic Theatre Wednesday, March 17th

A Superb Moving Picture Feature, Illustrating a Story of Surpassing Interest.

This will be one of the big numbers of the series of Star Attractions.

MR. H. O. CARLZEN
The Petoskey
Ladies' Tailor

Will visit Charlevoix on Saturday Afternoon, March 13
Monday Forenoon, March 15

With samples of newest fabrics for Spring and Summer wear.

LATEST STYLES
Everything in Ladies Custom Tailoring.

--Remember the Dates--

Ladies unable to call at hotel, can arrange appointments at their homes by phone.

Chas. Rock Product Company,
Producers and Manufacturers of Hydrated
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Fluxing
Sugar Stone.
Phone 80.

PETER BENSON
CONTRACTOR FOR
Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.
If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10¢ ASSORTED
Best Wishes, Greetings, Birthday, etc. Send us your Post Card, quick, and receive Family Story and Program, and change for return postage, etc.
FAMILY STORY PAPER
24 26 Van Buren St., Bos. 104.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction
Auto and Boat Supplies
214 Bridge St. - Phone 131
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Insurance
Bonds
Kalkaska Farmers' Block, Phone 221 Residence, Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD, DENTIST.
Office in Dr. Van Ostrander Block.
Over R. A. Graham & Co's Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139.

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Office in Priest's Block.
Charlevoix - Michigan

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS
The Best Remedy For all forms of Rheumatism
LUMBAGO
LOCAL COMPLICATIONS
DROPS
STOP THE PAIN
Given Quick Relief
Sold by Druggists
Manufactured only by
THE LAWRENCE-WILLIAMS CO.
CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Tired!
Are you tired? are you lazy? nervous? is everything you do an effort? Not if it can be helped. You can't, if Electric Bitters is used. Your Stomach, Kidneys and Liver are all active. Nothing will do this better than
Electric Bitters
50c. and $1.00. All Druggists.

.·. Local and Personal Notes .·. .·.

Mrs. R. N. Faulkner is in Chicago visiting her son Ray.

Mrs. Fitch H. Williams, of Elk Rapids, is the guest of Mrs. R. W. Paddock.

Capt. J. A. Emory is quite ill at his little home down on the harbor front.

Mrs. D. H. Stacks left Saturday to join her husband at Charlotte, Mich.

Mrs. Robert McNeill arrived Saturday and is occupying her north side residence.

Mrs. W. J. Rachow, who has been visiting friends in Detroit for several weeks returned Tuesday.

Elmer Johnson is getting the bridge machinery ready for action. A new smoke-stack is being installed.

Capt. Roy Marshall, in charge of Salvation Army work at Marion, Ind., visited his parents here last week.

The lower house of the State legislature has passed the "one deer" bill, also a bill ostensibly a five cent bounty on rats.

Mrs Wm. Shapton, after an absence of 33 years, from her childhood home, in southern Michigan, is visiting relatives here.

What is this distinguished committee of 21 doing in the matter of the fish hatchery? There is an opening in this direction for good still work.

Ed. Chalupka and wife, who have been here a month, left Monday for their Oregon home. They go via San Francisco and will take in the exposition.

G. W. Lurk brought in a Wyandotte egg Saturday which measured six and one half inches in circumference one way by eight inches the other, and weighing one quarter of a pound.

Albon Smith, foreman of the Charlevoix fire department, attended a firemen's banquet at Bellaire Tuesday night. The State fire warden was present and A. B. Dougherty, of Lansing, was toastmaster.

Harvey Campbell was in Grand Haven the past week taking an examination for an ocean license. He returned with a parchment as chief engineer unlimited on all oceans. This is an honor that few fresh water engineers can boast of.

Married, in Charlevoix March 10th, by Rev. Mr. Taggart, Mrs. Genevieve Saunby, of Charlevoix, to Mr. Henry L. Potter, of Detroit. Miss Nina Freeman, sister of the bride, attended as bridesmaid, and Mr. Richard Potter was the groom's best man. Mr. and Mrs. Potter went immediately to their comfortable new home at Barnard.

Word has been received today of the death in Chicago of James Spencer. He was the brother of Mrs. E. L. Sprague and John Spencer of this city. Mr. Spencer was well known among the older residents of Traverse City.—Record-Eagle. The deceased grew up in Elk Rapids, his father being one of the pioneer residents of the village. The elder Spencer built the house just west of the Progress office, now owned by Bert Wilson, and lived there a number of years.—Progress. In 1866 when the Traverse Bay Eagle was removed from Elk Rapids to Traverse City, the present publisher of the SENTINEL was the "journeyman" printer on the Eagle, helped to move the outfit to Traverse City. E. L. Sprague and James Spencer were the proprietors.

Dr. Armstrong returned home from Chicago Monday evening.

E. F. Sloan attended the good roads convention in Grand Rapids last week.

W. H. Griffin, for some time manager and editor of the Boyne City Citizen, has moved to Bad Axe.

F. V. Alexander, after a three weeks vacation, has returned to his work as Pere Marquette agent here.

Martha J. Ayerr last week bought the Myers property, on May street, consisting of house and four lots.

The first "lift" of the fishing season was that of the tug Parmelee, which came in Monday night with 1300 pounds of trout.

A. L. Hart & Son have started the Ford automobile campaign. A carload of cars was received last week, and the firm will push that excellent machine to the limit.

The Dictionary Club will meet Thursday afternoon of this week with Mrs. A. M. Wilkinson. Subject, "Flag Day and U. S. Marine." Roll call, "Prominent Men in Army and Navy."

With an average of 99.51 Charlevoix high school won the weekly spelling contest against East Jordan and Boyne City. East Jordan and Boyne City rated at 99.20 and 98.19 respectively.

On Monday evening March 22, 1915 at the M. E. Church Mrs. Rose Curtiss Reid—Dramatic Soprano, will give a concert under the auspices of the M. E. Sunday school. Mrs. Reid has a voice of rare quality and range with a most charming personality.

At first blush, with the impulsiveness of youth, we shied. We were constrained to consider a hospital as a luxury to be desired, but on a par with an editor's automobile, with no money to buy gasoline.

The thought took possession of our perhaps befogged intellect that something more productive could be secured with the $7,500, as dinner pails are lower taxes are the present desideratum.

We think it is pretty well understood that this paper, in the consideration of any local question, does not care a rap for the opinion of any other paper, or any individual of whatever prominence in public affairs.

We conceds that there are strong arguments for the proposition, with a probability of added strength as all interests and influences are further developed.

We are open to conviction, and shall not oppose the project as it now presents itself.

The first public recital given by the students of the high school will be held in the auditorium of the high school building Friday afternoon beginning at 2 o'clock. The program will consist of papers, declamations, recitations, musical numbers and a prepared debate. The public is urgently requested to be present and spend the afternoon with the students and faculty.

John H. [Harvey] Wilson died at his home, 409 East Eighth street last evening at seven o'clock. He was born March 23rd, 1842 in Essex county, N. Y. He married Miss Sarah Moore in Clinton county, N. Y., April 14th 1862 and removed to Antrim county, Michigan near the Charlevoix county line in 1864. At that time there were only about twenty families in the county, and the nearest postoffice was Traverse City. The mail was carried from Traverse City to Harbor Springs on the back of an Indian. They removed to Traverse City about twenty years ago and have made their home here since. Mr. Wilson was for many years a contractor and builder. He leaves a widow, three sons, A. E. Wilson, who removed to Detroit four years ago; Geo. Wilson of this city, and H. H. Wilson of Detroit, and two daughters, Mrs. Evelyn Hanshew of Detroit and Mrs. Mae Hannaford of Alpena. The funeral will be held from the Christian church on Cass and Eighth streets Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Interment will be in Oakwood.—Traverse City Record-Eagle.

PICKLING STATION ASSURED FACT

Plant to be Established Near Sugar Factory Building on City Property

Some weeks ago this paper announced the fact that a movement was on foot to establish a cucumber picking plant in Charlevoix.

We are now enabled to state positively that the enterprise is an assured fact. Mr. James H. Johnson of the James H. Johnson Pickle Co. was here Thursday and closed the deal whereby the plant will be built at once.

The building will be located on land belonging to the city, immediately south of the sugar factory building. It will be 60x100 feet in dimensions. Two hundred acres of cucumbers are required to operate the plant. Half of this acreage is already contracted for and acreage is being secured daily. The company have two canvassers out doing good work—one in this end of the county and one in the East Jordan section.

The headquarters of the company is at South Haven and this will be one of a chain of plants located at various points. Mr. Johnson has made trips to several directions from here, and is enthusiastic in his praise of agricultural conditions.

CONCERNING THIS HOSPITAL MATTER

As will be seen by the official proceedings of the council, the matter of submitting to the people of Charlevoix the question of appropriating from the city funds the sum of $7,500 for the erection and equipment of a hospital, was charming personality.

A CHANCE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

How They Aid in Better and More Profitable Farming.

Part of the extension program of Michigan Agricultural College this year is the organization of boys' and girls' agricultural clubs in co-operation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Several clubs are now being planned for Charlevoix county. Any boy or girl between the ages of ten and eighteen years is eligible to membership. Members may grow corn, potatoes, or market gardens. Or they may take up poultry raising and live stock in villages and cities where land is scarce, clubs are formed among the girls to do garment-making and housekeeping.

The plan for Charlevoix county is to hold a number of meetings at various rural centers during the 6th, 7th and 8th of April and there present the work to the young people, and to give them a chance to join who would like to take it up.

The success of the enterprise depends largely on the interest older people show in it. Most boys and girls are easily discouraged and often need help to overcome their difficulties. But when they do succeed they acquire new confidence in themselves and gain a love for the farm that means much for the future of the industry.

When meetings are held the organizers invite the parents of the children to attend. As soon as arrangements are completed the places where the meetings will be held will be announced.

ATHLETICS

in a fast yet sluggish game last Thursday Charlevoix took Boyne City into camp to the tune of 32-19. Boyne City put up an unexpected caliber of the game and were able to hold the locals to a reasonable count. One of the largest crowds of the season witnessed the game.

The big attraction on the basket ball docket for this week will be the invasion of the Traverse City Independent team on Friday evening at the roller rink. Traverse City has already established herself among basket ball annals of the state by holding several of the independent Detroit teams to close scores and is considered by critics among the best aggregations that the state puts out. Thus far during the present season none of the Northern Michigan teams have been able to make an impression on the Traverse City quintet. The locals are putting in every minute in preparation for this final big game of the winter sport season and expect one of the stiffest games. The Traverse City team will be weakened by the absence of Brief, who left recently for spring training with the Chicago White Sox. Dempsey, a former Charlevoix man is among the ranks of the visitors.

THE ROCK PRODUCT COMPANY

The work of re-adjusting the affairs of the Rock Product Co. is progressing favorably, and will dig out from under its load and be firmly on its feet in a few weeks.

The trouble with the company was not a lack of business. The plant is working to its full capacity, is filling its orders, and is earning good net money every day.

Those having most interest in the success of the enterprise are smartly confident that the present process of legal "screening" will place the enterprise squarely on its feet.

Under normal conditions, sure to follow, the Charlevoix Rock Product Co., is a paying proposition.

"ALL PRINTED AT HOME"

There lies before us a recent issue of a daily paper, published in a neighboring city. It is a quarto, of 28 columns, 19 columns of which is "home plate," so-called, bought in Chicago or Detroit for one cent per inch.

And yet there are newspapers in this section which sneer at "patent insides," and sing the "all printed at home" chorus.

There is not a paper published in Charlevoix county which does not have a patent inside, made up of matter that is set up and stereotyped away from home.

Consistency, thou art a jewel.

MINNESOTA BOUGHT

Northern Michigan Transportation Co. Buys Big Steel Steamship

In a recent issue of this paper we stated that the N. M. T. Co. was considering the purchase of the steamship Minnesota, to take the place of the Manistee, which was destroyed by fire last fall.

It is now given out that the boat has been bought, and will be placed on the Chicago—Buffalo route this spring. Entrance to the harbor is constructed upon such a scale, that enables the Minnesota to meet that emergency. She will make this port once a week on her trip south.

The Minnesota is a fine steel vessel, 250 feet long, 43 feet in beam, and 24 feet beam. She was built in 1896 at Wyandotte, and has large first-class passenger accommodations.

Capt. Brugot of the Missouri, will command the Minnesota. The command of the Missouri has not yet been decided.

MEMBER LARGE PIONEER FAMILY

Sudden Death of Wm. F. Pearl Whose Family Takes Rank Among Earliest Pioneers.

Wm. F. Pearl died suddenly Thursday morning at his home in Norwood. He had been in good health up to the moment of his death. He arose that morning feeling well, but without warning he fell from his chair and expired. Heart failure is given as the cause.

Deceased was about 80 years of age. He was the son of the late Cassius Pearl, of Battle Creek, who visited his relatives at Norwood in the early days. The Pearl family, of whom there were several, came from the Calhoun county section, locating in Norwood soon after the close of the civil war. He was a brother of Vern Pearl, of Eastport; Lucius Pearl, of Central Lake, and Mrs. Parker McIntyre, of Norwood.

Besides a wife, he leaves three sons—Frank, of Lakewood, Benjamin, of Norwood, and Charles, of Chicago.

DEATH OF WALTER DANIELS

Walter Daniels died at his home in this city early Saturday morning.

He had been in poor health for some months. On Friday morning he went to the Lake Michigan beach to gather drift wood. Not returning at noon a search was instituted and at two o'clock Daniels was found lying unconscious on the beach. He was taken home, remaining unconscious until the hour of his death.

Walter Daniels has been a resident of Charlevoix for over thirty years. He leaves a wife.

ITS VOICE IS STILLED FOREVER

The bell in the tower of the central school building, which has summoned for the studies two generations of pupils, has lost its voice, and will no longer accelerate the speed of the youngsters.

It has been gradually failing since it was struck by lightning several years ago, when a small crack appeared and which has slowly enlarged.

The school board has taken steps to secure a new bell. We suggest that the old bell be mounted in the school yard. There are business men in Charlevoix who have with more or less alacrity responded to its call.

FORTY-SIX YEARS AGO

Forty-six years ago the present publisher of this paper entered "Pine River" on foot, through the slush, with a satchel on his back, and began setting up the type for the first issue of the SENTINEL, which appeared three weeks later, printed on an old Washington hand press, on second-hand type picked up in the Traverse City Herald office.

The first "print shop" was up stairs in the old Chamberlain building, which stood on the site of the present County Bank building. The remainder of the story has been often told in these columns, and we shall not repeat it at this time. It is a story of hard work, midnight toil, privations, disappointment and discouragements, and final victory.

Has not the SENTINEL earned the good will of the people of Charlevoix and the contiguous territory? The present publisher cannot very much longer guide its destinies, but is at not a Charlevoix smart, worthy of future growth and usefulness?

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Charlevoix Historical Society will meet Friday evening March 19th with Mr. and Mrs. John Burns. The following is the program:

Music
Piano solo ..... Mr. Beers
Paper Scotch Immigration
Rev. Quinton Walker
Social Intermission
Music
Vocal Solo ..... Dr. Armstrong
"The South Wind of Creagh Patrick."
Mrs. Peter Vandermade.

VALUABLE TEAM LOST THROUGH THE ICE

Saturday morning the fine big gray team of Robert Waters went to their death in the ice of Pine Lake, off the sand warehouse.

Robert and Montie Withers were engaged in hauling wood for the Charlevoix Lumber Co. from near Ironton. The team went west with a load of wood when they broke through just over the channel bank. Montie succeeded extricating his team, but Robert's team and wagon sank to the bottom.

The loss is fully $500.

Growing Young Men.

A Shorthand instructor once asked how long he would require to prepare a speech. "That depends," he replied, "upon how much time I am to occupy in its delivery. If I am to speak for a quarter of an hour I should like a week to prepare. If I am to speak for half an hour three days suffice. If I am to go on as long as I like I am ready now."

MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational Church will be held at the church parlor Thursday evening, March 18 at 7:30. The men of the church are cordially invited.

Program

The Red Man and his White Neighbor—Miss Rodger.
What the White Man owes the Indian—Mrs. Coulter.
The Making of the Indian Home—Indian Womanhood—Mrs. Bridge.
Teddy's Home Mission—Mrs. Vandermade.
Social hour.

Ah! The Invigorating Whiff of the Pine Forest!

How it eclears the throat and head of the impure elements! It is this spirit of Newness and Vigor from the pine forest that Pine Tar Cough Cure brings back to Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. Soothing, healing and curative. Buy a bottle today. All druggists, 25c.

Eat, Drink and be Merry, for Tomorrow Ye Die!

may be tempting advice sometimes. The only trouble is that you may be a terribly long time dying. During that time you may have leisure a-plenty in which to regret the squandered shickels.

Better take our advice and start a bank account so as to have some comfort during that long tomorrow.

We pay 4% on Savings accounts

Charlevoix County Bank
of Nicholls, Buttars and Bridge
JOHN NICHOLLS, President. A. F. BRIDGE, Cashier
A. BUTTARS, Vice President. H. O. MOHRMANN, Asst. Cashier.

A HOME BANK UNDER STATE SUPERVISION

Safety First-

YOUR pocket is not a very good depository for your money. It does not pay interest and it is not your money it is constantly subject to loss by theft or accident.

We will not only protect your money against loss but will pay you 4 percent interest, so that the money you save will be constantly increasing.

With the Opening of the Springtime, open an account with this bank.

CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
W. J. RACHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't. Cashier.

J. L. CRANE

All This in Your Corset For $1.00

1. Soft cloth guaranteed not to tear. Double below waist line.
2. All metal parts guaranteed rust-proof.
3. All metal parts guaranteed not to break.
4. Rubber button hose supporters.
5. Thin double boning.
6. Double interlinings.
7. Flexible clasp.
8. Attractive trim.
9. Comfortable support.
10. Fashionable design.

These are the features that mark Warner Quality. This is what we can offer you in a corset for $1, and this is why we like to recommend

Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets

WE SHOW HERE STYLE NO. 623.

$1.00

Every Pair is Guaranteed

IF YOU WANT TENANTS for SUMMER COTTAGES
advertise in the AMERICAN ISRAELITE, Cincinnati, and the CHICAGO ISRAELITE, Chicago, the leading Jewish papers of the U.S.
For rates address
LEO. WISE & COMPANY
Advertising Agents, Cincinnati, O.

Lisle Shanahan,
Attorney at Law.
Office in County Bank Bldg.

Desire for liquor and drugs relieved in four days, inquire secretary Petoskey Hospital. adv—8-11-6 8-11-4

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 45 | Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, March 18, 1915. | NUMBER 48

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 8

SUBSCRIPTION.
Three Months - 25c
Six Months - 50c
One Year - $1.00

RATE INCREASE NECESSARY

FARMERS' UNION OFFICIALS THINK RAILROADS ARE EN TITLED TO MORE REVENUE.

Products of Plow and Farmer Who Lives at Home Should Be Exempt From Increase.

By Peter Radford.
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The recent action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in granting an increase in freight rates in the eastern classification of territory; the application of the roads to state and inter state commissions for an increase in rates, and the utterances of President Wilson on the subject bring the farmers of this nation face to face with the problem of an increase in freight rates. It is the policy of the Farmers' Union to meet the issue affecting the welfare of the farmers squarely and we will do so in this instance.

The transportation facilities of the United States are inadequate to effectively meet the demands of commerce and particularly in the South and West additional railway mileage is needed to accommodate the movement of farm products. If in the wisdom of our Railroad Commissions an increase in freight rates is necessary to bring about an improvement in our transportation service, and an extension of our mileage, then an increase should be granted, and the farmer is willing to share such proportion of the increase as justly belongs to him, but we have some suggestions to make as to the manner in which this increase shall be levied.

Rates Follow Lines of Least Resistance.

The freight rates of the nation have been built up along lines of least resistance. The merchant, the manufacturer, the miller, the lumberman and the cattleman have had their traffic bureaus thoroughly organized and in many instances they have pursued a ruthless and without mercy and with the power of organized tonnage they have hammered the life out of the rates and with unrestrained greed they have eaten the vitals out of our transportation system and since we have had railroad commissions, these interests, with skill and cunning, are represented at every hearing in which their business is involved.

The farmer is seldom represented at rate hearings as his organizations have never had the finances to employ counsel to develop his side of the case, and as a result, the producer of the plow bear an unequal burden of the freight expense. A glance at the freight tariffs abundantly proves this assertion. Cotton, the leading agricultural product of the South, already bears the highest freight rate of any necessary commodity in commerce, and the rate on agricultural products as a whole is out of proportion with that of the products of the factory and the mine.

We offer no schedule of rates, but hope the commission will be able to give the railroad such an increase in rates as is necessary without levying a further toll upon the products of the plow. The limitation seems to present an opportunity to the Railroad Commissions to equalize the rates as between agricultural and other classes of freight without disturbing the rates on staple farm products.

What is a Fair Rate?

We do not know what constitutes a basis for rate making and have never heard of anyone who did claim to know much about it, but if the property of the farm is a factor to be considered and the railroad commission concludes that an increase in rates is necessary we would prefer that it come to us through articles of consumption on their journey from the factory to the farm. We would for example, prefer that the rate on sugs remain as at present and the rate on meat beef be increased, for any farmer can then avoid the burden by raising his own meat, and a farmer who will not try to raise his own meat ought to be penalized. We think the rate on coal and brick can much better bear an increase than the rate on cotton and flour. We would prefer that the rate on plows remain the same as now, but pianos and such articles as the poorer farmer cannot hope to possess bear the burden of increase.

The increase in rates should be so arranged that the farmer who lives at home will bear no part of the burden, but let the farmer who boards in other states and countries and who feeds his stock in foreign lands pay the price of his folly.

When honesty is merely a good policy it is a poor virtue.

Lazy farmers are just as useless as dead ones and take up more room.

When the soul communes with the spirit of nature the back to the farm movement prevails.

There are two kinds of farmers. One tries to take all the profits he knows and the other won't take any at all.

ATHLETICS

Boyne City will see a team this week to couple up with the Charlevoix men at the rink Thursday. While Boyne City has not been playing independent ball this season the team that will represent her this week will be composed of some of the best individual players in this section. The locals contemplate a hard proposition and are making preparations for the same.

The management of the local independent team has just completed arrangements with the management of the Traverse City team for a game to be played on the local court sometime in March. The date will be announced later. Traverse City has one of the fastest teams in this part of the state and will give the locals the most interesting game of the season.

Hampered by the small floor and the determination to lay Charlevoix out cold, Bellaire held the locals 32-19 at Bellaire last Friday night. At times the game was fast, but at no time was there an demonstration of the real game as has been seen on the local floor this winter. Bellaire saw there was no chance to defeat Charlevoix playing real basketball and underlook tactics that were far from the right sort.

The county spelling contest between Boyne City, East Jordan and Charlevoix is developing into one of the best contests ever participated in by these schools. Last week Boyne City received first honors with an average of 99.21; Charlevoix was second with 99.15 and East Jordan third with 99.03. Some very beneficial results are also being noticed in the general ability of the local students to master the good spelling habit.

Boyne City High School basket ball team were given a good hard run for the game on Boyne's floor last Saturday night when Charlevoix high made good her threat and took the North Arm inside 40-32. The game was fast and clean throughout. The local boys were somewhat of a disadvantage owing to the crowded quarters, although they are offering nothing to offset the defeat. After the game the team and faculty members feasted at the Wolverine Hotel at a luncheon given by the Boyne City team. Toasts were heard and a general get together time was had by everybody who attended. Charlevoix had the best time ever if appearances and are planning on giving a like reception when March 20 sees Boyne City lined up on the local court. Several townspeople and also high school fans accompanied the team to Boyne City and assisted in the old time way.

In whirlwind fashion Charlevoix Independents administered the usual trimming to Kalkaska last Wednesday night that they have been doling out to the other independent teams in this section during the past four weeks. The final count was 62-18. Kalkaska came here with a clean run of victories in the southern realm and was confident of whipping the local quintet from the championship race. From the opening of the game to the side lines there was doubt as to the outcome of the affair as Charlevoix started in for blood and the way the baskets rained in from the foul line and also from the floor was a pity to behold. Kalkaska soon changed her tactics and undertook to play merely a defensive game. In this phase of the game she was as weak against the clean and fast passing of the locals as in any other. The second half showed a marked improvement in the team work of the best team and really in most of the points of the second half coming through field baskets. Kalkaska scored six field baskets and six counts from the foul line.

THESE ARE THE ASSETS THAT MAKE CHARLEVOIX FAMOUS

Charlevoix has:

A first-class sewer and drainage system.
Absolutely pure water, with an excellent circulating system for domestic and fire purposes.
A splendid electric lighting system.
Paved and macadam streets.
A twenty acre public park along shore of Lake Michigan.
Five prosperous churches.
Excellent schools.
A $25,000 Masonic Temple.
Inland Lake with 60 miles of navigable coast line.

For Saturday Only-

A. E. Mason's Dept. Store WILL SELL FOR CASH

25 pounds Producer Flour	95c
One barrel Producer Flour	$7.25
49c, 45c and 50c Brooms	33c
3 packages 10c Jelly Con	10c
12-25c Oranges	19c
12 Clothes Pins	1c
3 Large boxes Tooth Picks	5c
3 Boxes Ohio Matches	10c
10 yards 6c Calico	50c

MASON'S Department Store

Report of the Condition of

THE CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK

AT CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN

at the close of business March 4, 1915, as called for by the Commissioner of the Banking Department:

RESOURCES

Loans and Discounts, viz.:
Commercial Department		$179,715.56
Savings Department		27,000.00
		206,715.56
Bonds, Mortgages and Securities, viz.:
Commercial Department	73,033.00	73,033.00
Savings Department		75,425.00
Overdrafts		11,000.00
Banking House		2,500.00
Furniture and Fixtures		1,000.00
Other Real Estate owned		1,755.00
Items in Transit
Reserve	Commercial	Savings
Due from banks in reserve cities	$ 7,641.47	$10,374.02
Exchanges for clearing house	431.06
U. S. and National bank currency	1,536.00	4,000.00
Gold coin		1,000.00
Silver coin	300.00	500.00
Nickels and cents	48.13	100.00
Checks and other cash items		22.63 13
Total		212,002.72

LIABILITIES

Capital stock paid in		25,000.00
Surplus fund		2,500.00
Undivided profits net		2,441.72
Dividends unpaid		00
Commercial deposits subject to check	147,991.00
Commercial certificates of deposit	51.00
Savings deposits	5,000.00
Savings deposits book accounts	30,140.00
Savings certificates of deposit	10,420.00
Notes and bills rediscounted	None
Bills Payable	None
Total		183,602.72

STATE OF MICHIGAN }
County of Charlevoix } ss

I, W. J. Rachow, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Correct—Attest:
J. C. Crane
H. S. Harsha
John Barnes } Directors

W. J. RACHOW, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 6th day of March, 1915.
ROBERT W. BANK, Notary Public.
My commission expires Dec. 30, 1916.

County Normal Notes

CORA B. DAGGETT

Miss Hazle Pearl entertained the normal class with an ice-boating party Monday night. It was the first ride on the new ice-boat of the class. The sail was most delightful.

Mr. Ward Cossitt was absent Wednesday on account of a bad cold.

Miss Kathleen Bohgee and Miss Edna Srigley, class of '14, were visitors Thursday afternoon.

The training room children have been studying about daffodils and have learned Wordsworth's poem by that name.

Miss Cora B. Driggett gave a class party Saturday, February 27, at her home. The rooms were decorated in green and white, the class colors.

Miss Ruby Hooker was elected assistant clerk of the House of Representatives last Tuesday.

Harold Jones

NOTICE

To the qualified electors of Marion Township:

A caucus will be held at Marion township hall, Thursday, March 18th, 1915, for the purpose of nominating township officers, and such other business as may come before the meeting.

Wm. WITHERS, Township Clerk.

Religious Notes

Congregational Church
(STANDING NOTICES)
Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.
Bible School, 12 o'clock.
Young People's Meeting, 6:00 p. m.
Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT HORTON)
Bible School at 1:30 p. m.
Preaching, 2:30 p. m.

Baptist Church
Deconsecrational Day.
A. M.—"The Divine Mission of the true Church."
P. M.—"Is one Church as Good as the Other," or "Why I am a Baptist."
B. Y. P. U.—Honorary Members Meeting.
Topic—Testa of my Christianity.
Leader—Laura Howard.
Class Address—Mrs. Moser.
Bible Study—Tuesday evening 7:15.—The Doctrine of Total Depravity.
Prayer Meeting—"Difficult Scriptures made plain as day."

Christian Science
Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.
Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Substance."
Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.
Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m.; also 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service
8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:00 a. m.—High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.
Manoeuvring the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church
Service second and fourth Thursday in each month, by Rev. Harris, of Petoskey.

Methodist Church.
A. M.—"Some Things that I Know."
P. M.—"Charlevoix's Golden Calf."

THE ELLSWORTH REAL ESTATE AGENCY

Will get not new property lists soon. Prospects are fine for this season. If you have lands to sell or rent write me at once. Terms are easy. I have the names of 150 good prospects in my office right now. Get in with an Agency that is doing lots of good advertising. Do it now.

Yours truly,
E. R. HARRIS,
Ellsworth, Michigan

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

Rock Product Company,
Producers and Manufacturers of
Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Fluxing
Sugar Stone
Phone 80.

PETER BENSON
CONTRACTOR FOR
Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.
If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.
Charlevoix - Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10c ASSORTED
Best Wishes, Greetings, Happy Birthday, etc. Send us your Post Card Business Cards, and Photo Postcards. Prompt and Premium Stamps for return postage. Sample Postcards 2c.
FAMILY STORY PAPER
2626 Vanderveer St., New York.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction Auto and Boat Supplies.
214 Bridge St. - Phone 131
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Contractor and Builder
Estimates furnished. Phone 333. Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD, DENTIST.
Office in the Pinney Block.
Over A. Lenosen & Co's Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139.

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Office in Priest's Block.
Charlevoix - Michigan

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS ATTENTION!
The Best Remedy For all Forms of Rheumatism
LUMBAGO SCIATICA GOUT NEURALGIA
DROPS
Relief Guaranteed or Your Money Back
Sold by Druggists Everywhere
Be Sure to Get the Genuine
A Scientific Combination of Well Known Remedies

When Broadway Was a Trail
at the--Majestic Theatre
Wednesday, March 17th
A Superb Moving Picture Feature, Illustrating a Story of Surpassing Interest.
This will be one of the big numbers of the series of Star Attractions.

MR. H. O. CARLZEN
The Petoskey
Ladies' Tailor
Will visit Charlevoix on Saturday Afternoon, March 13
Monday Forenoon, March 15
With samples of newest fabrics for Spring and Summer wear.
LATEST STYLES
Everything in Ladies Custom Tailoring.
--Remember the Dates--
Ladies unable to call at hotel, can arrange appointments at their homes by phone.

Tired!
Are you tired? you down? nervous? Is everything you do an effort? Not it is not tonic, You need. Yes it is. Your Druggist. Kidneys and Liver need activing too. Nothing will do this better than
Electric Bitters
50c. and $1.00 All Druggists

ART IN ITS DAWNING.

Primitive Man's First Crude Efforts Toward the Beautiful.

In the beginning man went forth each day—some to do battle, some to the chase, others again to dig and delve in the field—all that they might gain and live or lose and die—until there was found among them one, differing from the rest, who stayed by the tents with the women and traced strange devices with burnt stick over a gourd.

This man, who took no joy in the ways of his brothers, who cared not for the conquest and fretted in the field, this designer of quaint patterns this dreamer of the beautiful, who perceived in nature about him certain curious, as these were seen by the first dreamer, who first saw the first artist.

And when from the field and from after them came back the people they took the gourd and drank from out of it.

And presently there came to this man, another—and in time others—as like nature chosen by the gods, and so they worked together, and note they wrought from the misshaped earth forms resembling the gods. And with the power of creation, the heirloom of the artist, presently they went beyond the strictly imitative of nature, and the first vase was born in beautiful perfection.

And the tribes rolled and were scattered, and the heavy returned from fresh countries to rejoice and feast and drink drink after from the artist's work, fashioned consistently, taking no note the while of the craftsman's hope and understanding nor the glory in his work; drinking at the cup, because it was, not because it contemplated that it was beautiful, but because, forsooth, there was none other.—James McNeill Whistler.

Fame.

"Fame is easier to gain than it used to be. Yes, but it isn't as lasting."—Boston Transcript.

Great Success.

"Were the minstrel theatricals good?" "Splendid! I never saw anything worse."—Life.

A HOME BANK — STATE SUPERVISION

Safety First-

YOUR pocket is not a very good depository for your money. It does not pay interest and it allows your money to be constantly subject to loss by theft or accident.

We will not only protect your money against loss but will pay you a percent interest, so that the money you save will be constantly increasing.

With the Opening of the Springtime, open an account with this bank.

CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
W. J. RACHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't. Cashier.

J. L. CRANE

All This in Your Corset For $1.00

1. Soft cloth guaranteed not to tear. Double below waist line.
2. All metal parts guaranteed rust-proof.
3. All metal parts guaranteed not to break.
4. Rubber button hose supporters.
5. Thin double boning.
6. Double interlinings.
7. Flexible clasp.
8. Attractive trim.
9. Comfortable support.
10. Fashioning design.

These are the features that mark Warner Quality. This is what we can offer you in a corset for $1, and this is why we like to recommend

Warner's Rust-Proof Corsets

WE SHOW HERE STYLE NO. 623.

$1.00

Every Pair is Guaranteed

IF YOU WANT TENANTS for SUMMER COTTAGES LOCATE IN the AMERICAN HEIGHTS, Cincinnati, and the CHICAGO HEIGHTS, Chicago, the leading "suburban" towns of the U. S.
LEO WISE & COMPANY
Owners Sole Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Lisle Shanahan,
Attorney at Law.
Office in County Bank Bldg.

Desire for liquor and drugs relieved in four days, inquire secretary Petoskey Hospital. adv—8-11-6

∴ ∴ Local and Personal Notes ∴ ∴

Mrs. R. N. Faulkner is in Chicago visiting her son Ray.

Mrs. Fitch R. Williams, of Elk Rapids, is the guest of Mrs. R. W. Paddock.

Capt. J. A. Emory is quite ill at his little home down on the harbor front.

Mrs. D. H. Stacks left Saturday to join her husband at Charlotte, Mich.

Mrs. Robert McNeill arrived Saturday and is occupying her north side residence.

Mrs. W. J. Rachow, who has been visiting friends in Detroit for several weeks returned Tuesday.

Elmer J. Johnson is getting the bridge machinery ready for action. A new smoke-stack is being installed.

Capt. Roy Marshall, in charge of Salvation Army work at Marion, Ind., visited his parents here last week.

The lower house of the State legislature has passed the "one deer" bill, also a bill establishing a five cent bounty on rats.

Mrs Wm. Shapton, after an absence of 33 years, from her childhood home in southern Michigan, is visiting relatives there.

What is this distinguished committee of 21 doing in the matter of the fish hatchery? There is no opening in this direction for good stuff work.

Ed. Chalopka and wife, who have been here a month, left Monday for their Oregon home. They go via San Francisco and will take in the exposition.

G. W. Lock brought in a Wyandotte egg Saturday which measured six and one half inches in circumference one way by eight inches the other, and weighing one quarter of a pound.

Albon Smith, foreman of the Charlevoix fire department, attended a firemen's banquet at Bellaire Tuesday night. The State fire warden was present and A. B. Dougherty, of Lansing, was toastmaster.

Harvey Campbell was in Grand Haven the past week taking an examination for an auto license. He returned with a parchment as chief engineer unlimited on all oceans. This is an honor that few fresh water sailors can boast of.

Married, in Charlevoix March 10th, by Rev. Mr. Taggart, Mrs. Genevieve Saunby, of Charlevoix, to Mr. Henry L. Foster, of Marion. Miss Nina Preston, sister of the bride, attended as bridesmaid, and Mr. Richard Foster was groom's best man. Mr. and Mrs. Foster went immediately to their comfortable new home at Barnard.

Word has been received today of the death in Chicago of James Spencer. He was the brother of Mrs. E. L. Sprague and John Spencer of this city. Mr. Spencer was well known among the older residents of Traverse City.—Record-Eagle. The deceased grew up in Elk Rapids, his father being one of the pioneer residents of the village. The elder Spencer built the home just west of the Progress office, now owned by Bert Wilson, and lived there a number of years.—Progress. In 1866, when the Traverse Bay Eagle was removed from Elk Rapids to Traverse City, the present publisher of the SENTINEL was the "journeyman" printer on the Eagle, helped to move the outfit to Traverse City. E. L. Sprague and James Spencer were the proprietors.

Dr. Armstrong returned home from Chicago Monday evening.

E. F. Sloan attended the good roads convention in Grand Rapids last week.

W. H. Griffin, for some time manager and editor of the Boyne City Citizen, has moved to Bad Axe.

F. V. Alexander, after a three weeks vacation, has returned to his work as Pere Marquette agent here.

Martha J. Ayers last week bought the Myers property, on May street, consisting of house and four lots.

The first "lift" of the fishing season was that of the tugs Parmelee, which came in Monday night with 1300 pounds of trout.

A. L. Hart & Son have started the Ford automobile campaign. A carload of cars was received last week, and the firm will push that excellent machine to the limit.

The Dictionary Club will meet Thursday afternoon of this week with Mrs. A. M. Wilson. Subject, "Flag Day and U. S. Marine." Roll call, "Prominent Men in Army and Navy."

With an average of 99.51 Charlevoix high school won the weekly spelling contest against East Jordan and Boyne City. East Jordan and Boyne City tied at 99.32 and 99.19 respectively.

On Monday evening March 22, 1915 at the M. E. Church Mrs. Rose Curtiss Reid—Dramatic Soprano, will give a concert under the auspices of the M. E. Sunday school. Mrs. Reid has a voice of rare quality and range with a most charming personality.

The farm house of Mrs. Clara Dodd, in Marion township was destroyed by fire Sunday night, with all its contents. Loss about $2,500, and no insurance. A lamp, being carried by Mrs. Dodd, accidentally knocked from her hand by a child, was the cause of the fire. Mr. Arthur Beattie, who was occupying an upper room, was quite badly burned.

The first public recital given by the students of the high school will be held in the auditorium of the high school building Friday afternoon beginning at 2 o'clock. The program will consist of papers, declamations, recitations, musical numbers and a prepared debate. The public is urgently requested to be present and spend the afternoon with the students and faculty.

John H (Harvey) Wilson died at his home, 409 East Eighth street last evening at seven o'clock. He was born March 22d, 1842 in Essex county, N. Y. He married Miss Sarah Moore in Clinton county, N. Y., April 14th 1862 and removed to Antrim county, Michigan from the Charlevoix county line in 1884. At that time there were only about twenty families in the county, and the nearest postoffice was Traverse City. The mail was carried from Traverse City to Harbor Springs on the back of an Indian. They removed to Traverse City about twenty years ago and have made their home here since. Mr. Wilson was for many years a contractor and builder. He leaves a widow, three sons, A. J. Wilson, who removed to Detroit four years ago; Geo. Wilson of this city, and R. H. Wilson of Detroit, and two daughters, Mrs. Evelyn Hanshew of Detroit and Mrs. Max Bazzanford of Alpena. The funeral will be held from the Christian church on Cass and Sumpter streets Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock. Interment will be in Oakwood.—Traverse City Record-Eagle.

County Normal Notes

CLEO THORNE

Miss Hilman took the normal class to a tea cent tea given at the home of Mrs. Harry Nickolls. The tea was given for the benefit of the suffrage cause.

Miss Cleo Thorne spent Saturday and Sunday at her home in East Jordan, returning Monday morning.

The members of the normal class and the fifth grade went down to the telegraph office last Friday morning when the time was received from Washington at eleven o'clock.

The normal class made fudge Friday afternoon in domestic science work.

The class has been doing work in nature study from photographs and artists under the direction of Miss Whiting.

The training room children have finished the study of Europe in the subject of geography.

The children in the training room have begun the study of birds and spring flowers.

AT DANTO'S— Large California Navel Oranges, 25c per dozen.

FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

NOTICE

To the qualified electors of Marion Township:

A caucus will be held at Marion township hall, Thursday, March 18th, 1915, for the purpose of nominating township officers, and such other business as may come before the meeting.

Wm. WITHERS, Township Clerk.

THE ELLSWORTH REAL ESTATE AGENCY

Will get not new property lists soon. Prospects are fine for this season. If you have lands to sell or rent write me at once. Terms are easy. I have the names of 150 good prospects in my office right now. Get in with an Agency that is doing lots of good advertising. Do it now.

Yours truly,
E. R. HARRIS,
Ellsworth, Michigan

PICKLING STATION ASSURED FACT

Plant to be Established Near Sugar Factory Building on City Property

Some weeks ago this paper announced the fact that a movement was on foot to establish a cucumber pickling plant in Charlevoix.

We are now enabled to state positively that the enterprise is an assured fact. Mr. James H. Johnson of the James H. Johnson Pickle Co. was here Thursday and closed the deal whereby the plant will be built at once.

The building will be located on land belonging to the city, immediately south of the sugar factory building. It will be 60x100 feet in dimensions. Two hundred acres of cucumbers are required to operate the plant. Half of this acreage is already contracted for and acreage is being secured daily. The company have two canvassers out doing good work—one in this end of the county and one in the East Jordan section.

The headquarters of the company is at South Haven and this will be but one of a chain of plants located at various points. Mr. Johnson has made trips in several directions from here, and is enthusiastic in his praise of agricultural conditions.

CONGERNING THIS HOSPITAL MATTER

As will be seen by the official proceedings of the council, the matter of submitting to the people of Charlevoix the question of appropriating from the city funds the sum of $7,500 for the erection and equipment of a hospital, is a subject.

At first blush, with the impulsiveness of youth, we shied. We were constrained to consider a hospital as a luxury to be desired, but on a par with an editor's automobile, with no money to buy gasoline.

The thought took possession of our perhaps befogged intellect that something more productive could be secured with the $7,500, as dinner pails and lower taxes are the present desideratum.

We think it is pretty well understood that this paper, in the consideration of any local question, does not care a rap for the opinion of any other paper, or of any individual of whatever prominence in public affairs.

We concede that there are strong arguments for the proposition, with a probability of added strength as all interests and influences are further developed.

We are open to conviction, and shall not oppose the project as it now presents itself.

MEMBER LARGE PIONEER FAMILY

Sudden Death of Wm. F. Pearl Whose Family Takes Rank Among Earliest Pioneers.

Wm. F. Pearl died suddenly Thursday morning at his home in Norwood. He had been in good health up to the moment of his death. He arose that morning feeling well, but without warning he fell from his chair and expired. Heart failure is given as the cause.

Deceased was about 80 years of age. He was the son of the late Cassius Pearl, of Battle Creek, who often visited his relatives at Norwood in the early days. The Pearl family, of whom there were several, came from the Calhoun county section, locating in Norwood soon after the close of the civil war. He was a brother of Vern Pearl, of Eastport; Lucius Pearl, of Central Lake, and Mrs. Parker McIntyre, of Norwood.

Besides a wife, he leaves three sons—Hiram C., of Charlevoix; Benjamin, of Norwood, and Charles, of Chicago.

DEATH OF WALTER DANIELS

Walter Daniels died at his home in this city early Saturday morning.

He had been in poor health for some months. On Friday morning he went to the Lake Michigan beach to gather drift wood. Not returning at noon a search was instituted and at two o'clock Daniels was found lying unconscious on the beach. He was taken home, remaining unconscious until the hour of his death.

Walter Daniels has been a resident of Charlevoix for over thirty years. He leaves a wife.

ITS VOICE IS STILLED FOREVER

The bell in the tower of the central school building, which has summoned for their studies two generations of pupils, has lost its voice, and will no longer accelerate the speed of the youngsters.

It has been gradually failing since it was struck by lightning several years ago, when a small crack appeared and which has slowly enlarged.

The school board has taken steps to secure a new bell. We suggest that the old bell be mounted in the school yard. There are business men in Charlevoix who have with more or less alacrity responded to its call.

FORTY-SIX YEARS AGO

Forty-six years ago the present publisher of this paper entered "Pine River" on foot, through the slush, with a satchel on his back, and began setting up the type for the first issue of the SENTINEL, which appeared three weeks later, printed on an old Washington hand press, on second-hand type picked up in the Traverse City Herald office.

The first "print shop" was upstairs in the old Chamberlain building, which stood on the site of the present County Bank building. The remainder of the story has been often told in these columns, and we shall not repeat it at this time. It is a story of hard work, midnight toil, privations, disappointments and discouragements, and final victory.

Has not the SENTINEL earned the good will of the people of Charlevoix and its contiguous territory? The present publisher cannot very much longer guide its destinies, but is it not a Charlevoix asset, worthy of future growth and usefulness?

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Charlevoix Historical Society will meet Friday evening March 19th with Mr. and Mrs. John Burns. The following is the program:

Music
Piano solo ..... Mr. Beers
Paper, Scotch immigration
Rev. Quintus Walker
Social Intermission
Music
Vocal Solo ..... Dr. Armstrong
Reading
"The South Wind off Creagh Patrick."
Mrs. Peter Vandermade.

PICKLING STATION ASSURED FACT

Plant to be Established Near Sugar Factory Building on City Property

Some weeks ago this paper announced the fact that a movement was on foot to establish a cucumber pickling plant in Charlevoix.

We are now enabled to state positively that the enterprise is an assured fact. Mr. James H. Johnson of the James H. Johnson Pickle Co. was here Thursday and closed the deal whereby the plant will be built at once.

The building will be located on land belonging to the city, immediately south of the sugar factory building. It will be 60x100 feet in dimensions. Two hundred acres of cucumbers are required to operate the plant. Half of this acreage is already contracted for and acreage is being secured daily. The company have two canvassers out doing good work—one in this end of the county and one in the East Jordan section.

The headquarters of the company is at South Haven and this will be but one of a chain of plants located at various points. Mr. Johnson has made trips in several directions from here, and is enthusiastic in his praise of agricultural conditions.

CONGERNING THIS HOSPITAL MATTER

As will be seen by the official proceedings of the council, the matter of submitting to the people of Charlevoix the question of appropriating from the city funds the sum of $7,500 for the erection and equipment of a hospital, is a subject.

At first blush, with the impulsiveness of youth, we shied. We were constrained to consider a hospital as a luxury to be desired, but on a par with an editor's automobile, with no money to buy gasoline.

The thought took possession of our perhaps befogged intellect that something more productive could be secured with the $7,500, as dinner pails and lower taxes are the present desideratum.

We think it is pretty well understood that this paper, in the consideration of any local question, does not care a rap for the opinion of any other paper, or of any individual of whatever prominence in public affairs.

We concede that there are strong arguments for the proposition, with a probability of added strength as all interests and influences are further developed.

We are open to conviction, and shall not oppose the project as it now presents itself.

A CHANCE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

How They Aid in Better and More Profitable Farming.

Part of the extension program of Michigan Agricultural College this year is the organization of boys' and girls' agricultural clubs in cooperation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Several clubs are now being planned for Charlevoix county. Any boy or girl between the ages of ten and eighteen years is eligible to membership. Members may grow corn, potatoes, or market gardens. Or they may take up poultry raising and live stock. In villages and cities where land is scarce, clubs are formed among the girls in dr garment-making and homekeeping.

The plan for Charlevoix county is to hold a number of meetings at various rural centers during the 6th, 7th and 8th of April and there present the work to the young people, and to give those a chance to join who would like to take it up.

The success of the enterprise depends largely on the interest older people show in it. Most boys and girls are easily discouraged and often need help to overcome their difficulties. But when they do succeed they acquire new confidence in themselves and gain a love for the farm that means much for the future of the industry.

When meetings are held the organizers are anxious that the parents be among favorably, and will dig out from under its load and be firmly on its feet in a short time.

The trouble with the company was not a lack of business. The plant is working to its full capacity, is filling its orders, and is earning good net money every day.

Those having most interest in the success of the enterprise are entirely confident that the present process of legal "screening" will place the enterprise squarely on its feet.

Under normal conditions sure to follow, the Charlevoix Rock Product Co., is a paying proposition.

"ALL PRINTED AT HOME"

There lies before us a recent issue of a daily paper, published in a neighboring city. It is a quarto, of 28 columns, 19 columns of which is "boiler plate," so called, bought in Chicago or Detroit for one cent per inch.

And yet there are newspapers in this section which cover up "patent insides," and sing the "all printed at home" song.

There is not a paper published in Charlevoix county which does not have a patent-insider outside, made up of matter that is set up and stereotyped in Chicago.

Consistency, thou art a jewel.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational Church will be held at the church parlor Thursday evening, March 18 at 7:30. The men of the church are especially invited.

Program

The Red Man and his White Neighbor—Miss Rodger.
What the White Man owes the Indian—Mrs. Conklin.
The Indian Woman's Home—Mrs. Correll.
Teddy's Home Mission—Mrs. Bridge.
Social hour.

Ah! The Invigorating Whiff of the Pine Forest!

How it clears the throat and head of the malignant ailments. It is this spirit of Newness and Vigor from the healthgiving Piney Forests brought back by Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. Antiseptic and healing. Buy a bottle today. All druggists, 25c.

Eat, Drink and be Merry, for Tomorrow Ye Die!

may be tempting advice sometimes. The only trouble is that you may be a terribly long time dying. During that time you may have leisure aplenty in which to regret the squandered shekels.

Better take our advice and start a bank account so as to have some comfort during that long tomorrow.

We pay 4% on Savings accounts

Charlevoix County Bank
of Nicholls, Buttars and Bridge
JOHN NICHOLLS, President. A. F. BRIDGE, Cashier.
A. BUTTARS, Vice President. H. O. MORHMANN, Asst. Cashier.

ATHLETICS

In a fast yet sluggish game last Thursday Charlevoix took Boyne City into camp to the tune of 32-15. Boyne City put up an unexpected caliber of the game and were able to hold the locals to a reasonable count. One of the largest crowds of the season witnessed the game.

The big attraction on the basket ball docket for this week will be the invasion of the Traverse City Independent team on Friday evening at the roller rink. Traverse City has already established herself among basket ball annals of the state by holding several of the independent Detroit teams to close scores and is considered by critics among the best aggregations that the state puts out. Two far during the present season some of the Northern Michigan teams have been able to make an impression on the Traverse City Quintet. The locals are putting in every minute in preparation for the final big game of the winter sport season and expect one of the stiffest games. The Traverse City team will be weakened by the absence of Brief, who left recently for spring training with the Chicago White Sox. However, Brief is a Charlevoix man is among the ranks of the visitors.

THE ROCK PRODUCT COMPANY

The work of re-adjusting the affairs of the business concern is being pushed favorably, and will dig out from under its load and be firmly on its feet in a short time.

The trouble with the company was not a lack of business. The plant is working to its full capacity, is filling its orders, and is earning good net money every day.

Those having most interest in the success of the enterprise are entirely confident that the present process of legal "screening" will place the enterprise squarely on its feet.

Under normal conditions sure to follow, the Charlevoix Rock Product Co., is a paying proposition.

MINNESOTA BOUGHT

Northern Michigan Transportation Co., Buys Big Steel Steamship

In a recent issue of this paper we stated that the N. M. T. Co. was contemplating the purchase of the steamship Minnesota, to take the place of the Missouri, which was destroyed by fire last fall.

It is now given out that the boat has been bought, and will be placed on the Chicago Buffalo route this spring. Entrance to this harbor is contemplated upon occasions, and a tender will be kept in readiness to meet that emergency. She will make this port once a week on her trip south.

The Minnesota is a fine steel vessel, 400 feet long, 13,000 net tonnage, and 41 feet beam. She was built in 1904 at Wyandotte, and has large first-class accommodations.

Capt. Bright of the Missouri, will command the Minnesota. The command of the Missouri has not yet been decided.

VALUABLE TEAM LOST THROUGH THE ICE

Saturday morning the fine big gray team of Robert Withers was lost through the ice at Pine Lake, off the seed warehouse.

Robert and Montie Withers were engaged in hauling wood for the Charlevoix Furniture Co. from near Ironton. They were on their way after their loads when they broke through just over the channel buoy. Montie succeeded in extricating his team, but Robert's team was caught under the ice.

The loss is fully $300.

Sunday—Jonas Time.

A Scotch minister was once asked how long he would require to prepare a speech. "That depends," said he, "upon how much time I am to occupy in its delivery. If I am to speak for a quarter of an hour I should like a week to prepare. If I am to speak for half an hour—Hmm—I could do it now, if I am to go as long as I like I am ready now."

Entered at the postoffice at Charlevoix, Michigan, as second class matter.

IMPROVING THE CORN CROP

By HORACE MARKLEY

WHITE SEED CORN READY FOR THE HARVEST

IT IS surely an amazing fact that the corn crop of the states should average but forty bushels to the acre. The acreage planted is increased by millions every year; vast areas of virgin territory are constantly being added; improved cultivation is a matter of record that many farmers know, grows as high as 200 bushels to the acre, yet the average for the entire crop is never increased.

Is it likely that there is anything wrong with the government figures? I do not think so. There is as much care given as is possible to insure accuracy, and I dare say that many farmers, even if they raise more than 40 bushels to the acre, feel satisfied that the figures are correct from his knowledge of what the average yield is in his district.

The farms are tilled by a pretty good type of farmer, on the whole, hard working and intelligent. The best that we have been able to produce of the true American, and for the most part the best of the ready sons of the soil from many foreign lands. We have a national department of agriculture that has been the envy and the hope of the world, which is in a sense a farmers' university, and the sole aim and purpose of which has been, and is, to make better farmers. For a generation or more it has striven by study, experiment and pioneering, to lay bare phenomena, to educate the farmer and bring him to a higher level as an efficient tiller of the soil. Through the work of its many professors it has presumably told the farmer much about seeds and soils and methods of cultivation, and of protection from insect pests, an infinite variety of details about the vital forces concerning his business, yet the result remains the same, so far as can be discovered, year after year—30 bushels to the acre.

In almost every state in the Union there is now, and has long been, an agricultural experiment station, working in conjunction with the federal department of agriculture and band in hand with its farmers of the state, to educate him. The stations are equipped with professors and experts, many of them of the highest authority in the land, vast tracts are devoted to experimental cultivation, they have been planning, working, testing soils and seeds, fertilizers, to aid the farmer in the exercise of economy and the growing of better crops. The net results of their labors they are constantly disseminating by means of lectures, correspondence and bulletins, free, for all who would profit by such—yet the net result after all these years is an average of 30 bushels to the acre for corn.

The agricultural colleges have gone even farther than this. In many instances they have not been content to work and lecture and print the results of their labors for the benefit of progressive farmers; they have been militant in their work, have instituted companies of education by sending out some of the professors on special tights, right in the heart of farming districts, and advise the farmer heart to heart, talks and object lessons in better farming methods; lecture him about soils, methods of cultivation, seed selection, inviting him freely to ask questions, to the end that he may become a more enthusiastic worker and raise better crops. Although this has been going on for years and hundreds of profess may have profited by it, the average yield of corn the past year was but the same—30 bushels.

Is it possible that the present type of farmer has reached the limit of his capacity to improve? It may be so. At any rate, besides all this there is an agricultural press of vast proportions throughout the states, working to educate the farmer and keep him posted on everything that may be of help to him in his business. Many farmers take several such publications. Then again, the tools that are available to the farmer for his work are far superior to what they have been in the past, and are improved every year. Is it possible that the farmer is not as a class taking advantage of the best tools for his work?

What is the first thing to be done in the growing of better corn crops? I think, in seed selection. There is nothing startling or original in this, I admit, it is the doctrine that has been preached, but I would simply add my testimony from the results of my experiments with the hope that it may lead others to try along the same lines. There is nothing difficult about it, there is certainly nothing costly; it amounts to simply a little more thorough and intelligent heart interest in one's labor.

To assure a corn that will yield yields of what has been accustomed to getting the farmer must breed for results. If his get-to-improve the corn in the same way that he would raise the standard of his stock or his flocks. And once he has secured a type of corn that shows increased productiveness, he must try to keep it pure, avoid interbreeding and mixture with inferior, with the same watchfulness and care that all breeding demands.

It does not require a scientific education to grow more and better corn, or better crops of any kind. It does require brains. One of the first things to be done is to get out of the slipshod ways of working. Corn, especially, is one of the most abused crops of the farm. Because it will grow and give some returns with a lot of neglect—it seems.

In no one respect is the average farmer more careless than in his choice of seed, and this may be said to be the prime essential. The farmer is plowing, manuring, performing all the operations from planting time to harvest, year after year, and with some of these he takes considerable pride; for instance, I know farmers who are perfect plowmen; they know it and are proud of their skill, but these same farmers are hidebound in an old custom of throwing their corn in their crib above his best seeds and soils and methods of cultivation, and of protection from insect pests, an infinite variety of details about the vital forces concerning his business, yet the result remains the same, so far as can be discovered, year after year—30 bushels to the acre.

Another interesting point, showing clearly the tendency to reversion to remote ancestors, is found in the fact that while the two-ear seed were of 12 rows about 75 per cent of the yield was of one eight-rowed cobs. Although this variety of flint corn will show from four ears of 12 and 14 rows, it may be considered properly an eight-rowed type of corn. Thus we see that after throwing the most of a two-eared stalk, there is not sufficient stamina in all the seeds to reproduce like the parent. The corn reverted not only to the one-eared but to the eight-rowed type.

This is one of the mysteries that will have to be solved, no doubt, before a highly productive two-eared type of corn can be raised with the qualities of the parent so fixed that it can be relied upon to maintain a big average yield. It may be due to a weakness of inbreeding.

Some of the ears weighed over a pound each, making over two pounds to the stalk. If this could be averaged for an entire corn field it would yield over ten tons to the acre.

Such may seem an exaggeration or an impossibility, but it is so only in comparison with what we have been accustomed to. Even if by judicious selection of two-eared seed each year with the type could not be fixed so as to produce even yields of the maximum amount, yet if it gave an increase of 20 per cent, as it did in my experiment, the return would be a big one for what is involved. It does not imply added cost in the production, but only a greater care and interest in one's work.

Another thing to be kept in mind in breeding up a type of corn for higher productiveness is that the number of kernels to the ear and their size will have an important bearing on the yield of grain.

A corn expert once figured out that if the productiveness of corn could be increased by only one kernel to each ear, on the entire crop it would mean a gain of 50 tons of grain. Even though the figures be not absolute, there is no gainsaying that the increase of yield would be a very big amount in the aggregate. The point is made very clear in the accompanying photographs, which show eight, ten and twelve-rowed ears of corn. Each ear was exactly the same in size, being 11 inches each. The eight-rowed ear gave seven ounces of grain, and had a cob weighing four ounces; the ten-rowed ear weighed nine ounces of grain and had a three-ounce cob; the twelve-rowed ear gave eight and one-half ounces of grain. A difference of an ounce and a half to the ear of actual grain is an appreciable gain worth striving for. But that does not mean that such is the limit of the gain to be obtained. It would be quite within reason to obtain twelve and increase.

The chief requisition to substantial progress in the growing of a more productive corn must be the skill and judgment of the worker. The first essential is no doubt seed selection, but this does not merely mean the picking out of the best looking ears at harvest time or in the husking. It is necessary that the farmer shall watch the corn from the first start of the seed and through the growing.

Vigor, productiveness and early ripening should be noted, not merely in the mind, but in a book, and the stalks should be marked so that they can be identified at any time. My method is to snip out little bits of tape, about a half inch long, at one side and on a bit of thin wire through and twist the loosely about the stalk when marking it. On the ear I scratch a number with a sharp awl. There is not likely to occur any accident that can destroy this tag or erase the figures.

A LEARNER.

"Is your new cook willing to learn?" asked the visitor.

"Yes," replied the weary housewife. "She has already learned to embroider, and I think if she stays a few months longer she will know how to play the piano."

SIGNIFICANT.

"Don't say you don't believe in signs any more. There's Marie going to Europe, and now she can't get back."

"What have signs to do with that?"

"Well, she would insist on traveling there in a maroon suit."

OUT AND OUT

Bill—How long was the jury out?

Jill—Just two hours.

"And how did you come out?"

"Just forty dollars."

Dr. Marden's Uplift Talks

By ORISON SWETT MARDEN

Copyright by Malone Sentinel Syndicate

THE GREAT SECRET OF ACHIEVEMENT.

A cobbler, when asked how long it takes to become a good shoemaker, answered: "Six years—and then you must travel." That cobbler had the artist soul. I told a friend the story, and he asked another cobbler the same question: "How long does it take to become a good shoemaker?" said he, like an." That was still better—he was a Michel Angelo of shoes!

Persistence is characteristic of all men who have accomplished anything great. They may lack in some other particular, have many weaknesses or deficiencies, but the quality of perseverance is never absent from a successful man. No matter what opposition to meet or what discouragements overtake him, he is always persistent. Poverty cannot discourage, obstacles cannot discourage him, labor cannot weary him. He will persist, no matter what comes or what stands, it is a part of his nature. He could almost go easily stop breathing.

Money, position, influence—these are no match for energy and perseverance. The story of Lincoln we read Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter," probably the most powerful romance that ever came from an American pen. It seems impossible that such beauty of diction, such delicacy of expression and delicacy of touch could be elaborated by a backwoods boy, who, in his note-books of this shyest and most sensitive of all the arts, showed the work of his genius. Drudgery, drudgery, drudgery, is written all over his manuscript books, and it seems to be recorded in his notes. Everything he saw or heard or read, he put down, or recorded in his notebook and compiled to use when it was needed.

Thousands of men have been failures in life because they did not go to the end of the road. They did not learn a trade to the point of efficiency. In other words, they stopped just this side of success.

The patent office in Washington is full of controversies which are almost successes; if the inventor had had the persistence to hold on a little longer, they might have achieved the longed-for success and died rich instead of poor.

A poor boy started out, determined to visit every office and place of business until he found a situation, no matter how long it might last. After persisting in this for a time, which would have utterly discouraged most men, he called at an office, where he was told they never took boys who had to be instructed, but he was asked who sent him there.

The old gentleman was so pleased at the boy's pluck when he told him that he was calling at every office and persisting from day to day until he found a situation, that he told him to go home and write him a letter in the best hand, and he would see what he could do for him. Many a boy has lost a situation by his bad handwriting, bad spelling, or an unbusinesslike letter. The boy had written a good, manly and intelligent, and he got the situation. He proved valuable and has been with the same house.

Keep at it, whatever your work may be, with a clear, definite purpose in view, with a determination, backed by a resolute will, that no difficulties, no obstacles, no discouragements, no temptations, no allurements, no pleasures, no ease, no indolence, no self-indulgence, no self-pleasing, no self-seeking, no self-gratification

Ladies' Coats and Suits

(Sunshine Garments)

Will be glad to show them.

Go to --- LEVINSON'S --- Get the Habit

The Store of Quality

AND :: GOOD :: SERVICE

When in want of anything that will make lovely meals and first-class goods, if you cannot come telephone Main 12 or 69 and we will bring it to your house. . .

When you are down town step inside. Whether you buy or not the same courteous treatment will be given to you.

Do you know that we sell the finest loaf of bread in the city and at 10c and eggs strictly fresh at 20c per dozen.

In our Meat Department we have anything and everything and at reasonable prices—We give S & H stamps.

OUR MOTTO —"Quality, Service and Honest Prices."

Courteous Treatment — Prompt Delivery

C. DANTO & SON.

212 Bridge St. Phone No. 12 — Phone No. 69

10 Great Serials

Full of life and action, filled with the fire of fine inspiration and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "a ton of fun." Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

52 Times a Year —not 12.

CUT THIS OUT and send it to-day with your name and address and $2.00 for THE COMPANION for 1915, and we will send:

FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION during the remaining weeks of 1914.

FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.

THEN The 52 Weekly Issues of THE COMPANION—A library in themselves.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for

THESE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

Can't Eat—Stomach Out Of Order

You are losing strength and vitality. That listless, languid feeling is due to the weak condition of the system.

Keep your stomach in order, increase your appetite, restore your system to a healthy condition by taking Electric Bitters. All Druggists.

"These are sure signs of a breakdown. Check same quickly and effectively by using Electric Bitters, greatest of all tonics. If you feel worn out and run down, it is time for a tonic. Use Electric Bitters early—do not wait until you are worse. It will tone up your system and restore you to your old time vigor and health.

Miss J. E. VandeSande, Kirkland, Ill., writes:—"On account of nursing a sick loved one through three months serious illness, I was run down, exhausted, nervous, could hardly eat or sleep. That I did not break down I am convinced was due to several bottles of Electric Bitters I then took. I am never without them in the house and recommend them to others."

Get a bottle to-day. Helps every time.

H. E. BUCKLEN & CO. PHILADELPHIA. ST. LOUIS

DARING COSSACKS

Russian Rough Riders an Old and Famous Body.

ONCE KNIGHTS OF FREEDOM.

In Former Times They Were Known Entirely as Defenders of the Poor and the Oppressed—Deadly as Marksmen and Experts With the Sword.

The popular conception of the Russian Cossack is a whiskered atrocity who rides with the speed of the wind, come to do acts of pillage and of rapine and then goes back again into the bosom of the tall grass from which he came. By many he is supposed to belong to a legendary tribe whose history stretches back into the blackness of the dark ages from which he has not yet emerged.

No; the Cossack is in many respects like the simple Russian peasant. In others he is like the cowboy of the western plains, whose home is as much in the saddle as in his own village. Far from being oppressors, the Cossacks were once known entirely as the defenders of the poor and the wronged. They belonged to an order of rude chivalry, the Kanchestvo, the Knights of Freedom.

The name Kazak is of Tartar origin and means "freeman." It was applied to men driven from the more settled countries and who under the blue sky took without the restraint of tradition, without the interference of kings, potentates and powers. The Kazak lived where soldiers laid heavy hand upon the cultivator and human life was held in small account.

The thirteenth and the fourteenth centuries saw the Cossacks developed into communities living in the neighborhood of the river Dnieper and the use rather was rather to keep watch and ward over the domain of the Czar.

The cowboy guards of the great southwest in this country, who are now disappearing from our American life, are Cossacks in spirit. When they were cavalry men, Texas rangers or rough riders they are American Cossacks.

There were some criminals among the Cossacks, but once they had enrolled in the Cossack legions they left behind them all their past. Some were exiles for political reasons, others had been banished for taking into their own hands the avenging of wrongs. And what avails a name after all. When the officers of the state came inquiring into the Cossack establishments for deserters and from this that nothing was known of them at all. For the Cossacks permitted men to divide themselves of former titles and to begin the free life with a new nomenclature. To them the newcomer were "Pike Nose," "Yellow Buttons" or some other nickname of similar kind.

While other persons paid taxes the Cossack was subject to no such incontrovertible levy. His share was paid by the power of his sword and his pistols. He hunted always that he was not to be assessed, but that he should give the military service which Russia required of him.

In time the Cossack communities were first formed they were inhabited only by men. The Kazan-ovtsy took wives of either. It was an order that lived like sacrifices and fought like demons.

As the ages have passed there have been great changes. The Cossacks have families and their own home life. At first, however, young and during youths were sent out to ride with the Cossacks, and there was no system of chivalry more punctilious than was this government of the sons of the steppes. Offenses that involved violation of their vows or the ill treatment of the weak and the oppressed were punished with death. The sentences were quickly imposed and speedily executed. Cowboy justice and Cossack rule are the same in principle.

The dress of the Cossack has become more or less conventional as the years have gone. We see him in the long coat of brown or of green, with the great fantastic cap on his head, with long horse cumbersome certainties about his waist. He shows the influence of military training. The Cossack of today is a model of elegance compared with what he used to be. He seized accounts covered with gold lace, coats of silks and satins and smeared them with mire and yellow to show his supreme disregard for the trappings. He wore coarse garb, but in the care of his weapons the Cossack has always been punctilious.

His marksmanship was deadly and accurate, even when riding at full speed, as that of the cowboys of the western United States. The Cossacks have been expert swordsmen for centuries. Their predecessors in arms came from their environment. The steppes in which they sought their livelihood were covered with grass often so high only the head and shoulders of the riders appeared above the top of it. Game was abundant in those thick tangles; fruit could be obtained easily; the rivers teemed with fish. The wants of the Cossacks were few and simple. They could do with much or little. A slice of horseflesh carried under the saddle to keep it warm was a ration fit to be called a luxury.—New York Herald.

The Parrot.

With the exception the parrot was not a bird to be revered, so far as can be learned. It is not depicted on any of the sacred scenes in stone that tell the strange stories of the religions of the nations of old, nor has it ever been found mummified in the tombs of Egypt. Most likely the ancients thought it an unsavory bird and also a dangerous one, with its capabilities of repeating what it heard.

Shown It.

Knicker—Does your wife understand the use of leftovers? Bocker—Yes; she is constantly rushing out to me how she might have married them.—Judge.

Idleness is the beginning of all vices.—German Proverb.

DANGER SIGNALS.

Red Is Used Because It Is the Most Effective Color.

Red is the color universally used as a danger signal because it can be seen farther than any other color. It is also the color that attracts attention, excites curiosity and arouses to action. As William Churchill said in an address before the Illuminating Engineering society:

Green, the complementary of red, is seen almost as far as red, but given to the color of which nature makes lavish use, and therefore a green signal is less easily recognized than a red. Because the former may easily be taken for a part of the background, while the latter always contrasts vividly with the background. So green has been used for a cautionary signal.

At night especially red is used as a danger signal, red lanterns being placed on torn up streets and obstructions, red tail lights being used for motor cars, red lamps to indicate fire exits in theaters, factories and hotels and more recently to mark dangerous parts of machinery, high current wires and other danger zones.

In Mr. Churchill's address, as quoted by the Scientific American, he gave the effective range of the several colored lights recognized by the Railway Signal association under ordinary weather conditions, as follows: Red, three to three and one-half miles; yellow, one to one and one-half miles; green, two and one-half to three miles; blue, one-half to three-quarters of a mile; purple, one-half to three-quarters of a mile; amber white, two to two and one-half miles.

Red, no matter how distant, never ceases to look red. This is not true of any other color, though a good green is fairly approximate to it.

Yellow fails to be quite much farther than the distance at which its color can be distinguished and is easily mistaken for a distinguished light—that is, a house, for instance.

Lemon white—a pale bluish white—has come into use as a "clear" indication for switches on minor railroads. It can be recognized at greater distances than yellow and is an excellent substitute for "sidelighted" lights.

HYPNOTIZING ANIMALS.

Even the Deadly Cobra May Be Made Perfectly Passive.

Hypnotizing a lion is a trick known to most country boys. It is an old experiment, and described by the Jesuit father, Athanasius Kircher, who laid a lion on the table, held it firmly for a little while and drew a chalk line in front of its eyes, with the result that it remained as if in a catalepsy.

To hypnotize a snake that is colored by the neck and gently pressed will soon become stiff and remain for a considerable time either coiled up or out stretched.

A frog fastened to a board and turned suddenly upside down goes into a tonic. Other animals are susceptible to this treatment, some more quickly than others.

If you jerk a cat to and wave it in the air it becomes immobile, a female mouse has been seen to run under a male sticking then out almost straight. The same is true of the fresh water crayfish, only this results for a much longer time than a cat.

Among the insects centipedes—commonly known as "death feigning"—become, and, according to Professor Ernst Mangold, the learned German naturalist, is often a means of saving the life of the insect.

According to Mangold, the hypnotic condition is induced in man by suggestion or physical inhibition, in animals by mechanical inhibition, but in both cases sensory stimuli may assist. These stimuli may be optic (staring fixed on some object), or tactile (stroking the skin, or otherwise. Some times an absence of wonted stimuli may induce the state, as in the case of absolute silence.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

KILT OF THE SCOT.

A Style of Attire That Goes Back to the Very Earliest Ages.

The first clothing the Celts put on was a kilt, and it is very likely that the last garment doned by man or woman was a kilt. The earliest clothing was of the skins of wild beasts, and the hair or fur was left on the pelt. These skins were not fashioned by a tailor into coat, vest and trousers, nor even into coat, waistcoat and breeches. The garment was folded around the body and the legs from the knees to the feet were left bare. Thus the kilt style goes back to the earliest skin clothing of the human race.

The kilt has been worn in Scotland from prehistoric times and, according to some authorities, it was a few centuries ago a plaid worn across the shoulders, and in cold weather part of it was twisted around the waist.

The soldiers of Assyria wore the kilt. The men of Sparta also wore the kilt, and the Greek name of it was the chiton, which was pronounced "kyton." On occasions the Greeks also wore a "chlamys," or short cloak, and the "himation," which was the long and flowing robe familiar to moderns by seeing it in Greek plays, pageants and the like. In Jennie Hall's "Men of Old Greece," it is told how Leonidas, king of Sparta, and his little band went to Thermopylae while the great festival of Olympus was being celebrated by the Greeks. In that little book it is written: "So the Spartan king went with his little guard of 300. That little army was fine to look at as it swung out of the city in double line, with shining armor and red chitons and long bronze shields and tall bronze helmets and dangling swords and stiff lances."

The Roman troops wore this short skirt, while the Greek troops and the mountaineers of the Balkan lands wear the skirt today.—Washington Star.

He Was a Very Mean Man

By OSCAR COX

I know a man who was so mean that he married a woman he believed to be waiting for his best friend to marry her.

Ralph Newlind and Herbert Tucker were the friends. Ralph was the selfish man Herbert was so generous that he would hardly give away his head if it could have been of use to another. The secret of Ralph's power over women no one could explain except the girls he fooled, and it is a question if even they knew just how he did it. At any rate, he seemed to draw them as honey draws flies.

Tucker became engaged to Laura Perkins and introduced his friend Newlind to her. Within a fortnight she had deserted Tucker for Newlind. Tucker was philosophic about it. He said that if the girl preferred his friend to him his friend was welcome to her and she to him. After the damage had been done Newlind shared off and left Miss Perkins out in the cold. She tried to make it up with Tucker, but Tucker would have nothing to do with her. What made her mad was that Tucker seemed to be more friendly than before with the man who had deserted him of her. It was a direct reflection on her, indicative that Tucker felt grateful for having been saved from her.

After awhile Tucker made up to another girl, Helen Spingler. He introduced Newlind to this one, too, telling him that if he could win her away from him he was welcome to do so. Tucker didn't want any girl for a wife who didn't have him better than the whole world. He asked his friend to put his second love to a similar test to the first. Newlind accommodated him and captured the girl.

Tucker was so pleased at having been saved from a girl who could not have been in love with him—so he confessed to that he blew Newlind off to a champagne dinner. Newlind was surprised that his friend took all this supplanting with such equanimity, but would not detect the slightest wounding of his smart pride. "It's all right," said Tucker, "only a matter of taste. Some day I may find a girl who will truly love me—then no one can take her away from me. Meanwhile I appreciate these services you are doing me."

Newlind dropped the last girl as he had dropped the first. Miss Spingler felt more hurt than the other. She didn't let on she was a bit displeased. She only said that there wasn't enough in both the men to make one real, noble, good man, and she was well rid of both of them. But she did not say this to either Tucker or Newlind; she said it to a friend. As to the men, she told them she hoped they would both be her friends for ever and ever. This was after she had known of how Tucker stuck to Newlind despite the way the former was taking the latter's girl away from him, and probably she wanted to show that a woman might have an equanimity of that kind in her as well as a man.

One day Newlind received an anonymous note informing him that Tucker was courting a third girl and keeping it a secret from his friend. Newlind showed the note to Tucker, who denied the impeachment. Newlind only half believed him. Only persons of real innocence believe in the innocence of others, and Newlind wasn't exactly an innocent man, as may appear from this story.

Presently he received another letter informing him that Tucker was about to be married. Newlind did not show this letter to Tucker. He kept it to himself, but continued to watch his friend. It happened that Tucker had a platonic friend on whom he called occasionally, and one evening Newlind shadowed him to her house.

"I wonder," said Newlind to himself "if after all I've done for him he thinks he's going to fool me. I'll get even with him."

Tucker told Newlind one day that he was going out of town for a week. A few hours after the meeting Newlind received a telephone message and the following brief dialogue occurred between him and a female voice:

"Mr. Newlind?"

"Yes. I'm Newlind."

"Are you aware that your friend, Mr. Tucker, is about to be married this evening?"

"No. Is he?"

"Yes, at a quarter to 9 at 274 Mulford street."

"You don't mean it?"

There was a click, and Newlind could get nothing more. It was half past 8. No time to lose. He was to evening dress, ready for a wedding. Calling a cab in ten minutes he was at 274 Mulford street and entered a room where a little and two bridesmaids were evidently awaiting the groom. The bride was rolled and the bridesmaids turned round.

"For heaven's sake, don't marry Herbert Tucker," he said to the bride. "He will make your life miserable."

There was a hurried dialogue. The bride said she had promised to marry and must marry, whereupon Newlind declared that rather than have her sacrifice herself he would marry her. A parson waiting in the next room was called in, the bridesmaids turned, each let down a veil, and the couple were married. When they were pronounced man and wife the three women raised their veils.

The bride was old and homely. One bridesmaid was Miss Perkins, the other Miss Spingler.

Are You Rheumatic?—Try Sloan's

If you want quick and real relief from Rheumatism, do what so many thousand other people are doing—whenever an attack comes on, bathe the sore muscles or joint with Sloan's Liniment. No need to rub it in—just apply the Liniment to the surface. It is wonderfully penetrating. It goes right to the seat of trouble and draws the pain immediately. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and the ailments. You money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

—FOR—

Furniture, Stoves, Ranges, Carpets, Rugs, Comforts and Blankets

—Go to—

S. M. SEE & SONS,

The Reliable Housefurnishers.

Another Break in Flour Prices

This will possibly be the last break before the new crop. If you are not supplied for a couple of months, get your supply now.

Your home flours are cheapest and best. Iron Duke cannot be beaten by any flour on the market. Get one of the new sanitary sacks of Iron Duke and try it.

For sale by all dealers. If your dealer is out call up either mill. The one nearest to you.

Argo Milling Co.

MANUFACTURERS

Don't Wait Until The Rush Is On--

Come over to F. S. Blanchard's or send your painter in and have your rooms finished in

MURESCO

Or painted. We have them in all colors.

F. S. Blanchard Estate,

F. L. Bartholomew, Administrator.

Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of this Charlevoix Hemes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock which consists of everything, such as Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper.

TELEPHONE NO. 22

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL, CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Charlevoix Sentinel

AND THE

Grand Rapids Evening Press

DAILY

BOTH ONE YEAR FOR

$ 3.00 $

First Publication January 23.

Foreclosure Notice

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Levi E. Smith and Ella Smith, his wife, of Charlevoix, Charlevoix County, Michigan, to Lucy A. Hulett of Detroit, Wayne County, Michigan, dated the 17th day of April, A. D. 1907, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on the 24th day of April, A. D. 1907, in Liber 42 of mortgages on page 599, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Twenty-five Dollars and Eighty-two Cents ($25.82) principal and interest, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof. Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided on the 20th day of April A. D. 1914 at 9 o'clock in the forenoon of said day at the Circuit Court room in the City of Charlevoix, in said County of Charlevoix, I shall sell at public vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount of said mortgage and the costs and expenses of foreclosure and sale, which premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that part of the Northeast quarter of the Northwest quarter of section twenty-three (23) township forty-four (44) north of range eight (8) west, lying north of the center of the Kalkaska and Grand Rapids road, and south of the center of the Kalkaska and Grand Rapids road, as surveyed, laid out and marked out by the Commissioner of Highways, Charlevoix County, Michigan, and recorded in Liber 2 of Highway Commissioners' Records, page 1, in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County of Charlevoix, excepting therefrom a strip of land one rod wide off the north side of said forty-four (44) acres, and also excepting therefrom a strip of land one rod wide off the south side of said forty-four (44) acres, and also excepting therefrom a strip of land one rod wide off the east side of said forty-four (44) acres, and also excepting therefrom a strip of land one rod wide off the west side of said forty-four (44) acres, and also excepting therefrom the following described parcel of land: Commencing at a point one rod west of the center of the Kalkaska and Grand Rapids road, as surveyed, laid out and marked out by the Commissioner of Highways, Charlevoix County, Michigan, and recorded in Liber 2 of Highway Commissioners' Records, page 1, in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County of Charlevoix, in said County of Charlevoix, in said State of Michigan, and running thence west on said center line of said road one hundred and twenty (120) rods; thence north one hundred and twenty (120) rods; thence east one hundred and twenty (120) rods; thence south one hundred and twenty (120) rods to the place of beginning, and containing one hundred and twenty (120) rods in the form of a square, and containing one hundred and twenty (120) acres of land, more or less, according to the government survey thereof.

Dated this 20th day of March, A. D. 1914.

LUCY A. HULETT, Assignee of Mortgage.

LILLIE HANAHAN, Attorney for Mortgagee, Business Address: Charlevoix, Mich.

First Publication March 19.

Foreclosure Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Levi E. Smith and Ella Smith, his wife, of Charlevoix, Charlevoix County, Michigan, to Lucy A. Hulett of Detroit, Wayne County, Michigan, dated the 17th day of April, A. D. 1907, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on the 24th day of April, A. D. 1907, in Liber 42 of mortgages on page 599, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Twenty-five Dollars and Eighty-two Cents ($25.82) principal and interest, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said Mortgage or any part thereof. Notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided on the 20th day of April A. D. 1914 at 9 o'clock in the forenoon of said day at the Circuit Court room in the City of Charlevoix, in said County of Charlevoix, I shall sell at public vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount of said mortgage and the costs and expenses of foreclosure and sale, which premises are described in said Mortgage as follows: All that part of the Northeast quarter of the Northwest quarter of section twenty-three (23) township forty-four (44) north of range eight (8) west, lying north of the center of the Kalkaska and Grand Rapids road, as surveyed, laid out and marked out by the Commissioner of Highways, Charlevoix County, Michigan, and recorded in Liber 2 of Highway Commissioners' Records, page 1, in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County of Charlevoix, in said County of Charlevoix, in said State of Michigan, excepting therefrom a strip of land one rod wide off the north side of said forty-four (44) acres, and also excepting therefrom a strip of land one rod wide off the south side of said forty-four (44) acres, and also excepting therefrom a strip of land one rod wide off the east side of said forty-four (44) acres, and also excepting therefrom a strip of land one rod wide off the west side of said forty-four (44) acres, and also excepting therefrom the following described parcel of land: Commencing at a point one rod west of the center of the Kalkaska and Grand Rapids road, as surveyed, laid out and marked out by the Commissioner of Highways, Charlevoix County, Michigan, and recorded in Liber 2 of Highway Commissioners' Records, page 1, in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County of Charlevoix, in said County of Charlevoix, in said State of Michigan, and running thence west on said center line of said road one hundred and twenty (120) rods; thence north one hundred and twenty (120) rods; thence east one hundred and twenty (120) rods; thence south one hundred and twenty (120) rods to the place of beginning, and containing one hundred and twenty (120) rods in the form of a square, and containing one hundred and twenty (120) acres of land, more or less, according to the government survey thereof.

Dated this 20th day of March, A. D. 1914.

LUCY A. HULETT, Assignee of Mortgage.

LILLIE HANAHAN, Attorney for Mortgagee, Business Address: Charlevoix, Mich.

First Publication February 12th.

Notice for Publication

Department of the Interior, U. S. Land Office at Lansing, Michigan, February 6th, 1914.

Notice is hereby given that Judson Marquis, of Boyne City, Charlevoix County, Michigan, who, on the 6th day of April, 1909, made Homestead Entry No. 01270, for the S½ NE¼ Section 13 Twp. 33 N. Range 11 West Michigan Meridian, has filed notice of intention to make final commutation proof, to establish claim to the land above described, before Register and Receiver at Lansing, Michigan, on the 20th day of April, 1914.

Claimant names as witnesses: Ernest Hoyt, of Boyne City, Mich. Ira Hoyt, of Boyne City, Mich. Oliver A. Bogue, Boyne City, Mich. Frank Bogue, Boyne City, Mich.

First publication March 19

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court held at the Probate office in the City of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 16th day of February, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Frank E. Fischer, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Sarah C. Burton, deceased.

It is ordered that the 16th day of March, next be assigned for examining and allowing the final account of Frank E. Burton, executor of said estate and for the assignment of the residue of said estate.

It is ordered that notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix County Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

A true copy. FRANK E. FISCHER, Judge of Probate.

Your Publication February 5th

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 16th day of February, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Frank E. Fischer, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Mary Ann Bishop, deceased.

It is ordered that the 16th day of March, next be assigned for examining and allowing the final account of Frank E. Bishop, administrator of said estate and for the assignment of the residue of said estate.

It is ordered that notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix County Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

A true copy. FRANK E. FISCHER, Judge of Probate.

First Publication March 19.

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 16th day of March, A. D. 1914.

Present, Hon. Frank E. Fischer, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of John Ks Bogue, deceased.

Ernest Hoyt, Ira Hoyt, Oliver A. Bogue, Frank Bogue, Claimants.

It is ordered that the 20th day of April, next be assigned for examining and adjusting the claims of the claimants in said matter, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said court for examination and adjustment, at the Probate office in the City of Charlevoix, on the said day of April, A. D. 1914.

It is further ordered, that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix County Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County.

A true copy. FRANK E. FISCHER, Judge of Probate.

A. CORNELL, Deputy Probate Clerk.

In Chancery

William J. Gallagher, Executor, Complainant.

Jonas Eccle, John Adams and Sarah A. Adams, his wife, Defendants.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in Chancery.

Order for Publication.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in Chancery, A. D. Eight Hundred and Fifty-Seven, Complainant, William J. Gallagher, Executor, Defendants

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1916, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

CHAPTER XIV—Continued.

Besides being on duty as an officer of militia, Callomb was a Kentuckian, interested in the problems of his commonwealth and, when he wrote book, he knew that his cousin, who occupied the executive mansion at Frankfort, would be interested in his acquaintance. The governor had asked him to report, like ingratiating, and he meant to, after analyzing them.

So smarting under his impotency, Captain Callomb came out of his tent one morning, and strolled across the curved bridge to the town proper. He knew that the grand jury was convening, and he meant to sit as a spectator in the courthouse and study proceedings when they were instructed.

But before he reached the courthouse, where for a half-hour yet the cupola bell would not clang out its summons to veniremen and witnesses, he found fresh food for his wrath.

He was not a popular man with these citizens, though involuntarily he had been useful in leading their victims to the slaughter. There was a reason in his eyes that they did not like, and an arrogant air of iron fixed to his liverly he were, which made his illness distressed.

Callomb was without being cold that after the long lay a scene of pugnacious dialogue. Five white men, bullet-riddled, lay fell into sweaty the knees and groups. A clerk at a store where he stopped for tobacco inquired as he made change:

"Heard the news, stranger?"

"What news?"

"Why, this 'Wildcat' Samson South some hide-riddled, an' last evening towards sundown, Jesse Purry an Aaron Hollins was shot dead.

For an instant, the soldier stood looking at the young clerk, his eyes kindling into a wrathful blaze. Then, he curbed under his breath. At the door, he turned on his heel.

"Where can Judge Smithers be found at this time of day?" he demanded.

CHAPTER XV.

The Honorable Abe Smithers was not the regular judge of the circuit which embraced Hilliston among its county seats. The elected incumbent was ill, and Smithers had been named by his predecessor, a Democrat, who climbed to the second story of the Dixie hotel building and pounded loudly on a door, which bore the boldly-typed sign:

"Asa Smithers, Attorney-at-Law."

The temporary judge admitted a visitor in response to the summons, and was stormy with indignant protest. The judge listened to his and still during. The lawyer, who was for the time being elated to the bench, hoped to amend it more permanently by the votes of the Holliman faction, since Jesse Hollinger's murder, he could be was a young man of no peril physique with a face ruggedly strong and honest.

Callomb stood for a moment inside the door and when he spoke it was to demand crisply:

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"About what, captain?" inquired the other mildly.

"Is it possible you haven't heard? Since yesterday noon two murders have been added to the holocaust. Two prominent men, one of them, I understand, the military arm of the state. Are you going to stand by and see this go on?"

The Judge shook his head, and his visage was startly thoughtful and hypocritical. He did not mention that he had just come from consultation with the Holliman leaders. He did not explain that the venire he had drawn from the petty jurors had been a singularly solid Holliman complexion.

"Until the grand jury acts I don't see that we can take any steps."

"And," stormed Captain Callomb, "the grand jury will, like several grand juries, lie down in terror and inactivity. If there are no courageous men in your county, or these panels are selected to avoid indictments, then Judge Smithers' face darkened in he was a moral coward, he was at least a coward encircled behind a seeming of hardiness.

"Captain," he said, coolly, but with a dangerous hint of warning, "I don't see that your duties include contempt of court."

"No!" Callomb was now thoroughly angered, and his voice rose. "I am sent down here subject to your orders, and it seems you are also subject to orders. Here are two murders in a day, capping a climax of 20 years of bloodshed. You have information as to the arrival of a man known as a desperado with a grudge against the two dead men, yet you know of no steps to take. Give me the word and I'll go out and bring that man, and any others you name, to your bar of justice—if it is a bar of justice! For God's sake, give me something else to do than to bring in prisoners to be shot down in cold blood."

The judge sat balancing a pencil on his extended forefinger as though he were a scale of justice.

"You have been heated in your language, sir," he said, severely, "but it is a best arising from an indignation which I pardon. Consequently, I pass it over. I cannot instruct you to arrest Samson South before the grand jury has accused him. The law does not contemplate hasty or unadvised action. All men are innocent until proven guilty. If the grand jury wants South, I instruct you to go and get him. Until then, you may leave my part of the work to me."

His honor rose from his chair.

"You can at least give the grand jury such instruction on murder as will point out their duty. You can assure them that the militia will protect them. Through your prosecutor you can bring evidence to their attention. Now—"

"If you will excuse me," interrupted his honor drily, "I'll judge of how I am to charge my grand jury. I have been in communication with the family of Jesse Purry, and it is not their wish at the present time to bring this case before the grand jury."

Callomb bumbled ironically.

"Oh, I could have told you that before you conferred with them. I could have told you that they prefer to be their own courts and executioners, as rope where they feed you. They are afraid of the law as a man they couldn't take themselves, and then to assassinate him in my hearing. Where the hell do you work for, Judge—for the moment Samson? Are you holding a job under the state of Kentucky, or under the Holliman faction of this feud? I am instructed to take my orders from you. Will you kindly tell me my master's real name?"

Smithers turned pale with anger, his flabby face grew as speckled as a bulldog's, while Callomb stood glaring back at him like a second bulldog, but the judge knew that he was incorruptibly and fearlessly accused. He nervously pattered to the door. The captain turned on his heel and stalked out of the place, and the judge came down the steps and crossed the street to the courthouse. Five minutes later he turned to the shirt-sleeved man who was leaning on the bench and said in his most judicial voice:

"Mr. Sheriff, open court."

The next day the mail carrier brought to the office of the temporary judge. His honor read it at recess and summoned Jesse to Hollman's Mammoth Department Store. There, in council with his masters, he solved its mysteries. This was the note:

"The Hon. Asa Smithers.

"Sir: I arrived in this county yesterday, and am prepared, if called as a witness, to give to the grand jury all the circumstances of the murders of Jesse Purry and the killing of Aaron Hollins. I am willing to come under the escort of my own kinsmen, or the militiamen, as the court may prefer.

"The requirement of any bodyguard I deplore, but in meeting my legal obligations, I do not regard it as necessary or proper to walk into a trap.

"Respectfully,

"SAMSON SOUTH."

Smithers looked perplexedly at Judge Holliman.

"Shall I have him come?" he inquired.

Holliman threw the letter down on his desk with a burst of blasphemy.

"Have him come? he echoed. "Damn and damnation, no! What do we want him to come here and hang himself? Let him be used to do the dirty work for us, and I'm going to do a little picking of my own. I guess I'll turn the company over to you for a day or two.

"What idiocy are you contemplating now?" inquired the second in company.

"I'm going to ride over on Misery, and hear what the other side has to say. I've usually noticed that one side of any story is pretty good until the other side comes in.

"It's sheer madness. I ought to take you down to the internal crook or a judge and have you committed to a strait-jacket.

"If," said Callomb, "you are content to play the catspaw to a bunch of assassins, I'm not. The mail-rider went out this morning and he carried a letter to old Spicer South. I told him that I was coming unescorted and unarmed and that my object was to talk with Samson. I asked him to give me a safe conduct, at least, until I reached his house, and stated my case. I trusted him like an officer and a gentleman, and, unless I'm a poor judge of man, I'm not. I'm to be upon my honor, and must be in a different fashion. Changes are coming. We can't any longer stand still."

Spicer South lighted his pipe. He, too, in these last years, had seen in the distance the crest of the oncoming wave.

"I reckon there's right smart truth to that," he acknowledged. "I've been straddle 'bout his comfortable myself of late. That's been several fellers through the country talkin' real an' timber an' reasonable sort like."

Sally went to mill that Saturday, and with her rode Samson. There, besides Wile McCager, he met Caleb Willey and several others. At first, they received him skeptically, but they knew of the visit to Purry's store, and they were willing to admit that in part at least he had erased the blot from his escutcheon. Then, too, except for cropped hair and a white skin, he had come back as he had gone, in homespun and hickory. There was nothing highfalutin in his manners. In short, the impression was good.

"I reckon now that yere back, Samson," suggested McCager, "no matter how yore Uncle Spicer is gettin' along all right, I'll just let the two of yo'n talk. I've done had enough." It was a simple fashion of resigning a vacancy, but effectual.

Old Caleb, however, still insurgent and unconvinced, brought in a minority report.

"We wants fightin' men," he grumbled, with the senile reiteration of his age. He spat tobacco and bent a rail-cut on the mill floor with his long hickory staff. "We don't want no deserters."

Samson didn't a deserter," defended Sally. "There isn't one of you fit to tie his shoes." Sally and old Spicer knew more about the inner heart of her lover's letter to the circuit judge, and they pledged to secrecy.

"Never mind, Sally!" It was Samson himself who answered her. "I'm willing to have me an a man they don't like old Caleb think. I came back where they needed me. The proof of a fighting man is his fighting; I reckon I'm willing to let you judge me by what I'm going to do."

So, Samson slipped back, tentative and half-ashamed, into the place he had left, though for a time he found it a post without action. After the fierce outburst of bloodshed, quiet had settled, and it was tacitly understood that, unless the Hollman forces had some cowl in mind which they were secreting, the peace would last until the soldiers were withdrawn.

When the words ebocks," commented Judge Hollman, "bit a right good idea to crawl under a log—an lay still."

Purry had been too famous a leader to pass unsung. Reporters came as far as Hixon, gathered there such news as the Hollmans chose to give them, and went back to write lurid stories and description, from hearsay, of the stockaded seat of tragedy. Nor did they overlook the dramatic coincidence of the return of "Wildcat" Samson South from civilization to anarchy. They made no accusation, but they pointed an inference and a moral—as they thought. It was a sermon on the triumph of heredity over the advantages of environments. Adroitness read some of these saffron misrepresentations, and they distressed her.

Meanwhile, it became transmitted to the ears of Captain Callomb that some plan was on foot, the intricacies of which he could not fathom, to manifacture a case against a number of the South's people, apart from their actual guilt, or likelihood of guilt. Once more, he would be called upon to go out and drag in men too well fortified to be taken by the passes and deputies of the Holliman civil machinery. At this news, he flushed bitterly, and, still rankling with a sense of shame at the loss of his first prisoner, he formed a plan of his own, which he revealed over his pipe to a first lieutenant.

"There's a nigger in the woodpile, Merriweather," he said. "We're sure only being used to do the dirty work for some, and I'm going to do a little prying of my own. I guess I'll turn the company over to you for a day or two."

"What idiocy are you contemplating now?" inquired the second in company.

"I'm going to ride over on Misery, and hear what the other side has to say. I've usually noticed that one side of any story is pretty good until the other side comes in."

"Captain," he said, coolly, but with a dangerous hint of warning, "I don't see that your duties include contempt of court."

FIND CAUSE OF SOURNESS

Giant Elephant at New York Zoo Is an Actor and Naturally Temperamental.

At last Doctor Hornaday and Raymond L. Ditmars of the Bronx zoo have found out just why Dinda, the elephant in captivity, has steadily built up a reputation as the greatest section of elephant slide—causing the largest climax of temperament in the known world.

"The answer is easy. Dinda's temperament is due to the fact that Dinda has become an actor. Temperamental dumps' moved from every pore when Dinda was called forth at long range to pose in the series of moving pictures that are being taken of the new animals for Carlyle Ditmars.

"Sulkiness, sweetness and light, 'Dinda's a good Dinda,' called the keeper the director as Dinda was led out and the camera began to click.

Dinda, missing the cue, instantly went to raging murder, fire, and sudden death. Doctor Ditmars, who had been in the act of stepping up to Dinda and offering to the elephant a loaf of bread, changed his mind and went away from the place. This had heard of one of the movie men was in the form of a long, jail retreatin, through Yonkers.

But Doctor Ditmars got his pictures of Dinda in the act of being sweet, sour, sullen, friendly, and they are now being shown in the moving picture section at the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.—New York Sun.

War Distances.

War, besides being a great leveler, is also a great educator. Places we had never even heard of previously are now becoming as familiar in our mouths as household words. The movements of armies are not to be somewhat confusing unless understood. It ought, however, to be quite easy to remember that a meter measures about one and one-twenty yards, or more exactly, 39.37 inches. A decameter is 10 meters, a hectometer is 100 meters, and a kilometer is 1,000 meters, or a little more than three-fifths of a mile. The Russians express the length of their

DROVE AWAY THE TOOTHACHE

In His Thirst for Revenge the Colonel Had No Time to Think of Physical Alments.

One morning the colonel rolled out of his blankets with the jumping toothache, and, though he exhausted all the remedies in camp, nothing had any effect. It was 15 miles to the nearest town, with ill, chances against finding a dentist there, and he had finally decided to appeal to one of the cowboys on his station, five miles away. He mounted one of his horses, a message, and, after taking a look at the tooth, which was a double one on the upper jaw, the cowboy said:

"Kornel, I kin shoot that tooth out so slick as grease if you don't mind the scar it will leave on your cheeks."

"Shoot it out!" exclaimed the colonel. "Why, man, you must be crazy."

"Well, maybe I kin pick in enough powder to blow it out."

"Never!"

"Maybe I could hit out with a piece of iron and a stone!" continued the cowboy.

"And you might go to Texas and be jailed!" exclaimed the suffering and indignant man.

"I'm only telling you how we do it out here, and I'm sure you don't want that tooth out you'll have to stand the pain."

The cowboy started for his station, but after a gallop of a mile he returned to beckon the rest of us aside and say:

"He seems to be a purty squar sort of a man, kornel, and I'm sure tetch and I'm sorry for him. Is he a good rider?"

"Only fair."

"Kin he shoot?"

"Not very straight."

"Then I think I can cure that toothache."

We spent two minutes unfolding the plot and then went over to the sufferer and said:

"Kornel, I've come back to say you air a body."

Samson laughed the colonel, as he sprang up from his seat before the cowboy.

"A booby and a squaw, kornel, and likewise a durned old fool."

The cowboy apologized for him, but the cowboy dodged and ran for his horse. We had another result and fetched with the hair and is splendid for dandruff dry, itchy scalp and falling hair. A well-known druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant. Adv.

His Turn Next

Diner—See here, there are those oysters I ordered on the half shell!

Waiter—They're gone, sah. We're drefflie short on shells; but you're next, sah.—Boston Evening Transcript.

CUTICURA SHAVING

Is Up-to-Date Shaving for Sensitive Skins. Trial Free.

Prepare razor. Dip brush in hot water and rub it on Cuticura Soap held in palm of hand. Then massage the face with the lather. Strop razor and shave. Rinse off soap. Finish by applying a little Cuticura Ointment over shaven parts (and on acne if any) and rub in (not rubbing off) with Cuticura Soap and hot water, shampooing same time. Use soap for all—shaving, shampooing, bathing and toilet. It's velvet for sensitive skins. No lather, mug, or razor. No waste of time or money. Free sample each if you wish. Address Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. XY, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Few sermons are as broad as they are long.—Chicago News.

Warner's Safe Pills

are purely vegetable, sugar-coated and absolutely free from injurious substances. A Perfect Laxative. For indigestion, biliousness, torpid liver and constipation, they do not gripe or leave any bad after effects. 25c a box. If your druggist cannot supply you, we will.

Write for Booklet.

Warner's Safe Remedies Co. Rochester, N. Y.

ABSORBINE

TRADE MARK REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Removes Bursal Enlargements, Thickened Swollen Tissues, Curbs, Filled Tendons, Sore Throat and Distemper, Heals Strains or Injuries. Lameness, Allays pain. Does not Blister, remove the hair or disturb the horse. $2.00 a bottle, delivered. Book 1 K free.

ABSORBINE, JR., the antiseptic liniment for mankind. For Sprains, Strains, Gouty or Rheumatic deposits, Swollen, Painful Varicose Veins. Will tell you more if you write. $1 and $2 per bottle at druggists or delivered. Manufactured only by W. F. YOUNG, P. D. F., 216 Temple, Springfield, Mass.

BLACK LEG

LOSSES SURELY PREVENTED

Vaccine Pelleted. Single Dose. Guaranteed. Sold by Druggists. Write for Booklet. Agents Wanted. Blackleg Pills, $1.50 per 100 dose size. Blackleg Pills $2 per 250 dose size. Blackleg Pills $3 per 500 dose size. Cutter's Bacterins, Bacterin Pelleted, Bacterin Liquid. Cutter's Vaccinal Ointment. Cutter's Vaccinal Ointment Powder. Cutter's Vaccinal Ointment Powder Dusting Powder. Cutter's Vaccinal Ointment Powder Dusting Powder. Cutter's Vaccinal Ointment Powder Dusting

THESE ARE THE ASSETS THAT MAKE CHARLEVOIX FAMOUS

Charlevoix has:

A first-class sewer and drainage system.
Absolutely pure water, with an excellent circulating system for domestic and fire purposes.
A splendid electric lighting system.
Paved and macadam streets.
A twenty acre public park along shore of Lake Michigan.
Five prosperous churches.
Excellent schools.
A $25,000 Masonic Temple.
Inland Lake with 60 miles of navigable coast line.

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.

WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9.

SUBSCRIPTION
Three Months - - - - $ .50
Six Months - - - - - - 1.00
One Year - - - - - - - 1.00

POINTERS IN BUYING.

How to Tell Young Chickens From Old, Tender From Tough.

Contrary to general belief, the youth and tenderness of a chicken should not be judged by the softness or hardness of its breastbone, for a young chicken that has been allowed to run at large through the tall grass and weeds will have a hard breastbone even if it is a few months old owing to the exercise of the muscles and ligaments in walking. On the other hand, a chicken which is kept in a dry pen will have a soft breastbone. The best way to test the tenderness of a chicken, or, in fact any poultry is to take the pinion between the wing and the wing in one's finger. If this pinion is soft enough to allow the finger and thumb to meet one may be quite sure that the bird is tender. Another way to judge is by the texture of the skin. If the skin is of a fine grain the chicken is young; if the skin is coarse the bird is old. However, it is easier for the housewife to judge by feeling the muscles.

The white skinned chicken is often as good as another with white skin and yellow skinned bird. The reason lies in the fact that the yellow skinned bird has been allowed to run at large through the tall grass and weeds, will have a hard breastbone even if it is a few months old owing to the exercise of the muscles and ligaments in walking. On the other hand, a chicken which is kept in a dry pen will have a soft breastbone. The best way to test the tenderness of a chicken or, in fact any poultry is to take the pinion between the wing and the wing in one's finger. If this pinion is soft enough to allow the finger and thumb to meet one may be quite sure that the bird is tender. Another way to judge is by the texture of the skin. If the skin is of a fine grain the chicken is young; if the skin is coarse the bird is old. However, it is easier for the housewife to judge by feeling the muscles.

The white skinned chicken is often as good as another with white skin and yellow skinned bird. The reason lies in the fact that the yellow skinned bird has been allowed to run at large through the tall grass and weeds, will have a hard breastbone even if it is a few months old owing to the exercise of the muscles and ligaments in walking. On the other hand, a chicken which is kept in a dry pen will have a soft breastbone. The best way to test the tenderness of a chicken or, in fact any poultry is to take the pinion between the wing and the wing in one's finger. If this pinion is soft enough to allow the finger and thumb to meet one may be quite sure that the bird is tender. Another way to judge is by the texture of the skin. If the skin is of a fine grain the chicken is young; if the skin is coarse the bird is old. However, it is easier for the housewife to judge by feeling the muscles.

Religious Notes

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Sunday school at 10 a. m.
Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.
Bible School, 12 o'clock.
Young People's Meeting, 6:00 p. m.
Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(LAYTONVILLE)
Bible School at 1:30 p. m.
Preaching, 2:30 p. m.

Baptist church
A. M. - What Shall I Do?
P. M. - Where Shall I Spend Eternity?
Thursday evening—Prayer meeting and Bible study. Text, Matthew 25 Subject, Penalty and Reward.

Jesus Saves
John 3:16-17

B. Y. P. U.—Topic, Favorite books of the Bible and why.—Leader—Russel Schweitzer.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTIST
Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.
Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Matter."
Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.
Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m., also 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday.

CATHOLIC CHURCH
Sunday Service
8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:30 a. m.—High Mass
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.
Mass during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

EPISCOPAL—Church
Services second and fourth Thursday in each month, by Rev. Harris, of Petoskey.

METHODIST CHURCH
A. M. Uncover Your Light
P. M. Christ the Healer.

Easter Opening of Millinery

at Mrs. H. A. Carr's Millinery Store

Friday and Saturday, March 19th and 20th.

Ladies are cordially invited

Miss Katherine Howard is the trimmer. She came highly recommended.

Council Proceedings

[illegible] at 10, '15

Pursuant to the adjournment of march 4th the Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met in special session on the same date for the purpose of canvassing the vote cast at the Primary Election held on March 3rd, 1915—Mayor Nicholls presiding.

Aldermen present, See, Priest, Carter, Barney and Carey. Absent, Shapton.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Mayor on the Republican ticket was 318, of which Oscar E. Wilbur received 229, Harry Nicholls received 227 and Wm. Higman received 2.

Moved by Alderman Priest and seconded by Alderman Barney that Oscar E. Wilbur having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Mayor. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Mayor on the Socialist ticket was 3, of which Wm. Higman received 2.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Carter that Wm. Higman having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Socialist Party for the office of Mayor. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Clerk on the Republican ticket was 301 of which Peter P. Vandermade received 286, Charles H. Savey received 215 and Arthur Richardson received 2.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Carter that Peter P. Vandermade having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of City Clerk. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Clerk on the Socialist ticket was 2, of which A. T. Richardson received 2.

Moved by Alderman Barney and seconded by Alderman Priest that A. T. Richardson having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Socialist Party for the office of City Clerk. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of City Treasurer on the Republican ticket was 319 of which John Sinclair received 306, Wm. H. Cooper received 240 and Wm. Sanford received 2.

Moved by Alderman Carter and seconded by Alderman Priest that John Sinclair having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of City treasurer. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of City Treasurer on the Socialist ticket was 2, of which Wm. Sanford received 2.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Carter that Wm. Sanford having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Socialist Party for the office of City Treasurer. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Justice of the Peace on the Republican ticket was 422 of which Henry L. Cooper received 422 and Ray Ashton received 1.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Priest that Henry L. Cooper having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Justice of the Peace. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Justice of the Peace on the Socialist ticket was 2, of which Ray Ashton received 2.

Moved by Alderman Carter and seconded by Alderman Priest that Henry L. Cooper having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Socialist Party for the office of Justice of the Peace. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Supervisor of the First Ward on the Republican ticket was 87, of which F. J. Meech received 87.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Priest that Frederick J. Meech having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Supervisor of the First Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Alderman of the First Ward on the Republican ticket was 75, of which Llewellyn S. See received 49, Andrew Ross received 1 and F. H. Wilkinson received 1.

Moved by Alderman Priest and seconded by Alderman Carter that Llewellyn S. See having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Alderman of the First Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Constable of the First Ward on the Republican ticket was 75, of which Lewellyn S. See received 49, Andrew Ross received 1 and F. H. Wilkinson received 1.

Moved by Alderman Priest and seconded by Alderman Carter that Llewellyn S. See having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Constable of the First Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Supervisor of the Second Ward on the Republican ticket was 165, of which Charles J. Zeeter received 159, Charles E. See received 4, S. M. Rouse received 1, Alex Cameron received 1.

Moved by Alderman Barney and seconded by Alderman Carter that Charles J. Zeeter having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Supervisor of the Second Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Alderman of the Second Ward on the Republican ticket was 356, of which Fred E. Carter received 104, E. Hanks received 101 and Olaf Nordrum received 1.

Moved by Alderman Barney and seconded by Alderman See that Fred E. Carter having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Alderman of the Second Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Alderman of the Second Ward on the Socialist ticket was 8, of which Robert Stafford received 2 and Henry Jacobs received 1.

Moved by Alderman Carter and seconded by Alderman Carey that Robert Stafford having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Socialist Party for the office of Alderman of the Second Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Alderman of the Second Ward on the Republican ticket was 72, of which Wm. Cowan received 70 Ralph Wanosen received 1; Milt Block received 1; Silas Alex received 1; Nat Burns received 1; Elmer Jobinson received 2; Fred Somerer received 1; Joe Zeiter received 1; Tom Nowicki received 1.

Moved by Alderman Barney and seconded by Alderman Carter that Wm. Cowan having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Constable of the Second Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Supervisor of the Third Ward on the Republican ticket was 185, of which Harrison Ikenlan received 110, Wm. Graham received 41, Geo. C. Gelken received 32; Wm. D. Francis received 1.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Carey that Harrison Ikenlan having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Supervisor of the Third Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Alderman of the Third Ward on the Republican ticket was 179, of which Richard S. Shapton received 160; F. Adams received 21; James Bogart received 1; Wm. Francis received 1.

Moved by Alderman Priest and seconded by Alderman Barney that Richard S. Shapton having received a majority of the votes cast be declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Alderman of the Third Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Constable of the Third Ward on the Republican ticket was 5, of which Charles Hall received 1; F. E. Taylor received 1; Andrew McCall received 1; John Kelly received 1; being a tie vote the council decided by lot, the choice falling to T. E. Taylor who upon motion of Alderman Priest seconded by Alderman Carter was declared the nominee of the Republican Party for the office of Constable of the Third Ward. Motion carried.

There being no further business the council adjourned.

F. L. Slaght,
Deputy City Clerk

Council Chambers, March 16, '15.

The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date—Mayor Nicholls presiding.

Aldermen present, See, Priest, Carter, Barney and Shapton. Absent, Carey.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Enter, Alderman Carey.

The finance committee submitted the following report. Having examined the following bills report the same correct and recommend that they be allowed out of the several funds as herein stated.

General Fund
H. C. Hamlett, Board of Election Clerk	[illegible]
F. L. Slaght, Salary and expense	[illegible]
F. D. Fitzgerald, Election Inspector 1st ward	[illegible]
L. C. Short, [illegible]	[illegible]
W. M. Cook, [illegible]	[illegible]
W. Sanford, [illegible]	[illegible]
Frank Shepard, stationery	[illegible]
W. Barnes, Election Inspector 2nd ward	[illegible]
Geo. Gelken, [illegible]	[illegible]
Fred Somerer, [illegible]	[illegible]
Cigar House, [illegible]	[illegible]
Harry Nicholls, [illegible]	[illegible]
Jos. Kitchen, [illegible]	[illegible]
Wm. Higman, Election Inspector 3rd ward	[illegible]
Jos. Zeiter, [illegible]	[illegible]
Charlevoix Sentinel, services	[illegible]
C. L. Stuart, [illegible]	[illegible]
Peter P. Vandermade, [illegible]	[illegible]
Van Horn Publishing Co., [illegible]	[illegible]
Burroughs Adding Machine Co. supplies	[illegible]
Road and Bridge Fund
Twining Trust Co. interest, Grayling village Bridge Refunding Bonds due 4-1-1916	30.00
Police Fund
Chas. Jefferies, marbles	50.00
Cemetery Fund
Wm. McKaig, sexton	50.00
Bridge Fund
Elmer Johnson, sheet iron	1.00
Highway Fund
Mayo Lumber, services	4.00
C. W. Hoffmaster, services	18.00
H. R. Wall, services	12.00
Water Fund
Robert McDonald, services	[illegible]
Sewer Fund
A. J. Vondal, supplies and services	[illegible]
H. R. Wall, services	[illegible]
Mich. Ave. & Pennsylvania Ave. Paving L.I.S.D.
Wolverine Construction Co., estimate No. 1	[illegible]
Mich. Ave. & Chicago Ave. sewers, L.I.S.D.
City Treasurer, transfer to Sewer Fund	[illegible]
Chicago Ave. sewer L.I.C.A.	[illegible]
Wolverine Construction Co., estimate No. 1	[illegible]
Electric & Water Funds
Charlevoix electric plant	[illegible]
R. S. Blanchard Est., supplies	[illegible]
Van Pelt & Hitchcock, [illegible]	[illegible]
Dunton Hicks, stamps	[illegible]
Beverly Ackert, services	[illegible]

Moved by Alderman Carter and seconded by Alderman Shapton that the report be and be accepted and the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to issue warrants on the city depositories for $1,525.55 and the clerk be instructed to draw orders on the various funds for the amount of each respective bill. Motion carried, by the following aye and nay vote. Ayes: See, Priest, Carter, Barney, Shapton and Carey. Nays, none.

The purchasing committee recommends that the city enter into contract with D. C. Nettleton for the purchase of all recorded and unrecorded plats for the City of Charlevoix, also 18x24 inches, all recorded plats at a cost of $3.00 each and unrecorded plats at $10 each, all charts to be made on tracing cloth.

Moved by Alderman Barney and seconded by Alderman Carter that the proposition of D. C. Nettleton to furnish the city with copies of all recorded and unrecorded plats for the City of Charlevoix be accepted. Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote. Ayes, See, Priest, Carter, Barney, Shapton and Carey. Nays, none.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Carter, that the petition of D. E. Ingalls relative to the lease of the piece of property on the corner of Stover Road and Perry Avenue to the Cleaners for warehouse purposes be referred to committee on Public Buildings, Parks and Bridges, same to report on March 22, 1915. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Carter and seconded by Alderman Priest that the petition presented by F. G. Madill to build a brick and glass front on the Bridge street front of the building owned by Chas. Novak on the west side of Bridge street one door north of the store building of H. S. Fowler, be granted. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Carey that the School board be given permission to use the fire bell on court house for school purposes. Motion carried.

The committee of Harry I. Oldham relative to the outside appearance of the grounds and buildings at the entrance to Charlevoix harbor near the Life Saving Station and the repairing of the piers and pilings at Lake Street Drive on south shore of Lake Michigan in vicinity of South Point was referred to Public Buildings, Parks and Bridges committee.

Moved by Alderman Carey and seconded by Alderman Carter that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to enter into contract with James H. Johnson, of South Haven, Mich., for the lease of a piece of property near sugar beet property for a period of five years, said property to be used for the construction of a picking factory. Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote. Ayes, See, Priest, Carter, Barney, Shapton and Carey. Nays, none.

Alderman Priest seconded by Alderman Shapton moved the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved that whereas the common council of the city of Charlevoix at a regular session held on the twenty-ninth day of March, 1915, did by ordinance duly adopted by said council, submit to the electors of the city of Charlevoix at the general election to be held in said city on the first Monday in April, 1915, for the purpose of amending the 10th and 11th pages of the charter of the city of Charlevoix the proposition to amend said charter by striking out the words "Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "Three Thousand Five Hundred Dollars" in lieu thereof, and

Whereas, said proposition was duly submitted to said electors at said election and duly adopted by a vote of two hundred and twenty-five (225) votes for said amendment to two hundred and twenty-four (224) votes against said amendment, and

Whereas, the said amendment was duly approved by the Attorney General of the State of Michigan, and

Whereas, the said amendment was duly published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and published in said City of Charlevoix

BUILDING ROADS by CONVICT LABOR

GOOD roads advocates are giving increasing attention to the question of the employment of convicts in road building. Throughout the country state good roads associations are adopting resolutions favoring the adoption of the convict labor system. Good roads organizations and advocates are discussing the merits and disadvantages of the plan, and many are studying the system as applied in other states.

Colorado has been using convict labor for the last seven years. So successful has it proved in this state that others have modeled their laws and plan of operation after those of Colorado and the governors during their annual conference at Colorado Springs last August spent much time in studying at first hand the wonderful highways that Colorado has built by convict labor. Twenty-four governors made up a party for a trip of inspection over the Colorado Springs-Canon City highway and the Pikes Peak Ocean to Ocean road in Ute Pass, two of the most perfect mountain roads in the United States and two of the best examples of the results of convict labor.

The Colorado Springs-Canon City highway is one of the best examples of scientific road building in the state; perhaps the country. For a distance of twenty miles or more south of Colorado Springs the road winds around the foothills and mountains, practically the entire roadbed having been cut out of the hillside and in many places blasted out of solid rock. For a remaining twenty-five miles to Canon City the way is over foothills and through undulating country. Besides being a model in engineering, the road is one of the best scenic and picturesque in the West, passing as it does through Red Rock Canyon, Dead Man's Canyon and many other mountain beauty spots. It cuttlinkins to its far-famed highways to the top of the Royal Gorge and the unique and spectacular Sky Line Drive at Canon City.

The road is eighteen feet in width and is perfectly crowned and drained. Although it offers a succession of climbs so skillfully was the engineering work done that heavy grades have been eliminated and the motorist is confronted with only one hill that is high as it is per cent.

Ute Pass is one of the historic gateways of the mountains and down its wide and easy curves before Columbus discovered America, the Ute Indians had worn with soft moccasined tread a plainly distinguishable trail. In building the first road across the range to freight supplies to Leadville, Aspen and the other mining camps, the white man followed the trail of the Indian. A few years ago the greater portion of this road between Manitou and Cascade was entirely rebuilt by convict labor. It has been pronounced a most model example of road building. It has a wide, well crowned roadbed surfaced with disintegrated granite. The maximum grade, which has been reduced and although the road overcomes an elevation of 1,175 feet in a distance of five miles the climb is gradual and is easily negotiated. It is over this Ute Pass road that the Pikes Peak Ocean to Ocean highway enters the mountains after striking straight across the plains of central Colorado from Kansas City and Manitou. Thence it continues westward through South Park over Tennessee Pass down the valleys of the Eagle and the Grand rivers to Grand Junction and the Utah line.

Pueblo county also has employed convicts to advantage and a notable piece of road is the stretch just north of Pueblo on the road to Colorado Springs. Garfield county, on the western slope, last year engaged 50 convicts for a period of four years, and they have just completed work on the Pikes Peak Ocean to Ocean highway west of Glenwood Springs and are now engaged in rebuilding the road through the Canyon of the Grand river. Weld and Larimer counties, in northern Colorado, also have many miles of splendid road to show for the work of convicts during the last two years.

Wherever tried, the results have been satisfactory. This applies especially to the benefits derived by the convicts themselves. Under the Colorado system, the convict is allowed ten days of his sentence for each month of labor on the roads. This is in addition to the usual reduction for good behavior. Besides in Colorado, the employment of convicts on the roads has been singularly successful because the cost of building many of its mountain roads would be almost prohibitive if the state were compelled to construct them under ordinary conditions. The entire country has reaped the benefits of Colorado's pioneering because it has been able to open to travelers from all sections of the country some of its most splendid mountain scenery; it has furthermore set the example for many of the other states to the adoption of some system for the employment of convicts on state and county roads.

In speaking of what can be accomplished in the way of road building by the use of convict labor, Thomas J. Tynan, warden of the state penitentiary under whose supervision the work the last three years has been done, recently said:

"The benefits in this or any other state from a broad and scientific system, if convict road building can scarcely be estimated. Basing our figures on actual experience we are confident that we can construct in the next ten years more than 10 thousand miles of the very finest roadways for less than $500,000 and this without adding anything whatever to the burden of the taxpayers.

"During the period of ten years the internal revenue fund of Colorado should amount to $2,000,000. After deducting $500,000 for road construction, the remaining amount should be wisely expended in bridge building, road repairing and for similar uses. Add to this the freight assistance from the different counties, and it would enable us to construct not less than 10,000 miles. It can be done in Colorado. We should not the same conditions apply in other states under more favorable conditions where the roads are naturally better and where cost of construction would not necessitate a sum so high as in our mountainous sections."

To illustrate better the great saving to the taxpayers on this class of work and its possibilities, let me quote a few figures from one of our road camps. During one month we worked 265 men on drill holes 8 feet deep and 1½ inches in bore. The number of days employed was 24½. Each of these men drilled 1.175 feet in a distance of five miles the climb is gradual and is easily negotiated. It is over this Ute Pass road that the Pikes Peak Ocean to Ocean highway enters the mountains after striking straight across the plains of central Colorado from Kansas City and Manitou. Thence it continues westward through South Park over Tennessee Pass down the valleys of the Eagle and the Grand rivers to Grand Junction and the Utah line.

Pueblo county also has employed convicts to advantage and a notable piece of road is the stretch just north of Pueblo on the road to Colorado Springs. Garfield county, on the western slope, last year engaged 50 convicts for a period of four years, and they have just completed work on the Pikes Peak Ocean to Ocean highway west of Glenwood Springs and are now engaged in rebuilding the road through the Canyon of the Grand river. Weld and Larimer counties, in northern Colorado, also have many miles of splendid road to show for the work of convicts during the last two years.

Wherever tried, the results have been satisfactory. This applies especially to the benefits derived by the convicts themselves. Under the Colorado system, the convict is allowed ten days of his sentence for each month of labor on the roads. This is in addition to the usual reduction for good behavior. Besides in Colorado, the employment of convicts on the roads has been singularly successful because the cost of building many of its mountain roads would be almost prohibitive if the state were compelled to construct them under ordinary conditions. The entire country has reaped the benefits of Colorado's pioneering because it has been able to open to travelers from all sections of the country some of its most splendid mountain scenery; it has furthermore set the example for many of the other states to the adoption

SOUP KITCHENS IN BELGIUM

How the Gigantic Work of Relieving a Starving Nation Is Being Conducted.

The soup kitchen organized in Brussels by the American commission for relief is now distributed the largest in the world. Nearly fifty thousand people receive destitute daily, and the "bread lines" every day, and over six thousand gallons of soup and four thousand kilograms of bread are daily distributed to them.

"Within the bread lines I have seen in America," says a report from one of the representatives in Brussels, "these are all people of one nationality and all with a common and undeserved misfortune. They are of all classes, but we know none of them save by number, became no matter what their station or the extent of their misfortunes they still have honour enough, and many of them, if they were compelled to write their names on coupons when they got the soup, would rather starve than take it. None of them think that they will always have to be in the bread lines and every one of them feels that when it is all over they will want to forget that they have been destitute.

"The soup for these pitiful flotsam and jetsam of war is all prepared in the large storerooms of the International Express Company. Van Gand. More than one hundred people are engaged in this work. Among them are former chefs of some of the leading hotels of Brussels who are particular as to the kind and quality of the soup, its ingredients and their flavor. Under them are those who clean the vegetables, cut them, cook, peel, core and prepare the meat. This entire staff is composed of volunteers, except the chefs, who receive a salary most half a dollar a day.

"Then, before 6 o'clock in the morning, when the cooking of the first 5,000 gallons of soup is started, there begins the drudgerie storehouse of the express company is one of tremendous activity with the morning faerie earth the hundred white-clad chefs, the dressmakers and the pharmacist and chaudrons—all dingly seen through the silvery clouds of pungent steam rising from the boiling soup.

"When the soup is cooked it is sent, under the seals of the commission and under the protection of the American flag, in large cerrin to the several bread rantcens scattered all over Brussels. These canteens were formerly schools, dance halls, "music halls," etc. During the morning, wherever one goes, women and children may be seen coming and going with pitchers of steam, the sweet and bitter rations of bread under their arms."

Mournful Industry.

One French industry that has grown apace since the beginning of the war is the making of those funeral wreaths with which the sacrifices to Freedom are being so primly decorated. Many a soldier's grave is marked today only by a cross and a dreary little trophy waving gloriously in the transient sun. And there is big demand among those who may bring their lost ones nearer home to rest in the cemeteries of their native villages. The shop windows are filled with these funeral wreaths, and the sales coffers will be instantly fulfilled at the workshops.

One imagines that the very frenzy work must keep a large number of girls employed, for all those elaborately twisted designs of flowers and foliage cannot be the labor of a moment and these and enormous quantities must be used for every wreath. The designs do not seem to have varied. The favorite is still the wreath of heartsease worked out in neutral chely livid shades of purple, blue and yellow, but the words in the running scrip across the design are "Mon pour la Patrie."

Real Possum Hollow Discovered.

That Possum Hollow is an actual place, and not a handy name for destitute is proved by the Putnam County (Tennessee) Herald. Correspondence The staff correspondent at Possum Hollow writes that Justice of the Peace Wallace Hill slater: James Kenney and his wife, Lucinda Kenney and wife, Ed Kenney and others cut and hauled their uncle, James Kenney, a tree lot or coffin. Rev. Jesse Thomas conducted the funeral. Mrs. Kenney took for the men who cut and hauled wood for Mr. and Mrs. James Kenney. Will Bussmeh and family moved to the place Will rented from James Kenney. Mortimer Hill and his sister Ruth called on Jesse Kenney and wife. It is to be taken for granted that James Kenney is the most popular citizen of Possum Hollow.

Home for Girls.

Vaick house is a society building in New York which has been revised for the benefit of the factory girls, where they may obtain room and board for prime singing from $4 to $6.75 a week. There is a sewing room with machines with electrical connection, where the girls may make their own dresses. The rooms are all clean, with the exception of one on each floor, and each contains an easy chair. Wednesday is the day of the easy chair. Any working girl may become a resident. Miss Elizabeth Shearer, President Bryn Mawr graduate, is in charge.

Might Help Some.

"I am willing to let a woman what her ability entitles her to, but I don't think a woman should get a man's job.

"I wish you would say that to my wife."

Ancient Writing Implements.

When writing, Confucius used a small brush, like a camel's-hair brush, a piece of wood, and ink made centuries before his time. The reed came into use for writing in the marshy countries of the Orient. It was hollow and cut to short lengths.

Our Work.

It's as simple as the rule of three if we make light of our work by using it for other our own. Work to make light of us, and as we are the weaker, we shall suffer.—Ruskin.

PUT WARFARE ON NEW BASIS

Use of Field Artillery at Crecy Marked the Doom of the Mail-Clad Knights.

Of all the world's great battles Crecy possesses a unique interest. The English used only three pieces of field ordnance. They were small cannon made of trees, bored, and bound with iron hoops, and the missiles were of stone, scarcely larger than bean balls. Doubtless this rude artillery made far more noise than it effected damage. It was the longbow and the broadsword that won the battle but nevertheless gunpowder was henceforth to play an ever-increasing part in the strife of nations.

Explosives wrought a vast change in fighting methods on land, for many of the old-time weapons were rendered quite useless in face of death-dealing ball and shot. Warfare also, too, would be revolutionized. Hitherto the fighting ships had been largely carriers of soldiers in order to board and fight, as on land, whereas the time was at hand when ships could be filled with cannon-balls without the crews coming into actual contact.

DRINK LOTS OF WATER TO FLUSH THE KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat and Take Salts for Backache or Bladder Trouble—Neutralize Acids.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy, the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's noxious waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache and headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel miserable twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to people who are trying to overcome kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

A Leading Question.

In the blue days between Christmas and New Year's, when a printing order would have cannoned the doctor to start an inquest to determine the number of Christmas cards, the printer sat in the corridor, says Associated Advertising.

"Just transacted some business?" quoth one.

"Naw!" said the other, in a tone to tease a further response.

"Yes, I did—I just mailed a letter," said the first.

To which the other responded, breathlessly, "Tip me off—where'd you get the two cents?"

Gave Himself Away.

The general was distributing medals for special valor. Summoning Private Dumptious to step forward, much to the general's surprise the latter rattled, he thundered out:

"Men, look upon this hero, and imitate his bravery! All through the long night he stood firm at his sentinel's post, although completely surrounded by the enemy, and there he remained captive."

Private Dumptious turned deadly pale. But before he fell in a faint to the ground, he gasped out:

"Then they were enemies! I thought they were our own troops."

The man who is away from home most of the time dodges a lot of domestic trouble.

It is far better for a man to talk through his hat than through his hat.

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a liver that's clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

WORTHY A PLACE IN HISTORY

Cadets of Chapultepec Made for Themselves a Second Wish Will Long Endure.

The defense of Chapultepec during the war between the United States and Mexico in 1847, was almost as gallant as was the attack. In this battle, fought in Mexican soil, among others, lost their lives. The story is a stirring one.

For some years the celebrated Castle of Chapultepec, where Montezuma, last of the Aztec kings, in the surrounding groves of cypress, being, during nearly three centuries lived successive viceroys of Spain, and where Maximilian made his imperial nest has been the West Point of Mexico.

When General Scott had taken the place by storm and General Bravo had surrendered, a Mexican cadet, more than one old, seeing the flag of his country in peril, most of his comrades being already slain, climbed the flagstaff, tore the banner from its place, wound it around his body and slid down, intending to plunge over the precipice, in order to save the colors from falling into the hands of the enemy.

The act of heroism being frustrated, the brave boy, with the banner still wrapped about him, fought until he was cut in pieces. Forty-eight of these schoolboys, ranging from fourteen to twenty years, lie buried in one grave at the foot of the hill. Year after year the cadets of Chapultepec strew flowers upon the grave.—Lewiston Journal.

Remembered Old Formula.

The late Mayor Gaynor of New York related a little anecdote while in hospital after an anarchist attempt upon his life. "I knew a man over my way," he said with a smile, "who had formerly been a bartender. Going into politics, he was elected police judge. Mary McManus was up before him for drunkenness. The ex-bartender looked at her for a moment and then said sternly:

"Well, what are you here for?"

"If yer please, yer honor, the copper buzzed pulled me in, sayin' I was drunk. An' I don't know, honor; I don't drink.

"All right," said the justice absentmindedly, "all right; have a clear."

Just What He Needed.

The physician pondered the case for a few minutes before he ventured an opinion.

"I think your husband needs a rest more than anything else," he said at last. "If you could do something to make him a Doctor Carter looked down at the little boy; then he removed him from his knee.

"Come along, Harold," he said, putting on his hat and going into the garage, where his little grandson possible stood waiting in readiness by algin and the doctor Carter never know when he would be summoned.

"What is the matter with your father?" he inquired, as he drove the machine through the suburban streets. It was five in the afternoon, and he made a detour to avoid the shopping district, lest his little companion be jostled.

occurred to him that he had always pictured to himself. And little Harold, though he knew nothing of anything but boyish kindness, was creeping into his daily more and more until it seemed impossible that he could ever let him go.

And, despite his years of practice, the doctor was unable to diagnose his patient's illness until the famous physician for whom he had gone to New York came down and saw him.

It was a very rare disease, hardly known in America, and, until recently, incurable. There was a remedy now; it consisted in an extremely difficult operation. Only five cases were on record where the operation had been performed; three had died, two had recovered completely.

Mildred, standing dry-eyed beside the famous physician, listened to his explanation. Doctor Carter turned to her.

"My dear," he said softly—he had never called her that before—"the doctor says there is one chance.

"Operate," said Mildred firmly.

And as the parlor in Fifth Avenue was filled with the fumes of the anesthetic, Doctor Carter could not bring himself at the last moment to assist. He had sent instead for an anesthetist from the city hospital.

Little Harold, dimly conscious that something was going on, was at first in his mother, whimpering, in the doctor's office. Doctor Carter passed to and fro distractedly. An hour had passed since the operation began, and still the boy was filled with the same nauseating fumes. At last he entered his room, to find the famous physician looked at him and shook his head.

Doctor Carter, very grave, very white, went slowly downstairs and had himself in a little room. He knew what that look meant, he who had seen it so often in the hospitals. His son's chances of recovery were hopeless. In that moment the remnants of his pride of place were like a tattered garment. He went out into the office again.

"Mildred," he said. "If Harold lives I ought to be there to care for him. I want you all to be my children. I want my son to-to forgive."

Nobody saw the effort it cost him to utter that last word. Mildred looked at him, puzzled, as he did not understand the meaning of his words.

Suddenly there was a fresh drift of fumes from the room and he heard the anesthetist's voice—the voice of a man who knew what he was about—ascending the stairs. With one arm supporting Mildred he braced himself to hear the news he feared.

"The doctor came up to him. "Well, Carter, it was touch and go more than once—but he will live now," he said.

"Live!" he was instant the old man had caught up little Harold upon his shoulder. And, as the child crowned joyfully, "Hurrah! Hurrah!" the happiness he heard that he too, was just beginning to live.

The Insignificant Auto.

The great war has been demonstrating the heavy value of the automobile in carrying its military importance. It has been of vast and indispensable use in all the armies of the transport of supplies and the mobilizing and shifting of troops on the scale and with the rapidity which distinguish this war from all others. But for Paris' great supply of the machines the army for the defense of that city could never have been marshaled, says the New Orleans Times-Picayune. It was at the moment to strike Von Kluck on the flank with fresh troops that the transportation of some photograph that she had seemed to strike her.

"I am Doctor Carter madam," said the old man gravely. "And you are, I presume, my daughter-in-law."

It was a beautiful face that looked into his, the eyes swam with tears and the voice was trembling. "Oh, sir, I do hope you don't think I sent—sent Harold—" she began.

"To see me? No, I haven't dared to hope that. I understand the doctor. I have simply come to see a patient."

Silently the girl opened the house door and the doctor ascended the stairs until he came to the room in which his son was lying, racked with fever and delirious, upon a bed.

"He must be moved at once," said the doctor. "I am going to take him away to the hospital in my automobile."

It was all he could never himself to do it after the words, for a son, even though lost for years, is still a son—at least, to most of us.

Wrapped in rugs the patient was transferred to the automobile, which made its way at a slow pace into the suburban district where the doctor lived.

The story that Mildred told was a painful one. For years her husband had been wrong for the company; he had started at the bottom and was just getting a fair salary when he was attacked by a mysterious disease. After a month's absence he had lost his position; that was two months ago, and the disease, which no doctor could diagnose, had made inroads upon his system until his life seemed about ended.

"But this isn't the way to the hospital!" she exclaimed, as the machine turned into a pretty lane and stopped before a comfortable-looking house.

"It is my house—my private hospital," answered the doctor.

And half an hour later Harold was comfortable in bed and fearly conscious.

He looked up and recognized the face of his father. Now, according to all rules of literature, father and son should fall into each other's arms. But, oddly enough, the moment his son recognized him the doctor felt the old pride in his tongue and restrained the impulse that were so anxious to enfold the young man's.

"You told me never to let you see my face again," said Harold weakly, "and I tried to keep my promise."

"You are here as a patient, Mr. Carter," answered the doctor. "You owe no gratitude; it is my duty to beat with all the means in my power."

The young man averted his face. He too, had pride.

Nevertheless, in the days that followed, the doctor found it difficult to conceal the love that came into his heart. Harold was just the little daughter-in-law that he had always

"I Tried to Keep My Promise."

tor's knee. "You see, I always wanted a granfather," he continued, "and mother said he mightn't know's when Doctor Carter lived, only she wouldn't let me come till fishin' was sick, and then I—I runned away. And please come! quick, because father's mighty sick," he added, with the child's understood the meaning of his words.

Suddenly there was a fresh drift of fumes from the room and he heard the anesthetist's voice—the voice of a man who knew what he was about—ascending the stairs. With one arm supporting Mildred he braced himself to hear the news he feared.

"The doctor came up to him. "Well, Carter, it was touch and go more than once—but he will live now," he said.

"Live!" he was instant the old man had caught up little Harold upon his shoulder. And, as the child crowned joyfully, "Hurrah! Hurrah!" the happiness he heard that he too, was just beginning to live.

The Insignificant Auto.

The great war has been demonstrating the heavy value of the automobile in carrying its military importance. It has been of vast and indispensable use in all the armies of the transport of supplies and the mobilizing and shifting of troops on the scale and with the rapidity which distinguish this war from all others, but for Paris' great supply of the machines the army for the defense of that city could never have been marshaled, says the New Orleans Times-Picayune. It was at the moment to strike Von Kluck on the flank with fresh troops that the transportation of some photograph that she had seemed to strike her.

"I am Doctor Carter madam," said the old man gravely. "And you are, I presume, my daughter-in-law."

It was a beautiful face that looked into his, the eyes swam with tears and the voice was trembling. "Oh, sir, I do hope you don't think I sent—sent Harold—" she began.

"To see me? No, I haven't dared to hope that. I understand the doctor. I have simply come to see a patient."

Silently the girl opened the house door and the doctor ascended the stairs until he came to the room in which his son was lying, racked with fever and delirious, upon a bed.

"He must be moved at once," said the doctor. "I am going to take him away to the hospital in my automobile."

It was all he could never himself to

Grape-Nuts

FOOD

is not only easy of digestion (digests in about one hour), but it aids in the assimilation of other foods. Made of whole wheat and malted barley, the malting of the barley awakens the digestive ferment, diastase, one of the essentials in the assimilation of all food.

Grape-Nuts comes ready to eat from the package with cream or milk; delicious, economical, and a powerful energizer for folks who "do things."

"There's a Reason"

—sold by Grocers everywhere.

LONESOME IN GREAT CITY

Stranger Visiting New York is Said to Feel His Isolation From Fellow Mortals.

New York is the loneliest city in the world for a stranger when alone. Visitors have repeatedly said this but it bears to Caroline Lockhart, a cowboy, from the boundless West, to second the motion. She says the big city is a lone place in the sagebrush states. "I thought a prairie wolf sitting on the ridge howling at the moon made the lonesomest sound on earth," she said today, "unless it was that of a pack of young coyotes yapping in the willows before a storm; but these sounds are ragtime compared to the roar of New York when you are listening to it alone. And standing in the middle of a big city, surrounded by people going to the theater or out to dine is about as cheerful as sitting on the edge of a lonesome grave somewhere out in the sagebrush thinking of the mistake you've made. When one leaves the hotel it dawns gradually that this city isn't all peacock alley and there are minor notes in the "hoopla of joy. But the loneliness of New York even under comparatively favorable circumstances—when I often thought that living in a house or holding down 160 acres would be lonesome, I cannot believe it is worse than a New York tenement, for lightsome happiness, for the homesteader are, at least, a whole hour—Buffalo Evening Times.

Do You Face the Day's Work With Vim and Energy?

Morning is the time when workers need food that will not overload the stomach, but give strength and mental vigor for the day.

Much depends on the start. For one can't be keen and alert on a heavy, indigestible breakfast.

Can You Beat It?

She—Oh, Jack, do excuse me for setting here so late. You poor fellow, you've had to wait an hour for me.

He—Oh, no. It's all right. I've only just come.

She—What! So that's the way you treat me. It is 10 o'clock and the time across your face mars me wait a whole hour.—Buffalo Evening Times.

The Doctor's Patient

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

When Aunt Sally, the black servant, admitted a tiny boy into Doctor Carter's office, the old physician at first saw nobody. Then, looking down, he saw the dark hair and sunny eyes of his own wayward boy, Harold, as he had been at six, and as he always would be in his memory. For of Harold Carter at twenty he never consented to think.

"Hello! What's your name, sonny?" he asked.

"Harold, please, grandfather!"

"What!" cried the doctor, jumping out of his chair.

He had declined his son for his own profession, but folly had succeeded folly, and at last there had been a scene at the end of which the doctor ordered his son from his presence, never to enter it again. Harold had complied—for years ago.

Perhaps if his wife had been living she o'r made hers would have yielded to the end. Indeed, it had softened, and often and often he had deplored the loss of his only child. But his professional cares absorbed all his time and left him little for sentiment. He was the best loved doctor in a southern city, and its most sought after.

Now and again, at intervals of years, he had had news of Harold. He knew that, after twenty years, the boy had returned to dwell in an obscure part of the same town. He had heard that he had a position with a manufacturing company and was winning for the widness of his early years. But the old man was too proud to seek him, and his son was a replica of his father.

Now he looked down with an emotion which left him speechless at the little boy who claimed his name and grandfatherhood. The child was about six years old, seeing the flag of his country in peril, most of his comrades being already slain, climbed the flagstaff, tore the banner from its place, wound it around his body and slid down, intending to plunge over the precipice, in order to save the colors from falling into the hands of the enemy.

The act of heroism being frustrated, the brave boy, with the banner still wrapped about him, fought until he was cut in pieces. Forty-eight of these schoolboys, ranging from fourteen to twenty years, lie buried in one grave at the foot of the hill. Year after year the cadets of Chapultepec strew flowers upon the grave.—Lewiston Journal.

Remembered Old Formula.

The late Mayor Gaynor of New York related a little anecdote while in hospital after an anarchist attempt upon his life. "I knew a man over my way," he said with a smile, "who had formerly been a bartender. Going into politics, he was elected police judge. Mary McManus was up before him for drunkenness. The ex-bartender looked at her for a moment and then said sternly:

"Well, what are you here for?"

"If yer please, yer honor, the copper buzzed pulled me in, sayin' I was drunk. An' I don't know, honor; I don't drink.

"All right," said the justice absentmindedly, "all right; have a clear."

Just What He Needed.

The physician pondered the case for a few minutes before he ventured an opinion.

"I think your husband needs a rest more than anything else," he said at last. "If you could do something to make him a Doctor Carter looked down at the little boy; then he removed him from his knee.

"Come along, Harold," he said, putting on his hat and going into the garage, where his little grandson possible stood waiting in readiness by algin and the doctor Carter never know when he would be summoned.

"What is the matter with your father?" he inquired, as he drove the machine through the suburban streets. It was five in the afternoon, and he made a detour to avoid the shopping district, lest his little companion be jostled.

occurred to him that he had always pictured to himself. And little Harold, though he knew nothing of anything but boyish kindness, was creeping into his daily more and more until it seemed impossible that he could ever let him go.

And, despite his years of practice, the doctor was unable to diagnose his patient's illness until the famous physician for whom he had gone to New York came down and saw him.

It was a very rare disease, hardly known in America, and, until recently, incurable. There was a remedy now; it consisted in an extremely difficult operation. Only five cases were on record where the operation had been performed; three had died, two had recovered completely.

Mildred, standing dry-eyed beside the famous physician, listened to his explanation. Doctor Carter turned to her.

"My dear," he said softly—he had never called her that before—"the doctor says there is one chance.

"Operate," said Mildred firmly.

And as the parlor in Fifth Avenue was filled with the fumes of the anesthetic, Doctor Carter could not bring himself at the last moment to assist. He had sent instead for an anesthetist from the city hospital.

Little Harold, dimly conscious that something was going on, was at first in his mother, whimpering, in the doctor's office. Doctor Carter passed to and fro distractedly. An hour had passed since the operation began, and still the boy was filled with the same nauseating fumes. At last he entered his room, to find the famous physician looked at him and shook his head.

Doctor Carter, very grave, very white, went slowly downstairs and had himself in a little room. He knew what that look meant, he who had seen it so often in the hospitals. His son's chances of recovery were hopeless. In that moment the remnants of his pride of place were like a tattered garment. He went out into the office again.

"Mildred," he said. "If Harold lives I ought to be there to care for him. I want you all to be my children. I want my son to-to forgive."

Nobody saw the effort it cost him to utter that last word. Mildred looked at him, puzzled, as he did not understand the meaning of his words.

Suddenly there was a fresh drift of fumes from the room and he heard the anesthetist's voice—the voice of a man who knew what he was about—ascending the stairs. With one arm supporting Mildred he braced himself to hear the news he feared.

"The doctor came up to him. "Well, Carter, it was touch and go more than once—but he will live now," he said.

"Live!" he was instant the old man had caught up little Harold upon his shoulder. And, as the child crowned joyfully, "Hurrah! Hurrah!" the happiness he heard that he too, was just beginning to live.

The Insignificant Auto.

The great war has been demonstrating the heavy value of the automobile in carrying its military importance. It has been of vast and indispensable use in all the armies of the transport of supplies and the mobilizing and shifting of troops on the scale and with the rapidity which distinguish this war from all others, but for Paris' great supply of the machines the army for the defense of that city could never have been marshaled, says the New Orleans Times-Picayune. It was at the moment to strike Von Kluck on the flank with fresh troops that the transportation of some photograph that she had seemed to strike her.

"I am Doctor Carter madam," said the old man gravely. "And you are, I presume, my daughter-in-law."

It was a beautiful face that looked into his, the eyes swam with tears and the voice was trembling. "Oh, sir, I do hope you don't think I sent—sent Harold—" she began.

"To see me? No, I haven't dared to hope that. I understand the doctor. I have simply come to see a patient."

Silently the girl opened the house door and the doctor ascended the stairs until he came to the room in which his son was lying, racked with fever and delirious, upon a bed.

"He must be moved at once," said the doctor. "I am going to take him away to the hospital in my automobile."

It was all he could never himself to

Afternoon Gown of Blue Taffeta

RATHER difficult to picture in this pretty gown for afternoon wear, which is cut on distinctly original lines. It is for the young and slender wearer, and flows about her figure in loose-hanging and fan-shaping folds.

It is in a bright blue, something deeper than turquoise, and is made in two pieces. There is a short underskirt, only moderately wide, which is to be fairly full at the bottom and is ankle length. A full, flaring tunic is attached to a short jacket, together they achieve a coat effect in which the waist line is entirely neglected. The bodice fastens at one side with round covered buttons made of the taffeta.

There is a moderately high rolling collar of the silk, with a collar of dainty hemstitched batiste overlaid at the back. The silk cuffs are almost covered with hemstitched cuffs of batiste.

Although the skirt and overgarment are two distinctly separate pieces they are both attached to the same plain underbodice so that the dress is put on all together. The neck is finished with a covered silk cord terminating in small silk-covered balls.

One of the larger hats with wide, flat, transparent brims and flower trimmed, would be a better choice in millinery to be worn with this afternoon gown, than the small tailored toques shown in the picture. This is a season of beautiful colors in flower and fruit-trimmed hats to correspond with the daintiness and sprightliness of taffeta gowns, or those of colored net or the lingerie gowns of midsummer. Plain or a minor or severe hats do not fit in with the softness of things, except when the gown is tailored, and it is this sensitalized gown which is holding the close attention just now, of those who have learned to be discriminating.

Japanese Parasols.

From present indications the flat Japanese types of parasols will play an unusually strong part in this season's parasol demand. Many more of the graceful curves are being offered. Some of the richest have dark borders, with here and there a delicate bit of handembroidery in gold. Again, odd-looking velvet birds are applqued over the inside surface of the parasol. This feat is effective when developed in orange and blue tones, says Dry Goods Economist. Handles are extremely long and in most instances harmonize in color and design with the ferrule end.

Fanciful Names.

Some of the new silk novelties resemble charmeuse and have fanciful names. These were all made in America. There is a very attractive sand-colored shade that is named "Palm Beach sand;" others are "Delaware peach," "Arizona silver," a lovely shade of gray; "Oregon green," an olive shade; "Rocky mountain blue," "Spanish tan," "Gettysburg gray," and "Piping rock," a very delicate gray.

Collars and Combs and Other Accessories

HERE is a collar, made of sheer batiste and a very narrow fancy ribbon. It is intended for those women who appreciate the value of such dainty and easily made accessories. Aside from their becomingness they protect the bodice at the neck, and they use next to nothing. This one is merely a graduated flounce of the batiste, to which three rows of braid have been stitched, mounted to a straight band. This band is basted into the neck of the bodice.

At the front the collar is curved to the band without fullness, but it is gathered at the sides and back and stayed with wires. The wires are almost entirely concealed by the gathering of the batiste.

Colors of the sheerest laces are made in the same way. They are somewhat narrower and are gathered along their entire length into a narrow band. The ribbon is then tied about them in the right pose about the neck.

One of those long shoul combs, brightened with rhinestones set in rows that follow and outline the pattern, is shown in the picture. These are very popular (than in the fashions at any rate) for adding a little color to the weather.

A variety of narrow ribbon set with jet ornaments is another little accessory that gives finish to the plain set of collars. Fancy grosgrain or velvet ribbons are used for these ties, and they are fastened with gun metal or jet ornaments, in lieu of a bow.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Spa's Vault.

The body of Pope Pius X, who died last summer, has been placed in the crypt beneath St. Peter's, in Rome, one of the most celebrated burial vaults in the world.

A portion of the crypt was in existence long before the erection of the present cathedral, having formed part of an ancient church. The floorings in the passages, some of which are little more than six feet in height, has been worn by the feet of thousands of persons who yearly visit the place.

THE SANDMAN IN STORY

By ALICE F. A. WALKER

THE SQUIRREL FAMILY.

One day a father squirrel said to his wife:

"My dear, I have found the nicest place you ever saw for our home this winter. Take the children and follow me and I will show you where it is."

There were three little squirrels, and they ran along the limb of the tree after their father and mother to the top of a house over which the tree hung.

"Do you see that hole?" said the father. "That is where our home is to be—in the roof of the house. It will be nice and warm. And we can find again scattering nuts for the winter."

In the house the squirrels had selected for their home lived three children—Jack, Dick and Helen—and one day when it was snowing very fast and they could not go out they went to their playroom at the top of the house. There was a rocking horse which looked like a truly horse, and a big jumping jack from the Swiss. There were roller skates and a croquet set on a table and all sorts of things for children to play with. Now the squirrel family had made an opening in this room and the little squirrels—Chick, Gray and Flash—had often wondered about all the strange things they saw there. Today, when they heard voices, Flash darted to the opening and looked down into the room. Gray and Chick followed, and they were so inquisitive and eager to see that they pushed poor Flash out of the hole, and down he went into the room.

"Oh! here is a squirrel," said Dick, jumping up. "Let us get the cats out of the attic and have a hunt. Cats! you get some cats," they told Helen. As soon as the children were out of sight, Flash ran up the brick chimney which was built in the room, and back into the hole, where Gray and Chick sat troubling with their father and mother, who were scolding them. When the children returned they looked everywhere for the squirrel. "He must have run up the chimney through the fireplace," they said. "and we will leave the cage here and put nuts in it."

"He will come for the nuts, I am sure," said Dick.

That night when everybody was in bed and father and mother squirrel were dreaming of forests filled with nuts, Flash awakened Chick and Gray and told them to follow him. "We have some fun," he told them, as they ran down the chimney to the playground.

"I saw Dick on this horse," said Gray. "I should like to ride horseback."

"But I can't make it rock," he said. "You get on one end of the rocker, Flash and Chick on the other." "Oh! you are having all the fun," they told him as they ran to the end of the rocking chair.

"Oh! you pig," they called to him. "Don't eat all the nuts," but Gray had eaten every one.

"You are a selfish fellow," they told him. "We work, too, and you play alone with us." "I don't want to," replied Gray. "I rather stay." So he ran and jumped in one of the roller skates, which said with him across the floor. Flash and Chick ran over to the swing, and up and down the ropes they went until it began to swing. They sat on the seat and called to Gray, but he was having too good time to come.

"He is having more fun than we are," said Chick. There are more skates for us to skate. In a few minutes all three were rolling in all directions and making such noise that they awakened their father and mother, and they looked out of the hole. Mother squirrel almost fell down when she saw her children rolling over the floor on the skates.

"What are you doing?" called the father. "Come back to your nest at once." They did not dare disobey their father, so they went very slowly back to their beds and were soon sleeping soundly.

The next morning when the children came to the playroom, they looked with surprise at the skates which were scattered over the floor. "And look," said Helen, "the nuts are gone. The squirrel came back and ran all over this room."

"Nobody ever has been allowed to see us," said Jack. "we would have caught him."

BUILDING ROADS by CONVICT LABOR

IN UTE PASS, NEAR PUEBLO, COLO.

Officials and people advocates are giving increasing attention to the question of the employment of convicts in road building. Throughout the country many good road associations are adopting resolutions for the adoption of the convict labor system. Good roads organizations are discussing the question and discussions are being arranged for the plan, and many are studying the system as applied in other states.

Colorado has been using convict labor for the last seven years. So successful has it proved in this state that others have modified their laws and plan of operation after those of Colorado and the governors during their annual conferences at Colorado Springs last August spent much time in studying at first hand the wonderful highways that Colorado has built by convict labor. Twenty-four governors made up a party for a trip of inspection over the Colorado Springs-Canon City highway and the Pikes Peak Ocean to Ocean road in Ute Pass, two of the most perfect mountain roads in the United States and two of the best examples of the results of convict labor.

The Colorado Springs-Canon City highway is one of the best examples of scientific road building in the state, perhaps the country. For a distance of twenty miles or more south of Colorado Springs the road winds around the foothills and mountains, practically the entire roadbed having been cut out of the hillside and in many places blasted out of solid rock. For the remaining twenty-five miles to Canon City the way is over foothills and through undulating country. Besides being a marvel in engineering the road is one of the best scenic and picturesque in the West, passing as it does through Red Rock Canyon, Dead Man's Canyon and many other mountain beauty spots. It culminates in the fortunate ability to the top of the Royal Gorge and the unique and spectacular Sky Line drive, at Canon City.

The road averages eighteen feet in width and is perfectly crowned and drained. Although it offers a succession of climbs an skillfully was the engineering work done that heavy grades have been eliminated and the motorist is confronted with only one grade as high as six per cent.

Ute Pass is one of the historic gateways of the mountain country and down its mile centuries before Columbus discovered America, the Utes, Indians had worn, with soft moccasined tread, a plainly distinguishable trail. In building the Royal Gorge the range to freight supplies to Leadville, Aspen and other mining camps, and while man followed the trail of the Indian. A few years ago the state portion of this road between Manitou and Canada was entirely rebuilt by convict labor. It has been pronounced a most complete piece of road building. It has a wide, well crowned roadbed surfaced with disintegrated granite from the mountain sides. Grades have been reduced and although the road overcomes an elevation of 1,135 feet in a distance of five miles the climb is gradual and is easily negotiated. It is over the Ute Pass road that the Pikes Peak Ocean to Ocean highway enters the mountains after striking straight across the plains of central Colorado to Colorado Springs and Manitou. There it continues westward through South Park over Tennessee Pass down the valleys of the Eagle and the Grand rivers to Grand Junction and the Utah line.

Pueblo county also has employed convicts to advantage, and a notable piece of road is the stretch of 18 miles of Pueblo county road to Colorado Springs. Garfield county, on the western slope, last year engaged 60 convicts for a period of four years, and they have just completed work on the Pikes Peak Ocean to Ocean highway west of Glenwood Springs and are now engaged in rebuilding the road through the Canyon of the Grand river. Weld and Larimer counties in northern Colorado also have many miles of splendid road to show for the work of convicts during the last two years.

Wherever tried the results have been satisfactory. This applies especially to the benefits derived by the convicts themselves. Under the Colorado system, the convict is allowed ten days of his sentence for each month of labor on the roads. This is in addition to the usual reduction for good behavior. Besides in Colorado, the employment of convicts on the roads has been singularly successful because the cost of building many of the mountain roads would be almost prohibitive if the state were compelled to construct them under ordinary conditions. The entire country has reaped the benefits of Colorado's pioneering because it has been able to open to travelers from all sections of the country some of its most splendid mountain scenery. It has furthermore set the example for many of the other states in the adoption of some system for the employment of convicts on roads and country roads.

In speaking of what can be accomplished in the way of road building by the use of convict labor, Thomas J. Tynan, warden of the state penitentiary under whose supervision the work the last three years has been done, recently said:

"The benefits in this or any other state from a broad and scientific system of convict road building can scarcely be estimated. Basing our figures on actual experience we are confident that we can construct in the next ten years more than five thousand miles of the very finest roadways for less than $50,000 and that without adding any thing whatever to the burden of the taxpayers.

"During the period of ten years the internal revenue fund of Colorado should amount to $2,000,000. After deducting $500,000 for road construction, the remaining amount should be wisely expended in bridge building, road repairing and for similar uses. Add to this the financial assistance from the different counties, and it would enable us to construct not less than 10,000 miles. It can be done in Colorado. Why should not the same difficulties apply to other states under more favorable conditions? Our roads are naturally better and where cost of construction would not necessarily be as high as in our mountainous sections."

To illustrate better the great saving to the taxpayers on this class of work and its possibilities, let me quote a few figures from one of our road camps. During one month we worked 36 men on the road, including the camp help. The number of days employed was 24½. Each of these men rendered to the state, labor equivalent in value to $1 and $1 a day. The labor for each man cost the state exactly 75 cents per day. Had this same class of men been employed at the regular standard of wages of say $2.00 per day per man, the cost of whose board would have been $1.625 (Each day's work thus represented a net saving of at least $1.75 per man. The total cost of all the work for the month, including salaries, care of stock, feed for teams and cost of equipment was $815.16, or 47½ cents per day per man. When these figures are considered no one can doubt for a moment the economy of building roads with convict labor. The roads are carefully and thoroughly inspected by competent engineers who testify to the completeness and high character of the work. 'What is the incentive for the men to create such great work?' is a question often asked Coloradans. It is just this: the man who is allowed to leave the prison for the road camp has practically seen the last of prison life. He conducts himself properly, his food is better, his clothing is better, his surroundings are improved and he is taught self-reliance and sustained application. He earns an additional ten days a month during the time he works, which very materially reduces his sentence. Eliminating the policy of armed guards, the men have been placed under skilled and competent overseers and guarded only by their word of honor not to run away. They remain faithful and loyal to their pledges. The success of such an honor system was unanimous; the plan has worked out better than its originators expected. During the last three years we have had more than one thousand individual prisoners in the convict camps. Three hundred and twenty-nine men have gone from the prison—have created a national reputation for loyalty. Less than one per cent have violated their pledges and made surreptitious escape. Communities no longer fear to have our convict camps established near them. We have made manhood as well as money by this healthy, hearty outdoor labor. We have built the prisoners up both physically and morally. Men discharged from our road camps do not have the prison pallor, the physical weakness and the hesitating, hang-dog appearance or the typical discharged convict. They are bronzed, sturdy and thoroughly laborers and are in demand as such. About 20 per cent of those we have sent out upon the completion of their sentence have made good. The other 20 per cent have mostly found their way back into prison elsewhere.

In his last biennial report Warden Tynan had the following to say with reference to the financial side of convict road building.

"Our largest item of labor performed by the convicts was, of course, the road work. The prisoners have been employed in the construction of roads in Mesa, Fremont, Larimer, Weld, Boulder, Jefferson, El Paso and Pueblo counties. They have built 187 miles of good roadway and a great deal of this has been blasted out of solid rock—that is Mesa county being the most difficult and heavy work ever attempted by our men.

"Going to the best of our ability we can from the various counties the cost of material, such as cement, lumber, steel, corrugated culverts, powder, tools and supplies, other than actual labor used in road and bridge building we are enabled to give you the labor cost to these different counties for the work of the men. This work has been done at an average cost to the different counties of 72 cents per day per man; and as this cost includes Sundays and holidays the cost of labor of these men to the counties for the two years, or 731 days, would be $96,715.44. We have worked from state funds on the road work for these leases cost the counties $25 per month per man, which would amount to $10,585, making a total cost to the counties for labor of $46,857. The average labor cost for the 187 miles was $250.77 per mile.

"It is hard to estimate the immense value of these roads to the counties, although the work in county alone would have cost, with free labor, not less than $75,000, per mile, and the work in Mesa had to be blasted for 75 feet in order to get a proper roadbed. In this work it was necessary to drill holes 10 feet deep and to drill three holes to obtain the required size roadbed. So you can see the magnitude of this work. The work in Pueblo county, was done through solid rock for six miles, all blasting. The work in Mesa county and Red Rock, in Fremont county and Ingree Hill, Cherokee Hill and Thompson Canon in Larimer county have been very expensive work because of the blasting. This necessarily would have been very much more expensive had it been done with free labor, and the counties would have been forced to pay big salaries for drillers, blasters, powder men, masons and cement workers. Not counting what the contractor's profits might be, and not including any skilled labor, except blacksmiths, cement workers and masons, and estimating the cost of free labor at $1 per day, eliminating Sundays and holidays, we may count 133 men working 216 days at $1 per day which would give us a labor value of $161,946. We have worked an average of twenty masons and cement workers which would have cost us the counties $4 per day, and would have amounted to $41,000. We have averaged five blacksmiths, which labor is estimated at $4 per day and this would have amounted to $12,270. Estimating the value of 35 teams at $2.50 per day for great four 610 days, it would have amounted to $32,925. At a low figure the value of the work of these men and teams would be worth to the counties $266,225. Add to this a depreciation of state equipment $2,000 and the interest on state equipment $2,000 and you can see how the state has been used in the different counties $170,355. The difference between what the free labor alone would have cost the public—namely, $266,225—and what the labor of our men actually cost them shows a labor profit of $235,470.56. However, this labor did not compete with the free labor of the state, for the reason that the counties could not otherwise have afforded to do this work."

SOUP KITCHENS IN BELGIUM

How the Gigantic Work of Relieving a Starving Nation Is Being Conducted.

The soup kitchen organized in Brussels by the American committee for relief is now undoubtedly the largest in the world. Nearly fifty thousand people ordinarily destitute will be given "bread lines" every day, and over six thousand gallons of soup and half four thousand kilograms of bread are daily distributed to them.

"Within the bread lines I have seen in America," says a report from one of the representatives in Brussels, "there are all people of one nationality and all with a common and undeserved misfortune. They are of all classes, but we know none of them save by number, because no matter what their station or the extent of their misfortune they still have honour, pride, and many of them, if they were compelled to write their names or addresses when they get the soup, would rather starve than take it. None of them think that they will always have to live in the bread lines, and every one of them feels that when he is all over they will want to forget that they have been destitute.

"The soup for these pitiful Belgian and Jetsam of war is all prepared in the large storehouses of the Interoceanic Express Company. Van Gland. More than one hundred people are engaged in this work. Among them are former chefs of some of the leading hotels of Brussels, who give direction as to the kind and quality of the soup. The ingredients are: Rice, potatoes, etc. Under them are those who clean the vegetables—carrots, cabbages, beans, etc.—and prepare the meat. This entire staff is composed of Belgians, except the chefs, who receive at the most half a dollar a day.

"Two hours before dawn in the morning, when the cooking of the first 5,000 gallons of soup is started, the lines of the circulation storehouse of the express company is one of tremendous activity—the morning figures of the hundred white-clad chefs, the fires whose cases of scores of tremendous drons—all dimly seen through the silvery glow of the sixteen arc lamps from the boiling soup.

"When the soup is cooked it is sent under the seals of the commission and under the protection of the American flag in hundreds of lorries to the twenty-four rantesens scattered all over Brussels. These canteens were formerly used as dance halls, Turkish baths, etc. During the morning, wherever one goes women and children may be seen coming and going with pitchers of steam soup, and with their rations of bread under their arms."

Mourerful Industry.

One French industry that has grown apace since the beginning of hostilities is the making of those funeral wreaths with which the cemeteries in France are always so primly decorated. Many a soldier's grave is marked today only by a cross and a deep little tricolor waving gloriously in the transient sunshine. Now there is a big demand among those who may bring their lost ones to France to place these sentimental mourning wreaths. The shop windows are filled with these

PUT WARFARE ON NEW BASIS

Use of Field Artillery at Crecy Marked the End of the Mailed Clad Fighting Man.

Of all the world's great battles Crecy possesses a unique interest. The English used only three pieces of field ordnance. They were small cannon made of iron, bound and bound with iron hoops, and the missiles were of stone, scarcely larger than baseballs. Doubtless this rude artillery made far more noise than it effected damage. It was the longbow and the broadsword that won the battle, but nevertheless gunpowder was henceforth to play an ever-increasing part in the strife of nations.

Explosives wrought a vast change in fighting methods on land, for many of the old-time weapons were rendered quite useless in face of death-dealing ball and shot. Warfare after, too, would be revolutionized. Hitherto the fighting ships had been largely carriers of soldiers in order to board and fight, as on land, whereas the time was at hand when ships could be ridded with cannon-balls without the crews coming into actual contact.

DRINK LOTS OF WATER TO FLUSH THE KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat and Take Salts for Backache or Bladder Trouble—Neutralize Acids.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked and sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush the body's urinous waste or there will be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your troubles will then get the flush. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to people who know from experience how quick kidney trouble which it only troubles. Adv.

A Leading Question.

In the blue days between Christmas and New Years, when a printing order would have been employed in the construction of a state to determine the sanitary conditions of the tenement houses in the corridor, says Associated Advertising.

"Just transported some business?" quoth one.

"Yes," said the other, in a tone to cause a further response.

"Yes, I did—I just mailed a letter," said the first.

To which the other responded, breathlessly, "Tip me off—where'd you get the two cents?"

Gave Himself Away.

The general was distributing medals for special valor. Summoning Private Dumptious to step forward, much to the general surprise of the rank, he thundered out.

"Here, look upon this hero, and imitate his bravery! All through the long fight he stood firm at his assegai's post, although completely surrounded by the enemy, and he remained calmly!"

Private Dumptious turned deadly pale. But before he fell in a faint to the ground, he gasped out.

"Then they wiped me mess! I thought they were our own troops."

The man who is away from home most of the time dodges a lot of domestic trouble.

It is far better for a man to talk through his nose than through the hat.

"CASCARETS" FOR SLUGGISH BOWELS

No sick headache, sour stomach, biliousness or constipation by morning.

Get a 10-cent-box now. Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight, and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken. Adv.

WORTHY A PLACE IN HISTORY

Cadets of Chapultepec Made for Themselves a Record Which Will Long Endure.

The defense of Chapultepec, during the war between the United States and Mexico in 1847, was classic, as gallant as was the attack. In this attack there were two cadets, among others, lost their liver. The story is a stirring one.

For many years the celebrated Castle of Chapultepec, where Montezuma held his barbaric court in the surrounding groves of cypress, where, for nearly three centuries lived the successive viceroys of Spain, and where Maximilian made his imperial home, was the West Point of Mexico.

When General Scott had taken the place by storm and General Bravo had surrendered, a Mexican cadet, only fifteen years old, seeing the flag of his country in peril, most of his comrades being already slain, climbed the flagstaff, tore the banner from its place, wound it around his body and slid down, intending to plunge over the precipice, in order to save the colors from falling into the hands of the enemy.

The act of heroism being frustrated, the brave boy, with the banner still wrapped about his fine, fought until he was cut to pieces. Forty-eight of these schoolboys, ranging from fourteen to twenty years, lie buried in one grave at the foot of the hill. Year after year the cadets of Chapultepec strew flowers upon the grave.—Lewiston Journal.

Remembered Old Formula.

The late Mayor Gaynor of New York related a little anecdote while in hospital after an anarchist's attempt upon his life. "I knew a man over my way," he said with a smile, "who had formerly been a bartender. Going into politics, he was elected police judge. Mary McManus was up before him for drunkenness. The ex-bartender looked at her for a moment and then said sternly:

"Well, what are you here for?"

"If yer please, yer honor, the copper beyant pulled me in, sayin' I was drunk. An' I don't drink, yer honor! I don't drink."

"All right," said the justice absentmindedly, "all right; have a cigar."

Just What He Needed.

The physician pondered the case for a few minutes before he ventured an opinion.

"I think your husband needs a rest more than anything else," he said at last. "If you could be convinced—

"But he absolutely refuses to listen to me, doctor."

"Well," returned the physician, thoughtfully, "that's the step in right direction."

"There Ain't No Sich Animile."

"Why won't you engage her as cook?"

"She signed her letter of application, 'Your obedient servant.'"

Do You Face the Day's Work With Vim and Energy?

Morning is the time when workers need food that will not overload the stomach, but give strength and mental vigor for the day.

Much depends on the start. For one can't be keen and alert on a heavy, indigestible breakfast.

Grape-Nuts

FOOD

is not only easy of digestion (digests in about one hour), but it aids in the assimilation of other foods. Made of whole wheat and malted barley, the malting of the barley awakens the digestive ferment, diastase, one of the essentials in the assimilation of all food.

Grape-Nuts comes ready to eat from the package with cream or milk; delicious, economical, and a powerful energizer for folks who "do things."

"There's a Reason"

—sold by Grocers everywhere.

LONESOME IN GREAT CITY

Stranger Visiting New York Is Said to Feel His Isolation From Fellow Mortals.

New York is the lonesomest city in the world for a stranger when alone. Visitors have repeatedly said this, but here is Gaston Leroux, supposed to be from the boundless West, to second the motion. He says the big city is far lonelier than the sagebrush plains. "I thought a prairie wolf sitting on the ridge howling at the moon made the lonesomest sound on earth," he said today, "unless it was that of a pack of young coyotes yapping in the willows before a storm. But these sounds are ragtimes compared to the New York noise, which you are lucky to be alone in. I was standing in the window of the hotel watching the world going to the Lexington Ave. car out to dine is about as cheerful as sitting on a horse thief's grave somewhere out on the sagebrush thinking of the mistakes you've made. When one leaves the hotel it dawns gradually that this city isn't all Peacock alley and that there are minor notes in the whoopla of life. But the loneliness of New York even under comparatively favorable circumstances—when I have a friend that bring it to a house or holding down 160 acres waiting for a railroad to come almost near your corn.

She—What! So that's the way you treat me, is it? If I'd come at the time agreed you'd have spoiled the joke and the horsestealers are at least a whole hour—Boston Evening Transcript.

Can You Beat It?

She—Oh, Jack, do excuse me for getting here so late. You poor fellow, you've had to wait an hour for me.

He—Oh, no, it's all right. I've only been here.

Our Work.

It's as simple as the rule of three. If we make light of our work by using it for our own ends, our work will make light of us, and we become the weaker, we shall suffer.—Kipling.

The Doctor's Patient

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

When Aunt Sally, the black servant, admitted a tiny boy into Doctor Carter's office, the old physician at first saw nobody. Then, looking down, he saw the dark hair and sunny eyes of his own wayward boy, Harold, as he had been at six, and as he always would be in his memory. For of Harold Carter at twenty he never consented to think.

"Hello! What's your name, sonny?" he asked.

"Harold, please, grandfather!"

"What?" cried the doctor, jumping out of his chair.

He had destined his son for his own profession, but fully had succeeded folly, and at last there had been a scene at the end of which the doctor ordered his son from his presence, never to enter it again. Harold had complied—twelve years ago.

Perhaps if his wife had been living the old man's heart would have yielded to the appeal. Indeed, it had softened, and often and often he had deplored the loss of his only child. But his professional career absorbed all his time and left little for sentiment. He was the best loved doctor in a southern city, and the most sought after.

Now and again, at intervals of years, he had heard of Harold. He knew that, after roaming in the West, he had returned to dwell in an obscure part of the whole town. He had heard that he had a position with a manufacturing company and was thinking for the wildness of his early years. But the old man was too proud to seek him and his son was a replica of his father.

Now he looked down with an emotion which left him speechless at the little boy who defied his name and approaching, slipped his hand confidingly into his.

"Well, who sent you here?" Doctor Carter demanded.

"Nobody. I comed," answered the little fellow, climbing upon the doctor's knee. "You see, I always wanted a grandfather," he continued, "and mother said everybody knowed where Doctor Carter lived, only she wouldn't let me come. Mother's sick, and then I—I runned away. And please come quick, because father's mighty bad. I'm afraid he'll die."

"But this isn't the way to the hospital!" she exclaimed, as the machine turned into a pretty lane and stopped before a comfortable-looking house.

"It is my house—my private hospital," answered the doctor.

And half an hour later Harold was comfortable in bed and feebly conscious.

He looked up and recognized the face of his father. Now, according to rules of literature, the boy should at once ought to have fallen into each other's arms. But, oddly enough, the moment his son recognized the doctor, jumping out of his chair.

He had destined his son for his own profession. He had had succeeded folly, and at last there had been a scene at the end of which the doctor ordered his son from his presence, never to enter it again. Harold had complied—twelve years ago.

Perhaps if his wife had been living the old man's heart would have yielded to the appeal. Indeed, it had softened, and often and often he had deplored the loss of his only child. But his professional career absorbed all his time and left little for sentiment. He was the best loved doctor in a southern city, and the most sought after.

Now and again, at intervals of years, he had heard of Harold. He knew that, after roaming in the West, he had returned to dwell in an obscure part of the whole town. He had heard that he had a position with a manufacturing company and was thinking for the wildness of his early years. But the old man was too proud to seek him and his son was a replica of his father.

Now he looked down with an emotion too which left him speechless at the little boy who defied his name and, approaching, slipped his hand confidingly into his.

"Well, who sent you here?" Doctor Carter demanded.

"Nobody. I comed," answered the little fellow, climbing upon the doctor's knee. "You see, I always wanted a grandfather," he continued, "and mother said everybody knowed where Doctor Carter lived, only she wouldn't let me come. Mother's sick, and then I—I runned away. And please come quick, because father's mighty bad. I'm afraid he'll die."

"But this isn't the way to the hospital!" she exclaimed, as the machine turned into a pretty lane and stopped before a comfortable-looking house.

"It is my house—my private hospital," answered the doctor.

And half an hour later Harold was comfortable in bed and feebly conscious.

He looked up and recognized the face of his father. Now, according to rules of literature, the boy should at once ought to have fallen into each other's arms. But, oddly enough, the moment his son recognized the doctor, jumping the old, pride tie his tongue and restrain the hands that were so anxious to enfold the young man's.

"You told me never to let you see me again," said Harold weakly, "and I tried to keep my promise."

"You are here as a patient, Mr. Carter," answered the doctor. "You owe me no apology. It is my duty to be here with all the means in my power."

The young man averted his face. He too, had pride.

Nevertheless, in the days that followed the doctor found it difficult to conceal the love that came into his heart when Flash came to see his daughter-in-law that he had always pictured to himself. And little Harold, the unconscious of anything but loving kindness, was creeping into his heart daily more and more until it seemed impossible that he could ever live apart from him.

And, despite his years of practice, the doctor was unable to diagnose his case. Nothing he did or his eminent colleagues, who he had sent to New York came down and saw him.

"I a—," cried the doctor, in the dead of night, "I a—," he stuttered, and the old man gravely, "And you are, I presume, an honorable man."

"Tried to Keep My Promise."

"I am willing to give a woman what her ability entitles her to, but I don't think a woman should get a man's salary."

"I wish you would say that to my wife."

Ancient Writing Implements.

When writing, Confucius used a small brush, like a camel's hair brush, for a pen, and this was practiced for centuries before his time. The reed came into use for writing in the marshy countries of the Orient. It was hollow and cut to many points.

Remedy Did Not Disappoint.

The late Mayor Gaynor of New York related a little anecdote while in hospital after an anarchist's attempt upon his life. "I knew a man over my way," he said with a smile, "who had formerly been a bartender. Going into politics, he was elected police judge. Mary McManus was up before him for drunkenness. The ex-bartender looked at her for a moment and then said sternly:

"Well, what are you here for?"

"If yer please, yer honor, the copper beyant pulled me in, sayin' I was drunk. An' I don't drink, yer honor! I don't drink."

"All right," said the justice absentmindedly, "all right; have a cigar."

Just What He Needed.

The physician pondered the case for a few minutes before he ventured an opinion.

"I think your husband needs a rest more than anything else," he said at last. "If you could be convinced—

"But he absolutely refuses to listen to me, doctor."

"Well," returned the physician, thoughtfully, "that's the step in the right direction."

"There Ain't No Sich Animile."

"Why won't you engage her as cook?"

"She signed her letter of application, 'Your obedient servant.'"

Afternoon Gown of Blue Taffeta

RATHER difficult to picture is this pretty gown for afternoon wear, which is cut on distinctly oriental lines. It is for the young and slender wearer, and flows about her figure in the manner of the dress of Indian girls.

It is in a bright blue, something deeper than turquoise, and is made in two pieces. There is a short underskirt, only moderately wide, which is cut in flare at the bottom and is ankle length. A full, flaring tunic is attached to a short jacket fastened by a single button at the neck.

The tunic is cut in effect in which the waist line is entirely neglected. The bodice fastens at one side with round covered buttons made of the taffeta.

There is a moderately high rolling collar of the silk, the edge of which is delicately hemstitched batiste overlaid at the back. The silk cuffs are almost covered with hemstitched cuffs of batiste.

Although the skirt and overgarment are two distinctly separate pieces they are both attached to the same plain underbodice so that the dress is put on all together. The neck is finished with a covered silk cord terminating in small silk-covered balls.

One of the larger balls with wide, flat, transparent brims and flower trimmed, would be a fitting choice in millinery to be worn with this afternoon gown, than the small tailored turban shown in the picture. This is a season of beautiful colors in flower and fruit-trimmed hats to correspond with the distinctness and spiritfulness of taffeta gowns, or those of colored net or the lingerie gowns of midsummer. Plain or somber or severe hats do not fit in with the scheme of things except when the gown is tailored, and it is the semitailored gown which is holding the close attention, just now of those who have learned to be discriminating.

Japanese Parasols.

From present indications the flat Japanese types of parasols will play an unusually strong part in this season's parasol fashions. Many novelties of this character are being offered. Some of the fabrics have deep borders, with here and there a dell-cate bit of handembroidery in gold. Again, odd-looking velvet birds are appliqued over the inside surface of the parasol. This idea is effective when developed in orange and blue tones, says Dry Goods Economist. Handles are exceedingly long and in most instances harmonize in color and design with the ferrule end.

Fanciful Names.

Some of the new silk novelties resemble charmeuse and have fanciful names. Those were all made in America. There is a very attractive sand-colored shade that is named "Palm Beach sand;" others are "Delaware peach," "Arizona silver," a lovely shade of gray; "Oregon green," an olive shade; "Rocky mountain blue," "Newport red," "Gettysburg gray," and "Piping rock," a very delicate gray.

Collars and Combs and Other Accessories

HERE is a collar, made of sheer batiste and a very narrow fancy lace that will intrigue every woman who appreciates the value of such dainty and easily made accessories. Aside from their becomingness they protect the bodice at the neck, and they cost next to nothing. This one is merely a graduated flounce of the batiste, to which three rows of braid have been stitched, mounted to a straight band. This band is laced into the neck of the bodice.

At the front the collar is zeroed to the head without fullness, but it is gathered at the sides and back and forms a very pretty effect, which is almost entirely concealed by the gathering of the batiste.

Collars of these sheerest laces are made in the same way. They are frequently made in the form of a delicately hemstitched batiste overlaid at the back. The silk cuffs are almost covered with hemstitched cuffs of batiste.

Although the skirt and overgarment are two distinctly separate pieces they are both attached to the same plain underbodice so that the dress is put on all together. The neck is finished with a covered silk cord terminating in small silk-covered balls.

One of the larger balls with wide, flat, transparent brims and flower trimmed, would be a fitting choice in millinery to be worn with this afternoon gown, than the small tailored turban shown in the picture. This is a season of beautiful colors in flower and fruit-trimmed hats to correspond with the distinctness and spiritfulness of taffeta gowns, or those of colored

THE SANDMAN TIME STORY

By Mrs. F. A. WALKER

THE SQUIRREL FAMILY.

One day a father squirrel said to his wife:

"My dear, I have found the nicest place you ever saw for our home this winter. Take the children and follow me and I will show you where it is."

There were three little squirrels, and they ran along the limb of the tree after their father and mother to the top of a house over which the tree hung.

"Do you see that hole?" said the father. "That is where our home is to be—in the roof of the house. It will be nice and warm. And we we must begin gathering nuts for the winter."

In the house the squirrels had selected for their home lived three children—Jack, Dick and Helen—and one day when it was snowing very fast and they could not go out they went to their playroom at the top of the house. There was a rocking horse when looked like a truly horse, and a swing hung from the beams. There were roller skates and a croquet set on a table, and all sorts of things for children to play with. Now the squirrel family had made no crowding in this room and the little squirrels—Chick, Gray and Flash—had often wondered about all the strange things they saw there. Today, when they heard voices, Flash darted to the opening and looked into the room. Gray and Chick followed, and they were so astonished and eager to see that they pushed poor Flash out of the hole, and down he went into the room.

"Oh! here is a squirrel," said Dick, jumping up. "Let us see if we can get and catch him," said Jack. "And you get some nuts," they cold Helen. As soon as the children were out of sight, Flash ran up the brick chimney, which was built in the room and back into the hole, where Gray and Chick sat trembling with their father and mother, who were scolding them. When the children returned they looked everywhere for the squirrel. "He must have run up the chimney through the fireplace," they said, "and we will leave the cage here and put nuts in it."

"He will come for the nuts, I am sure," said Dick.

That night when everybody was in bed and father and mother squirrel were dreaming of forests filled with nuts, Flash awakened Chick and Gray and told them to follow him. "We'll have some fun," he told them, as they ran down the chimney to the playroom.

"I saw Dick on this horse," said Gray. "I should like to ride horseback."

"But I can't make it rock," he said. "You get on one end of the rocker, Flash, and Chick on the other." "Oh! you are having all the fun," they told him after awhile. "We are going to play croquet." And away they scampered.

They rolled the balls around and ran through the wickets and over them, and at one time Chick had one Gray on the horse. He was rolling nuts in the wheels of the chariot. "Oh! you pig," they called to him. "Don't eat all the nuts," but Gray had eaten every one.

"You are a selfish fellow," they told him. "We want to play with you and with us." "I don't want to," replied Gray. "I'd rather skate," so he ran and jumped in one of the roller skates, which slid with him across the floor. Flash and Chick ran over to the swing, and up and down the ropes they went until it began to swing in line. They set the seat and called to Gray, but he was having too much fun to stop.

"He is having more fun than we are," said Chick. "There are more skates for us to skate, too." In a few minutes all three were rolling in all directions and making a great noise as they awakened their father and mother, and they looked out of the hole down upon a scene which they knew when saw her children rolling over the floor on the skates.

"What are you doing?" called the father. "Come back to your beds at once." They did not dare disobey their father, so they went very slowly back to their beds and were soon sleeping soundly.

The next morning when the children came to the playroom they looked with surprise at the skates, which were scattered around the floor. "And look," said Helen, "the nuts are gone. That squirrel came back and ran all over this room."

"If that squirrel had not been a great, said Jack, "we would have caught him."

"Perhaps he will come again and we can issue him. That will be better than catching him," Dick replied.

Make Your Own Happiness.

"We wish other people happiness, but we are not dependent for our happiness on the good wishes of others. Nor are we dependent on circumstances, on having a certain amount of wealth, a certain position. Our happiness is in our own hands. The girl who is miserable must not blame her friends nor her environment. She must blame herself. We may wish our neighbors a happy year, but we can make it ourselves by putting into it a good deal of faith and good will."—Selected.

Think About This.

Girls who are untidy waste very many more minutes every day in hunting for their hats, coats, rubbers, books and articles that belong to them, than it would take to keep them in place, and yet, so often they say, "I haven't time to put things in order." If you will have a place for everything and then keep everything in place, you will save time and trouble for yourself and other people, too.—Selected.

A War Observer.

"What's the matter; scared of that boy that's chasin' you?"

"No."

"Then what are you running away from?"

"I'm not running away. I'm just retreating for strategical purposes."

BOYS FOREORDAINED TO FAIL

Youth Who Is Spared All Work by Indulgent Parents Is on Wrong Road to Success in Life.

We can only wonder at the silly way in which some men waste their lives.

One day it is a man in Cincinnati who enters a bank, shooting this way and that, scores the money into a bag while the employees hide, leaps into a stolen motor car, starts the robbery again in another bank, and at last, when cornered, kills a policeman and is himself killed.

Enough of adventure, excitement and tragedy for a lifetime crowded into a few hours, with murder at the end.

But what for? The chances of the man getting away were so remote that only a fool would have undertaken the job.

The next day it is Kansas City. Two men rob a shopkeeper of diamonds and money and try to escape by running through crowded streets, a silly and futile thing to undertake, and they are shot down. Two years of hard work, hard living, inconvenience and heartbreaking monotony in prison.

The man who undertakes to live by his wits, to get money without working for it, is foreordained to failure. And yet there are always men starting on that road.

In general they are men who failed in youth to learn the lesson of industry. They got the idea that the world of life was to get on with as little effort as possible. The boys who are spared all work by indulgent parents, who expect everything to be done for them and to do nothing for anybody else, are on the wrong road. They are getting the demoralizing ideas that are responsible for such wrecks as come daily to the criminal court.

MOTOR WHEEL FOR BICYCLE

Power Plant Mounted in Substantial Frame Which Is Carried on Rubber-Tired Wheel.

The application of a gasoline motor to an ordinary bicycle is one that at first it is extremely doubtful if many of the attachments of this nature are of much practical value. As a rule the attachment involves some more or less serious and expensive change in the frame of the bicycle. The motor shown illustrated, on the other hand, is quite a departure from the conventional attachments of this nature, as it comprises a complete power unit in itself and requires no changes whatever in the frame of the bicycle, for its successful attachment and use. The power plant consists of a small gasoline motor mounted in a substantial frame which is carried on a rubber-tired wheel that serves as the driving wheel, the motor being mounted the gasoline tank. A glance at the illustration will show that the device is entirely self-contained and that it is attached quite easily by means of clamps to the framework of the bicycle, of which, however, it is quite independent.

Bicycle Power Plant.

CLUBS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Movement Fostered by Department of Agriculture Has Spread to Every Section of Country.

One of the most notable movements in agricultural education has been the boys and girls clubs organized in rural agricultural communities for the purpose of learning to farm by actually doing the work, and of learning lessons and observations and taking up to scientific farmers and their wives, and to their playroom at the top of the house. There was a rocking horse when looked like a truly horse, and a swing hung from the beams. There were roller skates and a croquet set on a table, and all sorts of things for children to play with. Now the squirrel family had made no crowding in this room and the little squirrels—Chick, Gray and Flash—had often wondered about all the strange things they saw there. Today, when they heard voices, Flash darted to the opening and looked into the room. Gray and Chick followed, and they were so astonished and eager to see that they pushed poor Flash out of the hole, and down he went into the room.

"Oh! here is a squirrel," said Dick, jumping up. "Let us see if we can get and catch him," said Jack. "And you get some nuts," they cold Helen. As soon as the children were out of sight, Flash ran up the brick chimney, which was built in the room and back into the hole, where Gray and Chick sat trembling with their father and mother, who were scolding them. When the children returned they looked everywhere for the squirrel. "He must have run up the chimney through the fireplace," they said, "and we will leave the cage here and put nuts in it."

"He will come for the nuts, I am sure," said Dick.

That night when everybody was in bed and father and mother squirrel were dreaming of forests filled with nuts, Flash awakened Chick and Gray and told them to follow him. "We'll have some fun," he told them, as they ran down the chimney to the playroom.

"I saw Dick on this horse," said Gray. "I should like to ride horseback."

"But I can't make it rock," he said. "You get on one end of the rocker, Flash, and Chick on the other." "Oh! you are having all the fun," they told him after awhile. "We are going to play croquet." And away they scampered.

They rolled the balls around and ran through the wickets and over them, and at one time Chick had one Gray on the horse. He was rolling nuts in the wheels of the chariot. "Oh! you pig," they called to him. "Don't eat all the nuts," but Gray had eaten every one.

"You are a selfish fellow," they told him. "We want to play with you and with us." "I don't want to," replied Gray. "I'd rather skate," so he ran and jumped in one of the roller skates, which slid with him across the floor. Flash and Chick ran over to the swing, and up and down the ropes they went until it began to swing in line. They set the seat and called to Gray, but he was having too much fun to stop.

"He is having more fun than we are," said Chick. "There are more skates for us to skate, too." In a few minutes all three were rolling in all directions and making a great noise as they awakened their father and mother, and they looked out of the hole down upon a scene which they knew when saw her children rolling over the floor on the skates.

"What are you

You Will Love Dove Under-Muslins

Night Gowns 50c, $1.00, $1.50.

Drawers 25c, 50c. Skirts 50, $1, $1.50

Envelope Chimises $1.00.

Corset Covers 25c, 50c. Combinations $1, $1.50.

We Sell DOVE Under-muslins

Go to ---LEVINSON'S--- Get the Habit

The Store of Quality

AND :: GOOD :: SERVICE

Large California Navel Oranges

25c Per Dozen.

Courteous Treatment Prompt Delivery

C. DANTO & SON,

212 Bridge St. · Phone No. 13 Phone No. 69

Yes Mother, You Look Fine

Electric Bitters simply brought the bloom of health to your cheeks.

Electric Bitters will do it every time. Increase your appetite, regulate Liver and Bowels, renew your strength and improve your complexion.

After a long severe winter we need a tonic and blood purifier to rid our system of accumulated waste and impurities. Nature needs help to throw off that languid, tired, worn to a frazzle feeling. Do your part. Take a few weeks treatment of Electric Bitters, it will pay you. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed or money back. Get a bottle from your druggist and start the good work this day. Regular size bottle, 50c. Full treatment right now.

Hima Pool of Denver, Okla., writes: "Electric Bitters raised me from a bed of sickness and suffering and have been a world of good. I wish every suffering person could use this excellent remedy and feel out, as I did, just how it tones up. It has helped thousands of others, it surely will do the same for you.

H. E. BUCKLEN & CO. PHILADELPHIA. ST. LOUIS.

JAPAN ALSO HAS MONROE DOCTRINE

Shuster Discusses Her Attitude Toward Eastern Questions.

DOESN'T WANT PHILIPPINES

Says Views Are Identical With Those Expressed by President Monroe. They Have Become Crystallized In Past Few Years and Began Immediately Following War With Russia.

Washington.—In testifying before the senate Philippines committee on the Jones bill providing for the ultimate independence of the Philippine Islands, W. Morgan Shuster remarked that the attitude of Japan toward the eastern questions was consistent with a well defined Monroe doctrine of its own. The phrase has attracted considerable attention. For that reason Mr. Shuster, who occupied for nearly nine years ministerial government posts in the Philippines and later served as treasurer general of Persia, was asked to explain the phrase.

"In many respects Japan's attitude toward her sphere of influence in the far east and our policy as expressed by President Monroe are identical," said Mr. Shuster. "Each countries are very much in earnest in enforcing these policies.

"Japan's Monroe doctrine, as it may be called, has taken form within the past few years. It dates, I should say, from the close of the war with Russia, or very earlier. As a result of this conflict Japan greatly widened her political horizon. Her victory over Russia made her more assertive and conscious of her power to exercise a decisive influence over the general affairs within which lie the Philippines.

"Japan is today without question the first power in the orient. She dominates the far east much as the United States does in the south sea and Monroe occupies the first place on the American continents. And, like the Americans, the Japanese are a very high minded people. They have a pride of their own.

"Any encroachment upon this sphere by foreign powers would arouse much the same spirit of distrust or resentment as we should feel at a similar encroachment in the western hemisphere. I have no doubt that Japan would back up her Monroe doctrine should affairs reach an issue exactly as we should back up our own policy.

"Public opinion in Japan, as in the United States, is opposed to any plan for Japan's colonizing the Philippines. The Japanese have no more idea of getting their hair in the Philippines, for instance, than have we of colonizing the Central or South American republics. The Japanese have experimented with colonial empires in Formosa and Korea, and they do not care to extend the experiment.

"The Japanese employ scientific methods in their political plans, and they have carefully investigated the question of colonizing in the tropics and have decided against it. At the time when it seemed possible that the United States would part with the Philippines the Japanese sent their scientists to these islands to determine the possibilities of settlement and development by Japanese. The world recognizes that the Japanese do excellent research work. The Japanese scientists decided that the Philippine islands did not offer the proper climatic conditions for colonizing, and the Japanese government and the people trust their scientists.

"Still another point common both to our own Monroe doctrine and the attitude of Japan may be found in the attitude toward the governments within the spheres of influence. We Americans are friendly to the small republics in the southland and so is Japan to the orient minus to the far east. She would welcome a republic in the Philippines, for instance, because it would be neutral. It would not serve as an entering wedge for some aggressive world power. She would encourage such a government exactly as we encourage the continuance and independence of the republics of Central and South America.

MEAT FOR THE INVALID.

How to Prepare Dishes That Are Relished by the Sick One.

Perhaps these few recipes will help some one who has the care of an invalid—of course, if the sufferer is permitted by his physician to partake of such foods:

Chicken Souffle—Melt one teaspoonful butter, add one teaspoonful flour and pour on gradually while stirring constantly one-fourth cupful milk; add one tablespoonful soft breadcrumbs and one-eighth teaspoonful salt and cook one minute. Remove from fire and add one-quarter cupful cold cooked chicken finely chopped, and salt and fold in one egg white beaten stiff. Turn into slightly buttered tin mold and set in pan of hot water. Cover with buttered paper and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Remove from mold and pour around white sauce.

White Sauce—One-half tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of flour, one-third cupful of milk and a little salt. Melt the butter, add the flour and when well mixed pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, the milk. Bring to boiling point, then season.

Broiled Ham—Remove outside layer of fat from a small piece of ham, cut one-third inch thick, and soak one half hour in lukewarm water. Drain, wipe and broil three minutes.

Honey Souffle in Paper Case—Butter sparingly one-half sheet of foolscap paper. Have a board laid on lower half of sheet and fold upper part over the third, bringing the edges together. Begin at the edges and fold over the lower side and ends of the paper three times. Place in a very hot oven to broil ten minutes over a slow fire, turning once. Meanwhile the paper does not catch on fire. Remove the third from the case on a slice of buttered toast, season with salt and pepper and spread with soft butter and strinkle with toast crumbs, honey, jelly, lemon or parsley. The prepared paper bag may be used if at hand.

THE USES OF VINEGAR.

How It May Be Employed to Advantage in Many Household Ways.

Vinegar should be kept in glass jars, rather than in stone ones.

The best cider vinegar should be used in pickling.

Before polishing the stove rub it with vinegar. This removes all grease, leaving the surface smooth and keeps the blacking from blaking off quickly.

When boiling meat of any kind add a tablespoonful of vinegar to the water when first put into the fire. This makes the meat tender and does not leave any flavor of the vinegar.

Tough meat may be softened by brushing over with one part vinegar to two parts of oil or butter and letting stand for a few hours.

A little vinegar served in the platter with the steak adds to the flavor of the meat.

A tablespoonful of vinegar added to the water in which fish is boiled has a tendency to retain the color and make it firmer.

When potatoes have a teaspoonful of vinegar added to the boiling water will prevent the skins from scrinkling.

A small dish of vinegar placed on the back of the stove when cooking cabbage will help destroy the odor.

When ready to hang out clothes wet the hands with vinegar, let it dry on, and you will have no cold fingers.

Vinegar will sometimes revive colors in delicate materials. One teaspoonful of vinegar to each quart of rinsing water, rinsate well, wring tightly and dry quickly indoors.

Open Game.

"Let me make the songs of a nation and I care not who makes its laws."

"Well, have a try. Many people seem to think there's room for improvement in both just now."—Pittsburgh Post.

Thinking Shop.

Hostess—Dr. Fortinbras, will you have some of the tongue?

Doctor (absentmindedly—Oh—let me look at it please.—St. Louis Times.

CARVED A LIVING FISH.

Part Was Cooked and the Other Part Swam Around Till Needed.

Not many years ago, being one of the few Europeans permitted to reside in the interior of Japan, I was favored with this interesting experience:

Living near a small fishing village and out of convenient reach of the treaty ports, I found it necessary to content myself to a great extent with native substitutes. However, a daily supply of delicious living fish went far to compensate for the absence of beef steak and bread and butter.

The produce of fish carry their finny merchandise in shallow tubs filled with water suspended from the ends of a pole across the shoulders. In this fashion they trot along for miles on their rounds.

Having the advantage of first choice, I could usually select one of a size suitable for the day's needs, but one morning they were all entirely too large, and when it was pointed out that the smallest was double the size wanted he replied:

"Oh, but you can cut it in two; use half today, the remainder tomorrow."

I am suggestion would seem simple enough in American markets, but when he was told that state fish was unobtainable he explained that the remaining half would be as fresh tomorrow as any day thereafter until used; that the operation would not hurt the fish in the slightest respect. At this point curiosity prompted me to direct the fish vivisectionist to proceed with his performance.

He immediately laid one of the fish on a board and placed his long, keen edged knife just back of the gills and quickly sliced off all of one side down to the tail, and so close to the tail you could almost see them. The part containing the vital organs was returned to the water, where, of course, owing to loss of equilibrium, it turned on its side. But to my astonishment it swam round lively as ever, seemingly unaffected by the loss of so much fresh meat, and remained so until the next day when I was ready to cook it.

My native friends smiled at the suggestion of cruelty and related the story of a Mohammedan dervish who caught a fish sliced in this manner that had been placed in the river years before and lived this long time happy and lively as other fish. But the idea of carving a living fish made me shudder, and I never tried it again.—C. D. Weldon, in New York Tribune.

HOW TO MAKE AN ILL PERSON COMFORTABLE.

Don't allow the sheets to become wrinkled.

Don't jar the bed by leaning or sitting upon it.

Don't allow stale flowers to remain in the room.

Don't forget to be kind and patient.

Don't have temperature of sickroom over 65 degrees.

Don't appear anxious. Those who are ill are very quick.

Don't rattle papers. Nothing gets on one's nerves more than this.

Don't give the patient more water in a glass than he is allowed.

Don't fill the room with fresh flowers. Keep one or two bouquets in the room at a time. Change every two or three hours if you have a great many.

Are You Rheumatic?—Try Sloan's

If you want quick and real relief from Rheumatism, do what so many thousand other people are doing—whenever an attack comes on, bathe the sore muscles or joint with Sloan's Liniment. No need to rub it in—just apply the Liniment to the surface—it is wonderfully penetrating. It soaks right to the seat of trouble and draws the pain immediately. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

Wall Finishes

Velumina flat wall Paint and Hygienic Kalsomine

Now is the time to do your interior decorating. Velumina is the finest washable wall finish ever produced. It covers more surface to the gallon doing a perfect job than any other flat wall paint on the market—It does not harden in the package.

Try it—we guarantee complete satisfaction. For those who prefer Kalsomine—There is nothing better made in that line than Hygienic Kalsomine—It covers from 1 to 25 per cent more surface per pound than any other—It dries without showing laps, with that beautiful egg shell finish which is so very desirable—Call for color cards.

S. M. SEE & SONS,

The Reliable Housefurnishers.

IRON DUKE FLOUR

will give you more bread and better bread than any other flour on the market. If this is not so we will give you your money back.

For sale by all dealers.

Argo Milling Co.

MANUFACTURERS

Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix Homes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors take notice of. To make your home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock, which consists of everything, such as

Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper

TELEPHONE NO. 22

A New Serial By a Writer of "Best Sellers"

Parrot & Co.

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

It's a real, honest-to-goodness romance—there's action, mystery and adventure, and the breezy manner of its telling is full of charm. You can't afford to miss it if you enjoy a good story.

Watch for the First Installment!

It's a Bird PARROT & CO. Watch for It!

PEARL screens pay back their cost—in extra wear—in freedom from paint expense and repair bills—genuine PEARL Wire Cloth pays back its cost many times over.

For screening porches, doors and windows, this material is so much superior to "galvanized" and "painted" kinds that there's positively no comparison.

Rust, not wear, ruins screens. Genuine Gilbert & Bennett PEARL Wire Cloth is as near rust-proof as metal can be made. That's why it wears so well. No other screen is made like PEARL or so close screen can wear like PEARL.

Made only by GILBERT & BENNETT MFG. CO. P&G

WIRE CLOTH

For Screening Doors, Windows and Porches—Made in Two Weights—Regular and Lite—Heavy

The name of genuine Gilbert & Bennett PEARL Wire Cloth is far below the value it stands in wear and appearance.

It's stiffer in texture than ordinary wire cloth—an important home feature when a piece of screen wire is affixed to it. Combined with its rust-resisting film is an additional guarantee of long wear and satisfaction.

We will gratuitously PEARL Wire Cloth with each Copper Wire in the Screen Doors and Windows we furnish this Season at Retail—same as each year.

F. S. BLANCHARD

Estate.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

10 Great Serials

Full of life and action, filled with the high ideals of American manhood and by 250 short stories of adventure, mystery and romance.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Page, and "a ton of fun." Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and every one in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

CUT THIS OUT and send it for some friend with $2.00 for The COMPANION for 1915, and we will send

FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1914.

FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR for 1915.

THEN The 52 Weekly issues of THE COMPANION for 1915.

52 Times a Year —not 12.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass. for

THREE GENEROUS SPECIMEN ISSUES FREE

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

Grand Rapids Evening Press

DAILY

AND THE

Charlevoix Sentinel

BOTH ONE YEAR FOR

$ 3.00 $

Filed Publication January 21

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Edward D. Hammond and Louie A. Hammond, husband and wife, to Charles Hammond, dated the first day of April, A. D. 1902, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 1, which said mortgage was assigned by said Charles Hammond to Ella Hammond, by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1903, and recorded in said Register of Deeds office in said Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 2, which said assignment was assigned by said Ella Hammond to Charles Hammond, by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1903, and recorded in said Register of Deeds office in said Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 3, which said assignment was assigned by said Charles Hammond to Ella Hammond, by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1903, and recorded in said Register of Deeds office in said Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 4, which said assignment was assigned by said Ella Hammond to Charles Hammond, by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1903, and recorded in said Register of Deeds office in said Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 5, which said assignment was assigned by said Charles Hammond to Ella Hammond, by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1903, and recorded in said Register of Deeds office in said Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 6, on which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of $2,350 of principal and an attorney fee of $100, as provided by the mortgage, and no suit or proceeding at law has been instituted to collect said mortgage or any part thereof; and the undersigned, the present owner of said mortgage, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, on the first day of April, A. D. 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, shall sell at public vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount of said mortgage, with interest thereon, and said attorney fee, and all legal costs, and also the taxes on said premises, which said premises are situated in said County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, and are described as follows: Lots Twenty-Three (23) and Twenty-Four (24) in Block Twenty-Five (25) of Assessor's Plat of Charlevoix, according to the recorded plat thereof.

Dated, Charlevoix, Mich., January 21st, A. D. 1914.

ELLA HAMMOND, Mortgagee.

CHARLES HAMMOND, Mortgagee.

Assignee for Mortgagee.

Business address: Charlevoix, Mich.

First publication January 21st

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Edward D. Hammond and Louie A. Hammond, husband and wife, to Charles Hammond, dated the first day of April, A. D. 1902, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 1, which said mortgage was assigned by said Charles Hammond to Ella Hammond, by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1903, and recorded in said Register of Deeds office in said Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 2, which said assignment was assigned by said Ella Hammond to Charles Hammond, by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1903, and recorded in said Register of Deeds office in said Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 3, which said assignment was assigned by said Charles Hammond to Ella Hammond, by assignment dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1903, and recorded in said Register of Deeds office in said Charlevoix county, Michigan, on March 5th, A. D. 1903, in liber 50 of mortgages, on page 4, on which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of $2,350 of principal and an attorney fee of $100, as provided by the mortgage, and no suit or proceeding at law has been instituted to collect said mortgage or any part thereof; and the undersigned, the present owner of said mortgage, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, on the first day of April, A. D. 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, in said county, shall sell at public vendue to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount of said mortgage, with interest thereon, and said attorney fee, and all legal costs, and also the taxes on said premises, which said premises are situated in said County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, and are described as follows: All that part of the south half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-eight (28) in township of Charlevoix, lying and being in the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, described as follows: Commencing at the south quarter post of said section (28) thence north 1 chain and 50 links; thence east 10 chains; thence south 1 chain and 50 links to the south quarter of said section; thence west 10 chains to the place of beginning, containing 1 acre, more or less, excepting and reserving a strip of land 2 rods wide off the south side of said premises, for a public highway, and also

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(Copyright, 1916, by W. J. Watt & Co.)

CHAPTER XV—Continued.

In two days, the grand jury, with much secrecy, returned a true bill, and a day later a considerable detachment of infantry started on a dusty hike up Misery. Furious and inscrutable Holiman eyes along the way watched them from cabin doors, and muttered to hell "they meant also to count their coming back and they did not expect the totals to tally.

* * * * *

Park—of his own spiked fence—and a dusty unhorsed lawn, the barracks like facades of the old Shakespeare building and Kentucky state capitol frowned on the street and railroad track. Along the two sides of the Kentucky river, sprawled the town of Frankfort, where, in the days of Boone, sled at the center, and stretching to shelved environs of colonial houses set in lawns of rich bluegrass, amid the shade of forest trees. Circling the town in an embrace of silver lay a curve from the Kentucky river hills.

Turning in to the gate of the state house enclosure, a lean man, who seemed to be an extender by the cut of his clothes, stopped short in the middle of the walk, and passed around the fountain at the front of the building. He then circled him direct to the main entrance or the administration building, and, having passed a sentinel at the rotunda, he entered the secretary's office of the executive suite and asked for an interview with the governor.

"Have you an appointment?" the secretary asked, rather curtly.

The visitor shook his head. Settling a brief note on a slip of paper, he inclosed it in an envelope and handed it to his questioner.

"You must pardon my seeming impertinence," he said, "but if you let me scald it that cold, I think the governor will see me."

Once more the secretary studied him with a slightly puzzled air, then nodded and went through the door that gave admission to the executive's office.

His excellency opened the envelope and his face showed an expression of surprise he raised his brown counting instantly.

Rough-looking sort?" he inquired "Mountaineer?"

"No, sir. New Yorker would be my guess. In fact, he reminded me of—"

"I guess not." The governor laughed. "Rather extraordinary note, but send him in."

Through his eastern window the governor gazed across the lawn of South Frankfort, to the ribbon of river that came down from the Hickman bottom hills. Then, hearing a movement at his back, he turned, and his eyes took in a well-dressed, rather ordinary-looking business man.

He picked up the slip from his desk and, for a moment, stood comparing the name red the message with the man who had sent them to. There seemed to be in his mind some irreconcilable contradiction between the two. With a slightly frowning seriousness the executive suggested:

"This note says that you are Samson South and that you want to see me with reference to a pardon. Where pardon is it, Mr. South?"

"My own, sir!"

The governor raised his brows slightly.

"Your pardon for what? The newspapers do not even report that you have yet been indicted. Is there any charge against you?"

"I think I have been indicted within the past day or two, sir. I killed a man."

The governor continued to stare. The impression he had formed of this "Wildcat" from press dispatches was warring with the pleasant personal presence of this caller. Then his trained analytical mind began to analyze his tips drew themselves sternly.

"You have come on to see me, sir," he said curtly. "The pardoning power is a thing to be most cautiously used at all times, and certainly never until the courts have acted. A case not yet indicted comes under address itself to executive clemency."

Samson nodded.

"Quite true," he admitted. "If I announced that I had come on the matter of a person, I was largely that I had to state some business and that involved the briefest way of putting it."

"Then there is something else?"

"Yes. It is rare only a plea for clemency I should expect the matter to be chiefly important to myself. In point of fact, I hope to make it equally interesting to you. Whether you give me a pardon is a fashion which relates all precedent, or whether I surrender myself and go back to a trial which will be merely a form of assassination rests entirely with you, sir. You will find me isolated."

Then Samson launched into the story of his desires and the details of conditions which outside influences had been powerless to remedy—he frankly said they were outside influences. Some man of sufficient vigor and courage, proceeding acting from the center of disturbance, must be armed with the power to undertake the house cleaning job or a white wash. No work that would not be pretty. As far as he was personally concerned, a pardon and a trial would be a matter of purely secondary interest. He could not expect to survive a trial. He was at present able to hold the Hoults in check. If the governor was not of that mind he was now ready to surrender himself and permit matters to take their course.

And now, Mr. South," suggested the governor, after a halfhour of absorbed listening, "there is one point we have overlooked. Since in the end the whole thing comes back to the exercise of this pardoning power, it is after all the crux of the situation. You may be able to counsel such revision as those for which you volunteer. Let us for the moment assume that to be true. Have you the right to do a very important thing? Did you or did you not kill Fury and Jerry Hoult?"

"I killed Jerry," said Samson, as though he were answering a question in the case of any one. "And I did not kill Fury."

"Perhaps," suggested the governor, "give me the full particulars of that affair."

The two were still closeted when a second visitor called and was told that his business could not be disturbed. The second visitor, however, was in a position to be very firmly insistent. He insisted to take in the card. After a glance at it he chief ordered admission.

The door opened and Captain Caleb Calloway came.

He was now in civilian clothes, with personal news written on his face. He paused in annoyance at the sight of a second figure standing with back turned at the window. Then Samson wheeled and the two men recognized each other. They had met before only when one was in olive drab, the other in blue and buttons. At recognition Calloway's face fell and grew troubled.

"You here, South!" he exclaimed "I thought you promised me that I wouldn't find you. God knows I didn't want to meet you."

"Why? yes," Samson spoke slowly. "I promised you'd be raking the hills."

Neither of them was for the moment saying the least attention to the governor, who stood quietly looking on.

"I seek Mertrewsville and there," explained Calloway, impatiently. "I wanted to come here before I went too late. I knew South. I wouldn't have had this meeting, if I could have kept another heaven. It leaves me no choice. You are indicted on two counts each charge for you with murder." The officer took a step toward the center of the room that came down the Hickman bottom hills. Then, hearing a movement at his back, he turned, and his eyes took in a well-dressed, rather ordinary-looking business man.

He picked up the slip from his desk and, for a moment, stood comparing the name red the message with the man who had sent them to. There seemed to be in his mind some irreconcilable contradiction between the two. With a slightly frowning seriousness the executive suggested:

"This note says that you are Samson South and that you want to see me with reference to a pardon. Where pardon is it, Mr. South?"

"My own, sir!"

The governor raised his brows slightly.

"Your pardon for what. The newspapers do not even report that you have yet been indicted. Is there any charge against you?"

"I think I have been indicted within the past day or two. I killed a man."

The governor continued to stare. The impression he had formed of this "Wildcat" from press dispatches was warring with the pleasant personal presence of this caller. Then his trained analytical mind began to analyze his tips drew themselves sternly.

"You have come on to see me, sir," he said curtly. "The pardoning power is a thing to be most cautiously used at all times, and certainly never until the courts have acted. A case not yet indicted comes under address itself to executive clemency."

Samson nodded.

"Quite true," he admitted. "If I announced that I had come on the matter of a person, I was largely that I had to state some business and that involved the briefest way of putting it."

"Then there is something else?"

"Yes. It is rare only a plea for

MOST NATURAL OF QUERIES

Probably First Interrogation That Was Ever Made Was, "Is It Good to Eat?"

In Farm and Fireside. Herbert Quick, editor of farm and fireside, writes an editorial in which he brought out many interesting facts as to the use of various meats as food. Following is an interesting extract from his article:

"Whenever we hors found anything edible, vegetable or mineral—almost which looked not absolutely repulsive, our first question was, 'Is it good to eat?'

"That is the oldest question in the world. Every animal asks it a dozen times a day, and lots sight and smell answer it. Now that war is making a worldwide scarcity, is it good to eat? becomes a world-wide question to the human mind.

"Take vegetable, for instance. We have been wasting the meat of the whale all the many years during which we have been at it, inflicting the largest of mammals. Why? The whale is a swimming beast which suckles its young and lives on clean food. Now there is a movement on foot to begin the canning of whale beef, to be sold at a low price to those who have the open-mindedness and strength of palate to tackle it.

"In Japan the meat of a red dog is a great delicacy, and dogs of other colors are preferred to beef, mutton or poultry. Pork is looked upon by the Japanese with much the same lack of appetite with which we regard the meat of the dog or horse.

"Horse beef was not seen in France until after the great siege of 1870. Now it is a regular article of commerce."

Rose to the Occasion.

Dead (from the ball)—"Why, Marjorie, how dim the light is in here!" Freddy (the flatter, but a coward)—"Dim in value!"—Yale Jr. Trofeo-Cor Monsieur, has a theory that bachelors like blondes, and married men are indifferent. We are experimenting to find the cause or circumstance by which the attention is kept vivid and the mental functions active.—Judge.

RANGERS MEN OF RESOURCE

Hard to Stump Guardians of Uncle Sam's Forests, When They Set Out to Do a Thing.

As an example of the resourcefulness of the United States forest ranger, always ready for all emergencies, there stands a 115-foot tower located in the Bitgraves National forest, in Arizona, which was entirely built by these men with a very limited equipment of tools and material. A triangulation station was needed in one of the districts, but because the area was covered with tall timber and had a very gentle slope, but one good, natural lookout post could be found, and here, unfortunately, the timber was so tall that the tower would have to be at least 100 feet high. The tools and rigging at hand were sufficient to build a tower of only half that height, but, nevertheless, it was decided to undertake the building of the tall tower at once, without waiting for further supplies, for the reason that the nearest been of sawmills was 75 miles away, and the dangerous fire season was close at hand. The materials available consisted of 200 feet of three-quarter-inch rope in one piece, the longest being 50 feet in length; some saplings blocks six inches long, and one single sheave block. Of tools there were two hatchets, one axes, two-man saws, hatchets, crowbars, two pairs of linemen's climbers and belts and a brace and bit. Telephone wire was used for guy lines and was made up of temporaries and two rangers. At the start there were but eight men, including one cook, one teamster and the man in charge. By the time the tower was half-built the crew was cut down to four men, but, notwithstanding these adverse conditions, the work was done, and well done, and did excellent service, and will continue to do so for some time to come.

Unkind Suggestion.

"Writing much verse now?" asked the critic. "Some much," returned the poet. "Only enough to keep the wolf from the door." "Why, do you read it over to him?" asked the critic.—New York American.

COMBATING OLD AGE

THEORIES EXPOUNDED BY PROFESSOR METCHNIKOFF.

Russian Scientist, Amazingly Vigorous at Seventy Years of Age, Tells How Human Life May Be Long Extended.

Professor Metchnikoff is again discoursing on benefaction benefit. Their introduction into the system to destroy poisonous microbes will prove, we hope, indefinitely, he maintains, with the result that no man will take a vacation on account of ill health. Metchnikoff at seventy works all the time with undiminished zest. The fountain of youth which Ponce de Leon sought in vain in Florida he could have found at home in sour milk and natural sugar.

For his years the Russian scientist is amazingly vigorous. He has been getting back and keeping his youth for years. In a recent interview Metchnikoff seems to have said only the scientists who have lived with him. His aim has been to prevent contamination of the blood by "intestinal poisons which clog the human machinery by contact as they spread through and affect the sensitivity Metchnikoff takes the air regularly, but science intervenes in much more than this. Perhaps it can be inferred that he does not think the sense of fresh air exclusively a proper microbe diet is practiced.

Salzer's White Bonanza Oats.

Made C. J. Johnson of Lincoln Co., Mo., tenacious in growing 204 bushels from 2½ bushels sown last spring. Can you beat this? Write your luck.

This great Oat has taken the lead in 3 great ways: Biggest Yields, Earliest Ripening, Thickest Stand. This Oat is Hardy, Prolific, Mammoth, Quick Growing, Heavy Yielding, Early Maturing, Rust Resisting, Stiff Straw, Heavy Stooler, Mammoth Head, Thick Meaty Kernel, Heavy Weight, Big Yield. Pa., N. Y., Kansas and Missouri.

We are America's headquarters for Alfalfa and Timothy, Clovers and Farm Seeds.

For 10c in Postage

We gladly mail our Catalog and sample package of Ten Varieties of Farm Seeds, including Salzer's Alfalfa, Red Clover, Redwoodset White Bonanza Oats, "The Seed Winner" Corn, Ivory Dollar Grass, Tocsoine, Ile Silo Filler, etc., etc.

Or Send 12c

And we will mail you our 164 Catalog and 10 Sample packages of Early Cabbage, Turnip, Onion, Lettuce, Radish, Onion—furnishing 100 Varieties of Flower and Vegetables during the early Spring, Summer and Fall.

Or send to John A. Salzer Seed Co., Box 1100, La Crosse, Wis., twenty cents (stamps or silver) for postage and their big catalog.

When hope will make a man forget that he is hungry it is well to cultivate the bright star.

NEGLECT YOUR SCALP

And Lose Your Hair. Cuticura Preserves Your Crop.

Cuticura Soap shampoos cleanse and purify the scalp of dandruff while the Ointment soothes and heals the irritated skin. Nothing finer! and nothing are hair shampoos. Cuticura accentuated with these supercreamy emollients for the skin and scalp.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard: Cuticura, Dept. 2X, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

There is nothing new under the sun. All the good excuses have already been made.

This Will Interest Mothers.

Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for Children for Constipation, Fever, Stomach Disorders, Teething, Expulsion and Vermicide, the Best Children's Worm Tablets. They break up Colds in 24 hours. They are so pleasant to take children like them. Used by mothers for 30 years. Sold by all druggists, 25c. Sample FREE. A. S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Do you ask, Philanda, why I often cuss Almeda? She knows I don't care to or with my pie covered with salve and sweet nothing with Almeda. I wish to kiss you.—Marietta Epigrams.

A FEW GOOD DESSERTS.

A nice warm gingerbread served with apple sauce and ecclaire cheese makes a comfortable and economical dessert. Served with whipped cream, with grated cheese added enough to give flavor, is another way of serving it. Bake a gingerbread in a sheet and when hot, cut in halves and spread one half with a generous layer of marmalade, cover with the other half, put into the oven and bake which some time, when it is ready to serve with whipped cream.

Ginger Pudding—Cream a half cupful of butter, add gradually a quarter of a cupful of sugar, two eggs well beaten, one cupful of milk and one and half cupfuls of flour, mixed and sifted with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder; add a fourth of a cupful of canton ginger cut in bits, turn into a buttered mold and steam two hours. Serve with whipped cream, flavored with the ginger sirup.

Orange and Orange Sherbet—Take a half cupful of orange juice and two lemon juice, two cupfuls of sugar and a pint of ice cream, freeze and serve in shorted glasses.

Coffee Sponge—Mix one and a half cupfuls of boiling water with half a cupful of milk and one-third of a cupful of sugar, add a tablespoonful of gelatin which has been softened in a little of the coffee, put into a double boiler and add the yolks of two eggs, slightly beaten, a pinch of salt and a third of a cupful of strong coffee. When cooked to coat the spoon remove from the heat and fold in the beaten whites of three eggs and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn into individual molds, dipped in water to set away to chill. Serve with whipped cream flavored with vanilla.

Pineapple Cream Cake. — No more delicious dessert can be imagined than a good layer cake of two layers, filled with sweetened whipped cream and the top covered with it. If one wishes to have the cake more elaborate, bananas, pineapple and maraschino cherries may be added to the cream. However, it is sufficiently satisfying with plain whipped cream.

When he to whom one speaks does not understand, and he who speaks himself does not understand, it is Metaphysics.—Voltaire.

Sorrows are like thunderclouds—the thicker they look black, over our heads scarcely gray.—Jean Paul Richter.

DISHES MEN LIKE.

Try this Spanish dish for the men people and see if they won't ask for more. Try until ready three strips of bacon, add a third of a cupful of rice, browned in the bacon fat, four large tomatoes, one green pepper and a medium sized onion, all cut up and cooked with the rice and bacon. As it cooks add water enough to keep it from sticking, and cook slowly for three quarters of an hour; and salt and a small piece of butter when ready to serve.

Apple Dumplings—Take two cupfuls of chopped apple, a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of butter and two cupfuls of boiling water; when boiling hot, add the following dumplings: Sift together a cupful of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a dash of salt and one egg well beaten; add enough milk to make a stiff batter. Drop by tablespoonfuls into the boiling syrup, cover and cook until brown, then add milk and seasonings and serve with hard sauce or cream.

Hamburg Roast—Take a pound and a half of hamburger, add two slices of salt pork chopped, one cupful of crumbs, one egg and a teaspoonful of salt. Shape in a loaf, and lay on strips of pork, and cover with a strip of the two. Roast in a hot oven, basting often with a fourth of a cup of hot water added to the pan when put into the oven. Strain a brown sauce round the roast when serving.

Cheesecake Steak—Brown a piece of round steak in a hot pan, add a chopped onion and water to simmer gently for an hour on the back of the stove. Season well and thicken with flour which half done. A sauce may be made to serve with the steak by melting two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two of flour and when cooked add the liquor from the steak. Pour around the steak.

Nellie Maxwell

Couldn't Do It.

"I'm sinking into a state of despondency, doctor."

"You can't, be, my dear sir."

"Why not?"

"Haven't you just told me your head's swimming?"

Daily Thought.

The mind that is cheerful in its present state will be adverse to all solicitudes to the future, and will meet the bitter occurrences of life with a placid smile.—Horace.

Cruel Words.

"Miss Passemup says she is going to sell kisses for charity."

"Now, isn't that just like a woman?"

"How so?"

"Trying to sell what she can't give away."

Unpopular Listeners.

"I really decline to talk to her; she has such a habit of listening one's sentences for one. You know, don't you, that they listen faster than you can talk to them."

A Hint.

"Do you think your bashful friend was offended at the dinner we gave him?"

"Why should he be?"

"Well, you know, we had sheep's head for."

Too Tender-Hearted.

"Some men," said Uncle Eben, "is so tender-hearted dat dey is almost willin' to make sacrifices for a friend jes' to show how kind an' sympathetic dey kin be."

Literacy in Denmark.

Only one person in 1,000 in Denmark is unable to read and write, as compared with seven out of every 1,000 in the United States. Of 360,000 Danish children of school age only 300 failed to attend school during the last fiscal year.

Suspicious.

When a man starts off by announcing that he views something more to sorrow than in anger we always suspect that he is really greatly mad at the world.

TO PREPARE AND USE VEGETABLES

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT EXPERTS GIVE RESULTS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT.

SOME PLANTS EATEN RAW

Fresh Vegetables an Essential Part of Man's Diet—How Waste Can Be Avoided in the Compounding of Salads.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Fresh green vegetables are generally relished and form a part of man's diet wherever they can be obtained. Such vegetables may be called salad plants because it is difficult to classify plants according to the uses to which they are put, for almost all are used in more than one manner. Lettuce, for example, a vegetable which in this country is most always eaten raw, in Europe is often cooked, and thus it becomes a potherb as well as a salad plant. Water cress, though generally a salad, is sometimes used alone as a potherb. Beets, beans, potatoes and vegetables such as spinach, which are most commonly served as a vegetable, are also used in salads.

In spite of these difficulties in the way of a classification, we may include under salad plants those whose leaves are used in salads, those which are used in a sour dressing, and define a salad as a dish consisting in whole or in part of vegetables, which are not cooked, mixed with a sour dressing. Salad plants are classified according to the part as an acid.

Housekeepers often claim to know and relish more salads, but those who dig wild Jerusalem artichokes in the fall, who make a salad of young grass or radish to serve as relishes at a table are in a minority among their families; or again, those who prepare the cold vegetables left at dinner to make a salad, who, by using even of salt and vinegar for anything, make a salad. Fresh cucumbers with vinegar or other dressing are an acid fruit as much as are the more whole fruits.

Salad: a Food To Be Eaten With Salt. The derivation of the word salad shows it to mean a food to be eaten with salt. It would be better to keep near to this original meaning rather than to go to the extreme of some Scandinavians who in their search for novelties for their tables, build up salads from strange combinations in ornate forms.

The distinctive salad plants are very succulent; that is, they consist mainly of water. Hence, they are so easily perishable. They are perishable. As a separate course they are a pleasant contrast to the other courses of a formal meal. They also serve to prevent too great concentration of food, and thus aid in the digestive process. Upon the valuable salad plants depend the success we are just beginning to place a definite value on the mineral matter, which is recognized by the institute of the people of the far past.

Salad Dressings Are Used.

Fat is a compact food and, weight for weight, is about two and a quarter times as valuable as starch or carbohydrate for fuel in the human body. Fat is digestible and it is used in the tissues and water, and have eaten such salads as most and bring supplying protein and carbohydrate, and thus have secured a fairly balanced ration. Modern dietetic investigation indicates that pagan and religious ceremonies of particular kind have at earlier had definite value for healthful life in this world. Water cleanses to some extent, but not entirely, because a long-continued heat is complete sterilization and freedom from bacteria and parasites secured. Therefore, great care is needed in the selection and preparation of foods which are not to be subjected to heat. Cress, lettuce, radish, and cucumber are commonly cultivated and handled in the market and are marketed in the fresh, very tender state, as they are, milk, raw gelators and other animal foods.

Chestnut Leaf With Fruit.—Dissolve a teaspoonful of gelatin in a cupful of chicken stock. When the mixture begins to set beat until frothy and add three-fourths of a cupful of heavy cream, which has been beaten stiff, then add a cupful and a half of chicken cut to dice. Season with pepper and salt and put into an angel-food pan with a funnel. When molded, turn out on a platter lined with lettuce leaves and fill the center with seasoned cooked peas. Serve with a rich boiled salad dressing or with a mayonnaise.

Oysters and Corn Bread.—Fry oysters in hot fat after rolling them in corn meal; well seasoned serve with a sauce made of half a cupful of catchup and the juice of half a lemon, seasoned with sugar, salt and pepper. Serve hot corn bread with the oysters

When you try to conceal your weight, Fresh, with pain made from bones you deceive yourself, not one. Let a defect, which is possibly but small, appear undisguised. A fault thus made is presumed to be great.—Martial.

LENTEN DISHES.

During the season of Lent there is

NOT number of wholesome dishes which are suitable for any meal instead of eggs (h a r d boiled), cheese and white sauce is especially well liked and is nutritious and tempting but highly nutritive.

Rice and Eggs.—Put a quarter of a cupful of rice with two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan and cook until the rice is brown, then add enough water to simmer slowly until the rice is tender. Add four or four eggs and a half cupful of milk to the rice and cook until the eggs are set and delicately cooked. Season with salt and a few dashes of paprika and serve on a hot platter.

Pepper Rarebit—Cook one tablespoonful of butter with one of chopped green pepper and one and a half cupfuls of milk, stirring constantly. Add a half cupful of tomato pulp and a third of a cupful of cheese, then add a half pound of rich cheese, cut in small pieces, and melt, stirring stir in one egg beaten lightly. Serve on salted wafers or toasted buttered bread.

Parsley Potatoes. — Cut potatoes with a cutter into small balls, cook in boiling salted water, drain and shake in a dish of cooled butter with finely chopped parsley. Salt and a few dashes of red pepper are added. Serve as a garnish to a platter of poached eggs.

If your slave commits a fault, do not immediately be angry with him; first give him some of the hard biskuit which Domitian makes.—Martial.

A cook should double one sense have; Should fancy for himself and master.—Martial.

LOW COST MEAT DISHES.

A pound of mutton which has been browned in hot fat after cutting in two inch cubes, then cooked in seasoned flour will, when carrots and a slice of onion have been added and boiling water to cover, serve for three or five. Simmer for two hours on the back part of the stove. The vegetables will be well seasoned with the meat and a generous helping of them and a small portion of meat will make a satisfying meal. A little extra quantity of oil, bacon fat, or cream to the gravy will add much to the relish of tissue and water, and have eaten such salads as most and bring supplying protein and carbohydrate, and thus have secured a fairly balanced ration. Modern dietetic investigation indicates that pagan and religious ceremonies of particular kind have at earlier had definite value for healthful life in this world. Water cleanses to some extent, but not entirely, because a long-continued heat is complete sterilization and freedom from bacteria and parasites secured. Therefore, great care is needed in the selection and preparation of foods which are not to be subjected to heat. Cress, lettuce, radish, and cucumber are commonly cultivated and handled in the market and are marketed in the fresh, very tender state, as they are, milk, raw gelators and other animal foods.

Chestnut Leaf With Fruit.—Dissolve a teaspoonful of gelatin in a cupful of chicken stock. When the mixture begins to set beat until frothy and add three-fourths of a cupful of heavy cream, which has been beaten stiff, then add a cupful and a half of chicken cut to dice. Season with pepper and salt and put into an angel-food pan with a funnel. When molded, turn out on a platter lined with lettuce leaves and fill the center with seasoned cooked peas. Serve with a rich

Strolling down Fifth Avenue, the New Yorker lights a FATIMA. Progressive young men everywhere buy three times as many FATIMAS as any other 15c cigarette.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

FATIMA TURKISH BLEND CIGARETTES

20 for 15¢

Little to Eat.

"Three Mexicans would rather fight than eat."

"Well, the facilities for fighting seem to be vastly superior to those for eating."

FARMERS WHO SUCCEED IN WESTERN CANADA

Those Who Exercise Thrift, Practice Due Economy, and Adopt Reasonable Methods Are Sure to Prosper.

Those who are interested in developing the agricultural resources of Western Canada, to bringing to the notice of those whom they desire to take part in this development present only the facts. There has never been given the impression that farming in Western Canada could be carried on without effort or labor, but it has been given the impression that farming in Western Canada could be carried on without effort or labor, but it has been successfully stated that better results can be secured with less outlay of capital, either in money or labor, than anywhere else on the continent. This has been proven time and time again. Hundreds of cases could be cited where men have taken up farms, either a homestead, or purchased from railways or land companies, and with little capital at the start have acquired a competence, have established good homes for themselves, and provided a more future. They have comfortable homes and all their surroundings are comfortable, speak of the reward that their thrift has accomplished.

Carl Dickan, of Russian Poland lived in Pittsburgh, Pa., for fourteen years, and saved up $1,200. In 1905 he took his $900 with him to Alberta. His own story is that he bought a quarter section, for which he agreed to pay $1,200. "In 1906 I had thirty acres of crop, threshed 900 bushels. In 1906 I bought another quarter. I now have one hundred acres under cultivation, and have never had a crop failure. Have threshed forty seven bushels of wheat per acre, but the average has been about forty. My oats for the eleven years that I have been here averaged forty-seven bushels to the acre. I now have 9 horses, 47 head of cattle, 33 hogs, which I consider worth $7,000. I have a thousand dollars worth of farm implements and suitable eating-house to get something in out."

Having quoted a likely place, they entered and took their seats at a small table, and when the waitress came for their order the young man help that I'm hungry." The waitress was brought in due course, and he started eating it with evident relish. The waitress waited a little time observing very much where she came in. At last, in sheer desperation, she said to her companion:

"Say, Jack, what's Jack?"

"Good," replied Jack. "I should think it is; it's ripping! You should get one."

'Looked That Way.

Lord Mersey, head of the Empress of Ireland Shipwreck investigation board, said to a new York reporter the other day:

"Much is still left to be desired, but ships are safer than they used to be."

With a smile the veteran jurist added:

"We no longer hear of skippers offering such excuses for their passage as the one offered by the skipper of the Wreck of the Hesperus:

"Well, gentlemen, no wonder we're late. We pumped the whole Atlantic three times through that ship coming across."—Washington Star.

Robins in West Virginia.

Hundreds of thousands of robins have decided to spend the winter in a dense pine woods near Berkley, W. Va., and the entire county determined to spend the remainder of the winter there. It has been famous for robins to winter as far north as this. Every afternoon near sundown great flocks of the birds arrive at the rookery from all directions. The birds are so closely packed in the roosting trees that many are killed slightly by breaking limbs.

In School Days.

When Walter Scott was a boy his teacher asked him to give the part of speech of the word "with."

"It's a noun," said young Scott.

"You are very stupid, said the teacher. "How come you to say such a thing?"

"I got it from the Bible, sir," said the future novelist, stoutly. "There's a verse that says they bound Samson with two cords."

Mick's Pipe.

The Irish Guards were holding a position at Ypres, and Friday bullets were the order of the day. The Germans endeavored to break through and after a particularly brisk volley Private Mulligan was heard to exclaim:

"Murder of wars, I'm done now altogether!"

"Why, have you been hit?" shouts Captain P——.

"Not entirely hit, sir," shouts Flynn; "but I've been walling this ten minutes for a smoke from Murphy's pipe, and by the powers they've just shot it out in his mouth."

SAGE TEA DARKENS GRAY HAIR TO ANY SHADE. TRY IT!

Keep Your Locks Youthful, Dark, Glossy and Thick With Garden Sage and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it comes back so gradually, so evenly. Preparing this mixture though, at home is messy and trouble-some. Now for 50c any one can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use bottled mixture, "Wyeth Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a token of age, and we all like a youthful and attractive appearance. Get Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger. Adv.

Soul Mates.

Knicker—What are soul mates? Becker—Generally two lefts.—New York Sun.

Good resolutions are inexpensive, but they are hard to keep.

Put Off Old Age

Some old folks are best and sickly (Others are sculpin and sinsy. It cost them "offdone" that works such abuse. Some lay down and quit. Put off this life sapping poison. Help the kidneys make it from the blood of them, live carefully and associate their age with the old reliable medicine Doan's Kidney Pills.

An Illinois Case

Mrs. C. A. Wilson, Mt. Carmel, Ill., says: "I had a lame back and kidney complaint for years. I could scarcely stand the pain long enough to get a drink of water. I was so dizzy I had to grab something to keep from falling. I was so nervous I could not sleep. I was so bloated I had to wear a bigger size dress. I felt tired all the time. I was discouraged and thought I could never be well. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I have had no trouble since."

Get Doan's at Any Store, 50c a Box

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOSTER-MILBURN CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Paxtine

A Soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed For Douches

In the local treatment of women's ills Paxtine is most efficacious. Leucorrhoea is a disease and very obstinate. No woman who has ever used medicated douches will be satisfied with anything but a healthy condition Paxtine produces and the results are so satisfactory. Paxtine is which follows use. Chamberlain's Paxtine is a soluble antiseptic powder to be dissolved in water as needed. Nothing else is as good. Paxtine is the best douche powder. Paxtine is recommended Paxtine in their physicians recommend Paxtine in their practice. Paxtine is the best douche powder. Paxtine is the best douche powder. Paxtine is the best douche powder

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH - - EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 20
SUBSCRIPTIONS:
Three Months - - - $ 40
Six Months - - - - 75
One Year - - - - - 1.50

MEXICO'S LATEST MAN OF THE HOUR

General Obregon, Now in Limelight, a Sonora Farmer.

SEVENTH LEADER APPEARS.

Strong Man of Today Is Well-Educated and Has No Desire to Continue War but Only Fights For What He Considers the Best Interests of His Fellow Countrymen.

Mexico City.—The tragedy of Mexico has a new leading man, the seventh in a period of a little more than four years. He is Alvaro Obregon, the Sonora farmer, who has had a chief place in the news from Mexico for the past few weeks, the one who led the capture of the ancient city of Puebla and his subsequent dictatorship in the distressed city of Mexico. He seemed pulled a weird, weary of Mexico revolutions, to turn on him. And out Villa, the disciple of scorn!

Of the leading men of the Mexican tragedy Porfirio Diaz was the first. Then came Madero, then Pascual Orozco, then Victoriano Huerta, then Carranza, chief Villa and now comes Obregon, elevated and apparently one of the ablest of the scores of guerrilla fighters who have appeared in Mexican history in the past half century.

The Carranzistas admit that their hopes are in this man from Sonora. They call him the "Napoleon of the West," the "chief" of Carranza' and "the general who can read as well as write."

Obregon like Villa, Orozco and Carranza, is a northern Mexican. He comes from the great state of Sonora which touches the American border west of El Paso. Sonora is a Yaqui Indian stronghold, and Obregon is proud of the fact that the blood of the Yaquis, among the best of Mexican fighters, is in his veins. However, he is not a full blooded Yaqui, and the fairness of his complexion is due to a liberal admixture of pure Spanish. Like Villa, he has a little of the Mayo Indian in him.

"Paradoxical as it may seem," said Francisco Elias, a close friend of Obregon and now the Carranza consul general in New York, "Obregon, who is the most capable military leader at this moment, is at heart and by training a soldier at all. While acquiring himself with great credit in the campaigns he is conducting to drive Villa and the other equals of the country out of power, his constant dream is sometime to lay aside his sword and be a farmer and always will be one. I know that he hopes some day to return to his home ranch. More than once he has expressed his disgust for warfare, which he has called a devil's game in which humans have no business to indulge.

"He is a splendid physical specimen. He is six feet in height and like the Indian somewhere in the neighborhood of 180 pounds."

It was not chief Obregon, the Chihuahua who had been Madero's right hand man, turned against his old chief that Obregon defied to take the field. Obregon entered the revolution quietly and without consulting any one. He went among his Sonora Yaquis and armed and organized a battalion of about 400 men. He telegraphed Madero, then in the last days of his power, "Money in Mexico City, that he had his men and stood ready to oppose Orozco. The man who covered Obregon's offer was Huerta, then directing the field operations against Orozco. Less than a year later Obregon was to be one of Huerta's most persistent military opponents.

Her now the contest in Mexico is between Obregon and Villa, with Obregon the master in the southwest and Villa still supreme in the northern tier of states. At Pueblo Obregon inflicted a crushing defeat on the Villistas forces and followed it up by a second entry into Mexico City, which was evacuated by the Villa and Zapata recipe. Now it is reported that Obregon has a second time evacuated the capital and that the South Zapata is once again supreme there.

Photo by American Press Association.

GENERAL ALVARO OBREGON

which touches the American border west of El Paso. Sonora is a Yaqui Indian stronghold, and Obregon is proud of the fact that the blood of the Yaquis, among the best of Mexican fighters, is in his veins. However, he is not a full blooded Yaqui, and the fairness of his complexion is due to a liberal admixture of pure Spanish. Like Villa, he has a little of the Mayo Indian in him.

THESE ARE THE ASSETS THAT MAKE CHARLEVOIX FAMOUS

Charlevoix has:

A first-class sewer and drainage system.
Absolutely pure water with an excellent circulating system for domestic and fire purposes.
A splendid electric lighting system.
Paved and macadam streets.
A twenty acre public park along shore of Lake Michigan
Five prosperous churches.
Excellent schools.
A $25,000 Masonic Temple.
Inland Lake with 60 miles of navigable coast line.

VERBAL MISHAPS.

Dickens Once Made Two Bad Breaks in Same Evening.

Charles Dickens once wrote to a friend: "I have distinguished myself in two respects lately. I took a lady down to dinner and talked to her about the Duchess of Durham's reception in the past few weeks, the one at which the exquisite of the ancient city of Puebla and his subsequent dictatorship in the distressed city of Mexico, has seemed pulled a weird, weary of Mexican revolutions, to turn on him. And out Villa, the disciple of scorn!

Of the leading men of the Mexican tragedy Porfirio Diaz was the first. Then came Madero, then Pascual Orozco, then Victoriano Huerta, then Carranza, chief Villa and now comes Obregon, elevated and apparently one of the ablest of the scores of guerrilla fighters who have appeared in Mexican history in the past half century.

The Carranzistas admit that their hopes are in this man from Sonora. They call him the "Napoleon of the West," the "chief" of Carranza' and "the general who can read as well as write."

Obregon like Villa, Orozco and Carranza, is a northern Mexican. He comes from the great state of Sonora

J. C. ROCKWELL'S "SUNNY SOUTH" CO

There are few more popular theatrical attractions on the road than the J. C. Rockwell "Sunny South" Company which will be seen in the Charlevoix Theatre, Saturday evening, March 27th.

This company, although billed under its old title, is, never-the-less, a brand new performance from the rise to the final fall of the curtain. This season Mr. Rockwell claims to have the newest, freshest, most artistic and thoroughly equipped colored show ever sent on tour. He backs his claim and invites public attention by presenting a musical performance that has more original ideas and up-to-the-minute novelties than any similar organization. As on its former visits, it will be found to be clean to a fault and during the entire performance there is not a line, or action nor an insinuation to which exception can be taken.

The fun which will be handed over the footlights, is all new and needs no prompting to point the way to the laughs. It is bristling with new, novel and entertaining features and it is brim full of laughable situations, charming musical numbers, also several excellent specialties which will make the audience set up and take notice. It is a musical performance, wedded to the most tuneful music one would care to listen to, full of go-ger and life, with a dull moment from start to finish, is a clean cut and finished performance that is bound to please those who jog good clean comedy, clever vaudeville stunts and catchy music, at the one time bring free from the horrible usually seen in performances of this kind.

The organization is accompanied by a 10-piece concert band and a superb orchestra. The band will head the "Kentucky" parade at noon.

The prices of admission have been fixed at 25c, 35c and 50c.

Seats can now be secured at Central Drug Store.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, March 22nd 1915

The common council for the city of Charlevoix met on the above date, Mayor Nickolls presiding.

Aldermen present, Seo. Priest, Carey Cartier, Barney and Shapton.

Absent none.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved as corrected.

The petitions of Raymond Nowland and F. J. Gallagher relative to the extension of the water mains on Prospect St. and Lincoln Ave. was referred to Electric Light and Water committee to be reported on. March 29, 1915.

Moved by Alderman Sec and seconded by Alderman Shapton that the matter of renovating the City Residence occupied by Colonel Hamilton be referred to the Public Buildings, Parks and Bridges Committee with power to act at a cost not to exceed $60.00. Motion carried.

The Public Buildings, Parks and Bridges Committee reported that the contract between the city of Charlevoix and the Gleaners stand as made out.

Moved by Alderman Sec and seconded by Alderman Cartier that the committee report be accepted. Motion carried.

Alderman Sec moved by the Mayor. The petition for sewer abutting on Lewis street between Dixon avenue and Pulaskey avenue as presented by Chas. Novak and nine others was referred to Committee on Streets, Sewers and Public health.

There being no further business the council adjourned.

P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

VIRTUE OF AN APPLE.

As Old Time the Fruit Was Called the "Food of the Gods."

[illegible] before so fortunate as the consumer of all fruits that the apple is a greatest friend in the [illegible] kingdom may not be fully [illegible] It was called the "food of [illegible]" because it was believed to be the [illegible] reviver of youth to which [illegible] ancient world owe their [illegible] to great age and feebleness.

[illegible] have long enjoyed traditional [illegible] which has been [illegible] with verdict not very [illegible] It is the [illegible] of the golden tales [illegible] and institutions and [illegible] precious contents among [illegible] of [illegible] analysis of late [illegible] shows that the ancient giver [illegible] fruit which has been [illegible] with enthusiasm, sound, [illegible] acid, gentle acid, fiber, water and [illegible].

The acid of apples neutralizes the [illegible] of chalky matter caused by too [illegible] meat and thereby helps to keep [illegible] young. Apples are good for the constipation and help drive out the [illegible] which cause skin [illegible]. They are good for the brain, which [illegible] some measure of the [illegible] needing stimulation. The acids [illegible] diagnosis of the [illegible] that comes with some forms [illegible].

Apples are [illegible], of which apple cookin a better part even than any other [illegible] of vegetable, remove the mental [illegible] of the brain and sound [illegible].

Does Your Son Smoke?

"A Virginia editor, and a prohibitionist, gives the most intuitive proof of an [illegible] that we have seen. He says: 'We [illegible] a cigarette when you [illegible] a boy smoking one and a manly person to look at a superb specimen.' If we the editors of all are [illegible] to our boys, we shall see a good and all good effects experience this advertising of the evil effects of cigarettes upon the boys of our land. Some of these effects are [illegible] and some are [illegible] the work that does not evoke if they proceed a fulsome [illegible] on other subjects [illegible] the [illegible] that precedes the last word of Margaret's [illegible] 'Ah, sweet mystery of life, at last I see the ecstasy, the thrill, the thrill of my soul.' L. Brown.

Napoleon as an Editor.

"The Almanach de Gotha was already of sufficient importance over a century ago to present a dignity from Napoleon. In fact, 20, 1807, he wrote to Champagny, his foreign minister, complaining that the latest edition of the Almanach de Gotha is full of errors, no account having been taken of the changes wrought by me in Germany. Tell the minister from Gotha to call on you and inform him that this must be set right in the forthcoming edition. Insist on seeing the section devoted to Germany before the edition is published."

OXY---ACETYLENE WELDING OF ALL METALS

Cracked Water Jackets and Cast Iron Parts A Specialty.

Expert Tire REPAIRING

FULLY EQUIPPED MACHINE SHOP

GOODE'S GARAGE
TRAVERSE CITY

MISS. A. H. KENNING
Announces the Spring AND Summer Opening--
On and after March 15.
Newest Creations in SPRING HATS
EXCLUSIVE MODELS.
OPEN EVENINGS.

SnappyShoeStyles
We have the nobbiest shoe styles in town. Our new line has just arrived and we ask you to inspect it. You will be interested in the latest styles and exceptional values.
We sell the Famous Mayer HONORBILT SHOES
—because they are the best—they are not only leaders in style but dependable for wear. Mayer Honorbilt Shoes are made over the latest lasts. The material is selected to give greatest service and the workmanship is of the very highest quality. We also show Mayer Shoes for Women and Children.
Come in and see the line.
MASON'S Department Store.

Ford owners drive their own cars. Ford simplicity gives this pleasure. Simplicity in construction. Simplicity in control. It doesn't require an expert mechanic to understand and operate a Ford car.
The Ford is easy to care for. Wonderfully inexpensive to maintain and operate—less than two cents a mile. Economy, simplicity, comfort, convenience, make the Ford car the utility for everybody in city and country—more than 700,000 now in use—the useful car, for all the people.
Buyers will share in profits if we sell at retail 300,000 new Ford cars between August 1914 and August 1915.
Roadster $440; Touring Car $490; Town Car $640; Coupelet $590; Sedan $775, fully equipped, f. o. b. Detroit.
On display and sale at
A. L. HART & SON,
304 Clinton Street
CHARLEVOIX, - MICH.

"BEATING BACK" TELLS THRILLING STORY

"Beating Back" the life story of Al. Jennings, former outlaw, as pictured by the Thanhouser Film Corporation, has been acknowledged by press and public to be the most remarkable film of its kind ever produced. Occupying six reels with Al. Jennings himself as the principal character, the picture marks an epoch in the history for the unusual themes for presentation on the screen.

Al. Jennings was for years the leader of a gang of train robbers which started in outlawry the notorious Jesse James outfit. Jennings, prior to becoming a "long rider," had been county prosecutor sending many bandits to the penitentiary for their wrong doings, but he was finally arrested for his own wrong doings, and sent to the penitentiary. The citizens of Oklahoma territory gave a sigh of relief. Through the intercession of Senator Hanna, Jennings was pardoned by President McKinley. Subsequently President Roosevelt restored his citizenship and today he is making a big fight for the Democratic nomination for the governorship of Oklahoma. In the film, which was staged by Carroll Fleming, former general producing director at the New York Hippodrome, all the Jennings deeds of outlawry, are portrayed, together with the story of his life succeeding his capture and imprisonment in Ohio penitentiary. At the Majestic Theatre, Monday evening, March 29th.

Fish!
We know you will buy where you can get the most and the best for your money.
We catch our own fish, therefore you save the middleman's profit.
Located 3 doors east of X L Creamery.
Also vacuum packed.
All standing orders answered.
H. L. BRADY & SON.

Religious Notes

Congregational Church
(CONGREGATIONAL NOTICES)
Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.
Bible School, 12 o'clock.
Young People's Meeting, 6:00 p. m.
Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:00 p. m.

(AT IRONTON)
Bible School at 1:30 p. m.
Preaching, 2:30 p. m.

Baptist Church
A. M.—Anxiety for Souls.
P. M.—The Second Coming of Christ.
B. Y. P. U.—Topic, Enlarged Missionary Ideals.—Leader, Vida Sanford.
Bible Study and Prayer Meeting Thursday 7:00 p. m. The Doctrine of Salvation and Difficult Passage.—1st John 5:16-18.

Christian Science
Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.
Sunday service 10:30 a. m. Subject, "Unity."
Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.
Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m., also 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service
8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:30 a. m.—High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.
Masses during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church
Services second and fourth Thursday in each month, by Rev. Harris, of Petoskey.

Methodist Church.
A. M. The Ethics of Politics.
P. M. Drawing the Lines.

Health Promotes Happiness
Without health, genuine joy is impossible, without good digestion and regular bowel movement you cannot have health. Why neglect keeping bowels open and risk being sick and suffering? You don't have to. Take one small Dr. King's New Life Pill at night, in the morning you will have a full, free bowel movement and feel much better. Helps your appetite and digestion. Try one tonight.
FOR SALE—Resort cottages well located. Houses and lots in any part of the city, also 14 acres close to city. Apply to H. S. Harsha.

Rock Product Company,
Producers and Manufacturers of
Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Flux
Sugar Stone
Phone 80.

PETER BENSON
CONTRACTOR FOR
Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Cess Pools, Cellars, Drain Ditches. Open Ditches, Etc.
If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

25 Post Cards 10¢ ASSORTED
Best Wishes, Greetings, Letters, Birthday, etc. Also put your name on our Post Card Stationery.
Send 10c for one sample copy of the Family Story Paper, also Catalog and Premium List. Postage 1c stamps for return postage, etc.
FAMILY STORY PAPER
24-26 Vandewater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes
Electric Construction
Auto and Boat Supplies.
214 Bridge St. - Phone 134
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

ROBERT G. MADILL
General Contractor and Builder
Estimates furnished. Phone 388 Residence. Office in County Bank Building

DR. J. A. AULD,
DENTIST,
Office in Old Post-Office Block.
Over R. L. Lewis's Ex's Store.
TELEPHONE NO. 139.

R. L. LEWIS
Attorney at Law.
Office in Priest's Block.
Charlevoix - Michigan

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS SHOULD USE
5 DROPS
The Best Remedy for all forms of Rheumatism
LUMBAGO SCIATICA, GOUT, NEURALGIA, AND KIDNEY TROUBLES
5 DROPS
STOP THE PAIN
Gives Quick Relief
Six Dollar Bottles
SOLD AT ALL DRUGGISTS
SIMPLE "AUDIBOY" FOR DEAFNESS
Sent on Request
Cut Out This Advertisement
Cleveland Audibody Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Constipation
Is to be dreaded. It leads to serious disorders, Piles, Indigestion, Pimples, Bad Headaches, Poisoned System and Bad Breath. Don't let it get you down. Don't let Constipation Get Ahead of You. Keep your Kidneys, Liver and Bowels Clean and Healthy. Find your cause of trouble and cure it. Nothing better than
Dr. King's New Life Pills
All Druggists, 25 cents.
SATISFACTION OR MONEY BACK

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.
VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, April 1, 1915. — NUMBER 50

A HOME BANK MINUS STOCK SUPERVISION 1915
Safety First-
YOUR pocket is not a very good depository for your money. It does not pay interest and it allows your money to be constantly subject to loss by theft or accident.
We will not only protect your money against loss but will pay you 4 percent interest, so that the money you save will be constantly increasing.
With the Opening of the Springtime, open an account with this bank
CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
W. J. RACHOW, Cashier
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't Cashier.

A Savings Account
Is a friend in adversity. And a friend a great majority of people need sooner or later. Life's road is an uncertain highway, leading us over all kinds of rough ground and experiences. We may be fat with plenty today and lean in poverty tomorrow. The only sure and safe way to be prepared for these contingencies is to begin saving, if only a little at a time and keep it up regularly and persistently
Start a Bank Account
Put your money where it will be safe and bring you a little interest. Look out for the principal. See that that is safe and the income will take care of itself. Start an account with us where it will bring you interest and still be at your disposal any time you want it.
Charlevoix County Bank
of Nicholls, Buttars and Bridge
4% on deposits if left six months 4%

Local and Personal Notes

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS
J. L. Crane
C. Dantes & Son

Capt. Chas. Roe, of Harbor Springs, was in the city Tuesday.

Mrs. L. S. Sue is quite seriously ill at her home on the north side.

Mrs. R. N. Faulkner returned home from Chicago last Thursday.

Wm. Powell was brought here Friday from Boyne City, bound over to circuit court on a charge of wife desertion. He failed to get bail.

Miss Emma Bennett, who has been spending the winter in California writes from Sharon, Pa., where she was called by the death of a relative.

A. N. Chase and wife, of Norwood township, have accepted the management of D. H. Day's boarding house at Glen Haven. They left for that place Monday.

The Dictionary Club will meet Thursday afternoon of this week with Mrs. Crighton, South Bridge St. Subject, "Porto Rico." Roll call, April quotations.

Wood Bros., electricians, have leased and will add one more to the vacant stores in the Sec block, corner Bridge and Antrim streets as a display room and laboratory.

The remains of the young son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Arnold Jr., who died in Pontiac last week, arrived here Tuesday afternoon for interment. Funeral was held at ten Wednesday morning at Lee's undertaking rooms.

Ice conditions remain practically the same as a week ago. There is no lice of any strength off this harbor. At St. James the harbor is full, ice out from the point, the lake is clear. Wednesday morning Capt. Pete McGaffery, with the 3 hoosiers Maple, from the mail over with attentions to make a landing at the point, and anticipated no trouble.

The SENTINEL is minded to submit one of the greatest fishing propositions ever put offered here. We will send the SENTINEL and "The Farming Business," a first-class agricultural journal for $2.00, including six hardy, ever-blooming rose bushes. To this, we will be added one of those handy kitchen implements.

Applications have been filed with the highway department for 1,668 miles of state reward road to be constructed this year. Statistics compiled by the highway department show that the amount of road tax collected in Michigan has been increasing steadily. In 1901 the total road tax was approximately $2,500,000, while last year the total tax for road construction exceeded $6,000,000.

Special Services at the Methodist Church Easter Sunday. At 6 a. m. a sunrise service conducted by the pastor. At 10:30 the pastor will preach on the meaning of Easter. Special music will be rendered at this service. In the evening at 7:30 the Sunday school will have charge. The choir will render the cantata, The Gospel of Easter. You are most cordially invited to worship with us.

THE ELLSWORTH REAL ESTATE AGENCY
Will get our new property lists soon. Prospects are fine for this season. If you have lands to sell or rent write me at once. Terms are easy. I have the names of 160 good prospects in my office right now. Get in with an Agency that is doing lots of good advertising. Don't now.
Yours truly,
E. R. HARRIS.
Ellsworth, Michigan
3-11-4

Another West Michigan Pike trip will be made this coming summer. The date for leaving St. Joseph is fixed for July 12th. Mackinaw City is to be the point where the "tour" will end. This tour might be planned to include the above road from Harbor Springs to Cross Village, and for scenic beauty there is nothing to surpass this between St. Joe and Mackinaw. The experience of the last two seasons, however, has taught our people that the tour officials who plan and determine the route, for reasons best known to themselves, seem to prefer to take their followers through a far less beautiful region.

J. L. CRANE
The Pre-Easter Display of - WOOLTEX STYLES -
The day above all others when refined, becoming clothes are most appreciated. The spring day of fashion, when we doff the somber colors of winter. The day that marks a change in our thoughts and our clothing. There is a charm and becoming beauty about these new spring Wooltex Coats that makes them especially desirable.
WOOLTEX COATS
$14.00-$18.50
PALMER COATS
$5.00 - $12.50
We cover the coat wants of the public from lowest grade of good goods to the highest grade of the best goods.

ELSTON HOTEL A RUIN

WELL KNOWN HOSTELRIE SUCCUMBS TO FLAMES EARLY TUESDAY MORNING

Only The Two Wings Saved From Flames—Dog Gave First Alarm

At about three o'clock Tuesday morning, while everybody in the house, including about a dozen guests were sleeping peacefully, Dick Boniface's office dog, which was sleeping in the office of the Hotel Elston, broke in upon the quiet of nocturnal repose by continuous and loud barking, at the same time going to the room of Mrs. Nash and jumping upon her bed, his transcendent indication that something was radically wrong.

The proprietress arose, and discovered that fire was raging in the rear portion of the hotel. The guests and employees aroused and an alarm sent in, when brought the fire department out promptly. It was discovered that the blaze, which evidently originated in the urinal room, was well started and ate up the rear annex, which embraced the splendid dining room, the kitchen and underneath, was enveloped and had a most stubborn hold upon the premises. At seven o'clock the firemen had the blaze under control, but the entire portion, which includes the baby and dining rooms, together with the entire roof, dining room and kitchen section was a ruin. The two wings, which are entirely equipped up sleeping rooms, were very slightly injured.

Mr. A. T. Stewart, who was sitting in his room, looking out upon the lake, saw the blaze of every person in the hotel was aroused, and when the building of the wing, his room was fed with water and he was manifestly cut off, was compelled to slide down a long distance the hall to his room.

From the street a stranger lounging of the late night pass "on the gleam the" and fail to discover evidence of the disaster. The exterior was perfectly unscathed, but should he enter the main door into the lobby only ruin and devastation met the view. The damage is roughly estimated at $20,000, fully covered by insurance.

The hotel was owned and managed by Mrs. Cora E. Nichols. It was one of the leading resorts of Southern Michigan, and enjoyed an excellent reputation, especially with the traveling public. At this writing nothing can be learned as to the probability of rebuilding; but it may be put down as certain that the house will be rebuilt; but whether or not it will be made ready for summer business is a question.

CHARLEVOIX HOTEL

Ownership and Management Transferred to Dr. J. A. Auld Monday Last

A deal occurred Monday whereby Dr. J. A. Auld became proprietor and manager of the Hotel Charlevoix, for several years past under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Beaubien.

It is understood that in the deal the Beaubiens acquire the ownership of the Auld north side property, and the fruit farm in the southwest part of town. Possession is to be taken at once.

CONCERNING THE HOSPITAL

To THE EDITOR:

As to the question of voting on a tax for $25,000 hospital to be voted on at the April election of the people of Charlevoix, I think someone ought to enlighten us more on the question before we hand ourselves up with a building that we cannot maintain. In the first place the building in itself is the least, and there ought to have been a $10,000 appropriation for the same, and should vote on the question of a hospital.

As to our support people, for their convenience and as a drawing card, I think the tax-payers are over burdened with taxes and will of substantial note. I fully agree that we ought to have a hospital but not at the expense of the tax payers and moreover, a white elephant of this nature.

Yours respectfully,
E. C. GORDEN.

A BIRTHDAY RECEPTION

At the home of Mrs. Alson Wood, on the afternoon of March 24th, fourteen intimate friends of Mrs. Hettie Bennett called upon her as a surprise, and assembled unbeknown to her, at her home. The surprise was a total one, as Hettie was greatly startled.

Hettie very gracefully set up a delicious lunch for guests.

After a pleasant hour of conversation the table was laid for sixteen, and as the guests departed the laden baskets of good things could prepare. Mrs. Hettie was the recipient of several pieces of tableware, made under auspices of friendship, which Hettie will prize highly.

The following were present: Mrs. Hettie Bennett, Mrs. Ella Stewart, Mrs. Mary J. Quiet of Ellsworth; Miss Josephine Clark of East Jordan; Mrs. Robert Knight of Jones, Kansas; John P. Clark of Jonesville, Mich.; Mrs. Susan Palmer of Lowa, Kansas; Geo. W. Clark of Alaska, Kansas and the writer.

Mrs. Cora E. Nichols, formerly of the U. S. Army and is at Manila, Philippine Island.

County Normal Notes

MILLIAN ARNOT

Clare Thomson substituted in the [illegible] Monday during the absence of Mr. Smith.

[illegible] Thursday morning on account of illness.

A beautiful white hyacinth and a white crocus are now interesting features of the normal room.

Rose Grosenik, Lillian Akins, Gladys Waterman and Ethel Sanford are having work in practice teaching.

A large and beautiful cineraria moth was presented to the normal room by Pomonian in to be taken at cost.

Friday.

The normal class has finished work in arithmetic and is now taking under the direction of Miss Whiting. The event was celebrated with the serving of ice cream and cake in the class and some dessert cooked by Mrs. Whiting.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, March 29th, 1915.

The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date. Mayor Nicholls presiding.

Aldermen present, Priest, Cartier, Carey, Shapton and Sec.

Absent none.

The last meeting were read and approved.

Enter Alderman Sec.

Moved by Alderman Shapton and seconded by Alderman Priest that the petition signed by Chas. Novak and others relative to a sewer on Lewis and Dixon Ave. and Pulaskey Ave. be granted.

Motion carried.

Moved that the petition of Sec be granted and the necessary resolutions be drawn by the proper attorney. Motion carried.

Alderman Priest seconded by Alderman Carey moved the adoption of Resolution No. 188. Motion carried. The following aye and nay votes.—Aldermen Sec, Priest, Cartier, Barney, Shapton and Carey. Nays none.

The electric light and Water committee reported that work is to be put on the petition of Raymond Nowland and Prospect St. water main on Prospect St. and Lincoln Ave.

The petition for water main signed by [illegible] and others to be put on Lewis and Dixon Ave. from Sec to Cleveland, from Garfield to Hubbard along Grant, from Garfield to Lincoln Ave. from State to Sherman along Lincoln, from Grant to Sherman along Hubbard together with necessary fire hydrants was referred to Committee on Water and Electric Light.

Moved that the further business the council adjourned until Tuesday, April 6th, 1915.

P. E. Vandermade, City Clerk.

Notice!

Proposed Amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution.

Notice is hereby given that at the ballot to be used at the general election in the several election precincts of the City of Charlevoix, State of Michigan on Monday, April 5, A. D. 1915. A proposition will be submitted to amend article eight of the Constitution of the State of Michigan, by adding a new section thereto of said article, authorizing drainage districts to issue bonds for drainage purposes. Said section if amended will read as follows:

SEC. 17 (NEW). Any drainage district established under provision of law, may issue bonds for drainage purposes within such district.

The ballot shall be provided, for voting on this proposition, after showing the following form:

"Shall the amendment to article eight of the constitution relative to permitting drainage districts to issue bonds.

Amendment to article eight of the constitution to permit drainage districts to issue bonds for drainage purposes.

YES [ ]

Amendment to article eight of the constitution to permit drainage districts to issue bonds for drainage purposes.

NO [ ]

Every qualified elector shall be entitled to vote a mark made by an elector in the square pertaining to the word YES, will be counted against said proposition, and every legally cast ballot found to contain a cross opposite the word NO will be counted against said proposition.

Dated this 22d day of March, A. D. 1915.

P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

Boyne Citizen: Word from Mrs. A. A. Horton, in Florida, to Mrs. W. F. Sherman, of this city, brought the news that Mr. Horton, formerly known in this city as "Uncle Ash," has been suffering with a severe attack of rheumatism, which at time of their arrival in the south. It is to be hoped at present but is confined to his bed and ordered to remain there for some time by his physician. The latest report brings word of Mr. and Mrs. Sweet and Mr. and Mrs. Kassell.

Notice!

Proposed Amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution.

Notice is hereby given that at the ballot to be used at the general election in the several election precincts of the City of Charlevoix, State of Michigan on Monday, April 5, A. D. 1915. A proposition will be submitted to amend article eight of the Constitution of the State of Michigan, by adding a new section thereto of said article, authorizing drainage districts to issue bonds for drainage purposes. Said section if amended will read as follows:

SEC. 17 (NEW). Any drainage district established under provision of law, may issue bonds for drainage purposes within such district.

The ballot shall be provided, for voting on this proposition, after showing the following form:

"Shall the amendment to article eight of the constitution relative to permitting drainage districts to issue bonds.

Amendment to article eight of the constitution to permit drainage districts to issue bonds for drainage purposes.

YES [ ]

Amendment to article eight of the constitution to permit drainage districts to issue bonds for drainage purposes.

NO [ ]

Every legally cast ballot found to contain a mark made by an elector in the square pertaining to the word YES, will be counted against said proposition, and every legally cast ballot found to contain a cross opposite the word NO will be counted against said proposition.

Dated this 22d day of March, A. D. 1915.

P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

Boyne Citizen: Word from Mrs. A. A. Horton, in Florida, to Mrs. W. F. Sherman, of this city, brought the news that Mr. Horton, formerly known in this city as "Uncle Ash," has been suffering with a severe attack of rheumatism, which at time of their arrival in the south. It is to be hoped at present but is confined to his bed and ordered to remain there for some time by his physician. The latest report brings word of Mr. and Mrs. Sweet and Mr. and Mrs. Kassell.

THESE ARE THE ASSETS THAT MAKE CHARLEVOIX FAMOUS

Charlevoix has:
A first-class sewer and drainage system.
Absolutely pure water with an excellent circulating system for domestic and fire purposes.
A splendid electric lighting system.
Paved and macadam streets.
A twenty acre public park along shore of Lake Michigan
Five prosperous churches.
Excellent schools.
A $25,000 Masonic Temple.
Inland Lake with 60 miles of navigable coast line.

East Jordan Herald: Thomas Clark, one of the oldest residents of this county died on Tuesday March 23, 1915. He was born in Thomasville, Ohio, May 1st, 1841, being almost 74 years of age at the time of his death. He was married in marriage to Miss Kate Kinson in 1865. Late years were hard of whom eight are living. He came to Michigan forty-two years ago and settled where the Walker school house now stands. In 1881 he moved from there to Shelby County, Kansas, and came again to Michigan in 1900 settling near Boyne City. Last year he moved to East Jordan having purchased the property of Mr. and Mrs. L. Hoshaw. The names of the children are as follows: Mrs. Sarah Count of Ellsworth; Mrs. Mary J. Quiet of Ellsworth; Miss Josephine Clark of East Jordan; Mrs. Robert Knight of Jones, Kansas; John P. Clark of Jonesville, Mich.; Mrs. Susan Palmer of Lowa, Kansas; Geo. W. Clark of Alaska, Kansas and the writer.

HULL HOLECHECK

Married, at the Methodist Parsonage, Wednesday March 24, 1915, by Rev. Walker, Mr. Fred Hull and Miss Nina Holecheck.

Mr. and Mrs. Hull are well known in Charlevoix. They will make their home on the Hull farm. Their many friends wish for them a long and happy life.

Dog of Many.

"What kind of a dog would you possibly be a mongrel?

"Have a kind of all around handy man, mongrel. I am being alive, fetch a message from one house to another, stick close to home, bring home the bacon, tree cats, run out when the chickens get loose, bay at the moon, and do my share of howling in the night."

Pine Forest!

How it clears the throat and head of the most stubborn catarrh. It is this special Norwegian Pine Forest brought from the Black Forest. Pinex Forest brought from Hr. Hoff's Pine Tar Honey. Antiseptic and healing. Buy a bottle today. All druggists, 35c.

In the Grip of Fear

By HAROLD CARTER

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman)

"Tomorrow!" said Cynthia softly.

"Tomorrow!"

Charley Askew swung round in his chair and faced his wife desolately.

"Cynthia, dear, I don't want you to do it," he said.

"Not once more, dearest? For the last time before we are free?"

"Oh Cynthia," he cried, "if you knew what it means to me. I sit here every night like a timid woman until the time comes to go round to the circus entrance for you. Even one night more will drive me mad, Cynthia.

"But you must bear up one night more, for both our sakes, dearest," his young wife stammered.

Three weeks before Charlie Askew, a young man in a brokers' office, saw no future before him. On twenty dollars a week, which might perhaps rise to forty by the time he was a middle-aged man, he was trying to support Cynthia, whom he had married six months before. They boarded—and how they hated the boarding-house! How they longed for that home which always eluded them, phantomlike, even with the possibility of installment furniture, simply because it was impossible to get the bare monthly rent ahead. They had married for love, and love was all—except the twenty dollars a week—that they had to live on.

However, they forgot their troubles in their mutual love until Cynthia developed signs of long trouble. It was not as yet serious—it would never become perfectly well if he could take his wife West. But that was totally out of the question.

They had dreamed all their lives of a little farm. Both were city bred; both longed for the country life as one in which they could find their highest ideal come true. And if only they could raise seven hundred dollars they saw their way clear, seven hundred! They might as well have cried for seventy thousand.

"My Wife!" Gasped Charley.

Then Cynthia had done a daring thing. She had seen an advertisement for a young woman of courage—Cynthia felt sure she had courage—to play a small part in the circus. Cynthia thought it was with the lions. She had gone, and had been turned down by one of five hundred applicants. There were had girls and short girls, stout and thin girls, spruce girls and slatternly ones—but she—she was the one picked by the manager.

Indeed there was nothing strange about that for she had that air and breeding which were a nine qua non for the task. But Cynthia thought it was a mistake.

She was to be strapped into an automobile which looped the loop every night. And for the five minutes which the whole act required she was to receive fifty dollars, slightly for three weeks—in all nine hundred dollars.

"They ain't no risk at all," the manager explained. "We've tried it out a hundred times. I'll show you."

Cynthia saw the old performer, who was retiring that week, go through the performance. When the girl came back from her terrifying ride, she was white and shaking.

"Lost her nerve," the manager explained. "They all do sooner or later. Then is the first one gone. No, I don't know why it is. They don't mind it the first time or two or three. He is used about the limit for all of em. How, ever the show goes south in the three weeks, and I ain't going to take you with us, because your time to lose your nerve would come as soon as we'd paid your fare to Cuba. So it's just for three weeks. Are you on?"

Cynthia was "on." But, after she had signed her agreement and had Charley the hardest task lay before her.

At first he positively refused to sanction it. It was only after a terrible quiet in which Cynthia lay breathless about the work she was to do, that her husband consented. And that was because he knew that if they couldn't earn the money it meant that Cynthia must die of the long months in which they could find their highest ideal come true. And if only they showed him the agreement and laughed in his face.

"No money till Saturday," he said. "If she don't stay out the week she don't get a penny."

Cynthia stayed out that week, and another, and most of the third. This was the last night, the last Saturday, and Charley had pleaded with her to let the week's salary go and be content with the six hundred.

But three hundred dollars seemed a stiff price to pay for a single night, and at last he sullenly acquiesced. But when Cynthia had gone he sat in their room overwhelmed with the fears that would insist in creeping upon him, numbing his brain and paralyzing his courage.

The last night! Reason told him that no harm could come to her, and yet in his mind's eye was a picture of that awful leap of the heavy automobile through space. He saw Cynthia upside down, strapped helpless, into automobile missing the track and burling its tons of metal through the air, crushing Cynthia beneath the wreckage. She would have no chance at all; she would never even know that she had died.

The sweat dripped from his brow. He remembered their happy life together. On Monday they had planned to start for the West with their nine hundred dollars. He had already resigned his position. Now—it was unbearable.

The fearful pronunciation would not stand. It grew and grew until it became certainty. At last he flung on his hat and ran down the stairs, out into the street, and toward the circus—anywhere.

Something had seemed to snap in his heart, and he was sure now that Cynthia was dead. He ran, panting, along the street, reached the side door of the circus, and tried to force his way past the doorkeeper.

"Now then, young fellow," remonstrated the bare-headed functionary.

"My wife!" gasped Charley; but the doorkeeper saw in him only a jealous husband who had come perhaps to create a disturbance within. And Charley was too incoherent to explain. He struggled. The doorkeeper tried to fling him out. Circus hands came running up.

"I tell you my wife's in there!" gasped the frantic man. "She's dead! She's in the dip of death. She—"

They thought he was a madman now. And suddenly, as they were forcing him to the door, Cynthia stood before him, radiant.

"Charley!" she cried. "This is my husband! How dare you strike him? Charley, what is it? Why you were afraid for me?"

He fell back, fainting from the reaction, while, under her directions the doorkeeper changed from a lion to a lamb, fanned the man's face and tapped him in kindly fashion upon the shoulder.

"You didn't have an accident?" earnest Charley Askew faintly.

"Why, no, dear," cried his wife. "And I've got the money, too. Three hundred dollars—and we leave for the West Monday."

"Whoop!" shouted Charley, springing upon her and trying to embrace the doorkeeper. But that functionary had dignerity withdrawn, as Charley kissed the next most accessible person—whom he had often kissed before.

TO DRILL HOLES IN GLASS

Copper Wire With a Mixture of Emery and Oil, Will Do the Work Well and Quickly.

The following is a satisfactory method of drilling holes in glass: Take a piece of straight copper the size of the hole that it is required to drill. The tubing should have a wall of one-thirteenth of an inch or more in thickness, depending upon the diameter. The tube is set up in drill chuck and driven at a speed corresponding to that of a lathe of the same size. The tube is fed down on to the glass with an intermittent movement, and a mixture of emery and oil is dropped on to the glass at the point where the hole is to be drilled. After a ring has been cut in the glass on one side the tube is turned over and the drilling completed from the opposite side. This will prevent chipping the glass when the drill nears the opposite side. The copper tubing is so", so that it holds the emery, and as copper is an excellent conductor of heat it draws the heat away from the glass, preventing it from being cracked. At ideal of the rapidity with which holes can be drilled in this way may be gathered from the fact that a five-centimetre inch hole can be drilled through an ordinary sheet of window glass in seven minutes.

Man Judged by His Clothes.

The one best bet in this town is your glad rags, says the New York Sun. If you have money you should you may as well stay in the background, for a man is judged by the clothes he wears. Good clothes and a good fit may not get you the job, but money does. Take this from "Diamond Jim" Brady, known as the world's greatest salesman. He invested all his earnings in attractive wearing and he certainly helped him do the rest. "Clothes are my hobby," said he, "and I advise everybody to wear as fine garments as they can afford. Plenty clothes get you a hearing and that is everything the man in the gary thing. Even office boys are impressed by fine clothes, and the word of an office boy has frequently a most vital influence upon your getting into the outer office."

First Aide.

"An invalided soldier was asked what they were most comfort on the firing line."

"What was his answer?"

"Tobacco first and next to that a machine gun."

Not in It.

Onebop—I suppose your many admirers are getting jealous of me?

Miss Llewleigh—Oh, no! On account of your age they all think you are calling on mother.—Judge.

Suitable Trimmings for Lingerie

EVEN the least expensive of the new undermuslins have been designed with trimmings of narrow, dainty laces and medallions that appear fine enough for handwork. Big, showy patterns prove less attractive to the shopper than more quiet and unobtrusive ones.

The pretty combination which is shown in the illustration given here is an inexpensive, but well-made garment. The bodice is laid in a few narrow tucks at the front and back. At the top a row of insertion is joined to a narrow lace edging by means of a fine beading. The insertion terminates at the shoulders, but the beading and edging extend all around the top and form the strap over the shoulders. This makes opportunity for a narrow ribbon or crochet cord by which the garment is adjusted to the figure.

Across the front four small medallions are set in, each one a small pattern in machinemade embroidery and open work which is very much like hand work in appearance. These are inclosed in satin scallops of insertion.

The pants are joined to the body with a strong, narrow beading and finished at the bottom with edging put on, with small fullness.

With narrow laces in dainty patterns used, and much more attention given to workmanship than has been given them heretofore, these undergarments in sheer materials and practical designs are a great help to busy women with little time for sewing.

Embroidered Cape-Collar and One of Lace

TO be worn with the attractive blouses of crepe de chine, which such an important factor in spring apparel, many collars have been designed. They are to serve the double purpose of protecting the neck of the blouse and providing quickly adjusted decorative touches. There is a great demand for them, and therefore an endless variety in designs.

The collars in the picture are adjusted to the same blouse. The blouse is of sand-colored crepe worn with a suspender dress of brown broadcloth and plain except for small sprays of embroidery at each side of the front in silk of the same color as the blouse.

The lace collar is merely a frill of cream-colored net-top lace, narrowed at the front and stitched into a band which adjusts itself closely about the neck at the sides and back.

The embroidered collar is designed made of fine embroidered batiste. It is a high turnover, open at the front and ending in points at the little capelike portion. This is shaped like the panels which form a cape at the bottom in three embroidered scallops.

By means of these accessories one may change the neck-dress, freshen up the tailorette suit, and make a most dreary effect according to the collar chosen.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

BEST COLORS FOR THE ROOM

Matter Worthy of the Most Careful Attention, as So Much Depends Upon It.

Pale colors are appropriate for small rooms and for furniture which is light and delicate, while dark colors should be used in large, "architectural" rooms and with furniture which is heavy in build.

The vitality of a color is denoted by its intensity, or its relation to the neutral—gray. Intense colors should be used with restraint, for brilliant colors in quantity only in small areas, just as "the flash of diamonds is more telling on account of their 'isolation' of their material sisters, and perhaps because of society's superstition they are no longer coarse" (Ruskin). Again, it may have a delicat, touch of color, even if it is only a line or a novelty design of dresden tucked away in one corner.

Linen Popular in Blouses.

When linen waists have been not only out of favor, but scarcely tolerated for so long it is interesting to note the different models in this material that were coming in advance styles to herald the rouge for spring. One particularly pretty waist is made with a yoke of hand-embroidery, pointed with scallyped edges; the body part of the waist is trimmed with tiny tucks and a fourchett tuck in front. The waist is buttoned from the top of the high standing collar down the front in clusters of three small buttons. The collar carries colored tab turnovers, and the sleeves are tucked through the middle and have deep cuffs.

Electricity and Lightning.

Benjamin Franklin was the first to prove the identity of lightning with electricity. He did it by drawing electricity from the time when the ancients wondered to see amber, when rubbed, pick up bits of straw, and the lodestone draw bits of iron.

TO PREPARE AND USE VEGETABLES

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT EXPERTS GIVE RESULTS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT.

COOKING GREENS AND ONIONS

Particularly in the Spring Should Greens Be an Important Part of the Diet—Some Ways of Serving Onions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Notwithstanding the high food values of the leaves and stalks of plants that are commonly served under the name "greens" the thrifty housewife recognizes the necessity of supplying her family with this type of food. Particularly in the early spring will she supply her family bountifully with them, as they are very welcome after the winter diet of canned goods, dried vegetables and root vegetables stored in the cellar. A double purpose may be accomplished in the country home by the use of wild greens, which are freeing the ground from weeds and providing food. The common dandelion may be used in this way.

The dandelion is cut close to the ground, taken to the house and lightly pounded. When it is desired to root out the plant from a lawn, the entire root must be dug up. If simply the top is cut off, the dandelion will grow again and in a larger head. The slightly bitter flavor of the leaves is not disagreeable, and the roots furnish a bitter extract often used medicinally, particularly in the spring tonic medicine of early times. When cultivated, the dandelion is milder and more tender, and may be used much like the spring greens, as asparagus bed does good service to the second and third generation of owners. It can be cooked in many ways. As is the case with most green vegetables its delicate flavor is spoiled by overcooking. It should be cooked only long enough to make it tender.

Spinach is a favorite form of greens and is seen in city markets most of the year. It can be grown easily in any garden. A French proverb calls it the "broom of the stomach," and it appears to be richer in iron than most common foods. The tenderest leaves may be served raw as a salad.

Lettuce makes an excellent "green" for cooking, although American housewives seldom realize this. In Europe the tougher or outer leaves of the lettuce are used in particular in this way. Care should be taken to see that such lettuce is not overcooked.

Swiss chard is another plant in which the leafstalks are the useful portion, though it can be used to some extent as a fruit rather than as a vegetable. The various acids and other flavors it contains are acceptable in the early spring when it is at its best. Later in the season, when the leaves are tough and fibrous, the juice may be extracted by the ordinary method and used as a flavoring for puddings, cakes, etc., or as a substitute for lemon juice.

The Lentil Urban Tribe.

Onions are their favor to a volcano, oil-like compound containing sulphur. They are very aspectful, but nevertheless supply some nutritive material. Many varieties are grown by American farmers and gardeners, and the crop is a very important one. The dry part and bulbs onions are convenient for salads or pickles or for the stew. If a vegetable is used in large quantities it is taken to one side and boiled in two waters. The white-skinned Bermudas onions are very mild and tender. There are many onions in the market which are suitable for boiling whole and justify the prejudice which the housewife entertains for medium and onions in general, the greatest yield of low and red types of onions, owing to their texture and flavor are less satisfactory for cooking as a vegetable than the lighter kinds.

Onion tops, like the stalks of wild leeks and chives, can also be used for flavoring, especially the sprouts that start when the bulbs have been kept in a warm room.

Preparation of Onions.

To prepare onions, peel under water to keep the volatile oil from affect the eyes may remain in the water and be kept from contact. Where the onions are especially strong or little to prove indigestible to anyone, they may be put, after peeling, into boiling water, to each quart of which one teaspoonful of salt or a bicarbonate of soda has been added. After letting them stand in the water half an hour, drain and boil in plenty of salted water from one half to two hours and be kept from contact. The variety in hand, changing the water if desirable.

Often it is wise to take off one or two of the outer layers of the bulb, outside skin and reserve them for flavoring soups, while a part of the tender inner layers may be used for a salad. In cutting up an onion for any purpose, cut it with a knife, so that the onion odor will not get on the hands.

Methods of Cooking.

The water in which onions are boiled will contain the flavor, so that some of it may be reserved to flavor soups, either milk or stock.

Any strong variety of onion is much improved for the table in spite of loss of nutritive value if the water is changed several times during the cooking process. Milk may be used as the medium for final cooking.

Fried Onions.

Fried onions may be prepared in either of two ways: (1) Saute sliced onions in olive oil, butter, or chicken fat until golden brown and tender; or (2) fry a few pieces at a time in deep fat, let them remain in the hot fat until they are crisp, like Saratoga potatoes.

Schools for All Tastes.

The rich southern states are particularly fine, with their cooking departments, gymnasiums, manual training departments, and their almost excellent bathing facilities, and the opportunity for outdoor life in the year. There are little zoological museums in most of the schools. There are so many varieties of schools, besides the folk schools, elementary and higher, that it would cannot have room in Fora more than about five hundred years. The larger bowls give out a metallic sound when rapped. One not seeing the substance would say at first they were made of gunmetal or copper. Each of the two big pots would hold four or five tons.

Schools for All Tastes.

The rich southern states are particularly fine, with their cooking departments, gymnasiums, manual training departments, and their almost excellent bathing facilities, and the opportunity for outdoor life in the year. There are little zoological museums in most of the schools. There are so many varieties of schools, besides the folk schools, elementary and higher, that it would cannot have room in Fora more than about five hundred years. The larger bowls give out a metallic sound when rapped. One not seeing the substance would say at first they were made of gunmetal or copper. Each of the two big pots would hold four or five tons.

Customs of the Bedouins.

Such pride has the Bedouin in his tribe, and such is the importance of his site fully armed, examining and inspecting the place in turn, making himself accountable to carrying their weight.

Then the time that he is eighteen years of age until he dies of old age he is a man of the tribe, and he is married to one of the tribe, and his wives.

By law Mohammedans are never allowed to have more than four at the same time, but they easily evade this regulation by divorcing one which means sending her back to her parents.

This is often because she has borne him no male, and it happens that the wives are not on a children's footing.

Not so it is allowable with them to steal camels, so the young men help one another to steal wives from other tribes.

War Telephone.

Unlike Germany, France does not believe in erecting the ground in the rear of her armies with a mass of telegraph and cable lines, but prefers to organize a few essential trunk lines of communication, and trusts to automobile and wireless telegraphy for the interchange of comparatively unimportant messages.

The German army, on the other hand, is obsessed by a "wire" mania. Every detachment must have a telephone connecting it with every other detachment, and the engineer staff officer within the country.

Horses and Mules in Demand.

Export dealers figure that 80,000 American horses have been exported to Europe and about ten thousand mules since the war began. These are being filled and other orders going to Norway and Denmark about twenty thousand more. Greece has recently come into the market with France, Italy and Italy bidding for American horses, and if Germany, Austria and Turkey had a free path of the sea the demand from that source would also be enormous.

Reparation.

Hospital Nurse—Your bed sore is—was endowed by Mr. Scafe, the great philanthropist.

Patient—Why, it was his auto that banged me up late yesterday.

MOTHER! LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs"

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A tiger-coat "inside cleansing" is optimum all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Adv.

Vigorous Reform.

"There are sermons in stones."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "that accounts for the fact that some of the sermons intended to reform big cities remind you of a man throwing rocks."

SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR DARKENS YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look Years Younger! Try Grandma's Recipe of Sage and Sulphur and Nobody Knows.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and beauty to the hair, when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is muddy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Adv.

Settling Old Scores.

Our local historian had taken on a scratch eleven of the veterans of the village. The fifteen-yearold goalkeeper had a disagreeable knack of getting excitedly to and fro between the posts.

At 1st, during an interval in the game he approached the captain, who was playing center forward.

"I say, Jack, you might come into goal for a bit, and let me have your place," he said, coaxily.

"Not for worlds," demanded the surprised center forward.

"Well," continued the goalie reluctantly, "I want to get a kick or two at my father!"—Dundee (Scotland) Courier.

A Philosopher.

"Week before last," said the kind lady to the parcelpost messenger, "you got a dollar from me because you were deaf and dumb. Last week I gave you a dollar because you were blind. Before I realized that you were the same man I felt like a fool. Are you conscious you are paralyzed?"

"Not at all," said the beggar. "There's the facts."

"Don't you think you'd do better if you chose one affliction and stuck to it?" asked the lady.

"Lady," said the cripple, "they's nothin' so fatal to the full development of my business talent as never be partial."—Judge.

Roasting of Ancestors Doesn't Help Posterity.

CHILDREN SHOWED IT

Effect of Tea Their Parents Drink in the Morning.

"A year ago I was a wreck from coffee poisoning and was on the point of giving up my position in the school room because of nervousness.

"I was finally induced to try Postum, which I did, and I think nothing at most worth that our inspectors would not have allowed private owners to send them to sea. This is a matter which, as I have said, seems small, but is in reality very great. Its importance has only to be looked into to be appreciated."

Perhaps those best qualified to know the perils of this great stretch of water are those who ply it. Charles T. Morris, mate of the steamship Spokane, writes:

"Since I am going to make the business of piloting vessels through the waters of southeastern Alaska my life's work I take more an ordinary interest in locating hidden dangers to ships. The most valuable assistance I have polleted out all the dangers on the surface and many that are beneath; the cost of locating some of the latter has been considerable, and I have had to use the services of the best men in the service.

"Man I lose the lives of a shipload of passengers to discover some hidden danger? Others have done so, and I have just where all the dangers are located more will do the same.

"That such dangers exist, and that there is a very only means of locating them, I know by the Notice to Mariners, issued by the United States coast and geodetic survey, that I will spread.

"If some of the persons who have it in their power to vote funds for this work saw this notice, they would never vote there to keep the good work going. Could you bring this to their notice?"

Mr. Morris, pilot of the steamship City of Seattle, writes:

"I would like to add that I was pilot of the steamship City of Seattle when the Alaska Gateway, which was an excursion to Alaska. Fortunately we had a successful trip. Little did they think of the dangerous waters they were traveling. We had hit one of those pinnacles then they would have looked out a little better for our protection and the ship owners' interests, as well as the lives of the citizens of the country.

"I must say that I have sailed all over the world, and Alaska has the poorest surveyed waters that I have ever navigated."

And now what of the men who have been laboring for years against tremendous odds to do the charting of these coasts with inadequate equipment in Secretary Redfield's "unseaworthy old tubs." To push into these northern seas with their fogs and gales for long cruises in stanch vessels would be risky enough; but to go into them in single-cylinder, leaky, antiquated little junk heaps of steamers for a work that is far more perilous than the layman conceives requires real grit. And it is this sort of grit which stands out prominently in the makeup of the men of the coast survey, who have for so long been grappling with the fog and ice and gales of Alaskan regions.

The sedlessness of the coast surveyors' work may be gathered when it is considered that never does a shore line or a channel remain precisely the same. Now and then a mountain is made obliterated. Volcanic activity casts up new pinnacles of rock under the sea and lowers old ones. Glaciers that are now receding leave a new shore in the westward at the rate of eight inches a day. Every 7 years Yakutat bay, in Alaska, shows itself westward fully 1,000 feet.

"It is a risky game," said an officer who had served on one of the three old-fashioned survey ships on the Alaskan coast. "Three times during each month we would be in a gale, or within 10 miles out of our course by only moderate gales, the slightest mistake in our reckoning would put us aground. The coast survey ships drag this design alone, and cover great sweeps of sea at a time, the rock sure being detected when we actually collide on them. They are then either buoyed or destroyed by dynamite.

"Alaska," the man in the East is apt to say, "why, what ever goes up on the Alaska coast except gold hunters and tourists? What's the use of spending money up there?"

There is much to be said in reply. The Alaskan coast is equal in extent to the distance between Charleston on the Atlantic coast and San Diego on the Pacific coast. And then, as mentioned before, more than 43,000 persons traversed it in ships last year, and there are citizens who are right to protection." asks the hydrographic office.

President Wilson realizes what inefficiency in charting the Alaskan coast means. For on that subject he writes:

"There is another matter of which I must make special mention. If I am to discharge my conscience, I must bring it to your attention. It may seem a very small thing. It affects only a single line of steamers and only the lives and lives and many great enterprises hang upon it.

"It is the matter of making adequate provision for the hydrographic survey of Alaska. It is immediately pressing and exigent in connection with the development of Alaska. It is of far more greater than that of the United States themselves. Alaska is in many very important respects with regard to the older coasts of the continent. We cannot now our great Alaskan domain, slips will not pay thither, for our commerce and our hidden dangers are not thoroughly surveyed and charted.

"The work is incomplete at almost every point. Ships and lives have been lost in thinking what were supposed to be well-known main channels. We have not yet, in fact, anything like an adequate machinery for the survey and charting. We have used old vessels that were not big enough or strong enough for the work, and have sent out worthy that our inspectors would not have allowed private owners to send them to sea. This is a matter which, as I have said, seems small, but is in reality very great. Its importance has only to be looked into to be appreciated."

Perhaps those best qualified to know the perils of this great stretch of water are those who ply it. Charles T. Morris, mate of the steamship Spokane, writes:

"Since I am going to make the business of piloting vessels through the waters of southeastern Alaska my life's work I take more an ordinary interest in locating hidden dangers to ships. The most valuable assistance I have polleted out all the dangers on the surface and many that are beneath; the cost of locating some of the latter has been considerable, and I have had to use the services of the best men in the service.

"Man I lose the lives of a shipload of passengers to discover some hidden danger? Others have done so, and I have just where all the dangers are located more will do the same.

"That such dangers exist, and that there is a very only means of locating them, I know by the Notice to Mariners, issued by the United

VARIED STYLES OF WRITING

Authors Employ Different Methods, Each of Course Believing Theirs is the Best.

A literary reviewer notes that the fiction of last summer is distinctly in the form of autobiographical narrative. A few years ago this form was rather exception but the reviewer notes that times brings its reactions and reversions. The theory is that the novelist who writes like a man setting forth his own adventures and experience is apt to be more truthful, more realistic than the average novelist who uses a variety of fiction hardly bear this out. Tolstoi was as realistic—and as subjective—in the tree of his "Anna Karenina" as he was in his autobiography. Dickens, Thackeray, Scott, south his own experience; life and imagination are his only resources. Of course, the same of what is called romantic and artificial fiction.

There are many ways of telling a story. At one time one method has vogue, at another a different method. Henry James uses in his novels the story best through the agency of a third person—that is, someone crystallizing his own experience and observations of others. Mr. James is a great observer, a note-taker and thinker; new, whereas many others have practiced it. In the James novels and stories the reader is engaged with a minute analysis of a character, or a situation, or a group of characters. The author seems to stand aloof, to be an observer on the side of polite reticence or conventionality. Realism and romance are both of the imagination; the trouble is that beauty and that sinister, chastened, harnessed imagination which discerns and selects beauty and ethics lacking. Forms can be accepted and learned by rule. Beauty and imagination are among the things that come or nature.

Shaw is going ahead with public works that will cost several million dollars.

ALASKAN COAST
The GRAVEYARD of the PACIFIC

THE weather was clear, unusually clear for Alaska. On August 17, 1913, the steamer State of California was steaming through Lambert Sound, bound for Seattle, the steamer course. The chart showed clear water on all sides of her. Suddenly there was a terrific shock. The vessel's bow rose in air. In an sudden was her chec. that men were thrown flat on her decks. In fifteen minutes she had gone down, taking 31 lessons and a cargo worth $300,000 with her. She had struck, first in the customary steamship course, an uncharted pinnacle of rock.

When word of the fate of the State of California reached Washington it added energy to a movement which Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce and labor had been agitating for some time. This movement was to prevail upon congress to increase the appropriation for the work of the coast survey and coast and geodetic survey, the department that has charge of blazing the ocean trails.

At the present time there are three vessels employed in coast survey work in Alaska. One was a Confederate gunboat during the war. She had a one-cylinder engine. She is capable of eight knots in still weather, six knots against a breeze, and nothing at all in a blow.

The other two were not Confederate gunboats, but in other respects they are fully as antiquated as the first. Secretary Redfield has termed them unseaworthy, dangerous, inefficient old tubs. And to these craft alone is allotted the job of guarding the safety of 43,239 passengers who traveled Alaskan waters last year, in addition to $30,000,000 worth of cargo and ships.

And the government records show that the State of California is but one of many wrecks that occur on uncharted rocks along the Alaskan coast. Yearly, the government keeps from 10 to 15 responsible for narrow spires of rock that rise out of the sea to within a few feet of the surface in localities where all around them the water is navigable. Soundings of the ordinary sort seldom reveal these instruments of death to the eye of ships. To locate them properly the coast survey has designed from apparatus known as a "sweep drag." This is a wire sunk below the surface, and pulled by two tugs. The wire is made of full strain to hold the craft up to the wind. But she wouldn't hold; she was too old. She should have carried two modern vessels, but we could not hold more than 60. The engine was one of the old type which "knocked out" in 1911 and 1912 times, and in anything more than a full sail breeze the vessel would be swept astern. Her two masts "with favorable winds and no sea we could sometimes churn along seven knots.

"Once we were a mile of shore for four days in a gale, expecting every minute to be washed on to a rocky lee shore. Only the Lord has kept the power to clear off to clear water.

"Most of the time we had our men at the pumps. For 9 days the ship leaked badly, and we were always having to put back to have her calked. Many men were washed overboard, for we had no board, and did have open gangways, and the sea had sliced across us as thoroughly as a sunken log.

"And it was mighty uncomfortable. We had an open galley and no shelter for the men, and in single room, and we had no bathroom on that ship. We had to stand watch and watch, and the time of it on an eight-month cruise. It's just as tough for the fellows there now—they have better. But we did the best we could. It was difficult work, and dangerous work, and we lost more than our of a rip such as that, but we did pretty well. We were the pioneers in the work in Alaska. We never knew it, anyway, until some steamer with a few hundred passengers aboard would sink and sank. Then we would go around, we'd help rescue those in the water, if we could, and the government would send up a flight of men to find the rock that the unlucky ship had sinked.

"It's just the same way up there now. As Secretary Redfield said, rocks were being located regularly by yearly sinking ships and going down.

The work of probing ocean trails is interesting.

In ascertaining the depth of the water and locating the rocks and other obstructions to navigation, a careful record of the fluctuations of the tide while the soundings are being made must be kept. It would not suffice to measure the depth of the water if its height above mean low sea level were unknown for the moment of measurement.

"To determine this a registering tide gauge is used—a sort of float attached to a mechanism in which a pen traces the rise and fall of the water on a roll of paper which a clock causes to revolve once in 24 hours.

Two methods of sounding are used, the one employing the lead and line, the other a wire. In leadline soundings the process is about as follows: A light gunboat is anchored in a cove, among its members being two observers with sextants and a map showing the shore line and the cove. Where possible, the cove is divided into by triangulation; a recorder with a clock and sound boat, a boat equipped with a recorder, officer in charge directs the recorder to make a note of the position of the boat, which is fixed by the observers, and the leadsman casts his line and calls out the depth in feet or fathoms as he draws it in. The recorder notes the time and also of the course along which the boat is headed. At intervals of a minute or more the leadsman casts his lead, while every three or four minutes the observers take observations until the end of the course is reached, where a final set of observations locates the end of the line. The boat then runs other lines in the same way until the entire bottom of the surveyed area has been sounded.

The lead-line method of sounding suffices to record the lay of the bottom with sufficient accuracy where there are no extraordinary obstructions; but in regions like the coast of Maine and that of Alaska, where there are many isolated pinnacle rocks and ledges under water, or along shores like those of Florida, Porto Rico and the Philippines, where coral reefs abound and coral heads frame the coast, special investigations have to be made. The lead-line might be used all around a pinnacle rock and not strike it a glancing blow—and still fail to discover it.

An instance of this kind occurred in Buzzard's bay, Massachusetts, in 1902. Although more than 10,000 soundings had been made, more than 16,000 angles observed and 1,462 miles of sounding line run, a rock whose head was 18 feet below the surface was run upon by the cruiser Brooklyn during the naval maneuvers of that year.

In order to discover such obstructions in much frequented waters a new instrument, the wire drag, has been devised. It consists of a long line, sometimes more than a mile long, weighted down at intervals with sinkers and supported at any desired depth by surface buoys. Power boats are hitched to it, usually one at each end, and one in the middle, and with these it is drawn around a harbor much as a farmer drives his binder around his field of standing wheat. If it strikes no obstruction the hydrographers know that the harbor bottom is clear to the depth of the drag.

Another line of information the mariner must have is about the movement of currents, so that his ship may not be carried around by currents whose presence he does not suspect. Information concerning them is gathered by means of current rods, as a rule. A current rod is an instrument that is float vertically beneath the water, with only its tip showing above the surface, so that it is not disturbed by the wind. Its movement is observed, and the observations give definite information concerning the currents.

HIGH COST OF ARMY FEEDING

Comparisons That Illustrate Germany's Bills for Feeding Her Army.

The question of substistence is a vital one to an army, and many battles have been lost from the failure of food supplies. The commissary department of armies in all civilized countries is in the hands of men who are in reality dietetic specialists on a large scale. The present war is no surprise to the Teutonic commissary department.

"Rations," as the daily food supply of the soldiers is known, vary in each country according to racial tastes or climatic conditions. Thus the ration of France is quite different from that of Germany. For the purpose of comparison we have taken the daily ration of the German army, which is as follows:

Seven hundred and fifty grams of fresh bread, or 26 ounces avoirdupois.

Three hundred and fifty grams of raw meat or 12 ounces; 200 grams of bacon, 200 grams of pork, mutton, bacon or meat sausage.

Three hundred and fifty grams of rice (rice meal), or 50 grams of potato or flour, or 1,500 grams of potatoes.

Twenty-five grams of salt.

Twenty-five grams of coffee (roasted), or 30 grams of coffee (green), or 1 gram of tea and 17 grams of sugar.

This supply for a week compared with the bill of fare of Cologne cathedral shows results very surprising, for we have a loaf of bread weighing 60,130,000 pounds and 231 feet high, which bulk; well alongside the lofty edifice. Most is represented by a side of bacon but in practice this might be varied by sausage, pickled or fresh pork, or mutton, or mutton. The bacon is 120 feet long and would weigh 18,000,000 pounds. Potatoes are the heartiest item, weighing 127,000,000 pounds. The tun would be two feet less in length, while the sugar tun would measure 18 feet high and would weigh 1,500,000 pounds. Such amounts of food seem almost incredible.—Scientific American.

TEST OF HIS THEORY.

"Wonkhat used to argue that it cost no more for two to live than one."

"Well?"

"Retribution overtook him all right. The ghost brought twins on a starvation diet."

HARD TO SUIT.

"How did you like the comedian's song without a chorus?"

"Why, when I heard it I fancied I would have preferred the chorus without the song."

IN THE SANCTUM.

Reporter—How much of an obituary do you want about the man with a rubber neck?

City Editor—Stretch it to half a column.

THE SANDMAN IN STORY By Mrs. F. A. WALKER

HELEN'S GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

Helen had a great-grandmother, who lived with her grandmother, and when Helen went to see her grandmother she spent an hour each day in Grandma Great's room. One day, while Helen was sitting with her, she asked: "How old are you, Grandma Great?" "I am eighty years young, my child," was the reply.

"Young?" said Helen. "I thought eighty very old."

"No," answered Grandma Great, "not if your heart is young."

"And is your heart young?" inquired Helen.

"Yes, my heart is young; all these things keep it so," said Grandma Great, pointing to the old-fashioned furniture around the room.

Helen looked her thoughts very plainly. She did not understand how that old furniture could make any one feel young.

"Then I care many other things," Grandma Great continued, "which you do not see, and when I feel a bit like growing old I look at them and I am young again. Would you like to see them?"

Helen's curiosity was really aroused and she was eager to see what wonderful things could make Grandma Great feel young.

Grandma opened the drawer of an old-fashioned bureau. There were wonderful things. One was called a hand kerchief box; it opened in the middle, and two little tapes held it together; then the cover opened on either side. Grandma Great took out a little lace collar. It was as white as a spider's web.

"This was one of my wedding collars," she told Helen. Then there was a fine linen handkerchief, yellow with age, with the linen flowers embroidered in one corner. There was a chain made of hair, with a gold clasp, and also a long made of hair, with a little gold locket, which make it look like a tiny belt.

Grandma Great handed her a picture.

"See if you can tell who this is," she said. Helen looked and saw a very pretty girl, with black curls and pink cheeks. Her eyes were black, like her own, and she had on a dress made—oh! so quaintly—of flowered material.

"I was eighteen when that was taken," said Grandma Great. Helen thought she looked like a beautiful maid and wondered if Grandma Great was a young and pretty girl, too, and then she wondered if some day she would be old like Grandma Great. She had never thought of it before.

"Here is a picture of your great-grandfather, taken when we were married," Helen saw a handsome young man, with blue eyes and curly hair, like Helen's. He looked very straight and he had on a high collar, and it looked to Helen as though he had yards of black satin wound around it. Then there was a tie, with pearl stickin, and on one of the outside sticks was a tiny mirror. She was told that it would be here soon.

Then there was a funny pair of kid gloves—pale pink, with little brown bodies. These were my wedding gloves," said Grandma Great, "and them were my traveling gloves." Helen thought she never had seen anything so funny as the second pair, which were bright green.

Then there were queer little ties with tassels and a pair of stockings the color of the pink gloves. "These were my wedding stockings, and your grandmother wore them when she was married," said Grandma Great. "Wasn't boss they will be yours, some day."

Helen thought that very old. She did not want to wear old stockings when she was married. There were other things, a pair of silk ribbon garters; pieces of people in queer-looking costume.

"Here is a brocaded your great-grandfather gave me, with his hair in it."

Helen took it in her hand and looked at it. She thought it very odd that anyone should want to wear a piece like that. There was a watch with a gold

You Will Love Dove Under-Muslins

Night Gowns
50c, $1.00, $1.50.

Drawers 25c, 50c. Skirts 50, $1, $1.50

Envelope Chemises $1.00.

Corset Covers 25c, 50c. Combinations $1, $1.50.

We Sell DOVE

TRADE MARK

Under-muslins

Go to ---LEVINSON'S--- Get the Habit

THE STORE OF QUALITY AND GOOD SERVICE

This young lady wants the very best that money can buy in a high class store. She appreciates courtesy and good service and she is happy.

SPECIAL FOR SATURDAY—
In Our Grocery Department.

Strictly Fresh Eggs	per doz.	17c
The Finest Roll of Butter	lb.	10c
Extra Large Prunes	lb.	25c
4 Extra Large Cakes Lenox Soap		25c

We will have for Saturday: Fresh Bulgaria Celery, Cucumbers, Tomatoes, Cauliflower, Green Onions, Radishes, Rhubarb, Asparagus, Spinach, Cabbage, Oranges, Lemons, Bananas, Pineapples, Grapefruit, Apples, Cranberries, Nuts of all kinds, Candies, Chocolates, Fancy Cakes, Pickles and Olives, Fancy Crackers, Fancy Cheese, Pickled Pigs Feet, Pickled Lambs Tongues, Pickled Herring, Smoked Herring, Smoked Whitefish, Smoked Salmon, Smoked Ham, Smoked Shoulders, Smoked Bacon, Fresh Ham, Fresh Shoulders, Fresh Bacon, Fresh Pork Loins, Fresh Pork Chops, Fresh Pork Sausage, Fresh Beef Tongues, Fresh Beef Hearts, Fresh Beef Liver, Fresh Beef Kidneys, Fresh Beef Tenderloin, Fresh Beef Rump Steak, Fresh Beef Roast, Fresh Beef Stew, Fresh Beef Pot Roast, Fresh Beef Boiling Beef, Fresh Beef Ribs, Fresh Beef Sirloin Steak, Fresh Beef Porterhouse Steak, Fresh Beef Round Steak, Fresh Beef Hamburg Steak, Fresh Veal Cutlets, Fresh Veal Stew, Fresh Veal Roast, Fresh Veal Shoulder, Fresh Veal Liver, Fresh Veal Kidneys, Fresh Veal Tenderloin, Fresh Veal Rump Steak, Fresh Veal Hearts, Fresh Veal Brains, Fresh Veal Sweetbreads, Fresh Mutton Roast, Fresh Mutton Stew, Fresh Mutton Chops, Fresh Mutton Legs, Fresh Mutton Loins, Fresh Mutton Shoulders, Fresh Mutton Tongues, Fresh Mutton Hearts, Fresh Mutton Kidneys, Fresh Mutton Tenderloin, Fresh Mutton Rump Steak, Fresh Lamb Roast, Fresh Lamb Stew, Fresh Lamb Chops, Fresh Lamb Legs, Fresh Lamb Loins, Fresh Lamb Shoulders, Fresh Lamb Tongues, Fresh Lamb Hearts, Fresh Lamb Kidneys, Fresh Lamb Tenderloin, Fresh Lamb Rump Steak, Fresh Lamb Fries, Fresh Pigs Feet, Fresh Pigs Liver, Fresh Pigs Kidneys, Fresh Pigs Tenderloin, Fresh Pigs Hearts, Fresh Pigs Brains, Fresh Pigs Sausage, Fresh Pigs Shoulders, Fresh Pigs Loins, Fresh Pigs Roast, Fresh Pigs Stew, Fresh Pigs Chops, Fresh Pigs Legs, Fresh Pigs Tongues, Fresh Pigs Hearts, Fresh Pigs Kidneys, Fresh Pigs Tenderloin, Fresh Pigs Rump Steak, Fresh Pigs Fries, Fresh Pigs Liver

The Call of the Cumberlands

By Charles Neville Buck

With Illustrations from Photographs of Scenes in the Play

(COPYRIGHT, 1916, BY W. J. WALL & CO.)

CHAPTER XVI—Continued.

Then, again, silence settled on the town, to remain for five minutes unbroken. The six guns fired mercilessly on clay streets, now as empty as a cemetery. A single horse incontinently bitched at the side of the courthouse switched its tail against the assaults of the flies. Otherwise, there was no outward sign of life. Then, Calhoun's newly created deputies, with sawed off guns clattered down the street at double time. For a moment or two after they came into sight only the massed uniforms caught the eyes of the informed Hollmans, and an alarmed murmur broke from the courthouse. They had seen no troops detrain, or pitch camp. These men had sprung from the earth as startlingly as Jason's crop of dragon's teeth. For when the command rounded the abandoned by a protective wall to await further orders, the ragged strips of their marching ranks had filled out the lacking of the mountaineer proclaimed their native ancestry. The murmur turned to a howl of derision and challenge. They were nothing more nor less than Bonds, masquerading in the uniforms of soldiers.

"Hail, caesar!" the leguled Calhoun briefly, joining Samson, "—the store—"

"Demand surrender once more—then take the courthouse and hold it," was the short reply.

Following Blowsiff went fore and with the flag of truce. He shouted his message and a hundred man came to the courthouse door.

"Tell 'em," he said without redundancy, "they are all here. Come and get us."

The officer went back and distributed his forces under such cover as offered itself about the four walls. There a volley was fired over the roof and instantly the two buildings in the public square awoke to a rolling fusillade of rifle fire.

All day the duel between the streets and county buildings went on with desultory intervals of quiet and wild outbursts of musketry. The troops were firing as sharpshooters and the courthouse, had its sharpshooters. When a head showed itself at a barricaded window a report from the outside greeted it. Samson was everywhere, his rifle smoking, and hot-barreled. His life seemed protected by a talisman. Yet most of the firing, after the first hour, was from the troops, who were except for occasional pot shots, holding their fire. There was neither food nor water inside the building and at least shelled and the garden grew timidly to prevent escape. The Hollmans, in a rage for blood, grimly held on, realizing that it was to be a siege. On the following morning a detachment of 7" cannon arrived, dragging two galling guns. The Hollmans saw these through sight only the massed uniforms crowded the eyes of the informed Hollmans, and an alarmed murmur broke from the courthouse. They had seen no troops detrain, or pitch camp. These men had sprung from the earth as startlingly as Jason's crop of dragon's teeth. For when the command rounded the abandoned by a protective wall to await further orders, the ragged strips of their marching ranks had filled out the lacking of the mountaineer proclaimed their native ancestry. The murmur turned to a howl of derision and challenge. They were nothing more nor less than Bonds, masquerading in the uniforms of soldiers.

"Hail, caesar!" the leguled Calhoun briefly, joining Samson, "—the store—"

"Demand surrender once more—then take the courthouse and hold it," was the short reply.

Following Blowsiff went fore and with the flag of truce. He shouted his message and a hundred man came to the courthouse door.

"Tell 'em," he said without redundancy, "they are all here. Come and get us."

The officer went back and distributed his forces under such cover as offered itself about the four walls. There a volley was fired over the roof and instantly the two buildings in the public square awoke to a rolling fusillade of rifle fire.

All day the duel between the streets and county buildings went on with desultory intervals of quiet and wild outbursts of musketry. The troops were firing as sharpshooters and the courthouse had its sharpshooters. When a head showed itself at a barricaded window a report from the outside greeted it. Samson was everywhere, his rifle smoking, and hot-barreled. His life seemed protected by a talisman. Yet most of the firing, after the first hour, was from the troops, who were, except for occasional pot shots, holding their fire.

The Charlevoix Sentinel.
Published every Thursday, Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD J. BOOTH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. Phone No. 9.

SUBSCRIPTION.
Three Months 25 cts
Six Months 50 cts
One Year $1.00

GEN. ROBERTSON IS CHIEF OF STAFF

Has Been Hitherto Efficient British Quartermaster General.

PRAISED BY GENERAL FRENCH

Was Conspicuous in Field in Several Previous Years.

Has Been Entrusted with Details of English Expedition.

He Has Attended to the Great Task of Feeding the Army.

London, April 3.—Lieut. Gen. Sir William Robertson, who has been appointed chief of the staff of Field Marshal Sir John French, with temporary rank of lieutenant general, is the first man to be appointed chief of the staff of the British army in the field since the time of Lord Raglan in the Crimean war.

No explanation was given why General Murray is to be succeeded by General Robertson, but it is believed that Murray's health may have been impaired to some extent by the strain of the Flanders campaign. Robertson has been one of those who have kept with the army since the beginning of the war, and has been in almost all the battles.

He is a man of hostilities in South Africa he was very soon called upon to take up his duties as an active member of staff of the discipline of the British forces on active service.

After the fall of Pretoria Sir Wilmot was looked for seven years by a war of fire very from our readers.

Afterward he went to Aldershot as quartermaster-general and chief of staff. At all places, was the right select for one who had to prepare for European complications.

Sir Archibald Murray, the retiring chief of the staff, is a cavalry officer, has served in India for twenty years. He entered the Twenty-seventh regiment in 1876, became a captain in the Royal Indian Military College, Sandhurst, and was adjutant of the Twenty-second Cavalry. He served in Egypt in 1882 and was mentioned in dispatches for his services in the Soudan campaign of 1885. He was with the Nile expedition of 1898 and was mentioned in dispatches for his services in the Boer war, for which he received the Queen's medal with five clasps and the King's medal with two clasps. He was also mentioned in dispatches for his services in the Tirah campaign of 1897-98. He was with the Tirah expedition of 1897-98

PARROT & CO.

BY HAROLD MACGRATH

AUTHOR OF "THE CARPET FROM BAGDAD," "THE PLACE OF HONEYMOONS," ETC.

Copyright by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

CHAPTER I.

East is East.

It began somewhere in the middle of the world, at a forlorn landing on the west bank of the muddy, turbulent Irrawaddy, remembered by man only so often as it was necessary for the British navy to send a gunboat, a visiting commissioner anxious to get away, or a family honeymoon bound. On the east side of the river, over there, was a semblance of civilization. That is to say, men wore white linen, avoided murder, and frequently paid their gambling debts. But on this west side stood wilderness, not the kind one meets nowadays so well preserved and cultivated by white men; no, the real, grim donation, where the axes cut but leaves no blaze, where the pioneer disappears and few or none follow. It was not the wilderness of the desert, of the jungle; rather the tragic, human state of a settlement that neither progressed, retarded nor stood still.

Between the landing and the settlement itself there stretched a winding road, acid and treacherous, certain two miles in length. It announced definitely that to get to Kalaw meant dust hung like a fog above it, not only for this day, but for all days between the big rains. When the gods, or the elements, or Providence, arranged the world as a re-distribution for men, India and Burma were made the dustbins and the scrap heaps into which so will dust, earthly and human, the quick and the dead.

Along the road walked two men, phantomlike. One saw their heads dimly and still more dimly their bodies to the knees; of legs there was nothing visible. Occasionally they stepped aside to print some bulbock cart to trace. One of them swore, not with full evidence of temper, not violently, but in a kind of mechanical protest, which, from long usage, had become a habit. He directed these epithets never at anything he could by mental or physical control overcome. He swore at the dust, at the heat, at the world, at the sun.

The other walked, with the inherent patience of his blood, not noticing and waited, setting down the heavy kit bag and the canvas valise (his own). When the way was free again he would sling the kit bag and the valise over his shoulder and step back into the road. His turban, once white, was brown with dust and sweat. His khaki uniform was rent and the rugged canvas shoes sported little spirals of dust as he walked. Under his khaki uniform was rent and the rugged canvas shoes sported little spirals of dust as he walked. Under his khaki uniform was rent and the rugged canvas shoes sported little spirals of dust as he walked. Under his khaki uniform was Eurasian; half European, half in skin, having his place neither here and hell, which is to say, nowhere. He was faithfully attached to his master, as a carrier of burdens took immutably his place beside the tireless horse and the obstinate. He was a Methodist; why, no one could find he answer. The history of his master had learned that James looked upon his baptism and conversion to Methodism as a corporal would have looked upon the acquisition of a V. C. Twice, during fever and plague, he had saved his master's life. With the philosophers of the Orientals he considered himself responsible for his master in all future times. Instead of paying off a debt he had acquired one. Treated as he was, kindly but always firmly, he would have surrendered his life cheerfully at the beck of the white man.

Warrington was an American. He was also one of those men who never held manifestoes in contempt, whose outlook wherever it roamed was toward life, who had patience for the weak, resolution for the strong and a leaning amounting toward all. He was like the St. Bernard dog, very difficult to arouse. It is rather the way with all men who are strong mentally and physically. He was tall and broad and deep. Under the battered pith helmet his face was as dark as the Eurasian's, but the eyes were blue, bright and small puplled, as they are with men who live out of doors, who are considered by most people as seeing things moving at distances. The nose was large and well chiseled, perhaps framed in a tangle of blond beard and mustache which, if anything, added to the general manliness of his appearance. He, too, wore khaki, but with the added of tall riding leggings, which had seen anything but roughing service. The man was yellow from the top of his helmet to the soles of his shoes—outside. For the rest, he was a mystery, to James to all who thought they knew him, and most of all to himself. He was a dilettante, a fugitive from the bloodless hand of the law; a gentleman born, once upon a time a clubman, college bred; a contradiction, a pauza upon which there was not any solution, not even in the hidden corners of the man's heart. His name was Warrington; and he had rubbed elbows with the dregs of humanity, and yet looked you straight in the eye because he had done things infinite without bringing any of the defiling pitch.

From time to time he paused to relight his smoulding thread. The tobacco was strong and bitter and strong his parched tongue; but the craving for the taste of the smoke on his tongue was too to be denied.

Under his arm he carried a small book—more correctly something like a flat trap. It combined a Bagpipes portfolio, but much larger than a robin, but possessor of a soul as fierce as that of Paladin, minus, however, the shoulders. Inclosure of pictures. He had been born under the eaves of the smokiest palace in Jaipur (no his memory was); but the proximity of the Rose Princess had left him unmoved; he had neither sighed nor pitied, nor blubbered. He was in fact Cor-Cor-Corporal Jed Kennedy, Kennedy and rose to attention, ever ready to serve, top side, down side, reallessly. For all his memories of the Rose Princess, familiar evening sounds which no human ear can discern—the mutterings of the day birds about to seek cover for the night. In the fort at the right of the road stood a lonely tree. It was covered with brilliant scarlet leaves and blossoms, and jaunty the native call it the Flame of the Jungle. A flock of small birds were gyrating above it.

"Jah, jah, jah! Jah—jah—ja-a-ah!" cried the parrot, imitating the Bengalese bell gong that calls to prayer. Instantly he followed the call with a shriek so piercing as to sting the ear of the man who was carrying him.

"You little son of a gun!" he laughed; "where do you pack away all that noise?"

There was a strange bond between the big yellow man and this little green bird. The bird cut up terrible it, but the man knew. The pluck, the pugnacity and the cold-blooded cheerfulness of the bird had been an object lesson to the man, at a time when he had been on the point of throwing up the fight.

"Jah, jah, jah! Jah—jah—ja-a-ah!" The bird began its interminable annoyanalls, pausing only to reach for the tantalizing finger of the man who laughed again as he withdrew the digit in time.

For six years he had carried the bird with him, through India and Burma and Malacca, and not yet had he won a sign of surrender. There were many ways on his forehead. It was amazing. With one pressure of his hand he could have crushed out the life of the bird, but over its brave, uncomprehensible spirit he had no power. And that is why he loved it.

Far away in the past they had met, the remarkable, the day dazzled and bitterly. He had been on the brink of self-destruction. Fever and poverty and terrible loneliness had battered and beaten him flat into the dust, from which this time he had wish to rise. He had walked out to the railway station at Jaipur to witness the arrival of the tourist train from Ahmedabad. The natives stared about the train, with brassware, antique articles of warfare, tiger hunt, big knives (accompanied by memorial fairy tales), skins and silks. There were beggars, holy men, jugglers and fakirs.

Squatted in the dust before the door of a first-class carriage was a solemn, brown man, in turban and clout, exhibiting performing parrots. It was his faith's turn. He fired a cannon, turned somersaults through a hoop, opened a tiny chest, took out a fortune-teller's cards, drew a bucket of water, and in exchange received some food. Thereupon he waddled remarkably back to the iron cage, opened the door, closed it behind him, and sat down before bellicose, fierce, clangton haggled for two straight hours. When he returned he was covered with smelling lodgings that night he possessed the parrot and four rupees, and up to the greater part of his life, carrying to make the bird perform his tricks. The idea of suicide no longer bothered him; trifling thoughts it was he had found an interest in life, and on the morrow came the Eurasian, who fruitfully loaned Warrington every one that he could spare.

Often, in the dreary hours sick days and nights, when each passed over he saw the face of a white man, when he had to consult colors and things and laziness in the natives under this he tired and his funny tricks had failed him, he would go to some big house squalid music-room, and, being slipped and petting pleased the little rebel so much as to rise his way up to his master's shoulder, sit there and watch the progress of the razor, with internal tom-tooing at the bare reflection in the cracked hand mirror.

Up and down the travelling, at the resthouses, on the boats, to those of a jocular turn of mind the three were a constant target for the shafts of wit. Warrington's amability often misled the variety entertainers with whom he was at times forced to associate. A man, the tender owner of the three said talked Hindustani to a parrot was not to be accorded much courtesy; until one day Warrington had settled all distinctions, busily and primordially with the aqua-cut of his fists. After that he went on his way unmolested, having soundly trounced one of the biggest bullies in the teak timber yards at Rangoon.

He made no friends; he had no confidences to exchange; nor do he offer to become the repository of other man's pasts. But he would share his bread and his rupees, when he had them, with any who asked. Many tried to dig into his past, but he was unresponsive as granite. It taken a woman to find out what a man is and has been, and Warrington were about women in a wide circle. In a way he was the most baffling kind of a mystery to those who knew him; he frequented the haunts of men, took a friendly drink, played cards for small sums, brooded and jested like any other adventurous man. In the East men are given curious names. They become known by phrases, such as, "The Man Who Talks, Mr. Once Twice a Time," "The Five-Stone Man," and the like. As Warrington never received my mail, as he never entered a letter, for years he was known as "The Man Who Never Talked of Home."

"I say, James" old sport, no more going up and down this hilly old river, I'll go on on Rangoon tomorrow, if we can find a berth."

"Yes, sahib; this business very pifflu," replied the Eurasian without tipping his hat. Two things he had learned from his master, one that he was never to argue—a bit of American slang and a bit of English river. He was invariably changing rupees into shillings, and Warrington could not convince him that he was always losing in the transaction.

They tramped on through the dust. The sun dropped. A sudden chill began to penetrate the haze. The white man pulled his chemoji, its wrapper daughter, the servant hummed an Urdu lullaby; the parrot complained incessantly.

Warrington laughed and shook the pin from his beard. "It's a great world, James, a great, wonderful world. I've just two rupees myself, in other words we are busted."

"Two rupees!" James paused and turned. "Why, sahib, you have three hundred thousand rupees in your pocket."

"But not worth an anna until I get to Rangoon. Didn't those duffers give you anything for handling their baggage the other day?"

"Not a piece, sahib.

"Hotters! It takes an Englishman to turn a small trick like that. Well, well, there were extenuating circumstances. They had sore heads. No wonder they were willing to pay three hundred rupees for something he could have bought for ten thousand. And I made them come to me, James, to me. I made them come to this god-forsaken hole, just because it pleased my fancy. I believe I'm heaven born, after all. The Lord takes a quitter, and so do I. I nearly quit myself, once; oh, Gosh, I did not! But I made them come to me. That's the milk in the coconut, the curry on the rice. They almost had me. Two rupees! It truly is a great world."

"Jah, jah, jah! Jah—jah—jah—ja-a-ah!" screamed the parrot. "Cha boo!"

"Go on! That's the ticket. If I were a praying man this would be the time for it. Three hundred thousand rupees!" The man looked at the far horizon, as if he would force his gaze beyond, into the delectable land, the sodon out of which he had been driven. "James, I owe you three hundred rupees, and I am going to add seven hundred more. We've been fighting this old top for six years together, and you've been a good servant and a good friend; and I'll take you with me as far as this fortune will go. If you say the word."

"Ah, sahib, I am much sorry. But Dehli calls, and I go. A thousand rupees will make much business for me in the Chandney Chowk."

Presently they became purple shades in a brown world.

CHAPTER II.

A Man With a Past.

The Eurasian sings all war stirless It was without refreshment; it became a labor and not an exhilaration to tramp the road. A pall of suffocation lolled above and about the irrawaddy flotilla boat which, buffeted by the strong, irregular current, strained at its cables, now at the bow, now at the stern, not dissimilar to the last rocking of a deserted swing. This sensation was quite perceptible to the girl who leaned over the bow rail, her handkerchief pressed to her nose, and gazed interestedly at the steep bank.

"Two Rupees!" James Paused and Turned.

up and down which the sweating coolies swarmed like Gargantuan rats. A dozen torches were stuck into the ground above the crumbling ledge; she saw the faces as one now, a burning match cupped in a smoker's hands, shedding light upon nothing save that which stands immediately behind it.

She choked a little. Her eyes smarting. Her lips were slightly cracked, and sunbrown seemed only to provide a sorer resting place for the impalpable dust. It had penetrated through wool and linen and silk, intimately, in all three hatbox a day had become a welcome routine, providing it was possible to obtain water. Water. Her tongue ran across her lips. Oh, for a drink from the old cool pure spring at home! Tea, coffee, and bottled soda; nothing that ever touched the thirsty opens in her throat.

She looked up at the stars and they were down upon her, but that she asked they could not, would not, answer. Night after night she had asked, and night after night they had only twinkled as of old. She had travelled now for four months and still the doubt beset her. It was to be a leap in the dark, with no one to tell her what was on the other side. But why this insistent doubt? Why could she not take the leap gladly, as a woman should who had given the affirmative to a man? With him she was certain of her heart. Why, then, should this doubt, this hesitation, this fear, come to her? Was it because she had left home, because she had left her father and asked for her mother. The girl told him her mother was at dinner at a downtown restaurant, with friends.

Rundal found the restaurant and entered, picking out his wife from the members of the party. Waiting up to her he said.

"Hello, Anna! I've brought the groceries home. Let's go up and have supper."

The wife fainted, but a man at her side ordered Rundal to get out.

"Why?" asked Rundal.

"Because she's my wife," replied the other. Henry Pickering, who married Mrs. Rundal, ten years ago after all hope of Rundal's return had been given up.

Rundal was on the floor when a policeman arrived. Later he was arraigned in police court.

"I just went away," he told the judge. "I went to Warren Center. Pa. where I've been ever since. I thought it time to see my family again and came home."

"Go back to Warren Center and never come to Lestershire again. You are discharged," said the judge.

WOODPECKER ROBS A TOWN

Causes Short Circuit on Signal Wires Resulting in Excessive Water Bill.

Ilwaco, Wash.—A woodpecker is blamed for large additions to Ilwaco's bill for pumping city water.

The woodpecker found the municipal reservoir is let to a power company and an electric indicator notified the engineer when the required depth of water has been provided.

For some months the bill has been regarded as excessive and the number of hours required to fill the reservoir has varied to a marked degree.

Investigation finally placed the blame on an innocent woodpecker which chose one wire for a perch and with the other wire in its mouth produced a short circuit so that the engineer's signal to stop pumping was not provided by the woodpecker's rest rather than the depth of water provided.

PAYS DEBT 20 YEARS OLD

Tennessee Farmer Sends Check for $3.50 Plus Bought in 1886.

Little Rock, Ark.—In 1886 J. Milton Williams, a Tennessee farmer bought a plow from H. S. Brock, a hardware dealer at Morristown, Tenn., on credit. It, Recently Mr. Brock, who long ago left Tennessee and is now a resident of Little Rock, received a check for $3.50, the price of the plow. The letter accompanying the check read as follows:

"Dear Sir: You remember some years ago I bought of you a turning plow. I have always intended to pay the debt, but it seemed that I had so many things on me that I had to put what little money I could get into other places. I hope you will pardon me for keeping it so long. I trust you are well and prospering. Yours respectfully,

"J. MILTON WILLIAMS."

BREAKS BANNS AT THE ALTAR

Bride-to-Be Says God Commanded Her to Be Missionary—Fiance Agrees.

Elgin, Tex.—At the chancel in the Baptist church here, where Miss Ethel Sowell and Ernest Byers were to have been married, the bride-to-be made a public declaration that she had been commanded to serve God in the missionary field, the wedding was abandoned.

Miss Sowell, who comes from a prominent Texas family, said that God appeared to her in a vision and told her that her place was not in a home but in the Chandler (Okla.) Chawk.

Presently they became purple shades in a brown world.

WENT ON ERRAND, STAYED 21 YEARS

When Papa Returned With Groceries He Found Second Husband Was the Better Man.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Twenty-one years ago Allan Rundal of Lestershire obeyed his wife's request to go downtown on Saturday night to get groceries for Sunday. He returned home late Tuesday night with the groceries on the hat which his wife gave him 21 years ago.

He knocked at the door and then walked in. His daughter, grown to womanhood, met him and screamed in fright, thinking him a burglar. Its resources her and told her he was her father and asked for her mother. The girl told him her mother was at dinner at a downtown restaurant, with friends.

"Hello, Anna!"

Rundal found the restaurant and entered, picking out his wife from the members of the party. Waiting up to her he said.

"Hello, Anna! I've brought the groceries home. Let's go up and have supper."

The wife fainted, but a man at her side ordered Rundal to get out.

"Why?" asked Rundal.

"Because she's my wife," replied the other, Henry Pickering, who married Mrs. Rundal, ten years ago after all hope of Rundal's return had been given up.

Rundal was on the floor when a policeman arrived. Later he was arraigned in police court.

"I just went away," he told the judge. "I went to Warren Center, Pa., where I've been ever since. I thought it time to see my family again and came home."

"Go back to Warren Center and never come to Lestershire again. You are discharged," said the judge.

WOODPECKER ROBS A TOWN

Causes Short Circuit on Signal Wires Resulting in Excessive Water Bill.

Ilwaco, Wash.—A woodpecker is blamed for large additions to Ilwaco's bill for pumping city water.

The woodpecker found the municipal reservoir is let to a power company and an electric indicator notified the engineer when the required depth of water has been provided.

For some months the bill has been regarded as excessive and the number of hours required to fill the reservoir has varied to a marked degree.

Investigation finally placed the blame on an innocent woodpecker which chose one wire for a perch and with the other wire in its mouth produced a short circuit so that the engineer's signal to stop pumping was not provided by the woodpecker's rest rather than the depth of water provided.

PAYS DEBT 20 YEARS OLD

Tennessee Farmer Sends Check for $3.50 Plus Bought in 1886.

Little Rock, Ark.—In 1886 J. Milton Williams, a Tennessee farmer bought a plow from H. S. Brock, a hardware dealer at Morristown, Tenn., on credit. It, Recently Mr. Brock, who long ago left Tennessee and is now a resident of Little Rock, received a check for $3.50, the price of the plow. The letter accompanying the check read as follows:

"Dear Sir: You remember some years ago I bought of you a turning plow. I have always intended to pay the debt, but it seemed that I had so many things on me that I had to put what little money I could get into other places. I hope you will pardon me for keeping it so long. I trust you are well and prospering. Yours respectfully,

"J. MILTON WILLIAMS."

BREAKS BANNS AT THE ALTAR

Bride-to-Be Says God Commanded Her to Be Missionary—Fiance Agrees.

Elgin, Tex.—At the chancel in the Baptist church here, where Miss Ethel Sowell and Ernest Byers were to have been married, the bride-to-be made a public declaration that she had been commanded to serve God in the missionary field, the wedding was abandoned.

Miss Sowell, who comes from a prominent Texas family, said that God appeared to her in a vision and told her that her place was not in a home but in the Chandler (Okla.) Chawk.

Presently they became purple shades in a brown world.

GOOD SUGGESTION FOR EMMY

Some May Insist, However, That It Is Possible She Didn't Need the Exercise.

Emmy brought in an armful of wood for the fire.

"My dear," said her husband, "you shouldn't do that."

She lifted the heavy case of berries to the table and sat down to look them over.

"I'd help you if I wasn't waiting for Gaius to come over and look at the new Billy."

The grocery boy deposited a dollar's worth of sugar on the floor and Emmy took it up and put it in the sugar pail on the lower pantry shelf.

"You really shouldn't," said her husband.

Finally she lugged the iron preserve kettle to the sink for the last time and went out for another pail of water.

"I hate to see you lift no. Emmy. My, how many glasses have you got? It's my favorite jam. I'll get you a case of cherries tomorrow."

Emmy went on getting up a hearty supper.

"Seems as if you didn't eat much," commented her husband. "Don't you want to walk down with me tonight while I fetch that rubber with Steinson? The exercise will do you good."

—The Craftsman.

TWO WAYS OF KEEPING LENT

Billy Sunday Tells of One of Them in an Anecdote That Is Worth While.

Billy Sunday, the evangelist, to whom all Philadelphia has been "hitting the sawdust trail," was talking about Lent.

"Lent," he said, throwing up his arm as if about to pitch a ball. "Well, there's two kinds of Lent keeping Lent. Sincere Lent keeping is a good thing, a mighty good thing, but the other kind—

With a light leap he landed in a sitting posture on his reading desk. Seated there, his legs swinging comfortably, he went on:

"Well, the other kind reminds me of the fat old party who said:

"'Cousin Hi, was' Turtle's gone up, oysters have gone up, trout's gone up, what's gone up, can-back duck's gone up and bear's gone up. Why things in such a condition I hardly see where a man's to get the money to celo—er—I mean to keep Lent on.'"

Father Won Out.

Jones' wife wanted to pay an elongated visit to some of her relatives in a distant state, and while Jones had no great desire to kiss her good-by and do his own dishwashing, he thought it the part of wisdom to treat the matter diplomatically.

"Harry," said the wife one afternoon, speaking of the proposed visit, "won't you be awfully lonely and utterly miserable while I am gone?"

"Oh, no, dear!" promptly answered Harry, with a brightened expression. "I shall manage nicely. There are Smith, Brown, Green—

"Is that so?" was the quick interjection of his wife. "Then I don't go! I don't propose to have my house turned into a poker bubble!"

Oh! Why!

Prof. K. C. Loomis said at a tea in Chicago:

"The superintendent of the Albany public schools regards the dress of our school girls as a moral menace. So far, so good.

Professor Loomis shook his head.

"But this superintendent," he went on, "demands a censor of girls' fashions. A censor's task, however, is never to add—it's always to subtract, to cut out.

"If, then, our schoolgirls' dress is a moral menace now, and we put a censor at it with his shears—oh, my, oh, my!"—Washington Star.

As It Seemed to Fitzhugh.

"Was your father a pirate?" asked young Plinkstop of the girl of his choice at a certain function, "I read in the old sea captain had urged his exit to the family mansion on the bill by the use of his pedal extremity.

"No, my darling," was the reply. "Why do you ask?"

Red ink and exclamation points may attract attention, but the conspicuous doesn't necessarily make folks think.

If it we, o not for politics lots of lazy men would starve to death.

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; she has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Mrs. Pinkham

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 100-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief—Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable—act surely but gently on the liver. Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion, improve the complexion, brighten the eyes. SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Genuine must bear Signature

Brent Good

Never Had 'Em.

Old Dick was a plantation darky. He was rarely sick, and he always claimed it was because he had lived. One day as he was walking along the street in Lexington, taking advantage of his ignorance, accosted him thus:

"Dick, one of your best friends has just told me that you have symptoms of the sugar."

"Dick, one of your best friends has just told me that you have symptoms of the worst sort."

"Now, look heah, Cap'n Gayge, I don' want to jest nobody, but I jes' want to know who dat man was wot tol' you, an' I ho' will go after him, 'cause he done gone and 'sult me. No sir, ebbuhbody! Why, cap'n, that's as big a lie as was ever told. I neber had nothin' in my life but the mumps and colic."—National Monthly.

Then—and Now.

"Squabbling and fighting—there's another very frequent cause of discord," said Prof. L. Waste Bennett in an address before the Cleveland Anti-Cruelty League.

"A man had been hated before a Cleveland magistrate for manslaughter some such fault.

"But, let me see," the justice said, "aren't you the man who was married in a cage of wild man-eating tigers and leopards?"

"Yes, your honor, I'm the man," was the reply.

"Exciting, wasn't it?" said the justice.

"Well, your honor," said the man, "it seemed so then. It wouldn't now."

Red ink and exclamation points may attract attention, but the conspicuous doesn't necessarily make folks think.

If it we, o not for politics lots of lazy men would starve to death.

Grape-Nuts

FOOD

contains more body-building nourishment, weight for weight, than either meat or bread.

Grape-Nuts is delicious and economical and

"There's a Reason"

Grocers everywhere sell Grape-Nuts

Easter Week in Jerusalem

THE JAFFA GATE, MAIN ENTRANCE TO JERUSALEM

NEW WORLD AND THE OLD FACE TO FACE

THEY WEAR CROSSES ALONG THE VIA DOLOROSA

THE TOMBS OF THE KINGS

IF WE crossed Palestine, riding over those ancient, byways that wind through hill and dale leading to the holy city, we were deeply impressed by the pilgrims—not only by their numbers but by their very air of patient sagacity—as they trudged the dusty roads footsore and weary. As we neared the city we knew that Jerusalem was already filled to overflowing with these pilgrims, because the roads leading into the city were filled on either side with crowds of people, men, women and children, with their pots and pans and bedding strapped upon their backs, but I just want to know who dat man was wot tol' you, an' I ho' will go after him, 'cause he done gone and 'sult me. No sir, ebbuhbody! Why, cap'n, that's as big a lie as was ever told. I neber had nothin' in my life but the mumps and colic."—National Monthly.

Then—and Now.

"Squabbling and fighting—there's another very frequent cause of discord," said Prof. L. Waste Bennett in an address before the Cleveland Anti-Cruelty League.

"A man had been hated before a Cleveland magistrate for manslaughter some such fault.

"But, let me see," the justice said, "aren't you the man who was married in a cage of wild man-eating tigers and leopards?"

"Yes, your honor, I'm the man," was the reply.

"Exciting, wasn't it?" said the justice.

"Well, your honor," said the man, "it seemed so then. It wouldn't now."

Red ink and exclamation points may attract attention, but the conspicuous doesn't necessarily make folks think.

If it we, o not for politics lots of lazy men would starve to death.

Knowing that during the days of the annual Easter ceremonies it would be little opportunity to see these throngs, owing to the great crowds, we took occasion to visit them the day following our arrival, and found a place of interest in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre are the supposed tomb of Christ, the stone of unction, the holy sepulcher, the Greek church, the chapel of St. Helena and Mount Calvary.

The first of the Easter services in the holy sepulchre was the "washing of feet." This occurs on the Thursday before Good Friday, it is a fresh ceremony, very interesting, and takes place in the courtyard of the church. Notwithstanding that it is unexciting, every available space in the courtyard and every conceivable window and rooftop was occupied as the Greek patriarch bathed the feet of twelve of his priests as they were seated upon a little platform.

On the next day—Good Friday—we witnessed the Latin ceremony of the crucifixion. This is interesting in a way, but somewhat shocking to the sentiment. The ceremony takes place near what is said to be the actual site of the crucifixion. It is performed before a cross on which a dummy figure has been nailed. At the conclusion the figure is taken down from the cross and placed in a white sheet, the crown of thorns and the nails drawn from the "hands" and placed beside it upon a silver salver. After this a procession is formed which leads to the stone of unction, where sermons are delivered in different languages.

Saturday afternoon we witnessed the ceremony of the "holy fire" to the minds of the pilgrims the most important of all. There is a certain superstitious belief that a miracle takes place in the small struggle between the Latin and Greek worshipers, in which the latter are said to assume ceremony into a veritable mob scene. At the time we were there mob was based of other fanatical ceremony or reality modifying it, and I must confess that all of our party were disappointed in the conditions in an orderly manner it should certainly be abandoned.

There is an old tradition in Jerusalem that long after Christ had arisen and departed from the holy sepulcher holy fire from heaven was seen to descend into the sepulcher. Time has received this fire, and it is kept burning in a twilight, but it must be admitted that many of the poor faithful but ignorant pilgrims still believe it.

THE TOMBS OF THE KINGS

Have the flames they will ness to be literally holy fire.

We secured a good vantage point from one of the upper balconies, and by two o'clock the church was filled to overflowing with a zealous yet excitable mob. The Greek patriarch, accompanied by the Armenian high priest, entered the sepulcher, and shortly after the church was a hush throughout all the church. On either side of the sepulcher niche, and soon there appeared through these openings the ceremonies of the ceremonies. To me it was a terrible sight to see the pilgrims crowd to get near the holy flame. Each pilgrim held a candle, and the holy fire, which is said to be a miracle, was lighted by holding the candle to the holy fire. With the thousands struggling around the holy sepulcher inclosure had lighted their candles, and the church was a mass of tiny lights, it was an unforgettable sight. We were told that much better order had been maintained the Easter before the holy fire ceremony than ever before, and we could but wonder what some of the past ceremonies were like, since five persons were reported on street who were looked on, having been severely injured by being trampled and stampeded in the struggling mob.

It was interesting to us to witness the hatred exhibited on every hand by the Turks.

We watched the line forming for a procession where the Turkish soldiers were drawn up as a guard, mind as the procession passed the crowds during a parade in this country. When every a Turk got in the crowd he was well handled and assisted to a vantage point if he cared to see, although for the most part the Turks would not deign to look upon it. Whenever one of the Christians was pushed by the crowd into the line of the procession he was quickly pounded with the butt of a rifle. Not openly, but rather surreptitiously, the soldier stared straight front at the same time he maliciously and viciously jabbed backward with rifle butt, generally directly hurting whoever was unfortunate enough among the pilgrims to be crowded against the line. Above all, we saw no women who were thus abused.

On Sunday morning there were more ceremonies in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. These ceremonies were conducted in many languages, and the vestments worn by the priests were unusually gorgeous.

A noon on Sunday Easter week ceremonies were over for the year. An hour later the great army of pilgrims was moving out of the city. In all directions they were leaving with their few belongings in bundles but by far the greater number pursued up over the highways that led across the Holy Land and into Russia.

By night not a pilgrim remained, while all along the roads round about the holy city were left the litter and the ashes of the campfires where so many thousands had encamped during the week. The next day Jerusalem became the same quiet, sleepy city that it was before the throngs rode into it and was taken by force Pilate.

THE PLACE OF THE CRUCIFIXION

THE TOMBS OF THE KINGS

SPRINGTIME OF THE WORLD

Land That Was Filled With Loneliness Now Quick With Life and Near-Eyed Joy.

Life is vibrant, pulsating, and we are eye-witnesses of creation at work. We see the earth touched with color, and greenness overspread over the land. Now the wayside flowers spring up, trained suns and glad of the sun, and the eye of man is gladdened by intervale and fertile field, and the long green lanes of linden. Not all the tender leaves and punishing winds can thwart this coming of the world. All the tides of life are rolling in to fill the flood. Now there rises the wildness that leaps at life as a hunting dog leaps from the leash. The green shoots come from the great hills. Their cool has been overmuch with green pines, and has lifted off the hidden mounds of snow in spots to the glorious sunrise of lawn and meadow, white scattered beach and lifting hill is vibrant. The land that was full of loneliness is quick with life and through the sunlit spaces of the world joy. But what we witness in the spring is a spiritual blown rose forever is revealed today in the heart of man, says Collier's Weekly. We are in a spiritual blown rose today of fresh winds. That marvelous and many-hued spectacle of the beginning is but the garment of the God who walks through the forests of men and touches them for renewal. The bleak ages have gone, and the race of men itself is visibly planting beneath a sunrise. Out of the dust of its dead things it rises to a fuller life. Its ancient enemies are in retreat. Hate is dying, poverty is passing, the disinherited have found a place. As the, in a storm, birds, we draw near a light and warmth for man.

THE TOMBS OF THE KINGS

The KITCHEN CABINET

SAVORY, SATISFYING DISHES.

If we are not on top of our work, our work is sure to be on top of us. Let us see to our work therefore, and then on top is fun, work done underneath is work undone.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE

Asparagus (canned). If carefully steamed and served with a rich white sauce, asparagus on buttered toast is a most appetizing dish.

Pea with Pimento. The asparagus may be served in a ring of red or green pepper, or one of onions and pimento, to make the dish more attractive in appearance.

Peas With Mint.—Remove peas from the can, drain off and pour over cold water. Put them in a saucepan, add a teaspoonful of sugar and half a teaspoonful of salt, let boil two minutes. Drain and add to the following sauce: Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add three of flour and stir until well blended. Pour on gradually a cupful of milk; when nicely mixed add a teaspoonful of finely chopped mint, a dash of salt and pepper. Serve in small cups made of bread.

Rice With Cheese Sauce.—Put boiled rice in layers into a buttered baking dish. Cover each layer with a generous sprinkling of grated cheese, teaspoonfuls of butter, add three of flour and, when well mixed, one and a half cupfuls of milk and stir until boiling, add a half cupful of good flavored cheese which has been cut in small dice, dashes of pepper and salt to season.

Moistened Sponge Cake.—When a sponge cake is a little dry remove it and serve it with the following sauce: Cream a half cupful of butter and a cupful of brown sugar, add four tablespoonfuls of cream, a little at a time to prevent separation, then add two tablespoonfuls of chopped pecan meats, two tablespoonfuls of cocoa and a half teaspoonful of lemon extract.

Prune Ice Cream.—Take a cupful of prunes soak in water to cover over night. Cook in the same water until tender, remove the stones and rub the pulp through a strainer. Add a cupful of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, a pinch of salt and one and a quarter cupfuls of heavy cream whipped. Freeze and serve garnished with cut meats. This cream may be used with the pulp of any fruit to change its stand of the heavy cream, and another and pleasing variety.

Creamed Finnan Haddie With Rice.—Cook a tablespoonful of chopped onion, one tablespoonful each of red and green pepper, with a quarter of a cupful of butter. Tea minutes. Add four tablespoonfuls of flour, mixed with a teaspoonful of salt, a half teaspoonful of paprika and a few grains of cayenne, stir until well blended, then pour on gradually one cupful each of thin cream and milk. Cook to the boiling point and cook three minutes. Reserve a half cupful sauce, add a teaspoonful of sage and of flaked fish, again heat and heap in the center of a hot platter surrounded by a boiled border of rice. Pour around the reserved sauce and garnish with parsley.

Deviled Oysters.—Clean, drain and dry one hundred and twenty-five medium oysters. Melt a cupful of butter, add a fourth of a cupful of flour and salt until smooth, then add one and one-half cupfuls of milk and a dash of salt. Add the milk mixture gradually to the egg yolks, stirring constantly. Cook, then add one and a fourth tablespoonfuls of grated onion, a fourth of a cupful of cold water ten minutes, drain and add the beaten whites of the eggs. Set the pan containing the mixture in a pan of ice and stir until it begins to thicken, then add a pint of whipped cream, three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and vanilla to flavor.

Nellie Maxwell.

Baked Eggs in Potatoes.—Cook enough potatoes to make two cupfuls when mashed through a ricer. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of rich milk, and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Beat vigorously two minutes and add one and a half tablespoonfuls of canned pimento put through a fine strainer. Pack into individual dishes, in a buttered, shallow dish and make a hollow in each one and drop an egg into it. Drop an egg in each cavity and bake in a moderate oven until the eggs are set. Sprinkle with a few bits of butter before serving.

Apple Dumplings.—When a good hazelnut, from apple is used the following method is found to be most satisfactory: Make a rich baking powder biscuit dough, roll it out to half an inch thick, cut in square pieces enough to wrap an apple well. Place the apple in the middle, in the center of the square of dough pitch the corners to the top, and pinch in a seamer to stream of they may be well covered. Sprinkle with sugar, cinnamon and some butter and bake.

Delicious little tarts may be made from leftover strips of pastry. Place them on a baking sheet, add nuts or raisins, sprinkle with cold water and lemon juice, place the corners together and place them in a hot oven to bake.

Denver Cream.—Scald one and a fourth cupfuls of milk. Heat two egg yolks slightly and add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a dash of salt. Add the milk mixture gradually to the egg yolks, stirring constantly. Cook, then add one and a fourth tablespoonfuls of gelatin, soaked in a fourth of a cupful of cold water ten minutes, add a pint and a half of the whites of the eggs. Set the pan containing the mixture in a pan of ice and stir until it begins to thicken, then add a pint of whipped cream, three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and vanilla to flavor.

Nellie Maxwell.

Baked Eggs in Potatoes.—Cook enough potatoes to make two cupfuls when mashed through a ricer. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of rich milk, and one-half teaspoonful

Men's Suits---

We are showing some exceptional values in Men's Suits for the Spring and Summer:

Men's All Wool Suits, Plain Black and Blue Serge

$10.00 - $12.00 - $15.00

Men's All Wool Suits, Checked or Fancy Weave

$10.00 - $12.00 - $15.00

Hart, Schaffner & Marx Suits $18 to $25.

If you have not worn one of these Suits, we urge you to try now, you will never regret it.

Go to ---LEVINSON'S--- Get the Habit

THE STORE OF QUALITY
AND :: GOOD :: SERVICE

Our competitors wonder how we do it. But it matters little to us as long as we satisfy the public. It is but another proof that you get more value for your money at this store than any place in the city. Watch our adv. every week. We have many bargains in store for you.

SPECIAL FOR SATURDAY—
In Our Grocery Department.

Strictly Fresh Laid Eggs (not storage) per doz.	15c
The Finest loaf of Bread	10c
Extra Large Fancy Oranges, per dozen	25c
4 Extra Large Fancy Grape Fruit	25c

We will have fresh LETTUCE, RADISHES, RHUBARB, CELERY, Choice APPLES and BANANAS.

SPECIAL—In Our Meat Department.

Fancy Picnic Hams, per pound	11c
Choice Skinned Hams, whole or half, per lb	15c
Choice Bacon, strip or half, per pound	16c

Choice Young Mutton, Fancy Veal, Home Dressed Fancy Chickens. Choice Cuts of Fancy Beef, in fact anything that you may want in the line of meat. Order Early and avoid the rush.

Quality, Service and Honest Prices our Motto—We give Green Stamps.

C. DANTO & SON.
212 Bridge St. Phone No. 12 Phone No. 60

Grippy? Feverish? Chest Stuffy? Bad Cough?

Drive those Ugly and Annoying Feelings Away with Dr. King's New Discovery--Pleasant, Soothing, Healing.

No need to suffer these annoying and sometimes dangerous symptoms. Ease your lungs for a 50c bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery. Take a dose tonight, result every time you have a spasm of Cough. Notice how easy you sleep, and how much better you feel tomorrow. Dr. King's New Discovery satisfies the most exacting demands to quickly check your Cold and Anyone Cough. So many have used it with gratifying results. Don't put it off, get a 50c bottle to-day and start using at once.

Mr. A. Cooper, Oswego, N. Y., says: "It is a real pleasure to testify to the excellence of Dr. King's New Discovery. I have for many years been afflicted with a Cough that had become chronic, and nothing ever prevented night coughing until I used Dr. King's New Discovery."

Trial bottle mailed on receipt of 4c stamps.

H. E. BUCKLEN & CO., 439 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Undiscovered Oceans of Truth.

"We may be justly proud of what has been achieved, but let us not fail to remember with Newton that the vast ocean of truth still lies for the most part undiscovered before us." However perfect we may think our knowledge of science, the individual votaries must always feel a sense of humility at the little the best of them be able to contribute toward the general result."—Sir Edward Schaefer, in an address to the British association.

Gypsies.

"The gypsies are nearer to the animals than any race known to us in Europe. They have the lawlessness, the shamelessness, the natural physique to form and gesture of animals. Only a stealthy and wary something in their eyes makes them human.—Arthur Symons.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

HOOKING A SHARK.

It's an Exciting Sport Even if One Doesn't See the Fish.

Fishing for sharks off the pier at Palm Beach is a Brobdingnagian sport. You fish with clothesline and a hook the size of a split anchor. Half of some great fish is slipped on your hook for bait. You throw it off the pier and fasten the end of the line to the railing and then take out your detective story and read.

Sometimes you get a bite; sometimes you don't. At evening the colored gentlemen in charge of the shark fishing on the pier goes around and takes in the line. That in itself is an rare occasion on angling sport.

Once a New York vaudevillist was standing on the pier enjoying the sunset after a day's fruitless angling when he heard a shout from the colored gentleman, who had discovered a shark on one of the lines that had been left out. The colored gentleman was having trouble in handling the beast, so the New Yorker went to his assistance. Together they pulled and hauled at the line in vain. Another man on the pier joined in. And then the three braced their feet against the rail and tugged for all they were worth. But in spite of all their could do the line slipped gradually through their fingers.

Finally all the slack was used up, and the rope winding taut against the rail snapped like a thread. The New Yorker has always wanted to catch a shark and has had just one look at that shark.—New York Post.

MARTEL AND POITIERS.

The Man and Battle That Saved Europe From the Saracen Yoke.

A traveler approaching the city of Poitiers, France, would hardly believe that it was around the site of that small city that the battle which saved all Europe from the Saracen yoke was fought. The man who commanded the French in that great battle was Charles, who afterward received the surname Martel, "the hammer," from his mighty prowess in that fight.

He leffed the Saracen invasion by his great victory at Poitiers. The Saracens had conquered all Asia and conquered Spain. Nothing could withstand their arms and the Crescent bore death and desolation before it wherever it went. The Mohammedans determined to conquer all Europe in the name of the Prophet. Spain had fallen, and France was next. The two armies met at Poitiers. The strife was bloody, for the Saracens had the prestige of former victories and the advantage of numbers; France had the wisdom of Martel. That wisdom triumphed, and the Mohammedan was hurled back, a broken power. This victory saved Europe from want and destruction, for the brave people would have suffered anything sooner than endure Mohammedanism. The great chieftain of Christian civilization lived and died in the year 741.—British World.

LONG HAIR AND LONGEVITY.

A Theory That There May Be Some Relation Between Them.

Did it ever occur to you that there was any relation between a man, bushy head of white hair and the long life of the owner?

I believe that I can claim without fear of successful refutation that a very large majority of men who have passed the age of eighty years have or had a good show of hair on the crown or top of their heads. I by no means claim that this is universal, for it is easy to recall men who lived to even greater age than eighty who were quite bald.

Without any attempt at a chronological list, I jot down a few names that come to mind as I write: John I. Blair, known at his time as New Jersey's richest man, ninety-four, Daniel Drew, New York capitalist and college founder, ninety-one; Hon. William E. Gladstone, English statesman, eighty-nine; Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, New York, founder of the New York Central railroad, eighty-three; Edward Beecher (brother of Henry Ward), ninety-two; Hon. Peter Cooper, New York, ninety-one; Hon. Peter Cooper, New York, ninety-one.

It would be easy also to name quite a number of men who possessed fine heads of hair who reached middle age, but my purpose is not to be statistic, but rather to possibly start interest in an unusual subject and see what can be deduced therefrom.—Pittsburgh Press.

RIGHT AND LEFT HANDED.

A Series of School Tests and an Amusing Result.

Ever since it was proved that in all righthanded people the speech center of the brain—the place from which talking is controlled—is on the left side of the brain and that in lefthanded people it is on the right side there has existed a suspicion that if a person became ambidextrous, or able to use both hands equally well, the speech center might be doubled, and consequently thinking ability might be improved. Very elaborate tests have shattered this hope.

A German specialist obtained the assistance of the school authorities and tried it out on nearly 3,000 school children. After a careful record was taken of each child's hand preference, speech ability and general capability all the children were told to try to use both hands. For many months an effort was made to have all the children become ambidextrous.

At the end of the test all the teachers and other observers agreed that though some of the children had succeeded in becoming ambidextrous, the effort had worried them all and had caused no improvement, mentally or in speech tests in any way commensurate for the trouble taken. Consequently the scientists had decided that efforts in doing pretty well with her own sister left side speech and right hand preference.—Saturday Evening Post.

Natural Inclination.

"That fellow doesn't live. He simply vegetates."

"No wonder. He's got a cabbage head, carrots hair and an onion brain, and he's a perfect business test and as oil animal beet."

Hat-Hat.

"They say he loves her so much he can anticipate her thoughts."

"Yes, indeed. When we were outside this evening he said, 'Yes, dear, it is an straight before she had said a word." Exchange.

"Sultan" and "Harem."

General Lew Wallace, author of "Ben-Hur," was so great a favorite of Sultan Abdul Hamid that he was offered the command of the Turkish army. General Wallace always created surprise on the part of Americans by his pronunciation of the words "sultan" and "harem." He said the correct pronunciation was "sool-tan" and "ha-reem," with the accent on the last syllable in each case.

Manners and Customs.

"I spent two days in that country."

"Didn't learn much about their manners and customs, then?"

"Yes, I did. Their manners are very bad, and their customs are very high. I learned that when they opened my luggage, right on the docks."—Kansas City Journal.

Lisle Shanahan,
Attorney at Law.
Office in County Bank Bldg.

(First Publication January 31)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Ole Hansen and Ingeborg Hansen, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Hedwig Hansen, of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated the 1st day of April, A. D. 1902, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 20th, A. D. 1903, in Liber 30 of mortgages, on page 300, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, for principal and interest, the sum of Twenty-Three Hundred Dollars, and no suit or proceeding has been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof; and the power of sale in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1904, at noon, at the front door of the Courthouse in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, being the place where the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix is held, will be foreclosed by the sale at public auction to the highest bidder of the premises described in said mortgage or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so aforesaid due on said mortgage, with interest and the costs and charges of foreclosure, which sale will be made to satisfy said mortgage debt and interest, and all legal costs, together with attorney's fee, to wit: An undivided quarter of the south half of lots 3 and 4 of section 1 in Township 33 north, range 8 west. All that part of Lot 4 south half of section 1 lying north of the north line of the south half of the south half of section 1 in Township 33 north, range 8 west, containing 80 acres, more or less, except the south 33 feet thereof, and except the right of way of the railroad right-of-way as now located and containing twenty-eight acres of land in the same section. Dated this 5th day of December, A. D. 1903.

HANSEN & ERICKSON,
Attorneys for Mortgagee.
Business address, Boyne City, Mich.

First publication March 18.

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office in the city of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 16th day of March, A. D. 1904.

Present: Hon. Frank L. Hayes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Jessie Blair, deceased.

Carrie I. Bowman having filed her final administration account and her petition praying that the residue of said estate be assigned to the persons entitled to it:

It is ordered that the 19th day of April, A. D. 1904, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the Probate Register in the Courthouse in said county, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

FRANK L. HAYES, Judge of Probate.
A true copy:
SEWARD A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First Publication January 28)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Ole Hansen and Ingeborg Hansen, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Hedwig Hansen, of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated February 20th, A. D. 1903, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 20th, A. D. 1903, in Liber 30 of mortgages, on page 299, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, for principal and interest, the sum of Twenty-Three Hundred Dollars, and no suit or proceeding has been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof; and the power of sale in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1904, at noon, at the front door of the Courthouse in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, being the place where the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix is held, will be foreclosed by the sale at public auction to the highest bidder of the premises described in said mortgage or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so aforesaid due on said mortgage, with interest and the costs and charges of foreclosure, which sale will be made to satisfy said mortgage debt and interest, and all legal costs, together with attorney's fee, to wit: An undivided quarter of the south half of lots 3 and 4 of section 1 in Township 33 north, range 8 west. All that part of Lot 4 south half of section 1 lying north of the north line of the south half of the south half of section 1 in Township 33 north, range 8 west, containing 80 acres, more or less, except the south 33 feet thereof, and except the right of way of the railroad right-of-way as now located and containing twenty-eight acres of land in the same section. Dated this 5th day of December, A. D. 1903.

HANSEN & ERICKSON,
Attorneys for Mortgagee.
Business address, Boyne City, Mich.

First publication March 18.

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the probate office in the city of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 16th day of March, A. D. 1904.

Present: Hon. Frank L. Hayes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Eugene E. Blair, deceased.

Carrie I. Bowman having filed in said court her petition praying that the residue of said estate be assigned to the persons entitled to it:

It is ordered that the 19th day of April, A. D. 1904, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the office of the Probate Register in the Courthouse in said county, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

FRANK L. HAYES, Judge of Probate.
A true copy:
SEWARD A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First Publication January 28)

Foreclosure Notice

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Ole Hansen and Ingeborg Hansen, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Hedwig Hansen, of Charlevoix, Michigan, dated February 20th, A. D. 1903, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 20th, A. D. 1903, in Liber 30 of mortgages, on page 298, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice, for principal and interest, the sum of Twenty-Three Hundred Dollars, and no suit or proceeding has been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof; and the power of sale in said mortgage and the statute in such case made and provided, on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1904, at noon, at the front door of the Courthouse in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, being the place where the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix is held, will be foreclosed by the sale at public auction to the highest bidder of the premises described in said mortgage or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount so aforesaid due on said mortgage, with interest and the costs and charges of foreclosure, which sale will be made to satisfy said mortgage debt and interest, and all legal costs, together with attorney's fee, to wit: All that certain piece of land situate and being in the city of Charlevoix, in the county of Charlevoix, and state of Michigan, described as follows, to wit: Commencing at a stake twenty and one-fourth (20-4) links south of gas tile post in the sidewalk on the south side of Bridge St. in said city, thence south 89 deg. 30 min. west, on south side of said street, 50 feet; thence south, on south side of alley, 100 feet; thence east, 50 feet; thence north, twenty (20) links, to place of beginning, being a part of lot 1 of block 3 of Lake View Addition to said city of Charlevoix, according to the plat thereof on file and of record in the office of said Register of Deeds, and

Loyal, Valiant Towser

By Augusta Goodrich Shenefelt

Copyright, 1923, by W. G. Chapman.

Worthless wandering Neal Barrett opened a package done up in a newspaper and smacked his lips in grateful anticipation. Then as the contents were revealed his ruddy face broke into a smile.

"A right royal hand-out!" he glored. "Chicken and cake and blueberry pie! Why, I'm rich and pampered!"

"Chicken and cake and blueberry pie all buttered, too. Must have had a banquet at that house last night."

Neal sat down on a pile of boards and started in to discuss the tempting viands that lay before him. In his grateful mind was a memory of the pleasant little housewife who had so sumptuously provided for him.

"It's been hard grubbing for a day or two," soliloquized Neal, "but this makes up for it all. It's better than free lunch—and without the temperance. I don't pick up much, work, but I'm in a dry district. That's my only safety zone, and I'm stuck."

He was a good-natured and a good looking fellow. Too good-natured, so far he had been in the past. It had led to his arriving a week road girl. It had aided in her father forbidding him the house. That was a good many miles from Neal's present stamping ground. Temporary residence. Neal saw the picture of his dismissed. Yet for Mr. Parsons was poor and Neal was spoiling the chances for marriage for his daughter, Florence.

Neal had lost his position through being too easy-going with a reckless dissipated set. He left town and Florence. Work was not easy to find. It had begun to rain and Neal and dog had tramped a long distance that afternoon. Neal looked for temporary shelter. He found it at the side of an hotel in a vine-enclosed arbor. A long bench invited him to rest and then unceremoniously to slumber.

It must have been three or four hours later when Neal awoke. Towser was pulling at his coat. Neal sat up and then sprang to his feet, as from the inside of the house an ear-splitting scream of terror or pain rang out.

"Something wrong," uttered Neal as all his keen senses shrewdly alert in an instant, and Towser knows it, too.

"Now then, Towser, you stay quietly in the arbor." Neal followed. The front door was open. Down the hall the dog stole to where a door stood partly ajar. Beyond it Neal peered for the moment, horrified and spellbound. Across a table in his slight dress lay the hermitlike occupant of the house—old Jacob Wise. He was like a statue. There was a fire in the stove, and stuck between its red-hot bars was a poker. A rough-looking man was standing over the aged Wise.

"Now then, I've got you safe and sound," he was saying. "You've got a fortune hidden somewhere, I tell you! Tore out this old house and I want it, understand!"

Jacob Wise made no response. The robber drew the poker from the stove. "Tell you that money to," he spoke and I'll give you a touch of this."

The intruder waved the red hot poker menacingly from side to side across the pale edge of his victim's feet.

If Neal had been a hero he would shrieked the tortured old man.

Just then Neal peeled from the door. The intruder turned quickly. Neal, sprang at him. They grappled. Down the robber pressed a crushed hat against the side of his opponent.

The last sound that Neal herself saw as he sank unconscious to the floor was the dog, his teeth at the throat of the attack who had felled his master.

The waking moment came days later, although Neal did not realize that fact when he opened his eyes to consciousness he stared. "Old Jacob Wise that at his bedside in a comfortable room. Things seemed to drag away, moving about engaged in domestic duties, Neal saw Florence. Parsons.

"Ah! better!" chuckled the old miser. "Good boy! I've been awfully anxious. Knew her!" and he nodded his head towards the lady, erected figure in the next apartment.

"Yes, whispered Neal weakly, but his face pale with tenderness and delight.

"Eyes true blue," declared the old man fervently.

"How true blue," Neal barrett knew after a little explanation. The faithful Towser had driven the robber away, terribly lacerated Jacob Wise, grateful to man and dog, who had saved him a pair in his hoarded fortune, had given Neal the best care possible.

Some memoranda found on Neal had advised Miss of the existence of Florence. He had written her. She had come to nurse the unfortunate man she still loved.

"I'll call her in now," advised Wise. "She knows I'm going to start you on a new life, with plenty of capital. You're a brave man, and that deal will have a real silver collar. As to the young lady—don't miss your chance to get a good wife."

Which Neal did not, and Towser, loyal, valiant Towser, was banished out from guardship when the happy wedding took place.

SHE TOURED WORLD AT 85

Elderly Lady Enjoyed Trip, and Lived Two Years to Talk About It.

Mrs Mary J. Scroggs, who enjoyed the unique distinction of having traveled around the world and enjoyed every mile of the tour when she was eighty-five years old, died at the residence of her son, Dr. G. A. Scroggs, of Los Angeles. Particularly free from illness throughout her life, she was 87 but a short time before death. She was eighty-seven years old.

Two years ago Mrs Scroggs decided to take a trip around the globe. Many friends had known that she hoped to make the tour, but were amazed when she announced that she had completed arrangements. Hurried and with a mind particularly receptive and alert she travelled through foreign lands with the greatest enjoyment, and gathered an unusually large fund of information.

Shortly after returning to her daughter, Mrs. Decker Scroggs, and her niece, Miss Elizabeth P. Dalley. The oldest woman, ever to make such a trip, according to the records of all transportation companies, she was not in from ocean travel, and did not miss a day from sightseeing.

Mrs Scroggs went to Los Angeles 12 years ago from Beverly, Pa., having lived the greater part of her life in that community.

Wanted the Open.

During an automobile trip last summer a man Francisco was stopped one night with a party of teamsters in the mountains. Strolling about the camp, he noticed that many of the men had their blankets under the wagons. One man, however, had taken particular pains to carry his bedding a considerable distance away from the wagon and the rest of the men. Seeing him then by himself he asked the man why he did not sleep under the wagon the same as the others. "Who—me?" asked the old fellow as he twisted around in his blankets. "Not much. Me for right out in the open. It's too dark coming to sleep under a roof."

Advance Styles in Spring Neckwear

THE SANDMAN IN STORY

By Mrs. F. A. WALKER

ANNETTE AND FERDINAND.

A long time ago, in a dell house, there lived a little lady doll, whose name was Annette. She had brown hair, which she wore high upon her head, with a band of blue ribbon around it, and there were three curls at the back. She also wore blue earrings, which were to style in those days. She house she lived in was four stories high, and the little girl to whom it belonged had to stand on a stool to reach the top story. On the ground floor was the kitchen, the room above that was the dining room, above that was the sitting room, and the top room was the sleeping room. This was in the days before the modern doll house came into vogue, while it was well furnished for those days they did not have electric lights, or gas, for it was simply a wooden drawer that was very long and wide. It stood on a stool, and had shelves fitted in it for floors.

Now Annette's little mother decided that it was now time for Annette to live alone, and one morning she went to a large department store and bought an old-fashioned doll, and brought it home, and placed in the dolls' house and dressed it in the middle, the little girl's aunt, who was an artist, painted a little face upon a piece of white kid mustache, so that the storekeeper had stuffed it. Her hair was made of the light-haired doll he sold to the little girl.

Bedtime had for that was the same they gave him, was provided with a blue dress with sash and ribbons, and then he was introduced to Annette, who was in her nightgown and curls, and tried to appear very indifferent. But her heart beat very rapidly, for he was very handsome, with both of them.

The next day they were married. Annette wore a white tarlatan dress, with tiny white flowers in her hair, which had lost long ago in place, she carried a bouquet of white flowers. The bridegroom looked very stately in his new suit, although he must have been nervous, for he dropped the ring. A stool was a band of gold paper, and had to be assisted in putting it upon the bride's finger. But at last they were married and went to ride in the park in their honeymoon ship. Annette were a blue velvet turban and a blue cloth dress, and Ferdinand a coat of the varnished leather and carved his white vest.

I am sorry to say that he did not wear a hat, for there was not one to be found that looked at all stylish. Anyway, it was the fashion, and Ferdinand had to be content with it. Ferdinand felt the fire in the morning, and did not find fault with Annette's cooking, although sometimes the fried eggs looked very much like white buttons and the bacon like bark, and the coffee was very watery.

But one morning Ferdinand did not get up to build the fire, and Annette said that she would not build it. A slow smoke in the chimney of Annette's mother came she found both of them in bed, the poker underneath firmly by the shoulder, and placed him in the kitchen and soon a fire was burning in the cheerful fire. But the little mother decided that Dinah, the servant doll must be had at once, for Ferdinand declared the coffee was water and the biscuits like wooden button molds.

The next morning Ferdinand and Annette did not come down at the dining bell rang. Ferdinand sat at the table, reading his paper, and Annette appeared. She were a blue silk wrapper, fastened at the neck and waist with blue ribbon. Her hair from the waist down could be seen the ruffles of a lace petticoat.

"You are looking very charming, my dear," said Ferdinand, and the color mounted over Annette. Dinah came in with two little plates, and on each was half a grape, on a lover small leaf.

Then she arrived a most wonderful omelet which looked very much like a daisy.

"Just am a daisy omelet, Miss Ferdinand," she said, "I put some daisy. The biscuits looked very, which like a mustache. Ferdinand felt proud and not find fault, and everything went smoothly for a while.

Now one night Annette sat up all night and waited for Ferdinand, and he did not come home, and in the morning when Annette's mother came she found her sitting in her chair, looking very sad.

"Why, where is Ferdinand?" she asked, and then she ran to a corner in the room that Annette sorrowed, and from her home, and there on poor Ferdinand, looking as sad as Annette. The little girl had taken him to his business office in the morning and forgotten all about him. She quickly returned him to her mother, who took him, as a good and loving wife should, when he explained to her that business had kept him from home, and that he was sorry, and as there were no taxicabs in those days, she accepted his excuse. So you see all little girls should be careful to attend to their dolls, because they might break up a happy family by neglecting them.

TOO TAME FOR YOUNGSTERS

Former British Golf Champion Says Game Has Few Attractions for the Average Youth.

Harold Hy Hilton, the former British champion, in an editorial in the golfing magazine of which he is the editor, expresses the opinion that golf is a game that possesses few attractions for the average boy.

Hilton believes that the boy who plays golf receives much benefit therefrom, but he thinks that most boys prefer more active sports in which their youthful enthusiasm can find a natural outlet.

In view of the boom which the boys contingent has been having through on this side of the Atlantic just now the great British golfer's ideas is particularly interesting. He says in part:

"Youth demands a vigorous outlet for the natural fund of animal spirits which is present in nearly every boy of tender years, and it can hardly be said that the game of golf supplies a sufficient outlet for the vigorous enthusiasm of youth. It has few of the characteristics which appeal to the true, natural boy, and notwithstanding the outcry against the alleged sterility of allowing schoolboys to play the game, we cannot believe that it will ever become universally popular with the youth of the country unless some great change is taking place in the characteristics of the boyhood of Great Britain.

"But notwithstanding the absence of discipline, that it is an excellent game for boys, and for the young, undoubtedly, we are thoroughly convinced. It teaches the boy to act for himself, and it teaches him control, and self-discipline, and it teaches him a good soul and core of all forms of discipline."

BOBSLED IS NOT EXPENSIVE

Vehicle for Winter Sport of Simple Construction, Using Barrel Staves for Runners.

Any boy who can drive a nail and hew a piece of board can make an snort sonice, writes H. J. Blackiddy in the Boy's Life Book of Popular Mechanics. The materials necessary are four good, solid barrel staves, four blocks of wood, 4 inches long, 4 inches wide and 2 inches thick; two pieces, 18 inches long, 4 inches wide and 1 inch thick; one piece, 12 inches long, 4 inches wide and 1 inch thick; and a good board, 4 feet long, 12 inches wide and 1 inch thick.

The runners and knees are made with the blocks and the 1-inch board. Nothing else is needed, as shown in the illustration. Begin by fastening the two straight lengths of the material with a strong binding of narrow embroidery.

The over-present lingerie ribbon is threaded through the beading at the waist and represents the colors in the neck and sleeves. It is tied in simple bows with little bows.

Except for the long folded seams at the side, the work of this dress is all done by hand. Even the panels of satin are hemmed in the finest of stitches, and take a great deal of time and are more elegant than machine work.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Beaver For Only Young Women.

Beaver for grows more and more fashionable—and who would have believed it? Beaver! Yes, it is written that it falls in equal ripples on all sides. A border of ribbon combined with velvet dots renders this creation a striking one.

Still another new idea is featured in a fancy mesh veiling with a sand-colored kid flower applied, so that it would appear over the mouth when the veiling is adjusted. This style is strongly suggestive of the old time vanity veil.

Lemon Instead of Soap.

Try taking a lemon and cutting it in two and squeezing the juice into the dishwater no soap is needed. The lemon will cut all grease and in a few days' time the silver, such as knives, forks and spoons, will become bright as new. All dark spots will also disappear from pitchers and cups. Use the lemon over and over again.

The Straight Gate

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D.D. Dean of Moody Bible Institute Chicago

(TEXT—Strive to enter in at the straight gate: for wide is the gate, and broad the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many be there which go in thereat. Luke 13:24.

The occasion for this warning of Jesus was a question asked him by one of his followers as he went through the cities and villages teaching and journeying toward Jerusalem. The question was, "Are there few that be saved?" As Matthew Henry says, it may have been a serious question, a curious one, or a captious one, but nevertheless it was one of deep and mournful interest to us. In another says, if one needs to know the number of the saved in this dispensation he has only to look around him and compare the ways of man; with the words of Jesus. The first story he tells us, the fruit that we bear. Christ makes this very plain, in this same discourse, and contrasts the fruitfulness and substantial fruit of a harmonious life with fruits having a more positive taste, and more fleeting life, and we cannot help but be reminded of the continuous use of tomato ketchup. Then, too, it is easy to grow, given an abundant yield, and may be readily stored for winter use.

How Much Should Potatoes Weigh?

Potatoes should weigh 60 pounds to the bushel, and Bulletin 74 Popular Agriculture of your department of agriculture, says that if we are to have our average potatoes will weigh ten pounds, a peck should number from 40 to 60.

The offense potatoes are handicapped in their trials from producer to consumer the poorer their quality and the greater the percentage of refuse. When received from the market it is desirable to sort them carefully, that those of the same size may be cooked together—smooth, medium ones to be baked, large ones to be steamed in their skins; and imperfect and infected ones to be pared before boiling. Any portions that are dark-colored or spotted should be removed, as they may impart a bad flavor to the rest. Sprouts should be broken from potatoes before cooking.

When potatoes are old and wrinkled they are much improved by cutting off the ends or by partially or wholly paring and soaking in cold water for several hours, the longer the better. In fact, inferior potatoes of any age are improved by paring and soaking. Where potatoes are inexpensive or the garbage can is fed to animals it is often a profitable custom to pare before cooking, since the imperfections and strong-flavored portions are disposed of in such a manner that they are comparable to sauerkraut or tapioca and ready for the table as soon as cooked. It is true nevertheless that careful investigations have proved that much cooking causes considerable loss of the nutrients in the potato.

When potatoes are the only vegetable attainable it might be wiser to cook them without paring, so that their mineral salts may be retained, but people who use salad yeasts and other vegetables freely are justified in considering thrifty convenience and palatability of the paring of cooked tubers.

Often it is a convenience for the housekeeper who has several dishes to prepare at once just before dinner to have the potatoes cooked earlier in the day.

Most good cooks believe that it is wiser to discard the water in which potatoes are boiled, as it is likely to be strong in flavor.

Potato flour may be found in large grocerieties and used in the proportion 9-16 in the morning. Then there was a protest against making the pupils attend chapel, so the time for these exercises was fixed at nine o'clock while those who did not wish to attend chapel came in at 9:15.

The school day was fixed at 8:30 and the opening of the study session at nine. Now the time has been set at 8:45, and there is chapel only one day a week.—Grayson (Ky.) Dispatch to New York Press.

Their Great Scheme.

A local couple, recently married, by upon a scheme for saving a little money. They figured was just about right. Each month their wages would be certain sum each day. The first day one cent, the second day two cents, third four cents. Each day the amount was to be doubled until the end of 30 days. By that time they would have a little pile with laid away.

Before starting the husband figured out just how much would be saved. Well, it was like this: He would one work to foment the amount to be something like $2,500,000, so after considering the matter they decided that one dollar a day would be about their speed.—Youngstown Telegram.

Get the Hook.

"If man evolved from the monkey," remarked Dinglebert, "he at least has the satisfaction of knowing that his ancestors were remarkably intelligent."

"What's the answer?" queried Sniek.

Idiots."

"They were educated in the higher branches," replied Dinglebert.—Indianapolis Star.

Relic of the Past.

"Seems to be a diversity of opinion about you thing."

"What is that?"

"Your tuxedo. Some seem to think a trunk strap is more efficacious in reforming a bad boy than a suspended sentence."—Kansas City Journal.

Empire Night Dress, Handmade Trimming

THOSE undermuslins in which narrow crocheted edgings or tatting are used with a little shoe-embroidery are very effectively made up after the same patterns as those in which hand-made lace has been used. All these trimmings are equally durable and will outlast sheers any of the sheer fabrics which are favored for the body of these garments. If sewed by hand they will not be allowed to transfer to a second term of service in new material.

In the night dress shown in the pattern very narrow handmade chiffon lace in an insertion and edging are used with an embroidery insertion about two inches wide. This insertion is a fine Swiss pattern having tiny strips bloomers scattered over the sheaves of batiste.

Three strips of this embroidery set together with the lace insertion form the small yoke at the front, which is made up of one short piece across the front and one at each side, extending to the shoulder seam. The yoke is outlined with the insertion, which serves to join it to the material of the gown. The neck is finished with a narrow edging of cluny.

The short, gathered empire sleeves are finished with a band of embroidery joined to them by the cluny insertion and edged with lace like that about the neck.

The short empire waist of the gown is set on to the skirt, which is simply a narrow, wired flange of organdie stands out at right angles to the band, connecting the throat and neck. It is not a particularly comfortable adjunct, a piece of nockwear, but will cover up a multitude of defects, such as wrinkles or sagging muscles.

The Parasol Veil.

Another novelty of note is the so-called parasol veil. This is a huge circular veil that is so cut and so fitted that it falls in equal ripples on all sides. A border of ribbon combined with velvet dots renders this creation a striking one.

Still another new idea is featured in a fancy mesh veiling with a sand-colored kid flower applied, so that it would appear over the mouth when the veiling is adjusted. This style is strongly suggestive of the old time vanity veil.

Economical Costume.

A blouse of lace with a separate skirt will make a costume appropriate for many occasions.

Tone Color.

"Did your playmate enjoy her visit?" said a mother to her small daughter, who had just bidden adieu to a little friend.

"Why, yes, mother, I think she did," replied the child. "I showed her all my things, and I put dressy tone you see when you have company."—Youth's Companion.

Answered.

Teacher—If there were four flies on a table and I killed one, how many would be left?

Bright Little Boy—One; the dead one!

Fitted Fondness.

"What is in the mail from daughter?" asked mother, eagerly. "A tome send kisses," answered father, grimly, and sixteen handkerchiefs, two waists and four bunches of ribbons for you to wash and mend."—Kansas City Journal.

Carrying It Too Far.

An agreeable disposition is a nice thing, but some people are so near to not coming with that it is too far to get along with them.

Carlyle on Warfare.

Are not all true men that live, of that ever lived soldiers of the same army enlisted under heaven's captaincy, to do battle against the same mischief, the empire of darkness and wrong? Why should we mishmow one another, fight not against the enemy but against ourselves, from mere difference of uniform? All uniforms shall be good, we they hold in them true, valiant men.—Carlyle.

Run once to Reality.

Girls are such sentimental creatures that it does remains a rude but when the honeymoon is over and their sweetheart's hat is the skirt shoves, chopping kindling wood out in the back yard.—Florida Times-Union.

Public Life.

Public life is a stream of power and energy; he trespasses against his duty who misses upon that which as well as he that goes over to the enemy.—Burke.

Unexpensive Bobsled.

rers. One of these pieces with the runners is fastened to one end of the board, the other is attached with a bolt to the middle of the board. A piece, 12 feches long, is fastened across the top of the board at the front end. A rope fastened to the front of the runners provides a means of steering the sled.

The sled can be quickly made, and it will carry the boys well when an expensive one cannot be had.

EXCELLENT WAY OF READING

Do Not Hope to Get at Author's Meaning Without Getting at Intention of His Words.

"When you come to a good book, you must ask yourself, Am I sufficiled to work as an Australian miner would? Are my pickaxes and shovels in order? Have I the right to good tries myself, my sleeves well-up to the work, and my mind good, and in temper? And, keeping the figure a little longer, even at the risk of drawing it, we for it is a thoroughly useful one, the metal you are in search of behind the author's mind and meaning, his words are as the rock which you have to cut and shape and carry away. And your pickaxes are your own care, will and learning; your shovels are your sense and thoughtful sense. Do not hope to get at any good author's meaning without these tools and these often you will need shovels, pickaxes, and sustained toiling before you can gather one grain of the metal."—John Ruskin, in "Sesame and Lilies."

Now Fight!

Are you a good fighter? Here is a chance for you. Fight these things to yourself:

Anger, fear, worry, hate, revenge, greed, grief, the blues and every thought that makes you weak.

You can feel that such thoughts take away your strength if you stop to think. You have no health or strength to throw away. A passenger who had to do what you wish to get done in life's world.

Such enemies come upon us when we are tired or not feeling well and we have to get up on a battle of wits against them. Gear them out. Drive them away! Let in only the pure thoughts which give us strength and health.—Selected.

His Other Home.

Schoolmaster—What little boy can tell me where is the home of the swallow?

Bobby—I can, please.

Teacher—Well, Bobby

Bobby—The home of the swallow is in the stummick.—Golden Rule.

Not Pleasant.

A gentleman once asked a boy where he was born.

"In Paris," said the boy.

"What part?"

"Why, all of me!" was the reply.

TO PREPARE AND USE VEGETABLES

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT EXPERTS GIVE RESULTS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT.

UNDERGROUND VEGETABLES

Some Facts About Roots and Underground Stems that Are Eaten as Vegetables—Cooking Starch.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Nearly all roots and underground stems that are eaten as vegetables contain large quantities of water. In addition to starch or some similar material, a little nitrogenous matter, and mineral matter. The roots and stems also contain materials for future growth during favorable seasons. Plants that store most of their food as insoluble starch (as potatoes and cassava) are known as "starch-bearing plants," while those which store most of their food in the form of soluble carbohydrates (sugar in the case of the beet) which give the root a more or less juicy character are classed as "succulent roots."

In northern regions the potato is the most important of the starch-bearing plants. In the southern states the sweet potato is more generally used. One reason why the potato has become such a favorite is doubtless the lack of pronounced flavor. It harmonizes with foods having a more positive taste, and some people eat it at one would of the continuous use of turnip-or squash. Then, too, it is easy to grow, gives an abundant yield, and may be readily stored for winter use.

How Much Should Potatoes Weigh?

Potatoes should weigh 60 pounds to the bushel, and Bulletin 74 Popular Agriculture of your department of agriculture, says that if we are to have our average potatoes will weigh ten pounds, a peck should number from 40 to 60.

The offense potatoes are handicapped in their trials from producer to consumer the poorer their quality and the greater the percentage of refuse. When received from the market it is desirable to sort them carefully, that those of the same size may be cooked together—smooth, medium ones to be baked, large ones to be steamed in their skins; and imperfect and infected ones to be pared before boiling. Any portions that are dark-colored or spotted should be removed, as they may impart a bad flavor to the rest. Sprouts should be broken from potatoes before cooking.

When potatoes are old and wrinkled they are much improved by cutting off the ends or by partially or wholly paring and soaking in cold water for several hours, the longer the better. In fact, inferior potatoes of any age are improved by paring and soaking. Where potatoes are inexpensive or the garbage can is fed to animals it is often a profitable custom to pare before cooking, since the imperfections and strong-flavored portions are disposed of in such a manner that they are comparable to sauerkraut or tapioca and ready for the table as soon as cooked. It is true nevertheless that careful investigations have proved that much cooking causes considerable loss of the nutrients in the potato.

When potatoes are the only vegetable attainable it might be wiser to cook them without paring, so that their mineral salts may be retained, but people who use salad yeasts and other vegetables freely are justified in considering thrifty convenience and palatability of the paring of cooked tubers.

Often it is a convenience for the housekeeper who has several dishes to prepare at once just before dinner to have the potatoes cooked earlier in the day.

Most good cooks believe that it is wiser to discard the water in which potatoes are boiled, as it is likely to be strong in flavor.

Potato flour may be found in large groceries and used in the proportion 9-16 in the morning. Then there was a protest against making the pupils attend chapel, so the time for these exercises was fixed at nine o'clock while those who did not wish to attend chapel came in at 9:15.

The school day was fixed at 8:30 and the opening of the study session at nine. Now the time has been set at 8:45, and there is chapel only one day a week.—Grayson (Ky.) Dispatch to New York Press.

Their Great Scheme.

A local couple, recently married, by upon a scheme for saving a little money. They figured was just about right. Each month their wages would be certain sum each day. The first day one cent, the second day two cents, third four cents. Each day the amount was to be doubled until the end of 30 days. By that time they would have a little pile with laid away.

Before starting the husband figured out just how much would be saved. Well, it was like this: He would one work to foment the amount to be something like $2,500,000, so after considering the matter they decided that one dollar a day would be about their speed.—Youngstown Telegram.

Get the Hook.

"If man evolved from the monkey," remarked Dinglebert, "he at least has the satisfaction of knowing that his ancestors were remarkably intelligent."

"What's the answer?" queried Sniek.

Idiots."

"They were educated in the higher branches," replied Dinglebert.—Indianapolis Star.

Relic of the Past.

"Seems to be a diversity of opinion about you thing."

"What is that?"

"Your tuxedo. Some seem to think a trunk strap is more efficacious in reforming a bad boy than a suspended sentence."—Kansas City Journal.

Western Michigan

A Region that is Rapidly Developing as a Fruit Growing and General Farming Section

WEXFORD COUNTY BOYS' CORN CLUB.

One of the interesting events in Wexford county each year is the corn contest conducted by the Wexford County Boys' Corn club. The club is promoted by the county extension agent, and the boys taking great interest in the boys in the rural schools of his county and has organized this club, which began active work about five years ago. Once each year they come to Lake City for a week's camping, bringing with them the best ten ears from the corn crop they have grown the preceding season. The ears are exhibited at the Y. M. C. A. building and by the people in Lake City. The annual meeting is in the nature of an outing. The Y. M. C. A. gymnasium and baths are thrown open to the county boys and they are urged to have as good a time as possible between the sessions of the annual meeting. Speakers of state note are secured, that they may tell the boys of new and better ways for growing corn and that they may be encouraged to do their best. The above picture shows the boys who attended the last annual meeting.

GOOD WORK OF THE COUNTY FARM AGENT

Benzie and Grand Traverse counties are considering the advisability of hiring county farm agents. The matter was recently put before the supervisors of Benzie county and they have asked the people of that county to vote upon the proposition. If the vote is favorable an agent will be hired. As the county agent idea is comparatively new and only a part of the people of Benzie county have learned of the methods and value of these agents, the result of the vote is in doubt. However, if the proposition fails to carry at the present time, a campaign of education will be conducted with the thought of securing a county agent at a early date. In counties which have had agents and those that have watched the results, are friendly to the proposition just as many counties with school commissioners are friendly to the idea of having such officers, and cannot be persuaded by one head.

At the recent meeting of the Grand Traverse county society it was voted to appoint a committee to investigate the question of a county agent and see if it was advisable for the people of Grand Traverse county to be urged to take steps along this line and a committee consisting of Frank Hosmer, one of Traverse City's one general farmer was appointed and this committee will give the subject consideration, looking up the results of county agents in those counties where men have been at work for one or more years.

Wayne county which has had a county agent for two years recently adopted a new method of taking care of this semi-county official. In the past appropriations have been secured from the board of supervisors and from the financial men of the county. Now an organization has been formed with membership dues of five dollars a year and the money is used in the forms of only the members of the organization instead of rendering service to all the people who make request. This means that many of the farmers who have joined the county of the county agent will be deprived of it, except at a expense of a membership in the county agricultural bureau. But as the people of the county assisted in the proposition to use county funds to help defray the expenses, it is not that the average farmer will be the one that can be made to work just as hard as he can be profitably used. The

The Charlevoix Sentinel
Published every Thursday morning at Charlevoix, Michigan.
WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR
Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9.
SUBSCRIPTION
Three Months - - 25c
Six Months - - - 50c
One Year - - - - $1.00

LETTER FROM THE STATE TAX COMMISSIONERS

March 29, 1915.

To the Supervisors:

Many letters of inquiry have come to the office of the Board of State Tax Commissioners during the past few days, all evidently inspired by an knowledge that field men of the Commission are now in a number of counties engaged in the preliminary work necessary to a reassessment. These letters call attention to the fact that many supervisors in 1914, on request from the Tax Commission, assessed their districts at what they believed to be true cash value and their assessments were reviewed by the county boards of review on the same basis, regardless of the raise in dollars and cents at the end of some township roll of their constituents. The letters further call attention to the published statements of the Tax Commission that "it will not make the assessments but hold reviews in townships where the supervisors and boards of review placed assessments at cash value, but will leave the work of making and reviewing assessments in those townships entirely in the hands of the local officials as long as cash value and equality Boards are not departed from." They also asked if such districts are to be reassessed or brought into line with those where no attention was paid to the requests of the Tax Commission.

In answering these inquiries the Board of State Tax Commissioners wishes, first of all, to acknowledge its appreciation of the work of these supervisors and boards of review who made cash value assessments and to express the hope that, regardless of politics, they will not be refused re-election because of having done their duty as prescribed by law. We believe it to be for the best interests of their constituents, as well as of the entire State, that they be continued in office until cash value assessments shall prevail throughout all Michigan. That day we believe is near. Twenty-five counties have been reassessed completely by the Commission, twenty-one other counties, excepting a few townships which will be reassessed by the Commission this spring, have been brought up to approximate cash value by their own assessing officers and city or township boards in other counties have also been reassessed. The local assessing officers of Michigan added more than $200,000,000 to the rolls in 1914, which, together with the increase directly made by the Commission, brought the average assessment of the State up to 53.3 per cent of true cash value, as against the reassessment of the counties of Michigan added more than $200,000,000 to the rolls in 1914, which, together with the increase directly made by the Commission, brought the average assessment of the State up to 53.3 per cent of true cash value, as against the reassessment of the counties of Wayne, Monroe, Sanilac and Muskegon is already well under way, and work preliminary to reassessments will come up to cash value is going on in a number of other counties. Should the response of the supervisors to the action of the appeal of the Tax Commission to assess their districts at cash value equal last year, as it promises to do, the year 1916 will see cash value assessments prevail throughout the State.

Answering the direct question as to the intentions of the Tax Commission with respect to townships assessed at approximate cash value in 1914, we declare that the original promise of the Tax Commission will be kept and there will not reassess nor review an; such township or district UNLESS the assessors shall, on examination, be found to have been reduced below cash value.

The Tax Commission has made a compilation by districts of the assessment, real and personal, of the entire State. It has also compiled by districts the approximate cash value of the taxable property of the State, as determined for the State Equalization of 1914. By comparing the assessed valuation and the approximate cash value, it has determined which assessment areas are in proportion and properly assessed and which ones should be reviewed and brought up to true cash value. It is intended to list all districts not to be reassessed many have to be included where there is a difference between the assessment and the Commission's valuation arising from an honest difference in judgment which can be adjusted on the assessment roll for 1915 without a reassessment. We have also tentatively included in the list township in which the difference is considerable, but which it is promised, will be properly assessed by the assessors themselves in 1915 without further action on our part.

It must be recognized and understood, however, that a district may have been properly assessed in 1914 and will not be found so assessed in 1915. A new supervisor may be elected who will have different ideas of value, or who may deliberately attempt to reduce assessments, or the local board of review may disagree with his supervisor and by its work reduce the assessment below cash value. All this must and will be guarded against, and the power of State Tax Commissioners will, after the completion of the assessment roll, follow in 1916, compare the new assessment with both the 1914 assessment and its estimate of true cash value, and bring the new assessment apparently above a departure from true cash value, further examination will be made and all districts found to have fallen away from true cash value will be reassessed along with the township not now up to cash value.

Representatives of the Tax Commission are now at work in many counties preparing field books of the townships for their use in the work of reassessment. In consideration of the same they will at once, without waiting for the new assessment, proceed to make examinations and assessments preparatory to reviewing the 1915 assessment. It is necessary to do this in order to reach, this year, all townships not properly assessed. The Tax Commission, however, still believes that the local assessor is the best man to make the assessment and has not changed its announced policy of giving every possible opportunity to the various assessing districts to have their assessments made and reviewed by local officials. It will, therefore, regardless of previous assessments, wherever it finds the 1915 assessment to have been made at approximate cash value, hold no review even though its figures have been completed on the entire township, but will accept the supervisors' figures.

In making its determination, as to the character of an assessment, the Commission will always bear in mind that honest differences of judgment as to property valuations exist between persons equally well informed. Also they will not overlook the fact that the local assessing officer, if competent and experienced, should have a better knowledge of local conditions than the representatives of the Tax Commission; therefore, when it is a question of judgment and the difference is not so great as to be ground for questioning the accuracy of the assessing officer, preference will be given to his figures, especially will the Commission be influenced when supervisor, board of review and assessor agree as to being about a cash value assessment.

We have also had several letters from assessing officers declaring that they were campaigning for the office of supervisor or assessor on the announced platform of reducing private assessments regardless of cash value. We call attention to the absolute necessity of working under, out of justice to the districts where assessments have been placed at cash value by their own assessors and to the counties that have been reassessed by the Tax Commission, to prevent such action by reassessing such districts and placing them where the local officials cannot reduce the assessment for a period of three years without our written consent. Not to do so would rapidly undo the Commission's work, destroy the confidence of the people in its declarations, restore the old system of competition in low assessments and compel the State to be a party to the expense of reassessing every district instead of having it done by local officials.

In concluding we again promise the people of Michigan that this Commission will this year, the same as last, extend to every assessing officer all possible assistance and exercise of competition in low assessments and compel the State to be a party to the expense of reassessing every district instead of having it done by local officials.

In concluding we again promise the people of Michigan that this Commission will this year, the same as last, extend to every assessing officer all possible assistance and exercise of competition in low assessments, but will hold to a minimum the extent of examining and valuing public utilities and large industrial and mercantile establishments regarding the proper value of which he may be in doubt.

Very respectfully yours,
Orlando F. Barnes,
George B. Horton,
Thomas H. Kearney,
Board of State Tax Commissioners.

W. C. T. U.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet with Mrs. G. C. Gelston Friday, April 9th, at 2:30 p. m. The meeting will be opened with a Bible reading led by Rev. L. C. Vineyard. Every member is urged to be present, if possible, at the opening. Bring your dollar.

Response to roll call, Temperance Clippings—Business session.

Topic for Consideration, "Our Organization."

W. C. T. U. Catechism, Mrs. Lewis.

Paper, "The Work of the W. C. T. U. Through Its Departments," Miss Anna M. Metcalf.

Music.

Benediction.

The programs for the year will be ready for distribution.

Rheumatism Yields Quickly to Sloan's

You can't prevent an attack of Rheumatism from coming on, but you can get rid of it almost immediately. Sloan's Liniment greatly applied to the seat of the trouble relieves the severe intensity of the pain, and in a very short time brings a speedy, thorough and unexpected relief. Very few diseases have been more obstinate than Rheumatism, and very few have been more easily subdued. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

Persian Talismans.

In Persia superstition in regard to talismans exists to an alarming extent, and it is asserted that the shah possesses no fewer than 200 of them. One is a golden star of five points, which has the reputation that upon sight of it any conspirator will instantly confess his crime. Another is a solid cube of amber, which it is asserted will from its potency in the time of Mohammed. This is supposed to give the shah invulnerability, and he therefore wears it round his neck. Yet another is a gold box set in emeralds and blessed by the prophet, which it is asserted renders the royal family invisible in certain circumstances. In addition to conversing the power of invisibility is said to be contained in the shah's scimitar set with a diamond in its hilt.

Cures.

Coal tars much of its beauty immediately after it is taken out of the water.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, April 6th, 1915.

The common council for the city of Charlevoix met on the above date. Mayor Nichols presiding.

Aldermen present, Priest, Cartier, Shapton and Carey.

Absent, See and Barney.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Enter Aldermen See and Barney.

The Finance Committee submitted the following report: Having examined the following bills report the same correct and recommend that they be allowed out of the several funds as stated:

Water Fund
H. D. Marshall, services	4 75
Tax Fund
Mich. State Telephone Co., phone	4 40
Eugene Dalquist, supplies	2 50
H. D. Marshall, services	4 75
Vincent LaFrance, Justice services	2 50
Chas. Hayes, assessment road work	22 50
Highway & Water Funds
Mich. State Telephone Co., phone	4 40
W. H. Gaskill, services and supplies	6 00
Pere Marquette, freight	3 40
Peninsular Paper Co., supplies	1 50
A. C. Dennison, scales	4 50
Charlevoix Hardware, supplies	1 00
W. P. Cole, services	4 75
Chas. Hayes, services	4 50
Charlevoix Hardware, supplies	1 00
Henry Richard, March street	3 00
Street Fund
Harry Nichols, salary as Mayor	25 00
L. W. Priest, salary, alderman 1st ward	25 00
L. W. Priest, salary, 4th mayor 1st ward	25 00
Geo. See, salary, alderman 2nd ward	25 00
E. A. Shapton, salary, alderman 3rd ward	25 00
Frank Carey, salary, alderman 3rd ward	25 00
Fred Cartier, salary, alderman 4th ward	25 00
Fred Barney, salary, alderman 4th ward	25 00
Peninsular Paper Co., supplies	1 50
Mich. State Telephone Co., phone	4 40
Charlevoix Hardware, supplies	1 00
Charlevoix Publishing Co., printing	3 00
Health Fund
Peninsular Paper Co., supplies and ser.	1 50
Police Fund
F. W. Burton, supplies	2 00
H. D. Marshall, C. C. Barber clerk, services	20 00
Cemetery Fund
Mich. State Telephone Co., phone	4 40
Charlevoix Hardware, supplies	1 00
Bridge Fund
H. M. A. Johnston & Co., sand and stone	2 50
F. C. Hudson, services	4 50
Charlevoix Hardware, supplies	1 00
Charlevoix Publishing Co., printing	3 00
Hunter Oil Co., supplies	11 25
Highway Fund
Pioneer Fairbank, supplies	1 50
Moses Lasser, services	4 50
Chas. Hayes, services	4 50
E. B. Shaw, services	4 50

Moved by Alderman Barney and seconded by Alderman Shapton that the report as read be accepted and the mayor and Clerk be authorized to issue warrants on the City Depositories for $1706.56 and the Clerk be instructed to issue orders on the various funds for the amount of each respective bill. Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote.

Ayes See, Priest, Cartier, Barney, Shapton and Carey. Nays none.

Alderman Priest supported by Alderman Barney moved the adoption of the following resolution:

RESOLVED by the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix, that the establishing and constructing of a sewer including the constructing of all necessary ventilations, gutters, man-holes, lamp-holes, catch-basins, cess-pools, flush-tanks and all the necessary attachments in the street above mentioned be received, and the following territory be designated and established as a special assessment district, to be assessed for the establishing and constructing of said sewer including the constructing of the necessary ventilations, gutters, man-holes, lamp-holes, catch-basins, cess-pools, flush-tanks, and all the necessary attachments in said streets in the City of Charlevoix, all lots and parts of lots, lots and premises abutting and fronting on either side of Lewis street from the north line of Dixon avenue, north to the south line of Petoskey avenue, thence east on Petoskey avenue to the center of Lot Five (5) Block Three (3) of Fox and Eaton's unrecorded plat, excepting from above public streets and alleys.

Resolved, That the said plans, plats, diagrams, specifications and estimates of cost be deposited with the City Clerk for public examination, and that notices thereof of the public improvement, and of the district to be assessed as above described and designated, and that the Common Council of the City of Charlevoix will meet at the council rooms on the 19th day of April, A. D. 1915, at seven o'clock in the afternoon, to consider any objections thereto, to be given for publication in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper published and circulated in the City of Charlevoix.

This resolution was passed and adopted this sixth day of April A. D. 1915.

Attest: Harry Nichols, Mayor.
F. E. Vandermade, City Clerk.

Adopted at an adjourned meeting of March 29th of the Common Council for the City of Charlevoix this 6th day of April A. D. 1915, by the following Aye and Nay vote: Ayes, See, Priest, Cartier, Barney, Shapton and Carey.

Nays none.

Moved by Alderman Shapton and seconded by Alderman Carey and Sec that the salary of the Street Commissioner be continued at $1 per day at the discretion of the Street Committee. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Barney that the City Engineer be instructed to make a report at the next regular meeting as to the condition of the South Side Bridge approach. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Shapton and seconded by Aldermen Priest and Cartier that the purchasing committee be instructed to purchase 4 lamp posts for the north and south side of the Bridge from King's Foundry Co., St. Joseph, at a cost of $36 each and delivered. Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote: Ayes, See Priest, Cartier, Barney, Shapton and Carey. Nays none.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Barney that the Mayor appoint one arbitrator and Mrs. G. E. Noble be notified to appoint one who to estimate the loss done by fire on the Boyne Hotel. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Carey and seconded by Alderman Shapton that the water main be laid on Garfield Ave. on Grant St. to Upright Ave. and from State St. west on Lincoln to Grant St. and hydrants be installed on corner of Garfield Ave. and Grant St. and one on corner of Garfield and Bridge St. and one on Lincoln Ave. at the midway alley. According to plans on file, and Purchasing Committee be instructed to purchase necessary material. Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote: Ayes See, Priest, Cartier, Barney, Shapton and Carey. Nays none.

Moved by Alderman Priest and seconded by Ald. Shapton that the sewer valves be ordered at once for the water main on State street so as to supply Mr. C. R. Munyon with water. Motion carried.

The Electric Light and Water Committee were granted more time to report on the petition to extend the water main on Prospect Street and Lincoln Ave.

There being no further business the council adjourned until Thursday, April 15th, 1915 at 1:30 p. m.

F. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

Beaver Island News

The fishing tugs are cut setting nets.

The gasoline boats are making regular trips to Charlevoix.

We had two mails last week.

Mrs. Ella McDonald had the Easter Monday Dance.

Capt. John Rice is having new lines put in the boilers of the Schrooder.

Capt. C. C. Allen is building a schooner.

W. P. Lach who was hurt some time ago is out again.

W. J. Gallagher went to Charlevoix last week on business.

John W. Green was elected supervisor of Peaine township.

Capt. Pete McCafferty made two trips last week with the Major. He carried the mail.

Mrs. W. A. Scheid and son of Manistee is visiting her parents.

Geo. Williams will open a meat market this week.

The Steamer Rising Sun made two trips to High Island taking two loads of shingles.

Frank Miller is running his saw mill making fish boxes.

Tom Bonner is building a new house.

W. J. Gallagher, was elected supervisor of St. James township.

Herman Alters built a fine gasoline boat.

Gus Wilkie and J. H. Gallagher built a gasoline boat for a Northport party.

Newton W. Chaffee, of Cadillac, has been engaged as superintendent of the Central Lake schools for the coming year.

Traverse City Record: Mrs. Lou H. Comfort of Charlevoix, who spent the past few days with her sister, Mrs. W. W. Holdsworth, on South Union street, left yesterday afternoon for Mitwaukee where she will spend a few days with her sister, Mrs. Frank Bonner.

Boyne Citizen: Monday the contracts were signed between the Longshoremen and the local companies. In interview to the men, W. L. Martin said the outlook at this time was much brighter than a year ago, while many inquiries received and more orders booked. As soon as navigation opens boats will be in for lumber sold to Chicago. This will be loaded on outside boats but there are few lake boats ready for the company boats.

E. W. Abbott, of Boyne City, is working up a plan to advertise the produce of the farms of his section to the buyers all over the country. Each farmer will be called upon to contribute a booklet in which will appear his name and the amount of the various kinds of produce he expects to offer for sale in the late summer or fall. More than fifty thousand booklets will be published and distributed.

Petoskey News: Professor Anson Washburn of this city, who is superintendent of the schools at Zeeland, Mich. is a candidate for the position of superintendent of the schools at Boyne City. Superintendent Butler, of the schools in Boyne City, has accepted a similar position at Iron Mountain, upper peninsula, for next year. Both of these men have held their positions for several years. Professor Butler is well and favorably known all over Northern Michigan. Professor Washburn is a Petoskey man well liked both here and at Zeeland and sure to make good in Boyne City if he secures the position there.

Your Child's Cough Is A Call For Help. Don't put off treating your child's cough. It not only says their strength but often ends in more serious sickness. Why risk? You don't have to wait. King's New Discovery is safe, the remedy your child needs. It is mild, with soothing, healing and antiseptic balsams that will quickly check the cold and soothe your child's cough away. No odds how long the cough or how long standing, King's New Discovery will stop it. It's guaranteed. Just get a bottle from your Druggist and try it.

NOTICE!

Notice is Hereby Given, That the plats, plans, diagrams, specifications and estimates of cost of the proposed establishing and constructing of a sewer including all the necessary ventilations, gutters, man-holes, lamp-holes, catch basins, cess-pools, flush-tanks, and all the necessary attachments, commencing at the center of Lewis street and Dixon avenue, thence north to the center of Petoskey avenue, thence east on Petoskey avenue to the center of Lot Five (5) Block Three (3) of Fox and Eaton's unrecorded plat, have been deposited with the City Clerk for examination and the district to be assessed for said improvement is described as follows: All lots, parts of lots, lands and premises abutting and fronting on either side of Lewis street, commencing at the center of Lewis street and Dixon avenue, thence north to the center of Petoskey avenue, thence east on Petoskey avenue to the center of Lot Five (5) Block Three (3) of Fox and Eaton's unrecorded plat, excepting from above public streets and alleys.

Notice is Hereby Given, that the common Council of the City of Charlevoix will meet in the council room on the 19th day of April, A. D. 1915, at seven thirty o'clock in the afternoon, to consider any objections to the proposed public improvement.

Dated this 6th day of April, A. D. 1915.

F. E. Vandermade, City Clerk.

Religious Notes

Congregational Church
(BRANDING NOTICES)

Public Worship every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.

Bible School, 12 o'clock.

Young People's Meeting, 6:00 p. m.

Mid-week meeting, Thursday, 7:30 p. m.

(AT BOYNE CITY)

Bible School at 11:30 p. m.

Preaching, 2:30 p. m.

Baptist Church

A M.—"Back to the old Paths."

P. M.—"Water Baptism."

B. Y. P. U.—Topic, Getting Ready for the next life.—Leader Miss De Weese.

Tuesday evening, 7 o'clock, Bible Study, "The New Birth."

Thursday evening, Prayer Meeting. Difficult Passage: Rev. 22:18-19

Christian Science

Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.

Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—Are Sin, Disease and Death Real?

Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.

Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m., also 8 to 9 p. m. Sunday.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service

8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:00 a. m.—High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.

Mass during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church

Services second and fourth Thursday in each month, by Rev. Harris, of Petoskey.

Methodist Church.

A. M. The Contest.
P. M. The Last Miracle.

SnappyShoeStyles

We have the nobblest shoe styles in town. Our new line has just arrived and we ask you to inspect it. You will be interested in the latest styles and exceptional values.

We sell the Famous Mayer HONORBILT SHOES

—because they are the best—they are not only leaders in style but dependable for wear. Mayer Honorbilt Shoes are made over the latest lasts. The material is selected to give greatest service and the workmanship is of the very highest quality. We also show Mayer Shoes for Women and Children.

Come in and see the line.

MASON'S Department Store.

Fish!

We know you will buy where you can get the most and the best for your money.

We catch our own fish, therefore you save the middleman's profit.

Located 3 doors east of X. L. Creamery
BELVEDERE AVENUE
All Standing Orders Delivered.

H. L. BRADY & SON.

GLASSES FITTED
CONSULT
J. LEAHY
Optometrist
Expert on Eye Strain

Headache, Dizziness, Nervousness, and all other symptoms of Eye Strain cured

Crossed Eyes Straightened Without an Operation.

Fitting Children's Eyes a Specialty.

Difficult Cases Solicited.

Glasses Guaranteed to Fit.

HOTEL CHARLEVOIX,
Thursday Apr. 22
One Day Only.
HOME OFFICE PETOSKEY, MICH

OUR BEST CLUB OFFER

December 5, 1914 — Farm Press — 10 Cents

The FARMING BUSINESS

THE FARMING BUSINESS
A Real Help to the Farmer

The great new $1.50 weekly farm paper, illustrated in colors, with a circulation of more than 100,000 and but a few months old. Her an ordinary farm paper. It treats farming as a BUSINESS and the farmer as a BUSINESS MAN. Shows you run your BUSINESS at a profit—helps you with the selling and to get highest prices for your products.

MANY ARTICLES BY EXPERTS ON FARM PROBLEMS —only farm paper with investigator to always stop ready for trouble. Ask farmers. Many features — News Review for Farmers—School of War Maps—Market Letter (War affects markets, markets determine success of farmers). BUSINESS—New farm inventions and discoveries which lower costs and increase profits. Many Departments — to show the farmer how to make more money. Year one, two extraordinary paper in your BUSINESS.

DEPARTMENTS FOR ENTIRE FAMILY—Boy and Girl—Farmer's Department—Needlework and Embroidery Designs—The Home Maker's Club—In short you will find the Farming Business a mighty big surprise. We have made arrangements with the M. D. Boyce Co., publishers, by which we can offer you the following wonderful club with your subscription to the

6 Ever Blooming Rose Bushes

Make your yard and garden a rosy Paradise. This assortment consists of the most beautiful varieties: there are a wide range of colors and they are not surpassed by anything in the rose family. They are strong, well rooted plants, hardy as oaks and ready to be transplanted in your garden. We guarantee them to reach you in good condition. They will be mailed at the proper time for planting in your section.

The Farming Business, 1 year, 52 issues, $1.50
Six Ever Blooming Rose Bushes - - 1.00
The Charlevoix Sentinel - - - 1.50 | $2.40

M. D. BOYCE COMPANY, PUBLISH LP, CHICAGO, ILL.

John C. Miller

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 45 — Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, April 15, 1915. — NUMBER 52

A HOME BANK 1915 THE STATE SUPERVISION

Make Your Future Bright--

You can make your future bright by saving a part of your earnings. Do not depend upon luck to provide for old age. Begin NOW to cultivate the growing Savings Account. It is not so much the amount that you start with, that counts, as the regularity with which you make additional deposits.

We invite Savings Accounts in any amount. 4 per cent Interest paid on Certificates of Deposit and Savings book accounts.

CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
RESOURCES $250,000.00
J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
W. J. RACHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't. Cashier.

A Savings Account

Is a friend in adversity. And a friend a great majority of people need sooner or later. Life's road is an uncertain highway, leading us over all kinds of rough ground and experiences. We may be fat with plenty today and learn in poverty tomorrow. The only sure and safe way to be prepared for these contingencies is to begin saving, if only a little at a time and keep it up regularly and persistently.

Start a Bank Account

Put your money where it will be safe and bring you a little interest. Look out for the principal. See that that is safe and the income will take care of itself. Start an account with us where it will bring you interest and still be at your disposal any time you want it.

Charlevoix County Bank
of Nicholls, Buttars and Bridge
4% on deposits if left six months 4%

Wall Ruined? No Indeed if your walls are painted with SHERWIN-WILLIAMS Flat-Tone

A little soap and water

Make it like new

No spots or finger marks on Flat-Tone walls! Soap and water take such marks off without the slightest marring of dainty tints. We recommend Flat-Tone not only because it is a beautiful decoration but also because we know it is truly sanitary. No germs can hide behind Flat-Tone.

Flat-Tone may be had on any surface and leaves a perfectly uniform finish of dull velvet beauty that never rests the eyes.

We can furnish Flat-Tone in many beautiful shades, and we will be glad to show you the attractive effect secured with this modern sanitary wall finish.

F. S. BLANCHARD ESTATE
Charlevoix, Michigan.

J. L. CRANE

Valance Curtains-

Latest Scrim Materials with Lace Edge and Insertion. White or Ivory Color.

THESE CURTAINS ARE MADE READY TO HANG—PLACE FOR ROD AND HEADING ALL MADE.

Prices are very low.

Curtains By The Pair Including The Valance

95c - $1.00 - $1.25 - $1.50

Local and Personal Notes

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

J. L. Crane
C. Dantz & Son
F. S. Blanchard Est.
Argo Mining Co.
M. A. Levison & Co.
J. Leahy.
A. P. Mason Dept. Store.
C. L. Gonser Variety Store.
Charlevoix State Bank.

TOOK A BIG CONTRACT

From the Charlevoix SENTINEL October 19, 1905:

From a Petoskey paper we clip the following from the proceedings of the Emmet county board of supervisors:

"We recommend that this board appoint a standing committee of three members to hold office until superseded or until the next annual meeting of the board of supervisors of Emmet county, this committee to be paid same as is serving on the board of supervisors, mileage and per diem. The duty of this committee shall be to examine into the workings of the state tax commission."

Great hayseed! Did the board know what it was doing when it made that recommendation? Did it know that it was entering on a bigger job than has been imposed upon the Alaskan boundary tribunal, or the Panama canal commission? Did it know that it was being sold off a larger chunk than it could chew?

To discover or uncover the ramifications, scintillations, elucidations, or perturbations of the state tax commission means something equivalent to a solution of the problems of Euclid, or a commentary on the theology of Dowie.

There are questions that mortal man should not trifle with. Only after the unfolding of the scroll of time; when the veil is lifted and we find ourselves sitting on the clouds shall we "know as we are known" by the tax commission.

It is not for us to know, and any man, or body of men, who presume to inaugurate any such inquiry, are tempting fate.

How would it look for the late Charlevoix County Patriotism' Association to have met in solemn session and passed a resolution questioning the authenticity of the St James version of the Bible? Or how would it appear for the Charlevoix common council to set on foot an inquiry into the Pere Marquette train service?

That Emmet county board of supervisors are imposing on the tax-payers, and merit a scathing rebuke at the next spring election.

After serving for eight years as postmaster of Boyne City, Hon. Wm. H. Jordan, Rev. A. D. Grieshy on Wednesday evening last tendered his resignation, the same to take effect June 1st, and it was accepted.

J. Leahy the Optometrist will be here again Thursday, April 22.

D. S. Fayton and his daughter Minnie spent Sunday at East Jordan.

Robert Bridge Jr. is home from the Michigan University for a week.

Mrs. William Fearl, of Norwood, is the city visiting her son Hiram.

Mrs. Geo. Gisdos has been visiting friends in Ludington the past week.

Arba Cameron, of Minneapolis, has been spending a week here with his parents.

Charlevoix Pomona Grange will meet on Thursday, April 29 with Maple Grove Grange.

Mrs. F. P. Geiken, of Pellston, is here this week at the Geiken home on the north terrace.

The steamer Beaver planted a few millions of young trout on the fishing grounds Saturday.

The steamer Illinois will leave Chicago today (April 15th) going only as far north as Harbor Springs.

The steamer Beaver is making her regular trips to the Island, but this far has been compelled to land at the point.

Anthony B. Clark ("Tony") rounded out his 26th year as superintendent of the Barnard M. E. Sunday School last Sunday.

Capt. Geo. F. Freitas, president of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective Association, was here last week on business connected with his work.

Allen Campbell, who has been employed in Detroit the past year, returned here last week, and will spend the summer at Norwood.

After May first the lid will be on in Emmet County. We hope it will not be necessary for Charlevoix to do any more detective work in Petoskey.

The Baptist church Sunday evening last was packed to the doors. The pastor spoke on the subject of baptism. Ten persons received baptism.

Harvey Campbell received orders Monday to proceed at once to Duluth, where he will take the berth of chief engineer of the steamer Cuyler Adams.

The Dictionary Club will meet Thursday afternoon of this week with Mrs. F. D. Campbell. Subject, "The Beautiful." Roll call, "Our Pet Economy."

Work was begun Monday morning on a brick front at 109 and 111 Bridge St., to be occupied by the Gaskill and McCann Bros. bakery and a millinery store.

Senator Wood, chairman of the fish and fisheries committee of the Senate, has introduced a bill making it unlawful in the closed season law and other radical changes in the laws governing commercial fishing.

Rudolph Seaman, who is employed by the Calumet Fruit Co. to care for their large young orchard on Beaver Island, went over last week with remain until late in the fall. Mr. Seaman's home is in Big Rapids.

Because Berrien county voted "Dry" at the recent election, "King" Benjamin of the House of David colony at Benton Harbor is seeking a new location in another state. The chief of the "Holy Roller" band announced that the $2,000,000 quarters of the colony there are for sale.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational Church will meet on Friday at 2:30 p. m. April 16th at the home of Mrs. H. Widdifield 102 E. Upright St. Topic—The Red Man and our Social Order. Roll Call—Quotation from Favorite Author.

Now that the automobile season is upon it is a good time for action to be taken to stop fast driving on the city streets. Last year no regard whatever was paid to the speed limit, and already cars are being driven on Bridge Street at double the speed permitted by the ordinance. Let us not wait for an accident to wake us up to the danger.

We begin in this issue in serial form, the personal war memoirs of the late Hon. E. H. Green, brevet Lieut. Colonel 107th Pennsylvania Infantry. Few indeed are the recorded experiences of volunteer soldiers of the great Civil War that can excell in interest this modest recital by Major Green of his service to his country. We are sure these memoirs will be read with interest.

Both houses of the Michigan legislature have passed Senator Covert's bill requiring all menhaden steamers on inland waters to be equipped with mufflers, underwater exhausts or other suitable devices to deaden sound. Representative Simpson told the house that he has been informed that menhaden boats can be equipped with mufflers at a cost of ninety cents, and that the mufflers do not impede the speed of a boat.

THE COUNCIL AND THE GLEANERS

There have been two propositions before the council lately in which there was such a divergence of generosity on the part of the council as to be quite noticeable to the average citizen standing on neutral ground.

The first was the granting of a site for the salting station, and the second was the treatment of the Gleaners' annual entry application for a warehouse site adjoining that of the Salting Station. The outcome is that the Gleaners are casting about for a location in the township outside the jurisdiction of the council.

The reason assigned for these prohibitory conditions is that a gleaners' warehouse would not harmonize with certain local business interests. Inasmuch as the published proceedings of the council have been noticeably silent as to details, we grant a stay of judgment pending a little greater publicity.

A prominent Gleaner called at this office last week and outlined the purpose of the organization in establishing a warehouse in Charlevoix. In the marketing of farm products the Gleaners desire is to bring the producer and the consumer nearer together by eliminating the middle-man. The gentleman interested that there is no intention of invading the field of general trade to the detriment of Charlevoix merchants.

Be that as it may; when Charlevoix business men begin to regard the farmers as their nearest affiliations with suspicion, the aforesaid business men may as well ring down the curtain, retire by the stage exit, and take to the woods.

In our relations with the farmer, there is but one policy to pursue, and that is one of generosity, taking our chances on reciprocity. Any other policy is suicidal, because the farmer is in a position to fall the business men of Charlevoix to go take a swim in the lake.

A little thoughtlessness with a trifle of selfishness thrown in can work very much harm.

JUST WHAT WE LOOKED FOR

Every one involved in the probe of the alleged "slush fund" in connection with the bill now before the legislature to increase passenger rates, has been given a clean bill of health by the special investigating committee.

In a report unanimously supported by the various members of the committee it is set forth that there have been attempts tending to prevent such investigations methods have been used to further the interests of the railroads.

In the words of the committee there was found a "slush fund" for the publicity fund of $100,000, but the evidence discloses that there was a fund of $15,000 for legitimate purposes, a portion of which has been used in a legitimate manner.

The unfavorable criticism should be heaped upon any state official for any utterance growing out of the controversy relative to increased passenger rates," says the committee.

The report not only clears the representatives but gives Charles J. Cunningham, state railroad commissioner, who was drawn into the controversy, vindication.

LAST OF P. M. MOVE A GOOD ONE

Carrying out the closer-to-the-people policy inaugurated by Major Green when he assumed the operating receivership of the Pere Marquette May, Major C. Vandercook, adjutant general of the state, commander of the National Guard artillery battalion but before known as a democrat, has been appointed as a sort of better service agent for the company.

The appointment became effective April 12 and Maj. Vandercook handed his resignation as adjutant general of the National Guard to Guy Ferris. While no action yet has been taken it is announced the vacancy will be filled by the appointment of Maj. M. J. Phillips of Owosso, member of the military board and inspector of small arms practice in the National Guard.

Receiver Paul H. King stated that he had no title as yet for Major Vandercook. He explained it would be his duty to bring the company, the people and the communities it serves closer together. He will serve as the receiver's personal agent in investigating complaints and talking over service and proposed changes with communities directly affected.

The plan is new in the railway service of any company. It is the boast of the Pere Marquette is absolute public confidence and support and he is enthusiastic in the belief that in the appointment of Major Vandercook the receivers have the man best qualified to carry the efficient, diplomatic and sympathetic service.

The business men of the village of Alden have organized a commercial club to boom that place as a summer resort. Alden is the only town on Torch Lake that has railroad connections and is fast coming to the front as one of Northern Michigan's prosperous summer resorts. The resort special on the Pere Marquette makes a stop at this village, thus affording the best of accommodations. Chas. H. Coy was elected president of the club and L. O. Bloomer, secretary and treasurer.

THE OLD VETS CELEBRATE

The W. R. C. with several old veterans and their wives assembled at the home of D. C. Nettleton and his better half. Many more were invited by the distant rumbling of thunder, the first of the season. The occasion being the anniversary of the surrender of Gen. Lee of the Army of Northern Virginia April 9th 1865, at Appomattox near Petersburg Va.

We found the spacious rooms of their lovely home decorated with flags and streamers befitting the occasion while here and there could be seen miniature cannon and other reminders of the perilous times of the civil war. A bountiful supply of good things of this earth was soon in evidence, and proved to be more than a passing show with the tea and coffee so served, after which the programme for the evening was announced by Capt. Jordan as master of ceremonies.

Capt. Bush told of being in the locality of the surrender, saying he was so pleased at the prospect of being able to again returning to his home and the bosom of his family. He failed to remember anything else worth mentioning—Capt. Jordan then followed, telling his experiences in the Shenandoah Valley with Sheridan, who was the most famous ride from Winchester was made by the rebel Gen. Early who had defeated and driven Sheridan's army miles hurriedly. Few men in life have experienced more hardships and seen more of the world, and still retaining their facilities for fun and cheerfulness was one of the most popular of the old veterans and gave injustice has been done the taxpayers of this county."

Next came Mrs. Fairchild with a laughable recital of one who had a sick husband in great distress. She in nervous state of mind, prepared a mustard poultice and with it in hand started, as she supposed, for her room to find a man quietly sleeping. She removed the covering and suddenly deposited the poultice. Imagine her horror when she was in the wrong room and had plastered the wrong man.

When order was restored the canteens announced that the event of the evening was the announcement of a parade. After the audience had viewed the several groups passing in and out of the room they were asked to vote as to rewarded with a prize. Mrs. Fairchild was the winner, saying it was the Survivor at Appomattox.

Immediately the supposed sword of Lee was produced and passed around for inspection and was afterwards returned the same with good advice for future guidance and good behavior.

Comrade Nettleton, was called upon to talk on the subject "The Present and the Past." He said he would not attempt to detain us long but wanted to show the difference between shell warfare and modern methods. He mentioned that history tells of David and Goliath, who fought with the sling shot and of Sampson slaying the Philistines with the jaw bone of an ass, the speaker laid great stress on the discovery and use of gun powder, and explained the wonderful effectiveness and destructiveness by the increased speed and force of the missile hurled at the enemy. The art of war had kept pace with the world's progress, until the present when nearly every nation under the sun had their dreadnaughts, submarines, autos and aeroplanes to help defend our country from a foreign foe. He closed expressing the hope to meet us all on the occasion of 100th anniversary of the surrender of Appomattox.

The thunder had ceased and the clouds had rolled away. We had a good appetite for remaining over for breakfast, but we marched merrily over Georgia

PARROT & CO

HAROLD MACGRATH

Author of The Carpet from Bagdad, The Place of Honeymoons, etc.

COPYRIGHT BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Mr. Augustus, an American adventurer, and Thurlow, his secretary, shipwrecked on the Pacific, are rescued by the yacht Parrot & Co., travel along the coast to the island of Rangoon, Mr. Augustus has a draft for 200,000 rupees. Elisa Rajah, rich American girl heiress, Miss Warrington come aboard the boat at one barbadoes.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

He laughed, partially surprised. "Oh, he purses is all a bit, you know. Well educated; somewhere back a gentleman; from the States of course I don't know something shady, probably. They don't trouble about like this otherwise. For all that, he's rather a decent sort, so pounder like this rotter we left at Mandalay. He never talks about himself. I fancy he's lo-some again.

"Lonesome?"

"It's the way you know. These poor beggars drop aboard for the night, meaning to see a little woman again, to hear decent English, to dress and dine like a human being. They disappear the next day, and then we never see them again."

"What do they do?" The question came to her lips mechanically.

"Paddy fields. White men are needed in oversea ports. And then, there's the railway, and there's the new oil country north of Prome. You'll see the wells tomorrow, Rather fancy this Warrington chap has been working along the new pipe line. They're running them down to Rangoon. If he's with us tomorrow, I'll show him get the parrot through its turns. An amusing little beastie."

"Why not introduce him to me?"

"Beg pardon?"

"I'll take it the responsibility. It's a whim."

"Well, you American girls are the eighth wonder of the world." The parrot was distinctly annoyed. "And it may be an disappointment on my part, but I never yet saw an American woman who would accept advice or act upon it."

"Thanks. What would you advise?" with dangerous sweetness.

"Not to meet this man. It's irregular. I know nothing about him, if you had a father or a brother on board

"Or even a husband!" laughing.

"There you are!" resignedly. "You laugh. You women go everywhere, and half the time unprotected."

"Never quite unprotected. We never venture beyond the call of gentlemen."

"That is true," brightening. "You insist on meeting this chap?"

"I do and I'll only ask if I am bored, and he might interest me for an hour." She added: "Besides, he may amuse the others."

The purser grinned reluctantly. "You and the colonel don't get on. Well, I'll introduce this chap at dinner. If I don't.

"I am fully capable of speaking to him without your introduction, sir, ever." She laughed again. "It will be very kind of you."

When he had gone she mused over the impulse so alien to her character. An absolute stranger, a man with a past, perhaps a fugitive from justice, and because he looked like Arthur Killson, she was seeking his acquaintance. Something, then, could break through her reserve at any moment. She had travelled from San Francisco to Colombo, unattended save by an elderly maiden who had risen by gradual stages from nurse to companion, but who could not be made to remember that she was no longer a nurse. In all these four months Elisa had feel taste half a dozen acquaintances, and of these she had not sought one. Yet, she was asking to meet a stranger who as only recommendation was a singular likeness to another man. The purser was right. It was very irregular.

"Parrot & Co!" she murmured. She searched south the horizon, moving to and fro upon the ledge; but the man with the cage was gone. It was really uncanny.

Miss Chetwood was twenty-five, lithely built, decidedly reticent, but dynamic within. Education, environment and breeding had somewhere smothered the gowing fires. She was a type of the ancient expression of woman, which finds its exceptions in the Aspasias and Helens and Cleopatras of legend and history. In features she looked exactly what she was, well bred and well born. Beauty she also had, but it was the cold beauty of northern winter nights. It compelled admiration rather than invited it. Diplomatic, Elisa was salesgo. The fire was there, the fire of living reality, only it smoldered, without radiating even the knowledge of its presence. Men loved her, but in vain, as one loves the marbles of Phidias; she knew no restraint, and yet she had passed through her sixteen years restrained. Her independence was inherent and not acquired. She had laid down central laws for herself to follow; and that these often clashed with the laws of conventality, with a sex too in to leave who divide society into three classes, only nullify proved her. Right from wrong she knew, and that sufficed her.

If her immediate relatives were dead, those who were distantly related regarded it as they had no part in her life nor she in theirs. From her father she had inherited a remarkable and almost errant judgment. To her, faces were generally book covers, keep repeat as associated, and she found large and unfascinating interest in the family of prominent each the covers and reading the text. Often but seldom covers had misleading. Of the odd occasions do lose were avoiding, for to between the battered covers of an exquisite Pantomina Rendondo since the purchase of these habilments of civilization the man had grown, expanded.

Immediately after dinner she retired to her stateroom, conscious that her balance needed readjusting. She had heard and read much lore concerning reincarnation, skeptically yet here, within call of her voice, was Arthur, not the shadow of a substance, but Arthur, shorn of his elegance, his soft, lazy voice, his half-dreaming eyes, his charming indolence. Why should this man's path cross hers, out of all the millions that ran parallel?

She opened her window and looked up at the stars again. She wondered what this man had done to put him beyond the pale. It was not possible that dishonor lurked behind those frank blue eyes. She turned from the window and threw open one of her kit-bags, delved among the soft fabrics and silks and produced a photograph. She had not glanced at it during all these weeks. There had been a purpose back of this apparent neglect. The very thing she dreaded happened. Her pulses beat on, evenly, untirred. She was a failure.

In the photograph the man's beard was trimmed Vandyke; the beard of the man who had sat next to her at dinner had grown freely and naturally, full black a beard was off of fashion, and among country doctors. It signified carelessness, indifference, or a full life wherein the niceties of the razor had of necessity been ignored. Keenly she searched the familiar likeness. What an amazing freak of nature! It was uncanny. She tossed the photograph back into the kit-bag, bewildered, uneasy.

Meantime Warrington followed the purser into his office. "I haven't pulled for my seasoning yet," he said.

"I'll make it out at once. Rangoon, mainland?"

"Yes. But I'm in a difficulty. I have nothing in change but two rupees."

The purser froze visibly. The tale was tribe in his ears.

"I'ad 'ope 'e rather good security to offer," went on Warrington coolly. He drew from his wallet a folded slip of paper and spread it out.

The purser stared at it, enchanted. Warrington stared down at the purser, equally enchanted.

"By Jove!" the former gasped finally. "And so you're the chap who's been holding up the oil syndicate all these months! And you're the chap who made them come to this baby and three days ago?"

It was altogether a new purser who looked up. "Twenty thousand pounds about, and only two rupees in your pocket! Well, well! It takes the British to beat a man over like this. I'm certified check on the bank of Burma needs no further recommendation. In the words of your countrymen, go as far as you like. You can pay me in Rangoon. Your boy takes deck passage?"

"Yes," returning the check to the wallet.

"Now, sit down and spin the yarn. It must be jolly interesting."

"It's almost that it has been a tough struggle; but I knew that I had the oil. Been flat broke for months. Had to borrow my boy's savings for food and shelter. Will this do, the way it runs?" Warrington held it simply, as if it were a great joke.

"Hippo!" By Jove, you Americans are hard customers to put over. I suppose you'll be setting out for the States at once?" with a curious glance.

"I haven't made any plans yet," eyeing the chronometer thoughtfully. "I see." The purser nodded. It was not difficult to understand. Well, good luck to you wherever you go."

Alone in his stateroom Warrington took out Sadie and tossed him on the mountainous of the bed.

"Now, then, old sport!" tapping the parrot on the back with the perch which he used as a baton, thinking and muttering, the bird performed his tricks, and was duly rewarded and returned to his home of iron. "Sadie's waiting to take you home with her, and you're not for sale."

He then opened his window and leaned against the sill, looking up at the stars. But unlike the girl, he did not ask any questions.

"Pretty," he said softly.

"Parrot & Co!" She Murmured.

CHAPTER III.

The Weak Link.

The day began white and chill, for February nights and mornings are not particularly comfortable on the Irrawaddy. The boat sped down the river, smoothly and noiselessly. For all that the sun shone, the shore-lines were still black. There were a hundred or more native sampans, swarming in the dark, like bees. Here wrapped in ragged shawls, cotton rugs of many colors, and woolen blankets, and their turbans were as bright and colorful as a Holland tulip-bed. Some of them were smoking long pipes and taking their fists as mouthpieces; others were scrubbing their teeth with short sticks of Burma wood; and still others were eating rice and curry out of little brown copper pots. There were very few Burmese among them. They were Hindus from central and southern India, with a scattering of Chinese. Wherever a Hindu gets together a few rupees, he travels. The past is the past, tomorrow is tomorrow, but today is today: he lives and works and travels, prisoner to this creed.

Elsa never strolled among them. She usually sat on the purser's right, and tonight she found the stranger attending easily at her side. The dinner had been vacant since the departure from Mandalay. Evidently the purser had decided to be thorough in regard to her wishes. It would look less conspicuous to seat Warrington opposite in this manner. And she wanted to meet this man who had almost made her cry out in astonishment.

"Miss Chetwood, Mr. Warrington." This was as far as the purser would unbend.

The colonel's eyes popped; the hands of the three maidens fluttered. Warrington bowed awkwardly, for he was decidedly confused.

"Hal!" boomed the German. "Vat do you think of?"

And from soup to coffee Warrington stolen dodged, dodged, stepped under and ran around the footslide of questions.

Elsa laughed softly. There were breathing spells, . be sure. Under the cover of this verbal bombardment she found time to inspect the stranger. The likeness, so close at hand, started a ringing in her ears and a flutter in her breast. It was almost unbelievable. He was bigger, broader, his eyes were keener, but, there was only one real difference: this man was ragged, whereas Arthur was elegant. It was as if nature had taken two forms from the same mold, the first well and finished but one of them. His voice was not unpleasant, but there were little sharp points of hardness in it, for, one possibly to the side.

"I am much interested in that little parrot of yours. I have heard about him."

"Oh! I suppose you've heard what they call us?" His eyes looked straight into hers, unflinchingly.

"Parrot & Co? Yes. Will you show him off tomorrow?"

"I shall be very happy to."

But all the while he was puzzling over the purser's unaccountable action in deliberately introducing him to this brown-eyed, golden-skinned young woman. Never before had such a thing occurred upon these boats. True, he had occasionally been spoken to; as idle question flung at him, like a bone before a dog. If he was an Englishman, he answered it courteously, and subsided. He had been snubbed too many times not to have learned this lesson. It never entered his head that the introduction might have been brought about by the girl's interest, for she was mentally shy of women to someone of such a possibility. So his gratitude was extended to the purser who, in his 40 regretted his good-natured recommendations of the previous night.

Wise Elsa learned that the man at her side was to proceed to Rangoon, she ceased to ask him any more questions. She preferred to read her books slowly. Once, while he was waiting the purser, her glance ran over his clothes. She instantly berated her impulsive criticism as a bit of downright cantankerous. The heels of the coat were shiny; the winged collar showed signs of having gone to the native laundry once too often, and the cuff buttons were of ordinary rupee silver. The ensemble suggested food

RISKED NECK FOR LOVE OF WOMAN

Athlete Plunged From Bridge, High Cliff and an Express Train.

DAREDEVIL FOR MOVIES

Capitalized His Neck to "Make Good" and Then Started Film Company of Hi, Own—Parents Give Blessing.

New York.—Louis G. McHee, Yale athlete, who became a daredevil for the movies in order to make good for the girl he loved, has retired from his previous occupation and is now manager of a moving picture concern with headquarters in New York city. Incidentally he has won the approval of the McHenn family to a marriage he contracted with Miss Dolores Grace McHenn before he started on his career as a high diver.

McHee's entrance began three years ago in Pleasantville, N. Y., where he was spending the summer months. One day he saw approaching a runaway team. In the carriage he saw a frightened young woman. McPhee leaped from his automobile, stopped the team and found that the girl was Miss McHenn, who lived there. Three months later they were married, but Father McHenn declared the union would never be approved unless he had "made good."

Neck His Principal Asset.

McPhee realized that he could not make good in a day and looked over his stock in trade. He realized that while he was he was many prizes as a high diver. So he capitalized his neck and offered himself as a daredevil for the movies. McPhee's first feat was a leap from Hunk bridge, New York city, into the Harlem river, a distance of 135 feet. McPhee meantime they had secretly investigated. They offered him fifty thousand. He laughed. He wanted two hundred thousand! He was willing to raise cocoanuts. What do you suppose he did then?

Blinking and Muttering, the Bird Performed His Tricks.

"Got some other persons interested." "Right-o! Some Australians in Rangoon said they'd take it over for two hundred thousand. Something about the deal put wind up everything. The American oil men sent over a representative. That settled the syndicate. What they could have originally purchased for two thousand they had to pay two hundred thousand."

"Splendid!" cried Elsa, clapping her hands. She could see it all, the cool determination of the man, the penury of the lad, who had left home behind and in what he had found, and the disinterested loyalty of the servant.

"Sometimes I wish I were a man and could do things like that."

"Recollect that landing last night?" Elsa's gesture signified that she was glad to be alive to the south of it.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

KEPT TIME WITH THE MUSIC

Knitting Finally Got on Nerves of Individual Who Was There to Enjoy the Concert.

"I was at an orchestra concert recently," said a noted musician of Cleveland, "and was enjoying it thoroughly when, about the middle of the first number I began to feel a strange sensation of nervousness. Just what it was, I thought it was the best of the music I ever heard, I began to grow more and faster as the music went. But I never knew that Mr. stockowski's beat extended as far into the audience as my seat. Gradually the movements grew more pronounced. Finally it became physical. I edged into my sinch or tenth rib, I'm not sure which. Slow in the andante movements, vigorous in the allegros, it edged into me.

"I looked at my neighbor, a pretty woman of about thirty. She was knitting. Oblivious of the music she knitted and knitted, responding unconsciously to the rhythm. But I knew she was for the Italians, or I should have thought she was knitting a shroud, the worst. In the dignified Bibulus among the silver of my neighbor nudged me in appreciative gentleness. In the dance played by Zimbalist they instated a little, but joyfully and reverently. Then the orchestra began to play the Marche Slave. With the first blare of the trumpets my limbs were attached. With the beat of the drum my whole body was pounded by the knittiss ossuis's bayonets. At the crescendo rose I at her arm coming in a flanking movement—and fled for my life."

Easily Qualified.

A Lancashire man in Canada, wishing to join the London Scottish, was asked whether he was a Scotchman. He admitted he was not a Scotchman. "Then you must be a Lancashire lad," the court house because they had been laid off at factories. Their wives, reading an account of the trial of alleged "honest" prisoners at the court house, learned their husbands' being on trial for deception by the sheriff. Unable to secure their release, or to see them, they were forced to resign.

Hunter in Close Wildcat Fight.

Williamsport, Pa.—Dr. E. Miller Cox of Cresser killed a bobcat in a close combat in the woods near Trout Run. He was hunting for deer when he encountered the bobcat on top of a tree. Cox fired and shot off the front leg of the animal, when the frenzied beast jumped for the man and landed on the ground a few feet from him. Another shot shattered the cat's jaw and entered its brain, ending the battle.

SHOULD HAVE PLEASED HIM

Enemy of Nat Goodwin Surely Could Look Forward to the Ending of the Play.

Nat Goodwin in his book tells this story on himself:

The first night of my production of "Nathan Hale" Hoyt had assured me of his intention of being present with his wife. But when the time came she refused to accompany him. Charley, having purchased two tickets and not desiring to be alone, sought someone to go with him. He soon found a friend and invited him to come along. Much to Hoyt's astonishment, his friend quietly but firmly refused the invitation.

"Why not?" asked Hoyt.

His friend replied, "I don't like Goodwin.

"Well," said Charley, "you like him as an artist, don't you?"

His friend replied: "No; I don't like him, as an artist or as a man."

"Well, said Hoyt, "come along. "You are sure to enjoy the play, for they hang Nat in the last act."

ONLY A FEW PIMPLES

But Many More May Come If You Neglect Your Complexion.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are most effective in clearing the skin of pimples, blackheads, redness, roughness, itching and irritation as well as freeing the scalp of dandruff, dryness and itching, leaving satisfying every trace of the toilet and nursery.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. Y, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Supersensitive.

"I am a sensitive people," said the man who is more politic than patriotic.

"I don't like to hear you call your-self a servant," commented Farmer Whitcomb. "Why, I think of you as a man I pay toward your salary. It makes me feel as if I were up against the tipping evil."

Not Telling.

"There are rumors in the air."

"Not here, surely. The atmosphere is too close."

MRS. WILLIAMS' LONG SICKNESS

Yields To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, displacement and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increasingly bad by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down pains with dizziness in my eyes. I had also tor-ture from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. Sarah Williams, 405 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the most successful remedy for female ills known of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove that fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

KENTUCKY'S BEST LEAF TOBACCO IS in variety, mellow, rich, full flavored, good. Mayo quality 4 lbs. $1.00; medium 4 lbs. $1.00; smoking 4 lbs. $1.00; postpaid. Satisfaction or money back. Booklet free. S. Hasenfield & Co., Hopkinsville, Kentucky.

AGENTS WANTED—Good, reliable, hustling agents, wanted for Gladstone district. Good proposition to the right man. Write for particulars. M. A. Kyle, Gladstone, Mich. Mention this paper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

Mothers Know That Genuine Castoria Always Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK

900 DROPS

CASTORIA

ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of INFANTS AND CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral. NOT NARCOTIC

Recipe of Old Dr SAMUEL PITCHER

Aperfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac Simile Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK

At 6 months old 35 DOSES—35 CENTS

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Shipping Fever

Bullfrogs, pigs, sheep, horses, cattle, poultry, guinea pigs, dogs and birds are liable to contract this fatal disease. Prevent it by using Pratt's Fowl Cholera Remedy. Pratt's Fowl Cholera Remedy is a fine tonic for fowl and stock. Kills all the lice on fowl and stock. Sold in 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00 and $5.00 sizes. Ask your dealer for it. Pratt's Fowl Cholera Remedy is sold on a guarantee. Write for booklet.

PRATT MEDICAL CO., Philadelphia, U. S. A.

Chemists and Bacteriologists

Rheumatism Muscle Colds

"It's easy to use and quick to respond. No work. Just apply. It penetrates without rubbing."

Read What Others Say!

"Have used your Liniment very successfully in a case of rheumatism, and always recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. Geo. Hall, Ottawa, Ont.

"Your Liniment is a good remedy for lumbago, and I have used it with good results."—Mr. Geo. Ward, Ottawa, Ont.

"Your Liniment is a good remedy for lumbago, and I have used it with good results."—Mr. Geo. Ward, Ottawa, Ont.

"Your Liniment is a good remedy for lumbago, and I have used it with good results."—Mr. Geo. Ward, Ottawa, Ont.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

Good for Neuralgia, Sciatica, Sprains and Bruises.

All Dealers 25c.

Send four cents to change for a Free TRIAL BOTTLE.

DR. EARL S. SLOAN, Inc. Dept. B Philadelphia, Pa.

QUIT JOBS AT WIVES' ORDER

Spouses Accuse Two Workmen at Jail of Being "Honor Prisoners."

Racine, Wis.—Two men employed at the court house quit their jobs because they did not wish to be classed as "honor roll" jail prisoners. The men had sought employment at the court house because they had been laid off at factories. Their wives, reading an account of the trial of alleged "honest" prisoners at the court house, learned their husbands' being on trial for deception by the sheriff. Unable to secure their release, or to see them, they were forced to resign.

Hunter in Close Wildcat Fight.

Williamsport, Pa.—Dr. E. Miller Cox of Cresser killed a bobcat in a close combat in the woods near Trout Run. He was hunting for deer when he encountered the bobcat on top of a tree. Cox fired and shot off the front leg of the animal, when the frenzied beast jumped for the man and landed on the ground a few feet from him. Another shot shattered the cat's jaw and entered its brain, ending the battle.

Leaped into the River a Second Time.

made the leap, but broke three ribs, dislocated a jaw and suffered a hemorrhage of the throat. Despite his injuries he struggled to shore and regained his clothes. The feat was required 1 minute and 18 seconds.

His parents-in-law lived in constant dread lest McHee should be notified of making good would make their daughter happy. His court foil was to leap from an aeroplane.

Leaped From Express and Cliff.

McPhee's final achievement before the camera eclipsed all former efforts. In this film he climbed over telegraph wires to the crossbar of a pole. There he hung suspended until a passenger train passed under him. He dropped to the roof of a coach and then leaped into the river as the train was crossing a bridge. Detectives had pursued and McPhee, cornered at the top of a 100-foot cliff, leaped into the river a second time.

This adventure sealed the career of McPhee as a high diver. He'll jump no more, as his paternalistic foe that any man who will risk sure risks to "make good" must love their daughter.

The KITCHEN CABINET

I wonder if the sap is stirring yet, If winter winds shall blow Or if the frost shall melt and set Amid the snowdrops feel as yet the sun? And yonder thou art sleeping yet? —C. Rossetti.

SOME COMPANY DISHES.

The following recipes may be suggestive to the young ladies who delight to entertain their friends and wants something good which can be prepared without requiring too much work. A most delicious dinner salad is this: Make a grapefruit jelly, using one-third of a cup of sugar and a thirl of a cup of water, boiled together three minutes, and then add one and a half tablespoonfuls of gelatin which has been soaked in two tablespoonfuls of cold water; add a half cupful of grapefruit juice, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and a pinch of salt; strain into a round bowl or mold. When stiff, unmold on serve, garnished with a cream cheese which has been well seasoned and mixed with cream to make soft enough to pipe around the mold of jelly. Serve with French dressing, using lemon juice instead of vinegar or a combination of both.

Spring Soup.—Peel and thinly slice one onion and cook it in a tablespoonful of butter; add one quart of water, cover and let simmer for twenty minutes; then add four cupfuls of chicken stock, with one teaspoonful of the yolks of two hard boiled eggs, rubbed to a smooth paste with a little butter; add two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually while stirring, the hot liquid when boiling hot; add one cupful of thin cream and season with salt and pepper.

Melba Sandwiches.—Chop fine a half dozen olives; add a tablespoonful of mayonnaise dressing and a teaspoonful of chopped pecan meats. Spread on buttered graham bread.

Creamed Sardines.—Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter; add one-fourth of a cupful of soft, stale bread crumbs and one cupful of cream. Add juice to the boiling point; add one box of sardines, two cooked eggs, finely chopped, one half cooked and cut into small cubes of a teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley. Put buttered crumbs, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven. Garnish with a sprig of parsley on each.

The creamless rain is falling fast, And yonder comes the blight, Immovable her three days past, Fixing to the sky! —Longfellow.

OUT OF THE COOKY JAR.

The small cakes and cookies are so popular with the children that a variety is always welcome in the home.

"Pecan Cookies—Beat to a hard froth the yolks of two eggs till thick and lemon-colored, add one cupful of brown sugar gradually, then one cupful of chopped pecan meats, sprinkle with salt, the whites of two eggs beaten to a stiff froth and teaspoonfuls of flour. Drop from the tip of a teaspoon on a buttered sheet one inch and a half inches apart, spread and bake in a moderate oven.

"Tea Cakes.—Cream a fourth of a cupful of shortening, add gradually a cupful of brown sugar. Dissolve an eighth of a teaspoonful of soda in a tablespoonful of cold water and add to the first mixture, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and a cupful of flour. Make into balls and place on a buttered tin and bake in a hot oven. This makes forty cookies.

Oatmeal Drop Cookies.—Cream a cupful of shortening, add a cupful of brown sugar. Dissolve an eighth of a teaspoonful of soda in a tablespoonful of cold water and add to the first mixture, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and a cupful of flour. Make into balls and place on a buttered tin and bake in a hot oven. This makes forty cookies.

Oatmeal Drop Cookies.—Cream a cupful of shortening, add a cupful of brown sugar, two eggs, beaten stiff, add a cupful of milk, one and a half cupfuls of oatmeal, which has been put through the meat grinder and parched in the oven. Mix and sift together three cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, or more if taste of it is used for seasoning, one half teaspoonful each of cinnamon, clove, allspice and nutmeg, a cupful of chopped raisins and a half cupful of walnut meats. Mix and drop from a spoon on a buttered baking sheet.

Ginger Snaps.—Heat to the boiling point a cupful of molasses, pour over a half cupful of sourtonia, salt, ginger and lard, and a cupful of water, mix and sift one quart of pastry flour, add a teaspoonful of soda, a tablespoonful of ginger and one teaspoonful of salt and a half tablespoonful of soda. Roll out and bake in moderate oven.

Nellie Maxwell

Few Perfect Men.

The perfect man's measure is 38 inches around the chest, 34 inches at the waist, and he is 5 feet 8 inches in the verdict of the International Dress Cutters, who met recently in Milwaukee. The men who were measured for 1915. The tailors called attention to the fact that although a woman may maintain a form from year to year, a man's waist is the thing that changes. Women corsets is likely to know great variation, as he approaches forty. There fore, his perfect man is generally a youngster

Proper Ventilation.

In addition to fresh air into the home, let it in near the lower part of the room as possible so that, as it enters, it may force the vitiated air in the room to the ceiling, and give it a chance to pass through the window opened at the top.

Their Way.

"Detectives have a paradoxical sort of logic."

"How so?"

"They follow a man up and then run him down."

TO PREPARE AND USE VEGETABLES

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT EXPERTS GIVE RESULTS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT.

USING FLOWERS AND FRUITS

Certain Species Are Eaten as Vegetables—Garden Flowers for Cooking Purposes—Both Conservatories Are Bad for Digestion.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is not generally realized that there are certain flowers and fruits that we prepare and eat as vegetables. One example is the portion of the cauliflower we eat namely, the flower head, and the globe artichoke (quite a different plant from the Jerusalem artichoke which is an edible tuberous) is another. Capers, capsicums and dwarf nasturtium lower buds. Among the fruits that we use as vegetables may be mentioned the pumpkin, squash, cucumber, peppers, okra, eggplant and tomato, and very often the banana and more commonly the apple, for instance, we make fruit and fried apples often served with meat.

Pickled Nasturtium Buds.

Some of our popular garden flowers occasionally have been used for pickling purposes. Nasturtium buds are sometimes pickled, and as their flowers have a savor like water cress, the yellow color they have imparts a color to the vinegar. Nasturtium buds are used in salads and are very important adjuncts in cookery, chiefly for the yellow color they have imparted, and are often mentioned in old recipes for meat, etc. Nasturtium is still a staple article in use by professional cooks. In southern Europe squash blossoms, which they call "zucchini," which the blossom is attached are dipped in batter and fried, and bonnie flowers also are used for fritters in France, as are elder blossoms in Germany. Cooked squash flowers may be included in an omelet. But such things have little food value in themselves, though they help to give variety to the diet.

Sometimes rose petals, violets, and lilies, leaves are candied, but are used more for garnishing than for food purposes. Rose petals are used in the Orient for making a very sweet preserve.

Violets are used in cookery for imparting a purple color, while a number of other colors are made from blossoms or leaves, the more common being saffron, which is highly prized, flavoring extracts are made from flowers; for instance, rose water, orange flower water and a strupof violets. Nasturtium flowers are used like cress; they have a pungent taste.

Valuable Vegetable Fruits.

The distinction between a fruit and a vegetable is not always easily made. On the borderline between the two are the tomato, which is generally used as a vegetable, and the pumpkin, which is generally used as a fruit. Many of the good family have already been cited. The family includes the largest fruits of any known plants, some being over eight feet around and weighing more than two hundred pounds. The squash, both winter and summer varieties, vegetable marrow, cucumber, and melons, belong to this family.

"A chief cooking will make a great deal of difference in modifying the texture or flavor of squashes or pumpkins. The best way is to vary the proportion to their size, having thick yellow, thin meat, and dry, if the fibers are coarse, long cooking and strain, if not, cook less, and the excess of water may be evaporated. Where the shells are hard, bake or steam and scrape out the meat, leaving the flesh. Baked in the pan with roast beef, stuffing or other meats they gain an added flavor.

The cooked, strained pulp of squash or pumpkin is usually used in a pie; this is sometimes combined with milk or stock for soups, or is added to doughs like those of corn bread or muffins, or may be cooked with sugar and spices for marmalades.

The summer squash is not always fully appreciated because often it is served in one large, bland variety, cooked, cold or turban, should be so tender that the seeds and skin are edible when cooked. Summer squashes may be cut in slices and fried, though they are most commonly boiled. When fully grown they may be used like winter squash, skin and seeds being removed.

Stuffed Cucumber Bad for Digestion.

Many people do not eat cucumbers, because they fear they may cause indigestion. This is true if the cucumber is stale, wilted or overgrown. Cut in slices and well chilled, they are good, and left in cold water (nonacid) for an hour or more, they lose the bitter juices and is a palatable and usually healthful relish.

The cucumber may be served as a salad by itself or to accompany fish or meat, or may be placed to add to rich sauces. Cut in strips it may be cooked, and served on toast like asparagus, and is agreeable in many ways. The skin and seeds may be removed and the firm fresh meat is used for salads or, like pepper and onion, may be chopped, seasoned and baked. A little onion cooked with creamed cucumber improves it for some.

The tomato is a vegetable fruit to which nobody has much enthusiasm for many years it was supposed to be poisonous. It has been used in this country for less than a century, but its growth in popularity has been rapid. Tomatoes are used in many combinations of soups, sauces, relishes and a large variety of many dishes because their appetizing flavor makes many more chiefly flavored food materials appetizing. The sour juice of the tomato is due chiefly to citric acid, its distinctive flavor to special substances difficult to identify.

The peeling of tomatoes may be easily removed if the tomatoes are plunged into boiling water for less than a minute, then drained, and chilled over ice, if possible. They may then be peeled when needed. Perfectly ripe tomatoes may be scraped with the back of a knife to loosen the skin, which then will peel easily, but this is less rapid than the scalding process. If cooked tomatoes are to be strained, it is unnecessary to peel them before stewing, as the skin will remain in the strainer with the seeds. Some persons believe that immersion in hot water injures the appearance and flavor of the tomato and peel them without this treatment.

Many persons prefer to serve tomatoes unpeeled, particularly the hothouse tomato or other varieties with thin, tender skins. If this is done, the tomatoes, like all other fruits or vegetables, should be well washed and carefully. The very small red tomatoes which grow in clusters, known as cherry tomatoes, often found in large markets, are very attractive for salad. "Tomato and the yellow plum" tomatoes are perhaps always eaten without peeling.

When a banana is used uncooked it is less of a fruit than a vegetable. It can't be commonly used for fritters. It may be baked or fried like a potato or pumpkin, and served with meat. The South has come to appreciate this fruit as a vegetable more recently than the North, though such uses are now very general.

A simple way to cook bananas: Remove the skin, scrape off the roughness, cut large ones in two or three, dip in egg and crumbs, and fry brown in deep fat.

HER TIME WELL OCCUPIED

Pity the Poor Society Woman Who Is a Martyr to Duty of Being Well Dressed.

"The other day I called on a friend who lives in a fashionable New York apartment. She told me she was every morning for a little.

I protested.

"You mean in the spring and fall, when you are getting your things, dear, you?"

"No! I mean every day, through the light winter months. It's an awful bore, I assure you. No wonder I'm a nervous wreck. I wish John would let me travel around and study, but he says but wts a fact that I hardly ever go through the day without going either to the theater, the dressmaker, or to an bats or shoes or corsets. I have a good many things made between seasons, when the prices are lower. And I have to spend a great deal of money thing; I want to see what the new imported things look like, and go to the theater to see what others are little Frenchwoman who makes all my lingerie (my friend was speaking, not underwear), and very cheaply, too. Considering the exquisite work she does, but she expects me to tell her just how I want everything done, and to choose designs for the embroidery and to buy the lace and ribbon; and, of course, I try on every garment. Stockings and veils are about the only thing I can get ready-made, and it takes a lot of time selecting them. Don't you think the new veils are awfully tiring?"—Atlanta Constitution.

Tobacco in History.

It has been settled to the general satisfaction of students of tobacco history that one Hernandez de Toledo introduced the smoking habit into Spain and Portugal in 1559, and that he brought his tobacco from Santo Domingo. Jean Nicot was the ambassador of France at the court of Portugal and he acquainted the habit in Lisbon, carried it with him back to France, where the habit took hold in fashionable circles some time before Sir Francis Drake and his men carried the habit and the tobacco to England in 1585, at which time Sir Walter Raleigh set the gentlemanly fashion at the court of Elizabeth, whence it spread over England. The habit of smoking tobacco spread closely in the trail of the pipe smoke.

Fishes See Well.

An examination of the eyes of many species in the tanks of the public aquarium at New York has recently made by means of the ophthalmoscope and other instruments. It was learned not only that all fishes can see well, but that of the many examined none was nearsighted nor suffered from any ailment. Considering their big, staring glasses, seem a somewhat fish-like thing. Considering their big, staring glasses, seem a somewhat fish-like way, is owing in many cases to the fact that, in the absence of lids, the eyeballs are protected either by a sliding material, or by a transparent lid, which is not noticeable in life, but after death quickly becomes cloudy or opaque. Frogs such as the shard little puffers, which dig in the sand, have real lids that close over the eye. The studies of fishes' eyes have proved valuable in understanding and relieving human near-sightedness.

A "Searcher Out."

The science and genius of Mr. Marconi have made it almost impossible for alien spies to use a wireless telegraphic installation in the British fleet. But there is a use by the war office a "searcher out," which indicates the presence of any wireless used for the receipt or dispatch of messages. It is called the direction finder, and was primarily intended to enable the navigation officer of a ship to take bearings of wireless telegraph stations, with a view to finding the position of his ship or avoiding collisions with other vessels.

The Charger's Lament.

"One man of the —— Lancers found time on his back with his eyes staring at the skies. He was dead without doubt. Standing over him was his horse, without a wound. He was looking into his face every few minutes and then neighing in a pitiful way that sounded just like a human being in an excess of grief. To look that poor animal was enough to bring tears to the eyes of the most hard eyed of men."—Sara Lance Corporal J. Billion.

DOG SAVES DRUNKEN MAN ON THE TRACK

Despite Warning Barks, Engines Have Hit Canine's Master 14 Times.

Morton, Wash.—Every night when Bert Bagley, son of the builder of the Tacoma Eastern line and engineer on the one-passenger train a day between Tacoma and Morton, reaches this and there is a cottage in the reading room of the Hotel Hills.

Last night Bert was telling about how many times he has struck with his engine a certain homesteader living between Tanwax and Morgan Lake.

The Dog Keeps Watch Over Him.

In the most recent occurrence of this kind—and Bert hopes it is the last—the homesteader was lying on the side of the ties "dead to the world." The snow plough hit just right to shove him off the track and not injure him very badly. He was picked up and taken in to Kapowsin, and next morning was taken to Tacoma and tried for trespassing on railroad property. This makes seven times Engineer Bagley has hit him, and other rough usage on the road have struck him a total of as many more.

"The homesteader has a dog, and whenever he gets drunk and lies on the track the dog keeps watch and when a train is heard approaching the dog runs toward it barking and the engineers know the "master" is in the way.

BIG EAGLE SWOOPS UPON DOG

Drops Animal, Breaking Leg, After Carrying It a Short Distance.

Hastings, N. Y.—While a maid was exercising a Pomeranian dog on the roof of Miramonte, the residence here of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wuppermann, a big gray eagle swooped down on the little dog and grabbed it up and started away with a great flapping of

PARROT & CO

HAROLD MACGRATH

Author of The Carpet From Bagdad, etc.

The Place of Honeymoons, etc.

COPYRIGHT BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Warrington, an American adventurer, and his valet, Arthur, are in Monte Carlo, but, for the time being, out of money. Hawkins, an agent for Parrot & Co., travel along the road to the gaming house for Sir George to cash a draft for 30,000 rupees. Miss Elsa Greenwood, a fellow passenger, tells Warrington some about the host at the gaming house.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

He talked quickly, stiffly, surprised. "Oh, he pulls us all a bit, you know. Well educated; somewhere back a gentleman; from the States. Of course I don't know; something shady, probably. They don't think much of him in the otherwise. For all that, he's rather a decent sort; no bounder like this fellow we left at Mandalay. He never talks about himself. I fancy he's lost some money."

"Lonesome?"

"It's the way, you know. These poor beggars drop aboard for the night, meaning to stay a while, woman again, to hear decent English, to dress and dine like a human being. They disappear the next day, and you never see them again."

"What do they do?" The question came to her lips mechanically.

"Dodge fields. White men are needed everywhere these days. And then, there's the railway, and there's the new oil country north of Irrawa. You'll see the wells tomorrow. Rather fancy this Warrington chap has been working along the new pipe line. They're running them down to Rangoon. If he's with his employer, I'll bet he's with the parrot through its turns. An amazing little beggar."

"Why not introduce him to me?"

"Very pardon."

"I'd take it the responsibility. It's a whim."

"Well, you American girls are the chiefest wonder of the world." The purser was distinctly amused. "And it may be an impertinence on my part, but I never yet saw an American woman who would accept active or act upon it."

"Thanks. What would you advise?" with dangerous sweetness

"Not to meet this man. It's foreign, I know; nothing about him, but if you had a father or a brother on board . . ."

"Or even a husband!" laughing.

"Those you avoid resolutely. You laugh. You women are everywhere, and half the time unprotected."

"Never quite unprotected. We never venture beyond the call of gentlemen."

"That is true," brightening. "You insist on meeting this chap?"

"I do not insist; only, I am bored, and he might interest me for an hour." She added: "Besides, he may annoy the others."

The purser grilned reluctantly. "You and the others don't get on. Well, I'll introduce this chap at dinner. If I don't . . ."

"I am fully capable of speaking to him without any introduction what-ever." She laughed again. "It will be very kind of you."

When he had gone she mused over this impulse so alien to her character. An absolute stranger, a man with a past, perhaps a fugitive from justice, and because he looked like Arthur Killiam, she was seeking his acquaintance. Something, then, could break through her ennui ev and aloofness? Elsa had travelled from Rangoon to Colombo, unattended save by an elderly maiden who had risen by grand-mal stages from nursemaid to companion, but who could not be made to remember that she was no longer a nurse. In all these four months Elsa had not made half a dozen acquaintances, and of these she had not sought one. Yet, she was entitled to meet a stranger who, at only recommendation, was a single kilometer to another man. The purser was right. It was very irregular.

"Parrot & Co!" she murmured. She searched among the phantoms moving to and fro upon the bridge, but the man with the cage was gone. It was really amazing.

Elsa Greenwood was twenty-five. Utterly built, outwardly reposeful, but upsoulds within. Education, environment and breeding had somewhat smothered the gypsy. Elsa, then, was a type of the ancient repression of woman, which finds its exceptions in the Amazonian Helena and Boadicea, pattern of legend and history. In repose she looked exactly what she was, well bred and well-born. Beauty she had, but it—as the cold beauty of northern winter nights. It compelled admiration rather than invited it. Spiritually, Elsa was asleep. The fire was there, the gift of loving greatly, only it smoldered, without radiating even the knowledge of its presence. Men loved her, but in vain, as one loves the marbles of Pandina. She knew no restraint, and yet she had passed through her sixteen years relaxed. Her independence was inherited and not acquired. She had had Dean certain, free for herself to follow; and that these often clashed with the laws of convention, which are fatal to those who divide society into three classes, only either rulers or slaves. Right from wrong she knew, and that sufficed her.

Her immediate relatives were dead; those who were distantly related to her mislead so, a they had no part in her life nor she in theirs. From her father she had inherited a remarkable and seldom exact judgment. To her, fates were generally book covers, they repelled or attracted; and she found large and undiminishing interest in the faculty of pressing back the covers and reading the text. Often she tored covers held treasures, and often the editions de luxe were wordless. But, in between, the battered covers and the exquisite Florentine hand-tooling there ranged a row of mediocre books; and it was among these that Elsa found that her instinct was not wholly infallible, as will be seen.

Today she was facing the first problem of her young life, epochal like was, as it were, to stop and begin life anew. And she didn't know, she wasn't sure.

There were few passengers aboard. There were three fussy old English maidens under the protection of a stiff bosom old colonel. The quartet greatly amused Elsa. Their nods were abrupt, and they spoke in the most formal manner. She was under grave suspicion; in the first place, she was travelling alone in the second place, she was an American. At table there was generally a desultory conversation and many a barb of malice Elsa shot from her bow. Figuratively, the colonel walked about like a porcupine, bristling with arrows instead of quills. Miss could have shooted at times, for the old war dog was perfectly oblivious. There was tension, the inevitable German tourist, who shelled with questions every man who were brass buttons, until finally the man actually talk of dropping him astern some day. He had studied the colonel, but that gentleman was snugly incased in the finest and most impenetrable armor, complacency.

Upon these irrewaddy boats the purser is usually the master of ceremonies in the dining saloon. Elsa usually sat at the purser's right, and tonight she found the stranger sitting quietly at her side. The chair had been vacant since the departure from Mandalay. Evidently the purser had decided to be tactuous in regard to her wishes. It would look less conspicuous to make the introduction in this manner. And she wanted to meet this man who has almost made her cry out in astonishment.

"Miss Cheswood, Mr. Warrington." This was as far as the purser would unbend.

The colonel's eyes popped; the hands of the three maidens fluttered. Warrington bowed awkwardly, for he was decidedly confused.

"Ha!" boomed the German. "Vat do you ink of?"

And from soup to coffee Warrington edged, dodged, stepped under and ran around the fusillade of questions.

Elsa laughed softly. There were breathing spells, . . . be sure. Under the cover of this verbal bombardment she found time to inspect the stranger. The likeness, so close at hand, started a rising in her eyes and a flutter in her throat. It was almost unbelievable. He was bigger, broader, his eyes were brown, but there was only one real difference: this man was rugged, whereas Arthur was elegant. It was as if nature had taken two forms from the same model, and had finished but one of them. His voice was not unpleasant, but there were little sharp edges of harshness in it, due quite possibly to the dour.

"Parrot & Co!" She Murmured.

"I am much interested in that little parrot of yours. I have heard about him."

"Oh! I suppose you've heard what they call us?" His eyes looked straight into hers, smiling.

"Parrot & Co!" Yes. Will you show him off tomorrow?"

"I shall be very happy to."

But all the while he was puzzling over the purser's inscrutable action in deliberately introducing him to this brown-eyed, golden-skinned young woman. Never before had such a thing occurred on these boats. True he had occasionally been spoken to; an idle question flung at him, like a bare bone to a dog. If flung by an Englishman, he answered it curtly, coldly, and snubbed. He had been snubbed too many times not to have learned this lesson. It never occurred to his head that the introduction might have been brought about by the girl's interest. He was too mortally shy of women to conceive of such a possibility. The idea fructified was attributed to the purser, who, on his side, regretted his good-natured recommendation of the previous hour.

When Elsa learned that the man at her side was to proceed to Rangoon she caused to ask him any more questions. She preferred to read her books slowly. Once, she was engaging the purser, her silence was over his clothing. She instantly berated her impulsive criticism as a bit of downright oddishness. The lapels of the coat were shiny; the winged collar gave evidence of having gone to the native laundry once too often, and the cuff buttons were of ordinary rupee silver. The ensemble suggested that since the purchase of these habiliments of civilization the man had grown, expanded.

Immediately after dinner she retired to her stateroom, conscious that her balance needed readjusting. She had heard and read much lore concerning reincarnation, skeptically yet here, within call of her voice, was Arthur, not the shadow of a substance, but Arthur, shorn of his elegance, his soft, lazy voice, his half-dreaming eyes, his charming indolence. Why should this man's path cross hers, out of all the millions that can parallel?

She opened her window and looked up at the stars again. She wondered what this man had done to put him beyond the pale. It was not possible that Arthur hirked behind those frank blue eyes. She turned from the window and threw open one of her kit-bags, delved among the soft fabrics and silks and produced a photograph. She had not glanced at it during all these weeks. There had been a purpose back of this apparent neglect. The very thing she dreaded happened. Her pulse beat on, evenly, unstirred. She was a failure.

In the photograph the man's beard was trimmed Vandyke; he heard of the man who had sat next to her at dinner had grown freely and naturally, full. Such a beard was out of fashion, save among country doctors. It signified carelessness, indifference, or a fad into wherein the niceties of the razor had of necessity been ignored. Kennip she searched the familiar likeness. What an amazing freak of nature! In spite of herself she closed the photograph back into the kit-bag. Swift, dazed, cold.

Meantime Warrington followed the purser into his office. "I haven't paid for my stateroom yet," he said.

"I'll make it out at once. Rangoon, I understand."

"Yes. But I'm in a difficulty. I have nothing in change but two rupees."

The purser frose visibly. The tale was little to his ears.

"I fancy I'm rather good security to offer," went on Warrington coolly. He drew from his wallet a folded slip of paper and spread it out.

The purser stared at it, enchanted. Warrington stood down at the purser, equally enchanted.

"By Jove!" the former gasped finally. "And so you're the chap who's been holding up the oil syndicate all these months! And you're the chap who made them come to this bally hooter three days ago?"

It was altogether a new purser who looked up. "Twenty thousand pounds about, and only two rupees in your pocket! Well, well! it takes the least to bowl a man over like this a certified check on the flank of Burma needs no further recommendation. In the words of your countrymen, go to it, sir, as you like. You can pay me in Rangoon. You'll be taking back passage?"

"Yes," returning the check to the wallet.

"Now, sit down and spin the yarn. It must be jolly interesting."

"I'll admit that it has been a tough struggle; but I knew that I had the oil. Heun flat broke for months. Had to borrow my boy's savings for food and shelter. Well, this is the way it runs." Warrington told it simply, as if it were a great joke.

"Bippin'! By Jove, you Americans are hard customers to get even! I suppose you'll be settling out for the States at once?" with a curious glance.

"I haven't made any plans yet," eyeing the chronometer thoughtfully.

"I see." The purser nodded. It was not difficult to understand. "Well, good luck to you wherever you go. Alone to his stateroom Warrington took out Hajah and tossed him on the counterpane of the bed.

"Now, then, old sport!" tapping the parrot on the back with the pencil which he used as a baton. Blinking and muttering, the bird performed his tricks, and was duly rewarded and returned to his home of rime. "She'll be waiting to take you home with her but you're not for sale."

He then opened his window and leaned against the sill, looking up at the stars. But, unlike the girl, he did not ask any questions.

"Peso!" he said softly.

CHAPTER III.

The Weak Link.

The day began white and chill, for February nights and mornings are not particularly comfortable on the Irrawaddy. The boat sped down the river, smoothly and solemnly. For all that the sun shone, the shore-lined were still black. There were a number of more native squatting in groups on the deck. They were wrapped in ragged shawls, cotton rugs of many colors, and woolen blankets, and their turbans were as bright and colorful as a Holland tulip-bed. Some of them were smoking long pipes and using their feet as mouthpieces; others were scrutinizing their teeth with short sticks of fibrous wood; and still others were eating rice and curry out of little brass copper pots. There were very few Burmese among them. They were Hindoos from central and southern India, with a scattering of Cingalese. Whenever a Hindu got together a few rupees he travels. The past is the past, tomorrow is tomorrow, but today is today; he lives and works and travels, prisoner to this creed.

Elsa never strolled among them. She was dainty. She stood framed in the doorway, in pleasure rare indeed to the dark eyes that spied their frank glances in her direction.

Upon a bench, hemmed against the partition, almost within touch of her hand, sat the man. Warrington and his servant, arguing over their accounts. The former's battered helmet was filted at a comfortable angle and an ancient cutty hung pendent from his mouth, an idle wisp of smoke hovering over the blackened bowl.

Elsa quickly returned to her chair in the bow and tried to become absorbed in a novel. Ify and ify the book slipped from her fingers to her lap, and her eyes closed. But not for long. She heard the rasp of a match and opened them.

"Shouldn't have disturbed you," said the purser, apologetically. "Just your orders were that whenever I had an interesting story about the life over here, I was to tell it to you instantly. And this one is just rippin'!"

"Begin," said Elsa, she sat up and threw back her cloak, for it was now growing warm. "It's about Parrot & Co., I'm sure."

"It's better than any story you'll read in a month of Sundays. Our man has just turned the trick, as you Americans say, for twenty thousand pounds."

"Why, that is a fortune!"

"For some of you. You see, whatever he was in the past, it was scintillating with skill, I fancy. Engineering, possibly. Knew his geology and all that. Been wondering for months what keen blike banging around this bally old river. Seems he found oil, borrowed the savings of his servant and bought up some land on the strength of the new discoveries. Then he waited for the syndicate to buy. They ignored him. They didn't send any one even to investigate his claim. Stupid, rather. After a while, he went to them, at Prome, at Rangoon. They thought they knew his kind. Ten thousand rupees was all he asked. They laughed. The next time he wanted a hundred thousand. They laughed again. Then he left for the teak forests. He had to live. He came back in four months. In the meantime they had secretly investigated. They offered him fifty thousand. He laughed. He wanted two hundred thousand. They advised him to raise cocoanuts. What do you suppose he did?"

"Got some other persons interested."

"Rightoo! Some Americans. In Rangoon they'd take it over for two hundred thousand. Something about the deal got into the newspapers. The American oil men sent over a representative. The syndicate got ratiocinate. What they could have originally purchased for ten thousand they paid three hundred thousand."

"Splendid!" cried Elsa, clapping her hands. She could see it all, the quiet determination of the man, the poury of the lean years, his belief to himself and in what he had found, and the disinterested loyalty of the servant.

"Sometimes I wish I were a man and could do things like that."

"Rather! Wish I could just nicht!"

Elsa's gesture signified that she was glad to be miss in the ranks of it.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

KEPT TIME WITH THE MUSIC

Knitting Finally Got on Nerves of Individual Who Was There to Enjoy the Contest.

"I was at an orchestra concert recently," said a noted musician of Cleveland, "and at one point I felt thoroughly when, about the middle of the first number I began to feel a strange and regular movement about me. At first I thought it was the beat of the music, because I felt it grow slower and faster as the music went. But I never knew that the rhythmic beat extended as far into the audience as it did. The movements grew more pronounced. Finally it became physical. I edged my arms and teeth rib, I'm not sure which. Slow in the andante movements, vigorous in the allegro, it edged into me.

"I looked at my neighbor, a pretty woman of about thirty. She was knitting. Oblivious of the music she knitted and knitted, responsive unconsciously to the rhythm. Of course, it was for the Belgians, or a Belgian, I have ventured a protest. But I heard the wood. In the dispirited minutes number the elbow of my neighbor nudged me in appreciative gentleness in the dance played by Zimbalist they insisted a little, but joyfully and resourcefully. Then the orchestra began to play the 'Marche Slave.' With the first blare of the trumpets my hands were attacked. With the beat of the drum my whole body was possessed by the knitting needles and yarn. As the crescendo rose I saw her arm coming in a flashing movement—and—fed 'or my life.'"

Easily Qualified.

A Lancashire man in London, wishing to join the colonial forces, met with the nationality problem, and consulted a friend on the matter. The recruiting officer was willing to stretch a point or two if possible, so he asked the Lancashire:

"Have you any relations or property in Canada?"

"No," was the reply.

"You are quite sure?" queried the sergeant.

"Hoond on a bit," said the recruit, as a light came into his eyes. "My gum, I'd forgotten for a minute. Me aw's a pair of hoond's teeth, sir!"

"Bitty," said the officer; "you're qualified."

French Army Formation.

A French army corps is made up of 12 battalions of about one thousand men each. Those are sectioned into eight regiments, each of three bat talions, and these again are formed into four brigades two of which compose a division.

RISKED NECK FOR LOVE OF WOMAN

Athlete Plunged From Bridge, High Cliff and an Express Train.

DAREDEVIL FOR MOVIES

Capitalized His Neck to "Make Good" and Then Started Film Company of His Own—Parents Give Blessing.

New York—Louis G. McPhee, Yale athlete, who became a daredevil for the movies in order to "make good" for the girl he loved, has retired from his perilous occupation and is now manager of a moving picture concern with headquarters in New York city. Incidentally he has won the approval of the McCann family to a marriage he contracted with Miss Isabore Grace McCann before he started on his career as a high diver.

McPhee's romance began three years ago in Pleasantville, N. Y., where he was spending the summer months. One day he saw approaching a runaway team. In the carriage he saw a frightened young woman. McPhee leaped from his automobile, stopped the team and from that time he and Miss McCann were close friends. Three months later they were married, but Father McCann declared his union would never be approved until McPhee had "made good."

Neck His Principal Asset.

McPhee realized that he could not "make good" in a day and looked over his stock in trade. He recalled that while in Yale he won many prizes as high diver. So he capitalized his neck and offered himself as a daredevil for the movies. McPhee's first feat was a leap from High bridge, New York city, into the icy waters of the Harlem river, a distance of 138 feet. McPhee leaped into the river a Second Time, made the leap, but broke three ribs and fainted in the water. He was rescued by a boat and received a hemorrhage of the throat. Despite his injuries he struggled to his feet and received $500 for the trick, which required 1 minute and 45 seconds.

Blinking and Muttering, the Bird Performed His Tricks.

His parents had a fit. The constant dread lest McPhee's desperate method of making good would mean their daughter's widowhood. His next feat was to leap from an aeroplane.

Leaped From Aeroplane and Glide.

McPhee's final achievement before the camera eclipsed all former efforts. In this film he climbed over elevated wires to the cross arm of a pole. There he hung suspended until a passenger train passed under him. He dropped to the roof of a coach and then leaped into the river as the train was speeding by.

McPhee, covered at the top of a 1000-foot cliff, leaped into the river at second time.

This film settles the career of McPhee as a high diver. He'll jump no more, his parents have feel that he has won his way and will take such risks to "make good" must love their daughter.

QUIT JOBS AT WIVES' ORDER

Spouses Accuse Two Workmen of Jail of Being "Honor Prisoners."

Racine, Wis.—Two men employed at the Racine malleable iron works because they did not wish to be classed as "honor prisoners" by their wives. The men had sought employment at the court house because they had been laid off at factories. Their wives, resenting an account of the employment of their husbands, called on the court house, accused their husbands of being under detention by the sheriff. Unable to convince the women of the contrary, they were forced to resign.

Hunter in Close Wilderness.

Williamsport, Pa.—Dr. A. Miller Cox of Lycoming killed a large wildcat in a close combat in the woods near Trout Run. He was hunting for deer when he encountered the cat in the tree of a tree. The cat sprang on the front leg of the animal, when the frenzied beast hanging for his life, had landed on the ground a few feet from him. Another shot shattered the cat's jaw and entered its brain, ending the battle.

SHOULD HAVE PLEASED HIM

Enemy of Nat Goodwin Surely Could Look Forward to the Ending of the Play.

Nat Goodwin in his book tells this story on himself.

The first night of my production of "Nathan Hale" Hoyt had assured me of his intention of being present with his wife. But when the time came she refused to accompany him. Chagrin, having purchased two tickets and not desiring to be alone, sought someone to go with him. He soon found a friend and invited him to come along. Much to Hoyt's astonishment his friend quietly but firmly refused the invitation.

"Why not?" asked Hoyt.

His friend replied, "I don't like Goodwin.

"Well," said Charley, "you like him as an artist, don't you?"

His friend replied: "No; I don't like him, no or off the stage."

"Well, said Hoyt, "come along. "You are sure to enjoy the play, for they hang Nat in the last act."

ONLY A FEW PIMPLES

But Many More May Come if You Neglect Them. Try Cuticura Free.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are most effective in clearing the skin of pimples, blackheads, redness, roughness, itching and irritation as well as freeing the scalp of dandruff, dryness and itching, besides satisfying every want of the toilet and nursery.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. Y, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Supersensitive.

"I am a servant of the people," said the man who is more polite than gentle.

"I don't like to hear you call your self a servant," commented Farmer Corntossel. "As I think of the hired help I've had around my farm, it makes me feel as if I were up against the lapping evil."

Not Telling.

"There are rumors in the air."

"Not here, surely. The atmosphere is too close."

900 DROPS

CASTORIA

ALCOHOL—3 PER CENT

A Vegetable Preparation for Assimilating the Food and Regulating the Stomachs and Bowels of

INFANTS CHILDREN

Promotes Digestion, Cheerfulness and Rest. Contains neither Opium, Morphine nor Mineral.

NOT NARCOTIC

Recipe of Old Dr. SAMUEL PITCHER

A perfect Remedy for Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea, Worms, Convulsions, Feverishness and LOSS OF SLEEP.

Fac Simile Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK.

At 6 months old

35 DOSES—35 CENTS

Exact Copy of Wrapper.

Shipping Fever

Influenza, Pneumonia, Distemper, and all diseases and conditions caused by germs, yield to the germicidal, antiseptic, tonic, and stimulant action of SPOHN'S LIQUID DISTEMPER CURE. Given with the food it acts on the blood and tissues, destroying the germs and giving strength to the system. Sold by druggists, or delivered, 50 cents and $1.00 a package. Spohn's Stock Food, 25 cents. Spohn's Medicated Soap, 25 cents. Spohn's Veterinary Guide, 25 cents. Spohn's Veterinary Adviser, 25 cents. Address all letters to SPOHN'S VETERINARY MEDICINES, Chicago, Ill.

SPOHN'S HOG TONIC.

Chemists and Bacteriologists, Goshen, Ind., U. S. A.

Rheumatism Muscle Colds

"It is easy to use and quick to respond. No work. Just apply. It penetrates without rubbing."

Read What Others Say:

"Have used your Liniment very successfully in a case of rheumatism, and always have a bottle on hand in case of a cold. Shall be glad to wish so my I think it one of the best. Have recommended it to my friends and shall do so. Consider it a valuable medicine to be in the hand of every mother." Mrs. Geo. Vaughn, Pres. Ladies' Aid Society, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Gave your Liniment a fair trial for rheumatism, and it gave me more relief than any other medicine I ever used. Shall be pleased to recommend it to my friends." Mrs. Ella Wilson, Sec. Ladies' Aid Society, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Gave a bottle of your Liniment to a friend who was suffering with a cold in the head. The cold was gone in two days." Mrs. Ella Wilson, Sec. Ladies' Aid Society, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Your Liniment is the best medicine I know of for rheumatism." Mrs. Geo. Vaughn, Pres. Ladies' Aid Society, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Your Liniment is the best medicine I know of for rheumatism." Mrs. Geo. Vaughn, Pres. Ladies' Aid Society, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Have used your Liniment very successfully in a case of rheumatism." Mrs. Ella Wilson, Sec

Men's Suits---

We are showing some exceptional values in Men's Suits for the Spring and Summer:

Men's All Wool Suits, Plain Black and Blue Serge

$10.00 - $12.00 - $15.00

Men's All Wool Suits, Checked or Fancy Weave

$10.00 - $12.00 - $15.00

Hart, Schaffner & Marx Suits $18 to $25.

If you have not worn one of these Suits, we urge you to try now, you will never regret it.

Go to --- LEVINSON'S --- Get the Habit

THE STORE OF QUALITY AND :: GOOD :: SERVICE

If you want anything that is nice for your table in the line of Groceries, Butter, Eggs, Vegetables, Fruit, Poultry or anything that is in season, call us up or come to our store. We would prefer to have you come.

SPECIALS FOR SATURDAY

In Our Meat Department:

Fancy Picnic Hams, per lb.	10½c
Choice Skinned Hams, half or whole, lb.	15c
Choice Bacon, strip or half, lb.	16c
Rib, Boiling Beef or Ribs of Beef, lb.	10c
Beef Roast, Shoulder	10c
Beef Boiling, Shoulder	11c
Beef Steak, Shoulder	12½c

Quality, Service and Honest Prices are our Motto—We give Green Stamps.

C. DANTO & SON.

212 Bridge St. Phone No. 12 Phone No. 69

Watch our Windows For Display and Prices.

We Want Live Chickens and Veal

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, Apr. 8th, 1915.

Pursuant to law the Common Council met on the above date to canvass the vote cast at the general election held on Monday, April 5, 1915.—Mayor Nicholls presiding.

Aldermen present, Sec. Priest, Cartier, Barney, Shapton. Absent Carey.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Mayor was 484 of which Oscar E. Wilbur received 306 and Wm. Higman received 78.

Moved by Alderman Barney seconded by Aldermen Priest that Oscar E. Wilbur having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Mayor. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of City Clerk was 476 of which Peter E. Vandermade received 406 and Arthur T. Richardson received 69.

Moved by Alderman Priest seconded by Alderman Shapton that Peter E. Vandermade having received a majority of all votes cast be declared elected to the office of City Clerk. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of City Treasurer was 477 of which John Cook received 413 and Wm. Sheldon received 64.

Moved by Alderman Sec seconded by Alderman Barney that John Cook having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of City Treasurer. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for Justice of the Peace was 426 of which Henry C. Cooper received 401 and Hay Auldin received 25.

Moved by Alderman Cartier seconded by Alderman Shapton that Henry C. Cooper having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Justice of the Peace. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Supervisor of the First Ward was 82 of which Frederick J. Mott received 62.

Moved by Alderman Sec seconded by Alderman Cartier that Frederick J. Mott having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Supervisor of the First Ward. Motion Carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Constable of the First ward was 80 of which Llewellyn S. See received 51.

Moved by Alderman Priest seconded by Alderman Barney that Llewellyn S. See having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Alderman of the First ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Constable of the First ward was 80 of which William Graves received 50.

Moved by Alderman Sec seconded by Alderman Cartier that William Graves having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Constable of the First Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Supervisor of the Second Ward was 214 of which Charles J. Zeitler received 108 and Fred H. Thomas received 106.

Moved by Alderman Cartier seconded by Alderman Barney that Charles J. Zeitler having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Supervisor of the Second Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Alderman of the Second Ward was 203 of which Fred E. Cartier received 154 and Robert Stafford received 49.

Moved by Alderman Barney seconded by Alderman Shapton that Fred E. Cartier having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Alderman of the Second Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Constable of the Second Ward was 157 of which William Cowan received 106 and Thomas Nowland received 51.

Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Shapton that Wm. Cowan having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Constable of the Second Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Supervisor of the Third Ward was 110 of which Harrison Jordan received 168 and Geik C. Gelken received 42.

Moved by Alderman Shapton and seconded by Alderman Cartier that Harrison Jordan having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Supervisor of the Third Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Alderman of the Third Ward was 179 of which Geik C. Gelken received 101 and Richard S. Shapton received 76.

Moved by Alderman Shapton seconded by Alderman Priest that Geik C. Gelken having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Alderman of the Third Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast for the office of Constable of the Third Ward was 163 of which Thomas E. Taylor received 163.

Moved by Alderman Priest seconded by Alderman Shapton that Thomas E. Taylor having received a majority of all the votes cast be declared elected to the office of Constable of the Third Ward. Motion carried.

The total number of votes cast on the Hospital Proposition was 522 of which 304 voted against and 218 voted for.

Moved by Alderman Cartier seconded by Alderman Priest that the majority being against, the Hospital Proposition be declared lost. Motion carried.

There being no further business the Council adjourned.

F. J. SCHMITT, Deputy City Clerk.

10 Great Serials

full of life and action, filled with the fire of fine feeling and followed by 250 short stories of adventure, will make

The YOUTH'S COMPANION

Better Than Ever in 1915

Then the Family Page, a rare Editorial Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page, Doctor's Advice, and "Aids to Health," Articles of Travel, Science, Education. From the best minds to the best minds, the best the world can produce for you and everyone in the home. There is no age limit to enthusiasm for The Youth's Companion.

CUT THIS OUT and send with $2.00 for The COMPANION and receive in return FREE All the issues of THE COMPANION for the remaining weeks of 1915; FREE THE COMPANION HOME CALENDAR FOR 1915; THEN The 52 Weekly Issues of The Youth's Companion for 1916—FREE

52 Times a Year —not 12.

Send to-day to The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass., for THESE CURRENT ISSUES—FREE

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED AT THIS OFFICE

A Hard Lover.

"Don't you love me, Mrs. Biggers has winsome ways. Mrs. Rightly?"

"Indeed I do. That reminds me, some ways at the last bridge party I attended deprived me of a new hat."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

OVER 50 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS, DESIGNS, COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

She Was Frank.

The moving picture director was having trouble in getting one of the scenes right. The girl was supposed to resist an attempt to kiss her, but the rebound was far from satisfactory.

"Think, now," said the director, combing her, "haven't you ever tried to stop a young man from kissing you?"

"No," was the girl's frank reply.—London Answers.

Modern Superciliousness.

"My ancestors came over in the Mayflower."

"Yes?" rejoined Mrs. Cumrer. "I understand that the fare was really quite low. But, goodness me, the boat must have been terribly overcrowded."—Washington Star.

Lisle Shanahan,

Attorney at Law.

Office in County Bank Bldg.

(First Publication January 29)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Sarah A. Wilson, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Charles A. Wilson, of Detroit, Michigan, dated March 12th, A. D. 1906, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office in Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 14th, A. D. 1906, in Liber 50 of Mortgages, page 449, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Six Hundred Twenty-Six Dollars and Twenty-Five Cents ($626.25) Principal and Interest, and no proceedings have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof; Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the County House in the city of Charlevoix, that being the place of holding the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and the attorney fee provided for in said mortgage, and the costs and expenses of foreclosure, which said premises are described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the northeast corner of section twenty-one (21) township of Hayes, range ten (10) west, thence south 40 rods, thence west 40 rods, thence north 40 rods, thence east 40 rods to the place of beginning, in the Township of Hayes, County of Charlevoix, Michigan.

Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 29, 1915.

HARRIET A. WILSON, Mortgagee.

HARRY S. SMITH, Attorney for Mortgagee, Charlevoix, Mich.

(First Publication March 19.)

In the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix.

In Chancery.

William J. Gallagher, Executor, Complainant,

vs.

Henry Ashton, Jr., Mary Adams and Sarah W. Prentice, Administratrix, Defendants.

Charlevoix Judicial Circuit, in Chancery.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in Chancery, at Charlevoix, on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1915.

Henry A. Ashton, Mary Adams, and Sarah W. Prentice, Administratrix, Defendants, will take notice that William J. Gallagher, Executor, has filed his bill of complaint in said cause, in the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in Chancery, at Charlevoix, on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1915, against said defendants, and that said cause is now pending in said Circuit Court, and that on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1915, an order was duly made and entered in said cause, in said Circuit Court, in Chancery, at Charlevoix, on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1915, in which it is ordered that said defendants, Henry A. Ashton, Mary Adams, and Sarah W. Prentice, Administratrix, cause their appearance to be entered in said cause within four months from the date of said order, and in default thereof said bill of complaint be taken as confessed against said defendants, Henry A. Ashton, Mary Adams, and Sarah W. Prentice, Administratrix, and that said complainant be entitled to a decree in said cause, in accordance with the prayer of said bill of complaint, and that said order be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County of Charlevoix, for four weeks from the date of said order.

HARRIS A. EUREKA, Circuit Judge.

HARRIS A. EUREKA, Circuit Judge.

Solicitors for Complainant.

(First publication March 5)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the city of Charlevoix, on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1915.

In the matter of the estate of Edson R. Law, deceased.

Charles T. Bowman having filed in said court his petition, praying that the administration of said estate be granted to Charles T. Bowman or some other suitable person.

It is ordered that the 12th day of April A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs of said deceased, and the further issue of $2,000 (and) be notified of the pendency of said petition, and of the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, and that the heirs of said deceased be notified of the pendency of said petition, and of the hearing thereof by personally serving a copy of this order upon them, at least ten days prior to said day of hearing.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication Feb. 5)

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Sarah A. Wilson, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Charles A. Wilson, of Detroit, Michigan, dated March 12th, A. D. 1906, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 14th, A. D. 1906, in Liber 50 of Mortgages on page 398, and containing a power of sale, which said mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of Two Thousand Dollars, and interest and the balance of the purchase money for the premises described in said mortgage, which said sum of Two Hundred Dollars and Ten cents ($200.10) is now claimed to be due on said mortgage and no proceedings have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof;

Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the County House in the city of Charlevoix, that being the place of holding the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and the attorney fee provided for in said mortgage, and the costs and expenses of foreclosure, which said premises are described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the northeast corner of section twenty-one (21) township of Hayes, range ten (10) west, thence south 40 rods, thence west 40 rods, thence north 40 rods, thence east 40 rods to the place of beginning, in the Township of Hayes, County of Charlevoix, Michigan.

Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 29, 1915.

HARRIET A. WILSON, Mortgagee.

HARRY S. SMITH, Attorney for Mortgagee, Charlevoix, Mich.

(First publication February 5)

Notice for Publication

Department of the Interior,

U. S. Land Office at Marquette, Michigan, February 4th, 1915.

Notice is hereby given that Julians Mary Lou, whose post-office address is Detroit, Mich., has filed in this office her sworn application to purchase the land described as follows, to wit: Lot No. 5, section 6, township 34 north, range 10 west, Menominee and Meridian, Michigan, under the provisions of the act of June 3, 1878, and acts amendatory thereof, known as the "Timber and Stone Law," at such value as might be fixed by appraisement, and in accordance with the appraisement and appraisement thereon of two disinterested persons, appointed by the undersigned and signed by appraisers, the timber and stone thereon to be disposed of, that the land sought will offer no injury to mineral deposits, that the land is not in the vicinity of any town or city, that the land is not in the Platte or Leelanau County, or Leland Mich., that the land is not in a reservation, that the purchase is for entire benefit of the undersigned, and not for the benefit of any other person or persons, by filing a notice of intention to make final proof, at the time which would defeat the entry.

Any person claiming adversely the above described land should file their adverse claim or claims in this office, on or before the time fixed for the hearing herein, the unexpired portion of the time allowed for filing such claim or claims will be allowed.

WILLIAM LEE HOMER, Register.

(First publication March 5)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court held at the probate office, in the city of Charlevoix, on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1915.

Present: Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Daniel Sutton, deceased.

It is ordered that the 19th day of April A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the examination and adjustment of claims against said deceased, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court at said time and place to show cause why such claims should not be adjusted and allowed, and that notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication March 5)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the city of Charlevoix, on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1915.

Present: Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Amelia Tuttle, deceased.

It is ordered that the 19th day of April A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the examination and adjustment of said estate be granted to Charles T. Bowman or some other suitable person.

It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication Feb. 26)

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Sarah A. Wilson, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Charles A. Wilson, of Detroit, Michigan, dated March 12th, A. D. 1906, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 14th, A. D. 1906, in Liber 50 of Mortgages on page 398, and containing a power of sale, which said mortgage was given to secure the payment of the sum of Two Thousand Dollars, and interest and the balance of the purchase money for the premises described in said mortgage, which said sum of Six Hundred Dollars and Twenty-Five Cents ($625.25) is now claimed to be due on said mortgage and no proceedings have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof;

Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the County House in the city of Charlevoix, that being the place of holding the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and the attorney fee provided for in said mortgage, and the costs and expenses of foreclosure, which said premises are described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the northeast corner of section twenty-one (21) township of Hayes, range ten (10) west, thence south 40 rods, thence west 40 rods, thence north 40 rods, thence east 40 rods to the place of beginning, in the Township of Hayes, County of Charlevoix, Michigan.

Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 29, 1915.

HARRIET A. WILSON, Mortgagee.

HARRY S. SMITH, Attorney for Mortgagee, Charlevoix, Mich.

(First publication March 19)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the city of Charlevoix, on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1915.

Present: Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Hannah Sutton, deceased.

It is ordered that the 19th day of April A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the examination and adjustment of claims against said deceased, and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court at said time and place to show cause why such claims should not be adjusted and allowed, and that notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication April 1)

Order for Publication

STATE OF MICHIGAN 39th Judicial Circuit in Chancery.

Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in Chancery, at Charlevoix, on the 1st day of March, A. D. 1915.

George H. Walden, et al., Defendants.

It appears that the defendants George H. Walden and Laura Walden Cowey cannot be found in the State of Michigan, and that they reside in the State of California, therefore on motion of Harris A. Eureka, Solicitor for Complainants, it is hereby ordered that the above named defendants, George H. Walden and Laura Walden Cowey, cause their appearance to be entered in said cause within four months from the date of this order, and in default thereof said bill of complaint be taken as confessed against said defendants, George H. Walden and Laura Walden Cowey, and that said complainants be entitled to a decree in said cause, in accordance with the prayer of said bill of complaint, and that said order be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, said paper being the paper designated by the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, for four weeks from the date of said order.

HARRIS A. EUREKA, Circuit Judge.

HARRIS A. EUREKA, Circuit Judge.

Solicitors for Complainants.

(First publication March 5)

Order for Publication

State of Michigan, the probate court for the county of Charlevoix.

At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office, in the city of Charlevoix, on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1915.

Present: Hon. Servetus A. Cornell, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Amelia Tuttle, deceased.

It is ordered that the 19th day of April A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the examination and adjustment of said estate be granted to Charles T. Bowman or some other suitable person.

It is further ordered that public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

A true copy.

SERVETUS A. CORNELL, Judge of Probate.

(First publication Feb. 26)

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Sarah A. Wilson, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Charles A. Wilson, of Detroit, Michigan, dated March 12th, A. D. 1906, and recorded in the Register of Deeds office for Charlevoix County, Michigan, on March 14th, A. D. 1906, in Liber 50 of Mortgages, page 449, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of Six Hundred Twenty-Six Dollars and Twenty-Five Cents ($626.25) Principal and Interest, and no proceedings have been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof; Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and the statute in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that on the 10th day of April, A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the front door of the County House in the city of Charlevoix, that being the place of holding the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and the attorney fee provided for in said mortgage, and the costs and expenses of foreclosure, which said premises are described as follows, to wit: Commencing at the northeast corner of section twenty-one (21) township of Hayes, range ten (10) west, thence south 40 rods, thence west 40 rods, thence north 40 rods, thence east 40 rods to the place of beginning, in the Township of Hayes, County of Charlevoix, Michigan.

Dated, Charlevoix, Michigan, January 29, 1915.

HARRIET A. WILSON, Mortgagee.

HARRY S. SMITH, Attorney for Mortgagee, Charlevoix, Mich.

Wall Finishes

Velumina flat wall Paint and Hygienic Kalsomine

Now is the time to do your interior decorating. Velumina is the finest washable wall finish ever produced. It covers more surface to the gallon doing a perfect job than any other flat wall paint on the market—It does not harden in the package.

Try it—we guarantee complete satisfaction. For those who prefer Kalsomine—There is nothing better made in that line than Hygienic Kalsomine—It covers from 15 to 25 per cent more surface per pound than any other—It dries without showing laps, with that beautiful egg shell finish which is so very desirable—Call for color cards.

S. M. SEE & SONS,

The Reliable Housefurnishers.

Some War Prices For Wheat:-

1775—War of American Revolution, 93c rose to $2.48

1815—European War Including in Waterloo, rose to $1.75, then next year after war was over to $2.85

1854-56—Crimean War, 38c in 1850 to $1.85 in 1855

1860-64—Civil War, 62c in 1861 to $2.28 in 1864. Next year after war was over to $3.00

1870-71—Franco-Prussian War, 74c to $1.38. Then broke to $1.00 and rose to $1.60 in 1873

1889—Spanish American War, 63c in Spring to $1.85 in May. $1.25 in July and 63c at end of war.

1904-5—Russo Japanese War, 74c in November to $1.21 in 1905. Then broke to 63c and rose to $1.34.

Notice that four times wheat prices rose to the highest point after the war was over. This was due to nations who had been restricted by war coming into the market.

Buy your "IRON DUKE" Now.

Argo Milling Co.

MANUFACTURERS

Can't Eat-Stomach Out Of Order

You are losing strength and vitality. That listless, languid feeling is due to the weak condition of the system.

Those are sure signs of a breakdown. Check same quickly and effectively by using Electric Bitters, greatest of all tonics. If you feel worn out and run down, in need of a tonic, use Electric Bitters—you can't rest until you are well.

It will tone up your system and restore you to your old time vigor and health.

Keep your stomach in order. Increase your appetite, restore your system to a healthy condition by taking Electric Bitters. All Druggists.

E. E. BUCKLEN & CO. PHILADELPHIA. ST. LOUIS

Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The time has come for you to improve your home, and you should look around and see what you need; we are interested in the looks of the Charlevoix Homes because it is the first thing that our summer visitors notice, and a home look nice you have got to have first-class material and have the work done by experienced workmen. In order to get first-class material you should call and see our stock, which consists of everything, such as Shingles, Lath, Doors, Moulding, Blinds and Building Paper.

TELEPHONE NO. 22.

Charlevoix Rock Product Company.

Producers and Manufacturers of

Hydrated Lime
Chemical Lime
Bulk Building Lime
Barreled Building Lime
Hydrated Agricultural Lime
Crushed Stone
Pulverized Stone
Furnace Flexing
Sugar Stone.

Phone 80.

PETER BENSON

CONTRACTOR FOR

Excavating for Water Pipes, Sewers, Foundations, Cellars, Drain Ditches, Open Ditches, Etc.

If my work is not satisfactory when completed I will make it good without extra charge.

Charlevoix, Michigan

25 Post Cards 10¢

ASSORTED

Best Wishes, Greetings, Lovers, Birthday, etc. Also your name in our Post Card Exchange free on request, and free sample copy of the Family Story Paper, 40 to 64 pages and Premium List. Send 10c. Stamp for return postage, etc.

FAMILY STORY PAPER

24-26 Vanderwater St., New York.

F. S. Bettes

Electric Construction Auto and Boat Supplies.

214 Bridge St. - Phone 154

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

ROBERT G. MADILL

General Contractor and Builder

Estimates furnished. Phone 333 Residence. Office in County Bank Building.

DR. J. A. AULD, DENTIST.

Office in Dr. J. Latimer & Co's Store.

TELEPHONE NO. 139.

R. L. LEWIS

Attorney at Law.

Office in Priest's Block

Charlevoix Michigan

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS SHOULD USE

5 DROPS

The 200 Best Remedy For all Forms of Rheumatism

LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, GOUT, NEURALGIA, AND KIDNEY TROUBLE.

DROPS

STOP THE PAIN

Rives Quick Relief Remedy

SOLD AT ALL DRUGGISTS

SAMPLE BOTTLE SENT ON REQUEST

Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co.

140-148 W. Lake St., Chicago.

Tired!

Are you tired? Are you down? worried? Everything seems against you? Can you do no other? Well it is not business. You are ill. Your system needs a tonic. Your Stomach, Kidneys and Liver need attention. Nothing will do this better than

Electric Bitters

50c. and $1.00 All Druggists

Picked Up at Sea

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

We were sailing on the Australian steamer, a boat we owned by the lookout. She was an ordinary ship, liftboat, open, and was dancing merrily on the waves in the bright sunlight. When she came nearer we counted nine men in her—six rowing for us and the captain gave an order to slow down. As soon as the boat was ready to send men to haulied us and asked us to take them aboard.

The captain questioned them, and they told him that they were members of the crew of a ship that had collided with another in a fog and had gone to the bottom. He asked how long ago that was and they said a week. Then he asked what had become of the officers and the foot of the crew and was told that they had gone overboard with the boat. There was only time to get out the one boat before she sank.

The story didn't appeal to the captain as being likely, but he could not refuse to take the men aboard and did so. As soon as they came aboard we saw that their faces were by no means attractive. They asked our vessel for what port he was bound and when he said Melbourne I saw that on the faces of some of them was a scared look, while others seemed to be asking themselves, "Did it we can get away with it?"

I made up my mind that there was mutiny aboard and had either been put off a ship or else they had done a thing of the kind, but when they were put to work they showed such ignorance of a sailor's work that I changed my opinion. That they were not what they pretended to be was evident, but what they were we had no means of knowing.

Our ship was a small steamer, not needing a numerous crew. We usually carried eighteen men, including engineers and mate, I being mate, but now we were reduced to twelve.

One evening one of our regular crew came to me and told me that the strangers had been seen prowling in the ship's armory and hidden them in the hold. The captain was asleep in his cabin at the time, and I preferred to act on the information rather than wake him up. He was a headstrong man and was liable to give our enemies the chance we were after and I sent for the man who had been spying on them and told him to do the same and asked him whether he and his men preferred to make some more port out of Melbourne. He admitted that they would, but when I asked him why they would like to put in he said that they preferred not to stop at an Australian port at all. I told him he could with his mates as to what they wanted and let me know.

I did not like the strangers off their guard and going time. It was evident to me that they had come to go ashore in Australian territory, that they were criminals. After consulting with the mate we called the crew and told me that they would like to be put ashore at a large town we passed which was ripped with a sail and in part decked over. Of course they would need to be supplied.

This was a good giveaway on their part and I knew that they were desperate, for they had no knowledge of navigation and would be at the mercy of the winds and waters. I pretended to accede to their request and sent the boat ashore with a mate and gave the best ready to be lowered. As soon as the boat was ready I sent men to collect the weapons they had taken. When this was done I mustered men with different parts of the vessel, all armed. Then I began to send the strangers in the forward cabins by different articles they would need on their voyage, such as water, some for blankets, some for food.

I first confined their spokesman, who was leader as well, to take two men with him and go down to the hold for some salt pork. He obeyed and three part of the nine men went below to reappear again, for as soon as they got into the dark hold hands were clapped over their mouths and they were removed to the brig. As soon as it was reported to me that they had been captured I sent two more men to the hold room for another lot. They too were secured, and within twenty minutes from the time they had gone to get the food every man in the hold was in irons.

Then the captain appeared on deck the next morning and I told him that the strangers had gone ashore he took a dozen. Time when I told him that I had the men secured he was astonished. Some seemed to understand how he could have slept through a mutiny. Firstly when I gave him my plan and the manner of its accomplishment he exclaimed, "Mate, you are a sailor!" Secondly I showed him the coffee in their tins, but when all under lock and key.

A few days later we reached port. I went to the municipal office and stated the case, to be told that nine persons serving in the Australian navy had escaped. A boat was missing, and I was supposed that had taken it and put to sea. Government officers were looking for them, but this far had seen neither of them.

The men were taken in charge by the police and returned to the ship. Their leader told me before leaving that they had planned to take the ship the very night I executed the plan that resulted in their capture.

Fairly Warmed.

Cholly—Before I married I did not know I thought of nothing but making money. Ethel—Why, how right on! They say that's so rich in folks think.—Dallas News.

A Matter of Taste.

"Do women find rather live on bread and water than on charity. The Tramp—Yes, mum; there's no accountin' for tastes.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Luck counts once in awhile; brains count all the time.—W. H. Lough.

BREVITY OF ENGLISH.

Its Advantage In This Respect Over French and German.

In an intertitional report, presented in parliament, returns of French, German and English for three wireless being great translations of each other, the English report contained forty-nine words, sometimes it took by a whole page. As a rule, the French report was the most diffuse.

This brevity of English is partly explained by the fact that English is made up to an extraordinary extent of words of one syllable. Its home having (unlike the German) lost all their inflections except the possessive "s," have become more root, a very large proportion of them monosyllabic. In Germany a monosyllabic root practically always gets an extra syllable tacked on by way of case ending. In the second place English has little of the elaborate and artificial machinery of structure the French has, so it saves space in prepositions and such paraphernalia. Instead, English has what the grammarians call incipient agglutination—that is, stringing words together in groups without either prepositions or case endings to connect them, an example of the former kind of brevity is a word like "earthquake," two syllables, compared with the German "erdbeben," three syllables, and French "tremblement de terre," five syllables. An example of the tenseness of English would be a phrase like "Hands across the Border and have now come back," every word a monosyllable. In a telegram this would be just as intelligible in the form "Been home now back." You cannot get that sort of thing far in any other European language.—Manchester Guardian.

Guessers' Patron Saint.

Way was St. Barbara chosen to be the patron saint of all gunners? It is one of those times when one is to be sorry one does not know enough to know, but does not. Meanwhile there is the fact that she was invoked by all gunners by land or sea.

In the old French navy the Ste. Barbe was the gun room, and the same may be found with that meaning attached to it in all dictionaries. Moreover, in France she is the saint not only of gunners, but of the brigade. The sapeurs pompiers hold their holiday on the day of her feast.—Westminster Gazette.

Says the Composer.

The composer Panscron, while driving homeward in his cab during a terrific storm, met the agile composer Cherubini plodding along on foot, protected from the storm only by a thoroughly old umbrella full of holes. Panscron took compassion on the old gentleman and begged him to make use of the cab, saying that he himself would walk home. Cherubini accepted and took the other's place in the cab. Then Panscron naturally asked the old gentleman for the loan of his umbrella.

"Oh, no, my dear boy," said Cherubini, "It's a well known fact that a man never again sets eyes on an umbrella that he has lent." And he drove off in Panscron's cab.

Misunderstood.

"What would you do if I turned you down?" asked the maiden. A full sigh escaped and yet the lassie smiled.

"Didn't you hear my question?" she asked, somewhat petulantly.

"I thought you were talking to the sun," he responded firmly.—Philadelphia Ledger.

PERSONAL WAR MEMOIRS

OF THE LATE MAJOR EDWARD H. GREEN, A PIONEER OF CHARLEVOIX.

A Recital of the Stirring Events in Which He Bore a Conspicuous Part.

At the time of the breaking out of the war I was twenty-six years of age and was living at my father's home in Maytown, Pa., while teaching at Fairview school, two and a half miles from there. My father and mother were living, and sisters Amanda, Hattie and Ida.

On April 12, 1861, Fort Sumter was fired upon. The news flashed over the wires and that same evening or my return home I found the people greatly excited, and learned that a mass meeting would be held at once in the armory building at the Maytown infantry, a fancy-dress company which had been drilling for a number of years. I went to the meeting. The building was packed with men and women.

Speeches were made denouncing the outrage committed on our flag. Then Capt. Haines of the Infantry, C. Co. that the committee had held a preliminary meeting and had unanimously voted to tender their services to the United States government. He announced that the quota for the company was one hundred and asked if there were any present who wished to go. In very few minutes the volunteers exceeded the number required. I was one of them, but the Captain informed me I was too small for the regulation size, being less than 5 ft. 6 in. At this meeting someone announced that the flag of the Infantry was not nice enough for the boys to take to Harrisburg. A voice from the ladies present said, "We will furnish the flag." The next morning in less than two hours they raised seventy-five dollars to send to Philadelphia for a silk flag. When it came, the ladies called upon me to present the flag to the company.

In closing my address I told them I was going to Harrisburg with them no matter how small I was. I had already relinquished my school to sister Sue, who was well qualified for the position.

Gov. Andrew G. Curtin (the late war governor of Pa.) telegraphed the captains to have his company at Harrisburg on April 19, just one week after Sumter was fired upon. When we reached there we were placed in Camp Curtin and ordered to prepare for inspection preliminary to mustering in. This was on the three months call for 75,000 troops. I placed myself on the left of the company, as being the smallest man here. Col. Thomas G. Summers of the Fifth U. S. Infantry was inspecting and mustering in officers. He examined the hands to see if they were manned in any way, and the tools to find out if they were sound enough to be issued to the cartridges. At that time breeching-loading guns were not used. I was issued the musket, we used paper cartridges (the powder being wrapped in still Manilla paper) and we had to bite off the end of one, one hand supporting the powder into the muzzle. The officer also examined the eyesight and also the weight and height. Three men who had drilled in the company for years were rejected—one because he wore glasses, one was too fleshy and the third was humpbacked. The first regiment drilled when I was ordered to hold up my hand and be sworn in.

Our company was Co. A. of the Tenth Pa. Infantry. Sullivan Meredith, a Philadelphia lawyer, was Colonel of the regiment. Oliver J. Dickey, a Lancaster Co. lawyer, afterward executor of the estate of Thad Stev

New Loves for Old

By Victor Radcliffe

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

Face to face for the first time in fifteen years with his almost forgotten early love, Mr. Archibald Newton raised his hat politely and his face became pleasant. The lady shook hands with him and smiled with a genuine greeting for an old time friend

"A happy surprise," remarked Archibald. "Some changes since you and I last met. Married, of course."

"With two children," and the lady's face saddened as she murmured softly—"widow."

"Widows," explained Archibald. "Two children also—boys."

"And I have two boys," supplemented Mrs. Burton. "You do not live here, surely?"

"But I do," replied he with a rather proud wave of his hand included within its scope fair acres enclosed by the fence against which he had been leaning.

"How strange!" observed Mrs. Burton, with a slight flutter in her voice. "I have been bought the place adjoining."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed Mr. Newton. "Then we shall be neighbors."

"And friends I hope, as we always were," added his companion. "Those dear old days!" and she lowered her eyes and he sighed.

"I declare! Mary has made a fine looking woman," commented Archibald as they parted for the time being.

"I always thought Archibald handsome, Mrs. Burton communed with herself. "He's more so than ever now."

And Archibald smiled with warmth and Mrs. Burton simpered, and it brightened the moment for both in a pleasing happy way.

In about a week the Burtons moved into their new home. Mrs. Burton explained that she had seen it advertised and had purchased it on the recommendation of a lawyer friend. She had never dreamed of the good fortune of getting next door to a helpful accommodating old friend.

It was when for the first time Archibald got sight of the two boys that he seemed to get a new life impulse. They were bright, lively, up-to-date urchins, eight and ten years old respectively. Such lads! It made Archibald chuckle over his own early boyhood, as he watched them up to all kinds of fun and mischief.

They climbed trees to the topmost branch. They hitched up the cow to a dog cart and had a runaway. They got intoxicated and had a runaway. The boys were with him and both were slightly bruised. This angered Archibald. He discharged the man.

"I'll get even with you!" threatened the latter.

"Don't show your face around here again," ordered Archibald.

"Yah!" resented the insolent fellow. "Mighty lovin' about those two mischievous brats, ain't you? Huh! guess it's the mother you're after!"

"You wretched scoundrel!" raved Archibald, and made for the man, but the latter darted away and back to his cups at the village tavern.

A week later one morning the younger of the boys startled Archibald with a quick alarming cry:

"Fire—see, it's our house!"

They all ran for the Burton home. The girls were outside on the lawn, screaming. They had been carried to safety by Mrs. Burton.

"Where is she?" shouted Archibald frantically.

"She went back to get the bird you gave her," replied one of the little misses.

"Why, she's housed in with the flames!" cried Archibald.

It was fortunate that he entered the burning house, for in one of the upper rooms he stumbled across Mrs. Burton. She had fainted away. He lifted her in his arms. She partially recovered sensibility. Her arms encircled his neck. He felt quite the hero as he got her safely out of the house.

"The house was set on fire, Archibald," declared Mrs. Burton that evening. They were all housed comfortably now in the Newton home. The flames started in the cellar where no one had been for two days.

The village marshal was advised. He started a still hunt for the incendiary.

Archibald and Mrs. Burton were discussing her plans for rebuilding the next evening when the marshal appeared. The dismissed hired man was in his charge.

"I've found the person who set that fire," said the official.

The hired man looked reckless and sullen.

"What shall I do with him?" inquired the marshal.

Archibald hesitated. It seemed so nice and homelike to see Mrs. Burton under his roof that he almost forgave the firebug.

"Make him sign the pledge and send him away if I don't want to start any man on the way to the penitentiary," he said.

"But why did he set fire to my house?" inquired Mrs. Burton in an injured tone.

"Revenge, ma'am," muttered the incendiary.

"Why, I never harmed you."

"No, ma'am, but I was mad with drink and down on Mr. Newton for discharging me from his service."

"What had I to do with that?" asked the lady.

"Well, I knew it would hurt him worse to have you suffer than himself."

"I don't understand—"

"Because—well, because he was in love with you!" blurted out the man. Mrs. Burton looked at Archibald. Both blushed. The officer and his prisoner departed. Archibald crossed over to the women's chair.

"Mary," he said softly to myself, "I need two houses. One will do, if—"

"Oh, my!" fluttered Mrs. Burton.

"If we bring up the boys and girls under one roof. Make me happy, Mary," said Archibald was eloquent and earnest as a young lover of twenty-one.

"I wish I could," responded Mrs. Burton—"as happy as I am myself after what that man said."

"It's true, Mary—every word of it!" declared the ardent swain thrillingly.

And then he kissed her, just as he had in the far past when she was a blushing girl of sixteen.

"Uplift" in Fiction.

Latter-day American story tellers, most of them, seem to be in a conspiracy to "make the world better," to "touch the heart," to "make you forget all your troubles," to "exalt life and love," to be "a sunshine-maker." These intentions are so unfaltering, and the stress that "clean living" is so insistent, that one is forced to ask—not whether the practice and theory of living in America are not antagonistic—whether the sanguinated sentimental appeal may not denote dishonesty of real conviction, and the persistent assertion with the moral issue an uneasy self-distrust! It would be as ridiculous to charge the great American people with being less honest with themselves than are those of other nations as it would be to doubt that in "the land of freedom," there is less inner freedom than elsewhere. But the latter-day fiction never comes near one with an uneasy idea that the weight and momentum of American civilization are rolling out the paste of human nature very fast and are stamping it with one chinaware pattern—or too common a pattern.—The Atlantic.

Bright Policemen.

During the early period of the work on the Panama canal many persons were injured by jumping on and off trains in motion on the Panama railroad. There were on the zone police force many West Indians, who were trained and capable men, but incurably literal. An order was issued to the effect that any person should jump, leaping on or off a train in motion, and the next day two West Indian policemen brought into a police station a white man who was struggling fiercely to break away from them.

"What have you arrested him for?" asked the police sergeant who was on duty.

"For jumping—in and off the rear of a train, sah," one of the policemen replied.

"The blamed fools!" cried the arrested man. "I'm the brakeman!"—Youth's Companion.

First Shall Be Last.

Mrs. Gushington—I think your novel has a perfect ending, Mr. Scribbler.

Scribbler—How do you like the opening chapter?

Miss Gushington—Oh, I have not come to that yet!—Judge.

Coloured Blouses.

Colored handkerchief linen blouses are drawn again this year. You remember last year they were introduced for country wear. They are still on tailored linens, frequently with pockets. They have long sleeves and sometimes the fronts are scallloped.

Red Hair and Light Eyebrows.

A word of warning to the red-haired woman with light brows and lashes. Don't make them black, the effect you achieve by so doing will be weird in the extreme, artificialness being its prominent note.

In such a case light brown water coloursingue, well diluted and carefully applied, gives the very best result, for it imparts to the brows and lashes a ruddy brown that which has at least the appearance of being natural, while black-hair brows with red hair are decidedly not.

If resolutions could not be broken few would be made.

Handling of Striped Materials

It seems that everything is woven stripes this year, and the frock of gingham for the half-grown schoolgirl may show them as well embroidered as they are the visiting gown made for her mother. The handling of striped fabrics is not a particularly simple matter, but when well done the results are something to be proud of.

A good model for a dress of striped material is shown in the picture. It is in every way commendable for the girl of from nine to fourteen years and merits the attention of those who must provide clothes that shall be attractive for girls of the awkward age. One of the strongest points in favor of striped fabrics for children's wear lies in the fact that they allow simplicity and variety at the same time. By the simple expedient of changing the direction of the stripes the trimming is provided of the same material as the frock.

The model shown is so good that it should be followed exactly as it is by the copyists who see it. The bodice is cut with long shoulders and large arm-seye, and the simplest of neck openings. In it the stripes run up and down and the skillful fullness gathered in at the waist line gives them the right direction. They slant toward the middle of the belt at the back and front. At each side a band of the material, having the stripes running horizontally, makes a neat decorative feature and adds to the shapeliness of the waist. In the sleeve length sleeves the stripes run length wise.

The neck and sleeves are finished with an embroidered edging in a simple, well-made design. Pearl buttons, two at each side, and simulated buttonholes of narrow braid, are effective little touches on the front of the waist.

The skirt is moderately full with panel at the front and plaits at the sides and back. Above the three-inch hem a band of the material, with the stripes running horizontally, gives the skirt a neat finish and a desirable flare at the same time.

The belt may be of patent leather or suede or of some heavy fabric. Altogether, this dress follows many good points in the modes of spring for grownups and at the same time contrives to be prettily childish and very practical. It is meant to be developed in wash fabrics and is easy to launder.

New Combination Garment

A new combination has appeared among underwear and has proved a great success in the spring display. It has appealed to the senses of utility, economy and daintiness, which women exercise when outfitting themselves with summer underwear. This garment is called the "envelope chemise" and is engagingly pretty as well as practical.

To cut the new combination, one has only to vary the lower part of a chemise pattern by slanting the side seams outward to provide for a flare at the bottom. Also the back breadth is cut longer than the front breadth and with a tab at the center of the lower edge. This tab is more or less narrow and is provided with button holes which fasten over small, flat pearl buttons sewed to the bottom edge of the front breadth.

This arrangement divides the skirt of the chemise, making it as easy to walk in as muslin or silk pants and giving the appearance of a short under petticoat.

The envelope chemise is developed in nainsook or other thin cotton fabrics and in wash silk or crepe de chine. It is trimmed with the usual lingerie laces. The corset cover, pants and short skirt may be dispensed with when this chemise is adopted, since it takes the place of each of them.

The Sandman Story

By Mrs. F. A. Walker

JACK RABBIT'S OWN LESSON

"I wonder where Jack Rabbit is," said the old lady one days after. "I had watched old Doctor Duck and the rabbit had learned the lesson of pretending to be other than what he was. Mister Fox had waited a long time for the coming of Jack Rabbit and at length, thinking that perhaps he might be ill, he said to himself, 'I will go to the burrow and see if there is anything the matter.'

"The sun was pretty warm as Mister Fox ran along and his tongue hung out of his mouth as he felt the heat more and more. "I don't know as I blame Jack Rabbit for not wanting to get out in the hot sun," he said, "and I guess I would have been wiser if I myself had stayed in the cool depths of my cave." But he was so anxious about Jack Rabbit's welfare that he kept on.

"Just as he came in sight of the rabbit's home he was surprised to see Jack Rabbit lying at full length in the sun without attempting to protect himself in the least from the heat.

"That's queer," said the fox. "I wonder why he does not rest under one of the great trees, where it is cool and comfortable?"

"Just as he said this he was surprised to see Jack Rabbit get up and run down to the edge of a nearby brook where he went through the most curious proceedings that Mister Fox had ever witnessed. The rabbit, when he reached the water turned his back to it and then walked slowly backward until his hind legs and the lower part of his body were in the water, and then having thoroughly wet himself he turned about and went back and lay down in the sun again.

"Mister Fox watched Jack Rabbit while he repeated this performance three or four times, and he could not make out whether the rabbit was crazy or what he was trying to accomplish by this alternate wetting and drying himself.

"At last he could stand it no longer, and going up to the rabbit, who had just lain down again in the sun, he said, 'Good morning, Jack Rabbit, and why are you not at my house as you are supposed to be, and not lying in this hot sun when the tree of fors such cool shade? Do you expect to get wisdom by getting a sunstroke?'

"Jack Rabbit was somewhat taken aback by the appearance of Mr. Fox, particularly when he remembered how much Mr Fox was annoyed at being kept waiting when he was late to his visit.

"At length he recovered himself enough to say "Good morning," and then added: "I should have been at your house early this morning but I not made a most wonderful discovery which I am trying to verify now, which is going to make me the most wonderful animal in all the world.

"'I am much interested,' said the fox. "Pray tell me what it is that you have discovered that you expect to accomplish with yourself that is so wonderful?

"'Well,' said Jack Rabbit,' last night when I was peacefully inside the house of Farmer Windom I heard him say to his good wife this wisdom. 'Good wife, you never know a thing grow you must give it plenty of water and sunshine and manure.' I know that I had made a great discovery.

"And how was that?" asked the fox.

"You see," said the rabbit, "that I has been the sorrow of my life that I has nothing but a little turnip-fresh stub for a tail, and until I heard Farmer Windom I never knew how to make it grow. Now I know that all it needs is plenty of water and sunshine, and that I have given it these two things, why, I shall have a long tail and be the most wonderful animal in all the world.'

"So that is what you were doing when I was watching you near the brook," said the fox.

"Yes," said the rabbit, "and I am sure it has grown quite a little this morning. I wet it in the brook and then dry it in the sun and then wet it in the brook again, and so on. I have wet it already twenty times and—hoo-hoo—keeches!"

"Yes, indeed," said the fox, "how close it has way it will not, for a hot cold is all you will get with the alternate wetting and drying of a part of your body. If you were a vegetable this application of water and sun might increase you, but a rabbit with a tail would be a sad sight. You may better go into your burrow and take a good dose of peppermint tea if you wish to avoid having something worse than a cold, and your silly notions could be taught you the wisdom which I have wasted a whole forenoon to bring to you, that neither rabbits nor people should seek for themselves benefits which are injurious and which, even if attained, would be of no use.

Company Manners

The teacher had been giving her little ones some lessons in table manners. "Now, children, when you sit at tables," she said, "before the others are served you should always say 'excuse me.'"

The next day, wishing to see how well they remembered her instructions, she asked: "Fred, when should you say 'excuse me?'"

"When we have company," was the earnest reply.

Putting it Right.

Teacher—Who were the Egyptian pyramids built?

Dance Junior—In the middle ages, sir.

Teacher—The middle ages! What do you mean?

Dance Junior—Why, the pyramiddle ages, of course, sir.

GIVE EMPLOYER YOUR BEST

No Man Can Serve Himself Well So Long as He Is Dissatisfied—"Knowledge Is Power."

As long as you work for a man, give him your best. If the conditions surrounding your position are displeasing, keep on the watch for another job. If you have a definite idea of the character of the work you like best, it would be a good idea to advertise for it. But remember, we should first serve an apprenticeship before we may expect to take the reins in our own hands. No man can serve himself well, or his employer, so long as he is dissatisfied.

Don't work for a man to whom you cannot give your best; nor should you work for a man you can't respect. If your wages are not enough to allow you to live decently, search around for some other line of endeavor. Always be ready for promotion—this means you should learn your business root and branch. Read good books as you read, study—think—thoughts are real live things. Fix good solid business ideas in your mind and something good will come to you. Let this be your slogan: "Knowledge is power." It is within your province to gain the necessary knowledge to put you at the head of a great institution.—Aims and Aspirations.

EXCELLENT GAME FOR BOYS

Amusing Pastime That Any Youth With Ordinary Tools and Trouble Can Make for Himself

This is an amusing game that any boy with a little trouble and ordinary tools can make for himself or his brother, and which can be played equally well in a room or out of doors in the garden.

For it, will be required in the first instance a board, or board about two inches in width, two feet in length, and an inch in thickness. In this board three circular holes are cut, each four inches in diameter, and one at the end of the board, which is for appearance sake. It can then be painted and left to dry, and afterwards the numbers painted in some contrasting color above each hole.

Then the small bags made of linen or any other material are sewed on behind each hole, and this may be seen in the small sketch on the right which also illustrates the support that must be fastened on the back.

This game is played with rubber balls, the competitors standing at an agreed distance from the board and in turn throwing. When a ball enters a hole and stays there, the player scores the number that is above the hole, and if the game is played at, say twenty points, the first player who reaches that number wins. To add to the fun of the game small prizes for successful competitors can be easily arranged.

A Game for Boys.

STREETS GIVEN TO CHILDREN

Certain Thoroughfares in New York City Closed to Traffic to Permit Children to Play

New York city is trying the experiment of closing certain highways to traffic daily, and letting the youngsters do as they please. Huge signs are placed across these thoroughfares reading: "Street closed to traffic."

Miss Ruth Robinson, chief play organizer, says: "It brings an ache to the heart to see how reluctant some of the babies are to cut loose and play in the street. Play seems inextricably associated in their little minds with golf. No one, after waiting for an hour or two the healthy noise of children, can be satisfied in these allotted play streets can doubt their benefit to the little people of New York.

Play is the best constructive factor in child growth. Even letters and numbers will soon follow naturally in the path of the children's fruitful of physical trainers and moral teachers.—Child Betterment Bulletin.

CLEVER TRICK WITH CORKS

One Dick Apparently Disappears When in Reality It Is Glued to Bottom of the Table

Procure a pill box and a clean cork. Cut two disks from the cork to fit in the box, and fasten one of the disks centrally to the inside bottom of the pill box with glue.

To perform the trick, put the loose disk in with the one that is fast and place the box in shape from each onlookers. Pressed in. Spoolstra of Yonkers, N. Y., in Popular Mechanics. Close the box and shake the loose disk into the open and only one cork will be seen. Be careful not to show the inside of the other part with the cork that is fastened.

A Feminine Reason.

"Teacher, teacher! Willie and Ida are fighting like anything!"

"Why, Bessie, they are boy and girl little girl. Lean, to tell me."

"Ida teasing Willie because he said you only Hanny was gettin' licked."

"Two fairs for one fare"

Santa Fe

San Francisco and San Diego

It's an unspoiled wonderland, through which the Santa Fe runs. You see the Colorado Rockies. You see ruins of old cliff dwellings and present-day Indian pueblos in New Mexico and Arizona. You see the Petrified Forests, with its thousands of fossil trees. And that superlative of scenic wonders, the

Grand Canyon of Arizona

Of course, you are planning to join the thousands who will visit San Francisco and San Diego this year. Exposition at the exhibit halls is a collection of industrial and art objects that may never be duplicated. Up-to-date farming is shown by prominent land products.

The Santa Fe is the only transcontinental line having its own railroad all the way. It is the only line running both Exposition cities. It is the quickest as well as the best. To offer you the most perfect roadbed and track in America—and the finest solid steel equipment, specially vestibuled, powerful engines, luxurious cuisine and Fred Harvey dining-car service, are its strong points.

Write for a copy of our specially conducted California excursion will be organized. Be when you are ready, but, remember that one dollar for round trip will be the fare for every mile will have to delighted journeys. Ask your agent for a copy of "Two Fairs for One Fare." About our low fare round trip. Temporary tickets on our daily until November 30, 1915.

Send for two fascinating picture books of the Exposition and the Santa Fe route. Free book of 32 pages, in natural, tendernessly through the Southwest.

Free Books

W. J. Black, Passenger Traffic Manager
A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co.
1078 Railway Exchange, Chicago

Send me "Two Fairs for One Fare" and "Grand Canyon of Arizona" free.

Name.....

Address.....

Luxembourg.

Not much has been heard from Luxembourg since the commencement of the European war. Luxembourg, it will be remembered, took a position exactly opposite to that taken by Belgium when the German forces demanded a passage through its territory. It did not oppose, but permitted the march on the ground that the country would not suffer and that all losses would be repaid. It now appears that Luxembourg is suffering and suffering bitterly. It is in the same plight as Belgium and the other day made an appeal to the Belgian relief committee. It only shows that war is war and suffering is inevitable.—St. Louis Times.

Purifying Gas With Electricity.

Electricity is being employed with success at a Detroit coke oven for the purpose of removing tar from artificial gas in the purifying process, says Popular Mechanics. The gas is passed through a high tension field which is produced by a high-tension discharge of current from a dynamo at 20,000 volts, with the result that the tar forms in large drops, which are then easily separated. There are no high-tension leads exposed, since the ionizer contains the transformer.

Child's Play.

"Why are you moping there, Dick?"

"I've got no one to play with.

"Why, you and fetch Freddie next door."

"Oh, I played with him yesterday, and I don't suppose he's well enough to come out yet."

Appropriate Treatment.

"What shall we do with this story of the man who hanged himself?"

"Cut it down."

It is easy to fall in love with the figure of an heiress.

Hidden defects in Roofing

If your roofing is not guaranteed by a responsible manufacturer you run the risk of finding out its defects after it is on the roof. It costs no more to get a written guarantee with the best responsibility behind it.

Buy materials that bear the Certain-teed Roofing

Our leading product—is guaranteed 5 years. Over 1,000,000 satisfied users. Ask your dealer for Certain-teed Roofing, slate-surfaced shingles, building papers, wall board, roofing paint, jewelt cement, etc. Ask your dealer for products made by us. Quality dependable in price and we stand behind them.

General Roofing Manufacturing Co.
World's largest manufacturers of roofing
New York City, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Seattle, London, Hamburg, Sydney

Western Michigan

A Region that is Rapidly Developing as a Fruit Growing and General Farming Section

A BARGAIN DAY IN MARL.

The bargain day in marl, which was an event at Buckley in Wexford county a few weeks since, is attracting the interest of farmers throughout the western part of the state. The bargain day was the result of an arrangement between the Wexford county farm agent and Carl East, upon whose farm the county agent located a fine marl bed. Mr. East agreed that on a certain day he would give away all the marl that the farmers could haul. As the weather man was not consulted in this arrangement, the success of the enterprise from a numerical standpoint was no less great as it should have been. However, many of the farmers of the surrounding country came with their sleighs and sleds loaded full of the white marl and spread it over their fields of growing crops. The Buckley merchants and bankers turned out to help this enterprise along and acted as shovelers, filling the sleigh boxes as the different teams came up. The marl has been tested by the agricultural college and found to contain a higher percentage of calcium carbonate, which makes it very valuable for fertilizing purposes, particularly upon fields which have been cropped for a period of several years.

STATISTICS ON FARMING PROFITS

Ninety-eight farms in the vicinity of Fremont in Newaygo county were enrolled for the past season for the purpose of getting statistical information regarding the profits of farming. The Fremont section was selected for the investigation because it is a dairy region and because the farmers are prominent in the work of spring for growing and at the same time contrives to be prettily childish and very practical. It is meant to be developed in wash fabrics and is easy to launder.

Fifty-nine farms were visited and the results tabulated, but when the checking of the returns began, it was discovered that the returns were sufficiently complete for only 38. Of the total number 69 were strictly dairy farms, 7 of the farms were combined dairy and fruit farms, 7 were dairy farms with no other income than that brought in from the dairy product, 6 were dairy farms with potatoes for a cash crop; 11 were dairy farms with peaches for a cash crop, 8 were dairy farms with apples for a cash crop, and 10 were fruit farms with peaches and apples both. For the majority of these farms the conditions were ordinary, and the owner did a large share of his own work.

As a result of the tabulation of the figures several general conclusions have been reached. One of these is that the dairy farmer will less than $1,600 invested in live stock, tools, feed and supplies, does not make hired men's wages, because he is handicapped by insufficient equipment. The figures show that only those farms that had better than $1,600 in operating capital made returns sufficiently large so that the owner fared better than does the man he hires. It is therefore suggested that with the type of dairy farming which prevails around Fremont a young man trying to get started would do better to work for wages until he can even up with $1,600 worth of operating capital, and then he should rent a large farm until he can buy one that is worth not less than $7,500. The farm should be reached because the 49 farms with average valuation of less than $7,500 produced a labor income of less than $300 a year a farm. This is less than $1 a day, which is not as much as a man can earn working by the day.

In arriving at figures due allowance was made for increase in value of farm and increase in the stock and some other items which the year under consideration.

A table was prepared dealing with the average number of acres in a farm and the story that the table seems to tell is that the general proposition with a few cows must have a large number of crop acres or he will not prosper, and that the fruit farmer with a few cows does not need as many acres as does the general farmer. Seventeen farmers with an average acreage of almost ninety produced average labor income of $406. Twelve of these seventeen farms were without fruit, five were with fruit. The farms without fruit made the better showing, but not far from which could ninety acres and with fruit made a very much better showing than did the larger farms. It was also observed that seven farms with over fifty-nine acres in crops and without fruit made higher average returns than did the smaller farms with or without fruit.

The final summing up of the figures showed that 36 of the farms studied were unprofitable from a money standpoint and that the ten most profitable farms had an average acreage of over ninety. The important figures for the ten most profitable farms are as follows:

Average labor income for year	$ 1,015
Average acreage	96
Average investment	$12,682
Average crop receipts	$ 2,247
Average crop expenses	$ 1,034
Average crop acres per horse	21
Average crop acres per man	39
Average receipts per cow	$75
Average yield per acre of corn, bu.	40
Average yield per acre of potatoes, bu.	115
Average yield per acre oats, bu.	35

The most valuable conclusions reached by the investigators is summed up in the following words: "The beginning of the investigation was that quality as represented by yields per acre is nearly as good on the unprofitable farms as on the most profitable, and quality as represented by necessary crop acres per man, crop acres per horse, is very good on the most profitable farms and very good on the most profitable farms."

The investigators will be continued this year, but no allowance may be made for any exceptional conditions which may have prevailed in the regards weather conditions or markets.

SPRING CULTURE OF WHEAT

Harrowing With Drag Found to Be Beneficial Where Ground Is Compacted Hard From Rains.

Harrowing wheat in the spring is a practice that is receiving considerable attention of late years. Where the ground is compacted hard from heavy rains or is cloddy, followed by rather dry weather, the harrowing of wheat with a drag harrow is good practice.

So far as experiments have shown at the Missouri station, however, the harrowing of wheat is not always sufficiently beneficial to pay for the work, although where one harrows in clover seed at the same time the practice is usually a paying one.

Where the wheat is badly "heaved" by the use of a heavy roller in the early spring is a good practice. All depends, however, upon the extent of the "heaving."

Horses Eat Too Much Hay.

Many farm horses get more hay than they need. Farmers do not plan to keep their feed racks or manger full of hay all the time.

Sec. 2 System of Farming.

Animal husbandry belongs to every good system of farming.

LOW WORK-WAGON IS USEFUL

Vehicle With Wide Tire Wheels Is Farmers' Best Friend—Loading Made Quite Easy.

A low work-wagon with wide tire wheels is the farmer's best friend. It meets him half way when doing hard work. Making loading and unloading easy. The wheels go in wet weather or dry weather alike. They are especially valuable in mowing and harvest, also for hauling in and handling all kinds of hay, straw, and fodder, as well as for hauling grain to the market and coal and wood in fuel. One can haul more with a low wagon with gear by constitutes the manufacturer of wheels and trucks.

Work the Draft Stallion.

When you have a draft stallion you have to clean. If one of the larger breed, drive him or use him under the saddle at least three times a week. Two miles will be about the right distance.

HIGH STANDARD OF WRITING

Professor Pays a Tribute to Newspaper English Which Is on the Whole Deserved.

"I well remember the pleasure with which, as a young man, I heard my venerable and practical professor of rhetoric say that he supposed there was no work known to man more difficult than writing," said Prof. George H. Palmer, formerly of Harvard university. "Up to that time I had supposed its severities peculiar to myself." He goes on to recount the advantages which children of today enjoy over those of his own generation, and hopes that some of them will find the language he has used about the difficulty of writing extravagant. Then he says:

"Let me say, too, that since frequently has more to do with ease of writing than anything else, I count the newspaper most lucky because they are writing all the time, and I do not think so highly of their product as the present popular disparagement would seem to require. It is hasty work, undoubtedly, and bears the marks of haste. But in my judgment in no period of the English language has there been so high an average of sensible, vivacious and informing sentences written as appears in our daily press.

"With both good and evil results, the distinction between book literature and speech literature is breaking down. Everybody is writing, apparently in verse and prose; and if the higher graces of style do not often appear, neither on the other hand do the rudes awkwardnes and obscurities. A certain straightforward English is becoming established. A whole nation is learning the use of its mother tongue. Under such circumstances it is doubtly necessary that anyone who is conscious of freebleness in his command of English should promptly and earnestly begin the cultivation of it."

Hungry Man's Mistake.

Prof. Sigmund Freud, the eminent German scholar, has made a study of lapsus linguae, spoken and printed, and has embodied the result in his book, "Psychopathology," as an example of blundering speech, caused by subconscious cerebration, he gives the following:

A wealthy, but not very generous American host, invited his friends to an evening party. Everything went well until about midnight, when there was an intermission for supper. To the disappointment of many of the guests, there was no real supper; instead, they were regaled with this sandwiches and champagne.

"As it was during a presidential campaign, the conversation turned upon the different candidates, and as the discussion grew warmer, one of the guests, an ardent Republican, remarked to the host, 'You may say what you please about Roosevelt, but there is one thing he can always be relied upon to do: he always gives you a square deal.' He meant, of course, to say 'a square meal.' The assembled guests fell into a roar of laughter, to the great embarrassment both of the host and of the host."—Youth's Companion.

A Surgeon With "Sand."

The doctor expected that if I could let him have a couple of men to direct the wounded men who could walk to the hospital then back to the Chateau of St. Marguerite, where the ambulances, three miles to the front were.

He had been working at least forty-eight hours, without cessation, but refused to stop ministering to the wounded, although by now his work had been supplemented by the arrival of two infantry surgeons. One of the new medicos noticed that our surgeon was in no condition to be on his feet. A temperature of 103 degrees was the record of the thermometer. Examination presently revealed a bullet in and.

Under cross-examination our little doctor admitted he had been hit three days before.—A Captain of Royal Irish Dragoons in Collier's Weekly.

Americanisms.

Glancing over a farming article in an American paper, writes a correspondent of a London journal, I found myself up against the astounding word "Omo, half was nurse two cows." By degrees the things that seemed to stand in their heads came to a natural position, for I remembered that a mother is a cow sucking that "nurses," and not the nurse. This topsy-turvy is due to a kind of characteristic, one of the forbids such words as "sucking" or "suckling." But no man, whatever applies to the verb to feed." We feed a pig with acorns or a furnace with coke. Americans, invariably, feeds acorns to the pig and feeds coke to the furnace, which is really not good English.

When Sailors Were Petticoats.

Very few people realize that there were days when petticoats were worn by soldiers and sailors on board ships of war. In the days before the Royal marines were regularly established as a separate corps the foot regiments of the line used to take it in turns to serve as marines on shipboard. Petticoats were quite commonly worn in the navy in Nelson's time, having been in vogue before the days of Queen Elizabeth, and our soldiers, being suddenly called upon to do the work of sailors, naturally adopted their dress. Nothing is, no doubt, far handier and more convenient than a pair of breeches fitting, fringed and braided uniforms.

Extent of All the Russias.

Russia's extent may be gauged by the fact that Prussian Russia is in itself larger than the other 19 states of the continent taken together and when we include Asiatic Russia, western Russia is more than twice as large. The Russian empire comprises one-sixth of the total land area of the world.

It is four times the size of the continent of Europe, 42 times the size of France, nearly three times the size of the United States without Alaska and 70 times the size of the British isles. There are 175,000,000 Russians, and the Russian is the most thinly populated of the great countries.

Don't Forget!

An eminent physician lays down these simple rules for better health:

1.—Drink lots of water. 2.—Eat slowly. 3.—Chew your food well. 4.—Have plenty of chewing gum on hand. Use it shortly after meals and chew until the "full" feeling disappears

Be sure of the Perfect Gum in the Perfect Package—made clean, kept clean, sealed against all impurities:

WRIGLEY'S

The Wrigley Spearmen want to help you remember these beneficial, long-lasting aids to teeth, breath, appetite and digestion. So they have done all the old Mother Goose "stunts" to the "tune" of the new Wrigley jingles. Their book is 28-pages in four colors. It's free. Send for your copy today. Address

WM. WRIGLEY JR. CO.
1318 Kesner Building
Chicago

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT THE PERFECT GUM PACKED WITH PERFECT FLAVOR

UNITED PROFIT-SHARING COUPONS

WRIGLEY'S DOUBLEMINT DOUBLE STRENGTH PEPPERMINT

Save the Coupons!

Get the Premiums!

510

Good Logic.

"Ma," remonstrated Bobby, "when I was at grandma's she used to let me have two pieces of cake."

"Well, she ought not to have done so, Bobby," said his mother. "I think two pieces of cake are too much for little boys. The older you grow the more wisdom you will gain."

Bobby was silenced, but only for a moment.

"Well, ma," he said, "grandma is a good deal older than you are."

Contrary Signs.

"The wind is rising."

"That means falling weather."—Baltimore American.

It takes a nervous woman to demonstrate what nerve force really is.

IMMENSE QUANTITY OF WHEAT TIED UP

There Will Still, However, Be a Heavy Yield of the World's Normal Crop.

A grain expert who has been watching the grain markets and the world's grain fields for a number of years, says:—

"There is at the present time about two billion bushels of wheat, the production of the countries at war, that is, the amount of wheat, which is four billion bushels. One writer argues that greening that the warring nations produce a one-half crop in the coming year, a deficit of one billion bushels will still be shown. The three countries upon which the filling of the deficit of one billion bushels will rest are the United States, Canada, and Argentina. The combined output of these three countries in only 1,750,000,000, their exportable surplus would of course be much less, so it can easily be seen that the question is not one to be easily solved and it behooves all the above countries to conserve and husband whether as much as they possibly can, for when the war is over and trade begins to re-establish itself and the nations undergo a process of rehabilitation, the demand for all breadstuffs will be enormous.

During the three years following the declaration of peace the farmers of all neutral wheat-producing countries will have ample opportunity to market their wheat at good prices, and it may safely be assumed that the demand will be heavy. Canada has the unusual opportunity in that she has the natural environment for wheat production; she is under the protection of the British flag, and she will not be molested upon the water to any great extent; she can increase her acreage and slowly enhance her production. In other words, she can become a far greater wheat-producing country than she is at the present time.

If the summing-up as made by this expert be correct, it there not the very best reason for the continued effort that is being made by the Dominion of Canada to secure settlers on the productive vacant lands of the country? Not only Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

PEORIA WOMAN PRAISES REMEDY

Mrs. Tilla Conard Tells Remarkable Experience After Suffering for Months.

Mrs. Tilla Conard lives at 507 Moran Street, Peoria. She suffered from stomach trouble for months. Nothing seemed to relieve her. One day she visited a sister who resides in Bloomington, and upon urgent advice compelled to try one bottle of Mayo's Wonderful Remedy. This in her own words, is the story of her experience—read it:

"For a number of months I suffered terribly with pains in my stomach, would fill with gas and belch for an hour at a time. I had pains in my side which at times I thought would kill me. I was under the doctor's care for four months, but got no relief at all. One day while in Bloomington my sister persuaded me to take a bottle of your remedy. To say the results were wonderful would be putting it mildly. After the first dose my pain left me, my appetite improved, my skin became clear again and I felt like a new woman."

Mayo's Wonderful Remedy gives immediate results for sluggish liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much as whatever you like. No more distress after eating, pressure of gas in the stomach and stomach bloat. Get one bottle of your druggist now and try it on an absolute guarantee—if not satisfactory money will be returned.—Adv.

When an experienced parlor maid has spent her savings she can grab a brush and make some more dust.

The mantle of charity covers a lot of amateur theatrical performances.

Interested.

"My dear, you ought to pass up frivolous things and take an interest in deep subjects. Take history, for instance. Here is an interesting item. Gussie, the toast, set up a bat for the Swiss to salute."

The lady was a trifle interested.

"How was it trimmed?" she inquired.

YOUR OWN DRUGGIST WILL TELL YOU that Bonifay's Kidney Pills are a tonic for the kidneys and bladder. Price, 50 cents. Write for Booklet. Address, Bonifay's Kidney Pill Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Exception.

Doctor—Did you ever encounter a will that you couldn't break?

Lawyer—Yes, but only one.

Doctor—And that was—

Lawyer—My wife's.

Nightly coughing and torturing throat tickle quickly relieved by Dean's Menthol Cough Drops—25 at all druggists.

Just because a girl calls a fellow a wolf is no indication that she wants him to hold her hands.

6% AND SERVICE SAFETY FIRST

Your money cannot earn 6% with safety everywhere. But it can here. Mortgages in Western Canada yielding 6% are a safe investment. Interest payable annually. Principal and interest payable at maturity. Mortgages conservative circulation in the United States. Write for Booklet 16. Mortgages for sale in amounts to suit investors. Write for Booklet 16.

Western Canada Mortgage Co.
Head Office: Calgary, Alta.
Winnipeg, Man. Vancouver, B.C.
Toronto, Ont. Winnipeg, Man.
Agents Wanted in Unrepresented Districts.

PATENTS

Watson E. Coleman, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D. C. Books free. Highest references. Best results. Advertise in Patent Section.

W. N. U., CHICAGO, NO. 14-1915.

The Charlevoix Sentinel

Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.

WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR

Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9

SUBSCRIPTIONS:

Three Months	$ .40
Six Months	.75
One Year	1.50

Northern Michigan

Wm. Parks died of cancer at his home in this village last Sunday noon after a year's illness, aged 68. He leaves one son, Chas. Parks of Acme, Mrs. Van Biron of Montana, and Miss Nettie, at home to attend his death. The funeral was held at the house Wednesday afternoon at 2:30, with services conducted by Rev Tempert, and interment was in Fair View cemetery, beside his wife who died two years ago. Menominee Herald. Mr. Parks was the head of the Parks Lumber Co., who had a large mill and yards on the west side of the Arm at East Jordan.

Traverse City Record: Rev. J. W. Miller one of the oldest Methodist ministers in this region, died this morning at 10:00 at the home of his son, Edward B. Miller, who lives on his farm two miles south of this city. Mr Miller was eighty three years old and had been in continuous service for nearly fifty-seven years. Mr. Miller has always spent a portion of each winter at the Clark Memorial Home in Grand Rapids, and only three weeks ago returned home. There are left the son and one daughter, Mrs. Kate Woodbury, who is now a missionary in Shanghai, China. [Rev. Mr. Miller will be remembered by the older residents of Charlevoix as a pioneer preaching elder for this district.]

Traverse City Record: The outlook for big crops of cherries and peaches was never better in Northwestern Michigan than they are today. Many of the fruit growers who have been working among their trees say that never before have the fruit buds gone through the winter in better shape than they have this season and that only on a few occasions have the trees been more heavily laden with buds than now. Furthermore they point out that the lie still in the bays and inland lakes in this part of the state insures a late spring, which is exactly what is wanted. If the buds do not begin to swell until in May there is little chance of their being damaged by a late frost. Already the fruit growers have begun to look about for the extra help that will be needed to properly harvest the cherry crops. The cherry harvest lasts about five weeks beginning in July. Last year a multitude of women and children were kept busy. With the new orchards coming into bearing a larger number of pickers will be required. Students from the colleges and universities are being interested in cherry picking, also school teachers, as well as women and children from the cities near the orchards. If sufficient help cannot be secured otherwise, pickers will be recruited in the distant cities, it being pointed out to them that if they earn their living expenses in addition to living expenses that they will have had a delightful vacation in a most beautiful region and have paid their way.

Force of Drops of Water.

It seems almost incredible that so small a thing as a drop of rain should injure the propeller of an aeroplane. Yet such is the case. At so great a speed does the propeller revolve—1,200 revolutions a minute as a matter of fact—that a rain drop hits it with such enormous force as to chip a piece of the wood away. Some idea of the tremendous energy of the blow may be gathered from the fact that an avia tor who recently went through such an experience climbed with the aid of his propeller fretted as though it had been gnawed by rats. The rain drops had chipped pieces out of the blades and also bruised the aviator's face, owing to the force with which they hit against his nose.—London Spectator.

Antiquity of "A Regular Shindy."

Some modern phrases seem quite up to date, yet they are found in Shakespeare, but it is surprising when it is known. Many people are not aware that "What the dickens!" occurs in Shakespeare, but few still will be prepared to hear that the phrase "a regular shindy" is found in an author's note to a good school play, "Ralph Roister Doister" published in 1566. A writer quotes this note, which refers to the celebration of Mumpey Thursday, "Midnight servants are bidd to shrive, the lights are put out, and a regular shindy follows, men being beaten and wounded".—London Globe.

Fine Language.

As a rule the educated native of West Africa, like his fellow kinsman, loves high flown language. A clerk some time ago sent a report complaining that the behaviour of the police at his station often misfired. This is how he put it: "It is ridiculous to report that the drummer of the police station pounded the firmament of heaven to give explosive sound."—London Saturday Review.

Worst Place For It.

Small Johnny had been ill for several weeks, when one day he asked from a distance came to visit the family. "Why, Johnny," she exclaimed "have this cold gone? Have you been ship-shape?" "Ship-shape," replied the little fellow, "I had the brain fever and the measles and had the very worst place I could have had it."

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, April 12th. The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date—Mayor Nicholls presiding.

Aldermen present, Barney, Cartier, Carey and Shapton.

Absent, Priest and See.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The petition of Clarence Bartlett in the matter of connecting to the sewer on Mason Street was referred to committee on Streets, Sewers and Public Health.

The petition of R. C. Korth relative to the filling up of the holes on State street in front of R. C. Korth's property was referred to the committee on Streets, Sewers and Public Health.

Enter, Alderman Priest.

Moved by Alderman Shapton and seconded by Aseerman Cartier that petition as presented by Mrs Jas. McGeagh to construct a cement walk from Dixon avenue north on Nettleton street, block 13, lot 5, be granted and the city engineer be instructed to set the grade. Carried. Motion carried.

The city engineer recommended that the east side of the south side bridge approach be in good condition with the exception of a distance of about eight feet east of the center section of the approach at about three or four inches in depth to be resurfaced and opened to the public. He also recommends that the west side be completed and the resurfacing done after west side is completed.

Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Carey that the petition as presented by Mrs. C. E. Noble to rebuild the Fenton Hotel be granted.

Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Barney that the petition as presented by Ben Brown to build a porch on his store building be granted. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Priest and seconded by Alderman Cartier and Shapton that the clerk be instructed to answer all inquiries resulting from the advertising project of the committee of twenty-one. Motion carried.

The request of the Argo Milling Co. for electric power to be installed in the mill on River street was referred to Electric Light and Water Committee, to be reported on in week.

There being no further business the council adjourned.

P. E. Vandermade, City Clerk.

CHARACTER IMPERSONATION CONCERT

The funny concert at the Baptist church is postponed to Wednesday evening, April 21st. A Cafeteria Tea will be served in the church parlors from 5:30 to beginning of concert. Your supper will cost in proportion to what you eat. You are invited to come and for supper and the concert, and late have a good evening together.

Tickets, adults 25c; children 10 years and under 15c. If you expect to attend you had better buy early, you can't afford to miss it. Time, 7:30.

NEW AND STRIKING WAY OF TELLING THE PEOPLE TO DO TRADING AT HOME

An up-to-date merchant is sending out a card on which are printed these pat and pertinent questions:

"If you buy out of town, and we buy out of town and all our neighbors buy out of town, what will become of our town? Don't think about it!!!

That is a new and striking way of putting the everlasting truth that the people living in a city ought to patronize another as long as they can get the right goods at the right prices. Thus they help themselves by helping to build up the city in which they live and besides, do the kindly, neighboring thing.

DISSOLUTION OF COPARTNERSHIP

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership heretofore existing between R. B. Armstrong and D. F. Meech, under the name and style of Armstrong & Meech is hereby dissolved by mutual consent. All bills must be filed with the undersigned by May 1st, 1915.

R. B. Armstrong.

Your Child's Cough Is A Call For Help

Don't put off treating your Child's Cough. It not only keeps them strength but often leads to more serious ailments. Why risk? You don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery is just the remedy your child needs. It is made with soothing, healing and antiseptic balsams. It quickly check and loosens and soothe your child's cough away. No odds how bad the cough or how long standing, Dr. King's new Discovery will stop it. 25c and $1.00. Just get a bottle from your Druggist and try it.

The Wedding

"This poor girl was simply sold to a rich blackguard."

"Oh, you're mistaken. I was there and saw her father give her away."—Baltimore American.

Few persons live today, but are preparing to do so tomorrow.—Disdrot.

Beaver Island News

Kathelin McCan of Big Rapids is home on a visit.

Geo. Williams is in the Feed and Butcher business.

Peterson of the Petoskey Grocery House called on the trade last week.

Daniel D. Gallagher of Petoskey is visiting his parents.

Anthony Greene went west.

Frank O. Gallagher who went to Big Rapids several weeks ago returned on the Tuesday boat.

W. J. Gallagher went to Charlevoix on business returning Tuesday.

A. A. Swinton of Charlevoix called on our merchants last week.

Lawrence Malloy has opened his West Market.

Mrs. John P. Malloy went to Grand Rapids, visiting her daughter Lizzie who is very sick.

J. Griffith of the Swift Meat Co. called on the trade last week.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gallagher a son.

Owen F. McCauley is at Petoskey at the Sevidge taking treatments. Last report he was doing fine.

Str Beaver made two trips last week A. H. Tyner and wife and L. H. K of Squaw Island arrived on the Tuesday boat.

E. Larson and son went to Charlevoix on business Monday.

Herman Allers went to Charlevoix on business.

Charles Edgar of Monitor Oil Co. of Cleveland called on the merchants this week.

John Chesney of Traverse City called on the merchants this week.

Mrs. J. Priest of South Haven is visiting her father, C. C. Allen.

Daniel Boyle (Turner) went to Charlevoix Tuesday on business.

NOTICE

The undersigned merchants of Charlevoix will discontinue the giving of Premiums, Trading Stamps, or gifts of any kind whatsoever on and after May 15th, 1915.

Stamp books, coupons or premium cards will be redeemed on or before June 15th, 1915.

C. Dantes & Son,	Martin Hitek
M. A. Lewman & Co.	J. L. Crane
Benjamin Rowen	H. Bedford
S. M. Sloe & Sons	A. E. Mason
Mrs. B. W. Miller.

(First publication April 15th.)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a mortgage made by Charles H. Bennett to Joseph W. McCready, dated December 19th, 1911, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix County, Mich., on the 26th day of December, 1911, in Liber 50 of mortgages on page 31, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date hereof the sum of Twenty-Six Hundred Dollars ($2,600.00) and no proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the principal of said mortgage, or any part thereof, and the power of sale in said mortgage having become operative by reason of said default, and the said mortgage being held by the undersigned by assignment, and the undersigned having elected to declare the whole of said mortgage due and payable, and the undersigned having elected to foreclose the said mortgage by sale of the premises therein described, and there being now due on said mortgage and note secured thereby the sum of Twenty-Six Hundred Dollars (2,600.00) and no proceedings at law or in equity have been instituted to recover the said debt, or any part thereof, and the said mortgage being held by the undersigned for the purpose of foreclosure

CONNECTING THE JOBLESS MAN WITH THE MANLESS JOB

By EDWARD B. CLARK

STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

THOMAS W. CLINSCHOW

T. V. POWDERLY AND THOMAS W. DUGETT

NEW DEAL today is engaged in the beneficent work of securing employment for his unemployed citizens and neighbors, whether native or foreign born. Uncle Sam's workers in chief at the problem of connecting the jobless man with the manless job are William B. Wilson, secretary of the department of labor; Anthony Caminetti, the commissioner general of immigration, and T. V. Powderly, chief of the division of information of the immigration bureau.

Nobody knows definitely how many unemployed men and women there are in the United States today. One thing, however, is known definitely, that the number probably is not as great nor anything like as great in proportion to the population as it has been at times in the past. There are enough of the unemployed, however, to make the problem a serious one, but there seems to be a belief on the part of government officials that the endeavor of the federal government to help men and women to work steadily will sap the strength of the idleness and at times actually discouraging numerous unemployed.

The division of information of the bureau of immigration not only is engaged in the work of promoting the beneficial distribution of aliens admitted to the United States, but under the general power of the law is directing the distribution of residents and citizens of the United States who wish to avail themselves of opportunities for labor afforded through its instrumentality.

Recently the post office department and the department of agriculture have entered into a cooperative arrangement with the department of labor in aid of the plan "for the employment and distribution of laborers in the United States; the former through its postmasters, officers in charge of branch post offices and rural carriers, and the latter through its field and other services throughout the United States."

Every officer of the department of agriculture, no matter where he is located, is charged with the duty of keeping Washington officials informed concerning the necessity for workers in the locality in which he resides. Every farmer in the United States through the post office department by this time has been, or soon will be, furnished with application blanks upon which he can state any need which he has of farm laborers or of help of any description. These blanks filled in and forwarded will do the service for which they are intended—the connection of some competent man with work of the kind which he seeks.

The work which is being done in connection with farm labor is, of course, only one part of the service which the department of labor through its division of information is performing. Manufacturers and employers of labor of all kinds are furnished with blanks similar to those sent to the farmers, except, of course, that they are adjusted to meet other kinds of working needs. The correspondence of the department is tremendous and the work of giving men work is going forward rapidly.

Before going into the details of the mechanism of the system by which natives, sometimes residents, and recently arrived immigrants are directed to fields of employment, something should be said about the development of this great governmental plan to provide work for the workless. For a quarter of a century William B. Wilson, now secretary of President Wilson's cabinet as the head of the department of labor, has been deeply interested, concerned, perhaps, were a better word, in the solution of the problem of bringing the necessary work of information between the man seeking work and the man seeking workmen.

For just as long and perhaps a longer period T. V. Powderly, the chief of the division of information, has been interested in the same problem. Mr. Powderly has been connected with the government service for some years and has developed a system of getting the work and the workless worker together until today the post office department and the department of agriculture are cooperating with the department of labor in a broad and comprehensive plan to reduce the evil of unemployment to a minimum which might be called serious.

Perhaps Mr. Powderly will enter no objection if one tells a story of how he first became interested to a heart and mind feeling pitiful in place to get work for the workless. To me the story is interesting one and it seems that it ought to be to others.

In the year 1873 T. V. Powderly, a machinist by trade, lost his eyesight. For three months he sat in darkness, and being unable to work he lost his job. His stamina came back and he started on a tramp looking for work. He was a tramp seeking work, not a tramp seeking handouts. He left the United States and went into Canada. He found no work. On the eve of New Year's day, 1873, he found himself in St. Thomas, Ont., with no money in his pocket, no food in his stomach and no place to sleep. A watchman allowed him to sleep in the freighthouse of a depot on a bed made of baggage. From there Powderly walked to Buffalo seeking work. There a good-hearted Dutchman gave him breakfast, the first one he had had for some days. All this time the tramper was asking himself why there was not some means of letting him know where there was work. In asking himself this he was charging his heart and mind with a purpose in life. The same purpose which Secretary Wilson of the department of labor feels in his own mind and heart a quarter of century ago.

"Tramp" Powderly reached one town where there were some machine shops. He applied for work and there were no vacancies. He left. Shortly afterward he learned that at another machine shop they had needed men. If he had known it he could have secured work at his trade and have been clothed, well fed and happy. He had no means of knowing except by street application that at this place there was work.

Today as a result of study of systems and of the development of ideas formulated through the years, a workless man can go to any post office, or soon will be able so to do, in the United States and there learn from the government officials of the employment possibilities in the neighborhood. Uncle Sam is using his postmasters as a means of getting the willing worker to the waiting job.

There are many factors in this problem of unemployment. It must be known that there are tramps and tramps. There is the man who is looking for work and who seeks it and has no tramp to do it, and then there is the man who has lost his work and who becomes discouraged and apparently does not care whether or not he ever finds work or not. The first man has not lost his self-respect and the second man has either lost it or has come pretty close to losing it. It is to the second class of tramps that I refer in this story.

Uncle Sam is using his postmasters as a means of getting the willing worker to the waiting job.

T. V. POWDERLY AT HIS DESK

APPLICANTS FOR WORK AT DISTRIBUTION WAGNER BUREAU OF IMMIGRATION

THE DISTRIBUTION ZONES AND THEIR INFORMATION CENTERS

How We Know That Christ Rose From the Dead

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D., Dean of Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? (I Corinthians 15:12.)

At this season of the year our thoughts are turned more than usual to the resurrection of Jesus. This is the beginning of the arch of Christianity and the basis of our own hope of life beyond the grave. Therefore it is of the first importance to be sure about it. We ought to have a firm foundation for our faith, for which reason we are called upon to answer, the question, How do we know that Jesus Christ arose from the dead?

Historical Monuments.

Antiquarians have given the strongest evidence of an event of early times in a historical monument erected to establish it. Take our Fourth of July—what is an enduring proof it is of the Declaration of Independence put forth by our political fathers on that memorable Charter of our nation! We trace the history of this day from decade to decade until we reach the point when it first came into being. What then gave it its origin? The explanation shall be given for its observance at that time? There must be some reason adequate to the effect, and we find it in that action of the continental congress.

Just so we have the first day of the week which has been an era of rest and worship. All the people do not keep this day, but many do, who are called Christians. They are found in all nations and among all tongues. Slaves or they have been for years for nearly 2,000 years, and yet there was a time when it began to be. What originated it, what explains its coming into being? There must be a cause adequate for such an effect, and it is found in the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead on that day. This proof is all the stronger when we recall that the first Christians were Jews, and that until that time they had always kept the seventh day of the week, and not the first. It must have been a revolutionary event indeed to produce a change like this.

The Testimony of Eye-Witnesses.

But going further back, what ground had our Christian fathers for believing that Jesus Christ arose from the dead on that day? To mention only a single fact, they had the testimony of eye-witnesses, mentioned by Paul in I Corinthians 15:5-8. One eyewitness might be mistaken, or two or three, but not five hundred at a time! And not when you remember that some of them were seen at one and furthermore the post-resurrection appearance of Jesus Christ was arranged for he remained upon the earth for six weeks. And not only were they persons of good character, but they were expert witnesses. He walked and talked with them, ate and drank with them. And he afforded them every evidence not only of his sense of sight and sound, but of touch, too. Thomas was directed to thrust his hand into the wound in the side of Jesus, and told to "be not faithless, but believing." The man who rejects such testimony is incapable of accepting any similar testimony to any spiritual truth.

Personal Experience.

And yet there are those who try believes on the Lord Jesus Christ, has evidence in his own heart and experience, and than either of those named. He has in his own consciousness, if he himself is risen from the dead, not as an abstract proposition, but in a spiritual experience. He has entered into the life of an into the life of righteousness. He knows this to be a fact, and it is so great a marvel in his experience that the physical resurrection is for him almost overwhelmed from the region of uncertainty or doubt.

But how did this resurrection take place in his case? Simply by believing in the testimony of God concerning the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. This is a great mystery. I do not think I shall ever know what God has said about his son who died for our sins and rose again for our justification, that moment he is born again, he is a new man, in a new world, with a new hope in his heart. You do not need to offer him further proof of the reality of those who are dead, he carries with him all the proof he requires in his own soul.

Once I was blind, but now I can see.
The light of the world is Jesus.

No power on effect this change in a man but God; and if God effects it when a man believes, that is all the evidence needed that Christ has died and rose again. Why not try it for yourself? Why not trust Christ the surrender of your will to God, but it is worth more than everything else you have in this world.

Tested Death for Every Man.

We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man.—Hebrews 2:9.

We have more to do today than to make a living; we have to make life. Let us not spoil the one in seeking to gain the other.—J. H. Jowett.

So long as mankind lists there will be a variety in religion. It is not for us to quarrel with this, nor is it for us to wish for a change. Let us be content with variety in diversity.—Lord Norton.

FINDS WILL; GETS $14,000

Engineer Overwhelmed When He Opens Box and Finds Fortune Left by Friend.

A windfall, as welcome as it was unexpected, came to Harvey A. Acker, a locomotive engineer on the Reading railway, living at Allentown, Pa., with the finding of the will of Radley Mohr, retired cigarmaker and widely known sportsman, who died at the age of fifty-six.

Mohr for years, living very modest, by, hoarded with Acker, who was one of his cronies, the pair often going out together for a day with rod or gun. Mr. Mohr for several years, on account of failing health, did nothing but read and fish.

It was not known or supposed that he had any fortune. While cleaning up his effects the morning after the funeral Mrs. Acker came across a document which indicated it was Mohr's will. She showed it to Acker, who found he was the sole beneficiary of the estate, and Arthur J. D. Koenig, clerk of the orphans' court of Lehigh county, was named executor.

The will, besides bequeathing to Acker a small property, said he should have the contents of a safe deposit box in one of the banks, and if he told him where to find the key and how to open the box. He called on Koenig and the two did as directed in the will. Their eyes opened in astonishment when they found $14,000 in clean new bills and gold.

Reason of His Faith.

"Brudders and sistahs," began Jim Dinger, the gentleman who received a revival in Koenzer chapel, "I rises to testify. I has done been snatched fum the slough o' sin and de assaputs o' Satan's wiles. I has been waltzed fo de losse mary."

"Halleluyah! Bless de Lawd!" shouted a sister.

"Yas, broddren and sistahs, de Lawd has done pulled me outen de jaws of late dat I askin' ma'cy see do ports—I mean, I ask, I enough, does as well jine de church as to stay outside. Muh days o' usefulness is ovah, sho'nuf."—Kansas City Star.

PREMATURE BALDNESS

Due to Dandruff and Irritation, Prevents Hair Growth.

The Soap to cleanse and purify, the Ointment to soothe and heal. Daily shampoos with Cuticura Soap and occasional applications of Cuticura Ointment gently rubbed into the scalp will do much to promote hair growing conditions.

Sample each free by mail with Book. Address postcard, Cuticura, Dept. XT, Boston. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Oriental Water Bottles.

Hundreds of the children of olden time in Palestine, has always been famous for its Oriental water bottles, made of goat's skins. Here are to be found the tanneries, where these receptacles are turned out by the thousands. Lying upon the ground in rows may be seen hundreds of raw skins ready for the tanners. Each skin is inflated, either with water or with air, so that the tanyer may have a good, round, smooth skin. The majority of the skins used come from wild goats, but some tame ones are also received from the Lebanon range, which are brought in by the camel caravans and are purchased by the tanneries and turned into bottles. They undergo many processes and a tanner will spend a week upon a single skin before it is rendered waterlight and serviceable. From Hebron these old "bottles" are sent to all parts of the East, thousands going down into Egypt and the Sudan every year. They are also used as rafts. A number of inflated skins are attached to a light wooden frame, which then not only readily floats, but is capable of carrying quite a heavy load. Such rafts are to be seen on the rivers of Syria and also on the Euphrates and Tigris.—Birmingham Post.

The Similarity.

"Jima says his wife's tongue goes as fast as an express."

"Yes, and it's always on the rail."

From the Chestnut Tree.

"What kind of monkeys grow on trees?"

"Gray-apes, you little rascal, you!"

It is possible to entertain an angel unawares, but you can't entertain a bore that way.

FOR SALE—Two Cows, Fresh Cows and Springers. Also Calves. Inquire of Mrs. Ed. Gaskill, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—Two Cows, Fresh Cows and Springers. Also Calves. Inquire of Mrs. Ed. Gaskill, Charlevoix.

For Identification Purposes Only.

"Gentlemen," began the speaker, thus putting himself on rapport with his auditors, flattering their self-esteem, though committing the crime of starting a pale, white lie.

"Gentlemen," he repeated, thus tubbing it in, "I desire to call your kind attention to the four poems I am about to recite."

A sob rose from each of these poems," announced the speaker, "is mine. The other three are by Longfellow."

With an audible sigh of relief, the audience settled back, prepared to endure the worst.

SUFFERED FOR FOUR YEARS.

Mr. J. M. Sinclair of Olivehill, Tenn., writes: "I strained my back, which weakened my kidneys and caused an awful bad backache and inflammation of the bladder. Later I became so much worse that I had to quit work. I suffered for four years and spent a lot of money for medicine. The doctor's medicine didn't help me, so I decided to try Dodds Kidney Pills, and I cannot say enough to express my relief and thankfulness as they cured me. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of Complaint."

Mr. J. M. Sinclair.

Dodds Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodds Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Dodds Dyspepsia Tablets for Indigestion have been proved.—Adv.

GOT THE MESSAGE TWISTED

Jenkins Believed in Brevity, and All That Kept Him Busy Was a Bad Awakening.

Jenkins' wife was away on a visit. Now, Jenkins is a very busy man. He believed not in lengthy communications. In letter-writing, Jenkins was the soul of brevity.

He loved his wife devotedly, enjoyed her company, liked her, and always devoured her brief letters with the keen appetite of an enthusiastic lover.

But to wade through a long, drawn-out letter of 16 pages was to him an hour's waste of time and exertion.

So one day his heart danced with delight at the receipt of the following from her in perfect gem of a thing—as short and sweet—so to the point:

"M. d. L.

"I h. a. f. t. n. a. n. o. t. W. w. f.

"Mary."

He read it:

"My darling love:

"I haven't slept, dearest, for thinking night after night of thee. With much faith.

"Mary."

He should have read it thus:

"Money down low. I bought silk dress for 10 shillings at Stewart's on sale. Write.

"Mary."

Complimentary.

Master of the House (to complaining guest)—Well, what's the matter? Aren't you tired of those continental kitchen squabs?

Servant—Well, sir, 'ow would you like to be called a addle headed old idiot, supposin' you wasn't one, sir?

Explicit.

"Do you say you've known this man all his life?" asked the lawyer.

"No," returned the careful witness. "I've just known him up to now. If he's living, after you get gone through with him, I'll say I knowed him all his life."

The Extreme.

"This fee business is a nuisance. You have to give one everything to get the least service."

"I know it. Even if you want to speak politely to a lady, you have to tip your hat."

Preposterous.

"The poor fellow was simply driven to his grave."

"Well, why not? You wouldn't compel a dead man to walk there, would you?"

Business Coming.

Bill—Hell have a lot of business after the European war is over.

Jill—Why, what's his business?

"He's a magnaker."

"Buy the Goods—
Not the Package"

Advises Hon. Geo. W. Perkins, Chairman of New York's Food Committee.

And it's good advice! Select the food that contains the greatest nutrition for the least money; whether in ornately colored package or in a plain carton.

The Grape-Nuts package isn't pretty—no money is wasted upon ornament—but it's a air-tight and germ-proof, to protect the food and keep it in perfect condition.

Grape-Nuts
FOOD

made of selected wheat and malted barley, is delicious, concentrated, easily digested, and contains, pound for pound, more nutrition than beef—and costs less.

"There's a Reason" for Grape-Nuts

—sold by Grocers everywhere.

The Threatening Star

By EDGAR PRENTISS

(Copyright, 1916, by W. G. Chapman.)

"If I could get only a paltry ten thousand dollars, dear, I could save your life," signed John Nagent to his young wife, Mary. She was dying of tuberculosis—literally starving to death in the midst of plenty. For Hagan, a poor clerk in one of the gigantic clothing factories, earned only three thousand a year. It would be years before he would be raised to four thousand, and his wife needed nourishing food. A rare malady, which science had not succeeded in alleviating, was sapping her strength, and only comfort—comfort such as was wholly beyond his reach—could stave it off until Nature triumphed.

All over the land the cry of discontent was rising. Desperate men were planning to seize the reins of government. At Philadelphia, one of the suburbs of New York, a hundred thousand rioters had been sent to their death. Men cursed the rich. But their curses availed nothing.

It was then that Professor Joram of the Washington observatory announced the approaching end of the world.

A brilliant star, five thousand times larger than the sun, had set its course for the earth. Nothing could save the world, said Professor Joram. He finished these words after making an application for a further grant of salary, to take effect on the first day of the succeeding January. The directors refused his application, on the ground that since the world is to end within a few months, it would be cheaper to conserve itself alive with the insurance. But some time later the directors decided to grant the request, on the ground that the world would rise up with a vengeance and demand the head of the man who had caused the panic.

Following which he laid in his winter coal supply.

It was not that the professor did not believe in the celestial visitor. Nothing could be more certain, said the astronomers agreed, than that the earth must inevitably be consumed. But the human mind cannot clearly adjust itself

The crowds stood staring up at Orion nightly. They measured it; they looked through telescopes to see "the man in Orion." Mean while Mary Hagan was fading swiftly. It was a question whether she would live to see the end of all things. And her husband, desperate, pondered a few hundred increase was voiced for the same reason that had been given to Professor Joram. He was also, working overtime, because the factory was supplying large quantities of heavy overcoats for the forthcoming winter.

"John, dear," said his wife, "have you noticed that the human mind refuses to believe what the professor says? Do you think, dear, that perhaps the mind of the people may be more truly guided by the instinct than the minds of the savants? I feel that the instinct will never happen."

"It must happen, said John. "It must. There is no possible escape."

"I feel it, I know it, John," said Mary die before that terror comes upon us."

Terror reigned unmistakably in September. The monster Orion was now as large as the moon, and it was only a few thousand million miles away. The crowds stood silent. It began to be noticed that the gradually increasing warmth had rendered desperate, applied for a raise of salary again. This time he got it. But their curses availed nothing.

It was then that Professor Joram of the Washington observatory announced the approaching end of the world.

Just then he saw a large black cat, who saw him at the same time. He looked very angry and hunched his back but thought it was not afraid and walked toward him. When the other cat, whose name was Toby, saw that he was afraid, he grew in size and his angry manner and asked, "Where did you come from?"

"I want to know first," answered Snowball, "where I am."

"You are on a ship," answered Toby.

"So this is a ship," said Snowball, "where is this ship? When I came aboard it was a house."

"Aboard, you mean," corrected Toby.

"Well, when I came aboard there were buildings on one side and my master's team was there, too, and now all I can see is water."

"Of course," said Toby. "We are sailing away now."

"How long shall we sail?" asked Snowball.

"Two weeks. If we have good weather. If it is rough, we will be gone longer."

"Three weeks?" gasped Snowball. "I cannot be gone as long as that; must get right off."

"You'll have to swim a long way," said Toby. "Can you swim far enough?"

"I don't know how far I want to go," said poor Snowball, turning on his back.

"You are seasick," said Toby. "You will be all right in a few days."

"I'll be dead in a few days," said Snowball. "Oh, oh, oh, oh!"

"Well, I'll tell you what I'm going to do," said Toby. "I'll make you stay on board."

"Thanks," said Snowball, "I'm very much obliged. Will you please tell me what I can do to master or be with my master?"

"Why, you can't do that," said Toby. "You will be eating fish and—"

"Don't, don't," said Snowball, "I never want to even think of anything to eat again, and rats—Oh—I never want to see another rat."

The fourth day out Snowball recovered and was walking on the deck with Toby when the captain saw him.

"Where did we pick up this new sailor?" he asked. "He looks sick, too." He looked at Snowball's collar. "I know who you are," he said. "You belong to the vegetable man in the city. I wonder how you came aboard this ship?" Snowball rubbed against him in the most friendly manner and her mouse lost trench. "What are these queer little birds?" asked Snowball one day. "They fly close to the water."

"Those are not birds," said Toby; "they are flying fish."

"I didn't know that fish could fly," said Snowball.

"Yes," said Toby, "and sometimes they come on board and we eat them."

"I wish they would now," said Snowball. "I am tired of chasing rats and looking at the water, although the water is very pretty. It is so blue. I do not see any gold in it; you told me I would see the golden Caribbean."

"That is what they call it," said Toby, "but I never saw any gold, either."

"I'll be glad when I get on land," said Snowball.

"You'll be there tomorrow," said Toby.

The next morning Snowball was up bright and early, for he did not wish to miss anything.

"Isn't this a pretty place?" asked Toby.

"What are those queer little buildings?" asked Snowball.

"Houses," said Toby; "the people here do not live in tall houses."

"This place looks like a florist's shop," said Snowball.

The Monster Was Now Three Times as Large as the Sun.

"Yes, the trees and flowers are prettier here than in your country. I like it better, too."

"Do you like your home?" asked Snowball.

"Oh, no," said Toby. "I live on the ship; I never go on land."

"Never go on land?" said Snowball, jump up to know what you mean. I am going to get off the ship and look around."

"You had better stay here," said Toby; "this is a queer country." But Snowball jumped off as soon as the ship was at the wharf.

The little colored boys around the wharf saw him and chased him, and Snowball ran until he came to a tree, which he started to climb, but he was the strangest looking long head with bright eyes and he did not stop a second. The boys had gone back to the ship to dive for pennies, and Snowball thought of Toby's warning and scampered toward the ship, but just before he reached the wharf he saw another queer-looking creature with more than two eyes. Snowball had not feel sure how many he saw—and more legs than he could see. Snowball felt sure, and the creature could run faster than Snowball ever saw anything move in all his life."

"I do not like this country," he said; "home is good enough for me."

Toby was waiting for him.

"How do you like it?" he asked.

"Not so well as my country," said Snowball. "And what very be sure mers they have here!" he said, looking for a shady place in which to rest.

"I do like this all the time," Toby told him; "they never have winter here."

"No snow?" asked Snowball.

"No," said Toby; "it is always nice and warm here."

"I like the snow," said Snowball; "this is, I like to see it," he said, thinking of his master, who, when he was lost in the snowstorm. They had searched for him for days in the woods. This is fine weather." Toby said nothing. The cat was sleeping and he thought it was a very long bed or tail, I did not stop to see; it was twisted around the tree, and I couldn't see where its tail began; it looked like a long and very long tail."

"Oh, you was a serpent!" cried Toby in alarm. "He would have eaten you if you had gone up that tree."

"I wouldn't care to live so you do," said Snowball one day when they were nearly home.

"Why not?" asked Toby.

"Because I would be dead," said Snowball, "but look at the water."

"I wouldn't care to live on land," said Toby; "there are too many dogs."

"Why, Toby, I'm afraid of dogs," said Snowball.

"I don't think I should care to fight," said Toby. "You must get all scarred and hurt."

"Didn't you ever fight?" asked Snowball, looking at Toby with disdain.

"No," replied Toby.

"You certainly have missed a lot, living on ship," said Snowball.

"Oh! I do not think so," said Toby. "I have good things to eat, and I sleep all day and nobody bothers me," he said. The captain gives a dinner tonight, and I think he expects me to cook a flying fish for you and me. I brought some back for the dinner, and you can tell the cats on land you have eaten fish with wings."

"I'm very much obliged to the captain," said Snowball, "and I do not want you to think I do not enjoy your company, for you have been most entertaining and sociable, and I'm very sorry to leave you. I wish you would go home with me and see Puff and Kit."

"I'd like to very much," said Toby. "Maybe I can some day."

"Yes, the trees and flowers are prettier here than in your country. I like it better, too."

"Do you like your home?" asked Snowball.

"Oh, no," said Toby. "I live on the ship; I never go on land."

"Never go on land?" said Snowball, jump up to know what you mean. I am going to get off the ship and look around."

"You had better stay here," said Toby; "this is a queer country." But Snowball jumped off as soon as the ship was at the wharf.

The little colored boys around the wharf saw him and chased him, and Snowball ran until he came to a tree, which he started to climb, but he was the strangest looking long head with bright eyes and he did not stop a second. The boys had gone back to the ship to dive for pennies, and Snowball thought of Toby's warning and scampered toward the ship, but just before he reached the wharf he saw another queer-looking creature with more than two eyes. Snowball did

DOVE

We Sell DOVE

TRADE MARK

Under-muslins

UNDER-MUSLINS

Graceful in cut, dainty, carefully made, attractively trimmed. "Dove" Under-muslins look the real quality they are. Buy this known make.

Look For the "DOVE"

Let the Dove trade mark prove your surety of an unfailing money's-worth whenever you buy underunderwear. You will find it as wise to select or be garments by name as you do when you insist on a certain make of glove—corset—or face-cream.

"Dove" Undermuslins are made in the cleanest of factories, by the better class of labor. We believe they are more than equal their values in style, materials, fit, making.

You will love the "DOVE"

The Dove label is on all styles of night gowns, combinations, underskirts, corset covers, drawers, chemises, envelopes, Princess slips, etc.

Go to --- LEVINSON'S --- Get the Habit

If you want anything that is nice for your table in the line of Groceries, Butter, Eggs, Vegetables, Fruit, Poultry or anything that is in season, call us up or come to our store. We would prefer to have you come.

SPECIALS FOR SATURDAY

In Our Meat Department:

Fancy Picnic Hams, per lb.	10½c
Choice Skinned Hams, half or whole, lb.	15c
Choice Bacon, strip or half lb.	16c
Rib, Boiling Beef or Ribs of Beef, lb.	10c
Beef Roast Shoulder	11c
Beef Boiling, Shoulder	11c
Beef Steik, Shoulder	12½c

SALTED PEANUTS 10c. lb.

Quality, Service and Honest Prices our Motto—We give Green Stamps.

C. DANTO & SON.

212 Bridge St. - - Phone No. 12 Phone No. 69

Watch our Windows For Display and Prices.

We Want Live Chickens and Veal

Yes Mother, You Look Fine

Electric Bitters simply brought the bloom of health to your cheeks.

Electric Bitters will do it every time. Increase your appetite, regulate your bowels, restore your strength and improve your complexion.

Weak, nervous, heavy, winter-we need a tonic and blood purifier. We can't expect good health if waste and impurities, which should be thrown out of the system, remain in the blood to poison and make sick. Nature needs help to throw out these impurities. Electric Bitters is a thoroughly tested medicine that will do the same for you.

Do your part! Take a few doses of Electric Bitters. It will give you vim and energy, bring back the spring of youth, make you eat, sleep and work right your work.

Go to your druggist and get a small bottle of Electric Bitters and start the treatment right now.

Ellis Pool of Depew, Okla., writes: "Electric Bitters cured me from a bed of sickness and suffering and has done me a world of good. I was every ailing woman could use this excellent remedy and feel as I did, just how it is." As it has helped thousands of others, it will do well to all who need it.

Guaranteed or money back. Only 50c at all druggists.

H. E. BUCKLEN & CO. PHILADELPHIA, ST. LOUIS.

Love and Brains Lost.

Gift friends love one another. One day two of them met.

"Fred didn't blow his brains out because you failed him the other night, said friend No. 1. "He came over and proposed to me."

"Did he?" replied friend No. 2. "Then he must have got rid of them in some other way."—Chicago News.

Master and Vassal.

"Yes, the count is very proud of his wife."

"Then why does he always preside here this dinner?"

"So everybody will know she's his wife."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Naturally.

"Where did you pass your honeymoon?"

"Why, with my wife."—Life.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

Trade Marks Designs, Copyrights &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American, A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York. Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

A Correspondent.

"Have you any letters for me?" asked the man who had lived in the forties when he entered the postoffice in some southern village.

"Jest a minute, Colonel Henry Lane. I reckon I've got somethin' around here that's addressed to a woman and division of sympathies. Hold on, Colonel, mebbe I can find it."

Where He Learned Juggling.

Rankin—Do you know Professor Tombump, the great juggler?

Plunkin—I should say so. We were raised together.

"How in the world did he ever learn all of those wonderful stunts?"

"He started to earn his living as a photographer, and he learned all of those tricks while trying to arrange the babies' heads so their faces looks."—Youngstown Telegram.

Financial Strabismus.

"I'm afraid our new treasurer will ruin the concern," remarked the head of the trust.

"What he doing?"

"Why, he talks of paying our debts instead of refunding them."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Lisle Shanahan, Attorney at Law. Office in County Bank Bldg.

BET WAR WILL END BY SEPT. 1

Odds in London Ten to One on Peace Before Dec. 1.

BIG SUPPLY OF AMMUNITION

British Expert Thinks That the Blow That Can Kill the Most Men Will Be in the End—Asserts That Germany Has a Sufficient Supply of Food to Last Year.

London.—There is probably no question asked more frequently just now than: "When do you think the war will end?" Opinions differ widely, as to our national view there is so little real information to go upon. Betting in the city is quoted as being, that the war will end:

Before May 1, 1915—3 to 1 against.
Before June 1, 1915—2 to 1 against.
Before Sept. 1, 1915—even.
Before Dec. 1, 1915—10 to 1 on.
Before March 1, 1916—15 to 1 on.

This certainly indicates a more optimistic feeling than anything said by ministers and other important authorities would seem to justify, though all of these are careful not to commit themselves to anything definite.

Generally speaking, the highly placed authorities are grave in tone, and preparations of all kinds are going on with increasing vigor. Lord Southwark announced at the annual meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce that he was authorized by Lord Kitchener to say that since the beginning of the war we have increased the output of our munitions of war three fold, and when it was before, he added that under the lift we were discovering in the bowels of Britain hopes and expected to get a great accession of labor which would enable us shortly ourselves to increase the supplies.

Statements like this and Asquith's recent warning that the war would be a long one seem to suggest that the calculations of those who ought to know best hardly reckon on an early end to fighting.

A high authority said the other day: "This war will only be ended by sheer fatigue. The allies have to face Germany with a butcher's bill so huge that she will not dare to pay it increased."

To the question of how big he thought that bill would have to be he answered after a while: "That is hard to say. But I estimate the German casualties up to date at 1,250,000 and that, I think, is barely half what they will have to be. But, believe me, it is only by kill, kill, kill that they can be defeated. The question of food will not enter into it. They have plenty of provisions. It is only by killing their men that we shall make them cease to be."

He then told me of a remark made by a German officer rescued from the Dresden. "Here comes sailors nothing loth to do with their time than to save the lives of the enemy!" This, he said, was quite in effect, for the death of every German soldier or sailor brought the war so much nearer to its end, but the tradition of the British navy is to save life after the defeat of the enemy.

An interesting article published by a writer whose opinions have often proved well justified gives the result of an inquiry made on the spot into the present conditions in Germany from a friend in the diplomatic corps in Berlin, who had unusual facilities for collecting the information, he obtained the following figures: There were 6,000,000 shellshocked men between nineteen and forty-five who had served in the army up to Jan. 1. There were close upon 1,000,000 volunteers, but of whom were included in the quartermaster or substitute reserves. These must be added the approximately 4,000,000 now with the colors.

Casualties reported up to Jan. 1 were said by the same authority to be: Killed, 1,000,000; wounded, 2,000,000; missing and prisoners, 500,000, making a total of 3,500,000. An estimate of the losses up to Feb. 1 makes the killed, wounded and missing or prisoners approximately 1,750,000. Allowance for the return to the firing line of only one-third of the wounded, the irretrievable loss in fighting material is estimated at 1,250,000 officers and men up to Feb. 1. Making allowance for another six weeks of fighting, this estimate differs little from the 1,750,000 of the English authority referred to above.

WEALTHY BOY JOINS NAVY.

Pasadena Millionaire Gives Consent When His Son Enlists.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Donald Murphy, nineteen years old, son of A. M. Murphy, a Pasadena millionaire, is at Mare Island, San Francisco, where he enlisted for three years service in the navy. Young Murphy drove up to the naval recruiting office in Rolls Royce in his automobile, accompanied by his parents.

"I want to enlist as a sailor in the American navy," he said to the officer in charge. His father and mother gave their consent. He passed the physical and mental examination and then was enlisted. Regarding the automobile he went to the Santa Fe station, where he boarded a train for Mare island. Murphy last year was graduated from the Pasadena high school.

A Troublemaker.

"Why did you tell my wife that he force I met her I proposed to love you forever?"

"Well, didn't you?"

"Sure I did, but thats no kind of conversation to go in a man's wife with."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Breaking It Gently.

"My millinery bill is $50."

"Goodness! What will your husband say?"

"Oh, I'll break it to him $5 at a time."—Philadelphia Ledger.

JEFFERSON'S HOME.

Monticello, Which Its View of the University, of Virginia.

A mansion on Monticello ("little monticle," pronounced "Monteesello"), was Jefferson's beloved retreat. He worked at it all his life with an artist's reality and.

The road from Charlottesville is winding, hilly and rough. Hoofs of ship stepping stones, to lifting pebble ridges out of the red mud, but jolting leather drivers.

Visitors may stay in the grounds twenty minutes, but must bring no souvenirs. Jefferson's guests stayed weeks and his kin into poverty.

From the servants' quarters a long sunken way runs under the house to the log house and other storage beyond. The flat roof of this walk, two feet above ground, is a dry promenade. Over the lodgeless is an outlook platform. Icehouse and servants' quarters are half underground, with windows only on the far side. Jefferson looked out over them east toward Washington in west toward the University of Virginia, where beginnings he watched with his telescope which he could no longer walk.

Stadium enjoy the most beautiful and inspiring scholastic shades in the new world. Jefferson's university is strictly perfection, "everything present" Toward the town the curved walls be designed to seat 5,000 and place for a poor institution still stand. The length of each wave the curve is twenty feet. Its width, forty inches, gives the stability of a three foot wall in one only four inches thick. The effect is pleasing.

Jefferson was a better architect than Washington, and perhaps his equal in landscape gardening and estate planning.

On Jefferson's gravestone at Monticello are mention of the two things made, but his authorship of the Declaration and the Virginia statute of religious liberty is recited and that he was the "Father of the University of Virginia."—New York World.

BAHAMA ISLAND SHELLS.

Pearly Treasures of Many Varieties Line the Beaches.

The shores of the Bahama islands are each day strewn with multitudes of beautiful seashells, more than fifty varieties of which have a commercial value in the United States and Europe.

Among these are rice shells, so tiny in size as to make one marvel how a sufficient number could be picked up to fill a barrel; gold shells, small shells, cockles, sheeting, the hoofs, pearly, five sun shells, earthquake shells, which are exported to Chicago, Boston, to be used as ear pendants; the pearly, red shells, which resemble a miniature encrimsoned and soft as if it a burnt black shells, which take a high polish; zebra, tiger, queen, ivory, pointy and tiger cowries or Jack's cats, lovely tessuted "shells." These are but a few of the treasures found in a walk along the beach from Nassau to Cat Island.

Conch shell, which is especially adapted for cameo carving on account of having a layer of brown, with a layer of white and pink, are much in demand. Conch pearls, which are as hard as the shell, are exported. The demand coming from New York and from Toronto, Canada, is very great.

Ordinary conchs sell at 1 cent; phillip, whole shells, from 5 cents to 25 cents and queens at 30 cents. United States and Canada are the chief buyers. Turk's cap is particularly valuable, as it has a portion resembling the best mother-of-pearl, from which buttons, for instance, could be made.

It is estimated that the shelling shells of this variety could be obtained annually in this colony. These shells sell for 10 cents each. Labor is cheap, colored women receiving from 25 to 30 cents, ordinary shelling men 60 cents and white registrars $1.50 a day.—Indianapolis News.

Study of the Law.

Rabid Chauncey of Zeroes said: "The study of the law may be compared to a huge heap of dirt. Every day you carry a load away. The foolish man says, it is impossible that I should be able to remove this heap, because it is so vast. I forgot it, but the wise man says, 'I will remove a little heap tomorrow and more the day after, and thus in time I shall have carried the whole heap.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Cause and Comment.

Wide Awake at Times.

"Senator Pitchfork does stand to one side when he sees a chance better to colour or contrast."

"He is just as sleepy as he looks. Ask him about his mission and you'll find he can tell you a story what he is entitled to going or coming."—Kansas City Journal.

Moving Pictures.

Motion pictures were first given in New York city in March, 1894. They were of the strong man Sandow. Mr. Edison of that time had lost about completed his kinetoscope and with the aid of his assistant, Dickson, had to have begun.—New York American.

Failed to Absorb.

"My shock absorber was a failure."

"What was the trouble?"

"Couldn't manage to manufacture it cheaply enough."

"I see. It wouldn't absorb the shock intended to the announcement of the price."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

(First Publication April 1.)

Order for Publication

STATE OF MICHIGAN, 38th Judicial Circuit in Chancery.

At a session of the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix in the City of Petoskey, on the 30th day of March A. D. 1915.

Present: Hon. Frank A. Dome, Circuit Judge.

Henry H. Walters, et al, Defendants vs. Lucy Walters Hamilton, Complainant.

It appearing to the satisfaction of the court that the defendant, George H. Walters, and Laura Walters Dodge are not residents of this state, but are now in and about the city of Paris, France, and that the whereabouts of Harris A. Dunpomer, defendant herein, is unknown, it is ordered that the defendants, George H. Walters, and Laura Walters Dodge, cause their appearance to and answer or declare upon notice in this cause within four months from the date of this order, and that within twenty days after the entry of this order the complainant cause this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel and that such publication continue once in each week for six weeks in succession.

A. D. DUGDALE,
Circuit Judge.

HARRIS & RICHARDSON,
Solicitors for Complainant.

(First publication April 15.)

MORTGAGE SALE

Default having been made in the conditions of a mortgage made by Harriet E. Bloomfield, to Simon W. McCauley, dated December third, A. D. 1906, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the 9th day of December 1906, in Liber 31 of mortgages on page 90, which said mortgage was assigned by said mortgagee at the time of the notice the sum of One Thousand six hundred and twenty two dollars and twenty cents (1622.20) and the further sum of thirty-five dollars attorney fee provided for in said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding, law or in Chancery having been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, and the whole of said mortgage being now due, and the default in the payment of any part of the said mortgage money has been made in the payment of any part of the principal and interest, and in the performance of any of the covenants or agreements in said mortgage, by reason of which default the said mortgage has become and is now subject to the statutory rate of interest, and the statute in such case made and provided, and the whole of said mortgage being now due, and the default in the payment of said mortgage, and of the said sum of money therein mentioned or any part thereof, and the statute in such case made and provided, and no suit or proceeding, law or in Chancery, having been instituted to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof

PARROT & CO

HAROLD MACGRATH

Author of The Carpet from Bagdad, The Place of Honeymoons, etc.

COPYRIGHT BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Warrington, an American adventurer, has his mission, which is to get the title known up and down the Irrawaddy purlieus, and Ralph Bassett, on the road to the Indian Board for Rangoon, is his man. Bassett's sister, Lady Cholmondeley, and his fiancee, Miss Warrington, come aboard the boat at Bombay, and, aboard at his theater, are her fiance, Arthur Hilliger, and the man Warrington, who is Ralph's chum. Warrington is broke, however, and has sold his all claims for £20,000.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

"Well, he wasn't above having his revenge. He made the syndicate come up handsomely, they asked asking why he couldn't come on to Rangoon. And very frankly he gave his reasons. They came up on the boat and left on another. They weren't very pleasant. But they bought good lands. He came aboard last night with a check for twenty thousand pounds and two rupees in his pocket. The two rupees were all he had in this world at the time they wrote him the check. Arabian night, what?"

"I am glad. I like pluck; I like endurance; I like to see the lone man win against odds. Tell me he is going back to America?"

"Ah, there's the weak part in the chain." The piece of looked diffidently at the deck floor. It would have been easy enough to discuss the Warrington yesterday, but the Warrington of this morning was locked in twenty thousand good English sovereigns; he was a different individual. "He says he doesn't know what his plans will be. Who knows? Perhaps some one ran away with his best girl. I've known lots of them to wind up out here on that account."

"When do we reach Prome?"

"About six," understanding that the Warrington incident was closed. "I isn't worth while going ashore, though. Nothing to see at night."

"I have no inclination to leave the boat until we reach Rangoon."

She met Warrington at luncheon, and she greeted him amiably. To her mind there was something pirtul in the way he had tried to improve his condition. So long as she lived, no matter what he might marry, she was convinced that never would the thought of this man fade completely from her memory. Neither the amazing likeness nor the romantic background anything to do with this conviction. It was the man's utter loneliness.

"It ain't depends upon how we look at things." She touched the parrot cage with her foot, and Ralph hissed. "What would you say if I told you that I was unconventional enough to ask the parrot to introduce you?"

The amusement in his face was answer enough.

"Now, you suppose," she went on, "the picture you presented, standing on that ledge, the red light of the torch on your face, the bird cage in your hand—don't you suppose you roused my sense of the romantic to the highest pitch? Parrot & Co.!" with a wave of her hands.

She was laughing at him. It could not be otherwise. It made him all once sad and angry. 'Romance! I hate the word. I again affirm that young women should not travel alone. They think every bit of tinsel is gold, every bit of colored glass rare. Romance, adventure! Hah! So much twaddle has been written about the idea that cade and scoundrels are mistaken for Lislabads and D'Artagnans. Few men remain in this country who can with honor leave it. Who knows what manner of man I am?"

He picked up the parrot cage and strode away.

"Ah, ah!" began the bird.

Not all the diplomacy which worldly wise men have at their disposal could have drawn this girl's interest more surely than the abrupt, rude manner of his departure.

CHAPTER IV.

Two Days of Paradise.

At first Elsa did not know whether she was annoyed or amused. The man's action was absurd, or would have been in any other man. His attitude in her house was downright impudence; and yet the sight of the secret case dangling at his side made it impossible for her to take issuing offense. Once upon a time there had been a little boy who played in her garden. When he was cross he would take his playthings and go home. The boy might easily have been this Warrington, grown up.

Of course he would come and apologize to her for his rudeness. Perhaps she had resented her curiosity, perhaps her questions had been pressed too hard, and perhaps he had suddenly doubted her genuine interest. At any rate it was a novel experience. And that's why Elsa was annoyed.

She returned to her chair and opened the book again. And as she read her wonder grew. The diction was exquisite; there was style, but now and as she read there was lacking the one thing that stood for life—blood. It did not pulsate in the veins of these people. Until now she had not recognized this fact, and she was half-way through the book. What had happened to her since yesterday? To what cause might be assigned this opposite angle of vision, so clearly defined?

"Is the book tell upon her knees and dreamily she watched the perspective open and diverticate. The low banks of the Irrawaddy, the jungle, the pagodas, charred her; and the languor of the East crept stealthily into her northern blood. She was not conscious of the subtle change; she only knew that the world of yesterday was unlike that of today.

Warrington, after depositing Ralph in the stateroom, sought the bench on the stern deck. He filled his cutty with unfortunate tobacco and roundly damned himself as a blockhead. He had forgotten all the niceties of diplomacy; he no longer knew how to be suave. The first young woman in all Indo-China who had treated him as an equal, and he had straightway proceeded to secure for upon the evils of traveling alone in the Orient!

And yet he had told her the truth; it was not right that a young and attractive woman should wander about in the East, unattended save by a middle-aged companion. It would provoke the devil in men who were not wholly bad. Women had the fallible idea that they could read human nature, and never found out their mistake until after they were married. He knew her kind. If she wanted to walk through the bazaars in the evening she would do so. If a man followed her she would ignore the fact. If he caught up with her and spoke she would continue on as if she had not heard. If a man touched her she would curl upon the fire of her eyes. She would never call out for help. Elsa was just that silly.

He bit hard upon the stem of his pipe. What was all this to him? Why should he bother his head about a woman he had known but a few hours? Ah, why to be himself? He knew what Elsa, usually quick and receptive, did not know, that he was not afraid of her, but terribly afraid of himself. For three times quickly in the East, men and women, souls and clods. And he was something like the parfish dog; spoken kindly to, it attached itself immediately and enduringly.

He struck the cutty against his boot heel. Why bothered? It would be only two days. At Rangoon their ways would separate; he would never see her again. He got up. He would go to her at once and apologize. And thus he surrendered to the very devil he had but a moment gone so vigorously discountenanced.

He found her asleep in her couch. He didn't wonder that Ralph had brought him to her side was thrust back. Why, she was nothing more than a beautiful child! A great yearning to brother her comforting his heart. He did not disturb her, but waited until five that grave and sober hour, when kings and clerks stop work for no logical reason whatever—tea. She opened her eyes and saw him watching her. He rose quickly.

"I was very rude a little while ago. Will you accept my apologies?"

"Un-condition that you will never say 'sher' (hyphen) and' ge-hown'."

He laughed exagerlyly. "You've bit my mustard. It was the act of a big lazy child."

"It did not sound exactly like a man who had sicked six months from Singapore to the Andaman Islands. But there is one thing I must understand before this acquaintance could go on. You said, 'Why throw what manner of man I am?' Have you ever done anything that—would consciscionably bring you to speak of a penal, dishonorable woman?"

"It ain't depends upon how we look at things." She touched the parrot cage with her foot, and Ralph hissed. "What would you say if I told you that I was unconventional enough to ask the parrot to introduce you?"

The amusement in his face was answer enough.

"Now, you suppose," she went on, "the picture you presented, standing on that ledge, the red light of the torch on your face, the bird cage in your hand—don't you suppose you roused my sense of the romantic to the highest pitch? Parrot & Co.!" with a wave of her hands.

She was laughing at him. It could not be otherwise. It made him all once sad and angry. 'Romance! I hate the word. I again affirm that young women should not travel alone. They think every bit of tinsel is gold, every bit of colored glass rare. Romance, adventure! Hah! So much twaddle has been written about the idea that cade and scoundrels are mistaken for Lislabads and D'Artagnans. Few men remain in this country who can with honor leave it. Who knows what manner of man I am?"

He picked up the parrot cage and strode away.

"Ah, ah!" began the bird.

Not all the diplomacy which worldly wise men have at their disposal could have drawn this girl's interest more surely than the abrupt, rude manner of his departure.

CHAPTER IV.

Two Days of Paradise.

At first Elsa did not know whether she was annoyed or amused. The man's action was absurd, or would have been in any other man. His attitude in her house was downright impudence; and yet the sight of the secret case dangling at his side made it impossible for her to take issuing offense. Once upon a time there had been a little boy who played in her garden. When he was cross he would take his playthings and go home. The boy might easily have been this Warrington, grown up.

Of course he would come and apologize to her for his rudeness. Perhaps she had resented her curiosity, perhaps her questions had been pressed too hard, and perhaps he had suddenly doubted her genuine interest. At any rate it was a novel experience. And that's why Elsa was annoyed.

She returned to her chair and opened the book again. And as she read her wonder grew. The diction was exquisite; there was style, but now as she read there was lacking the one thing that stood for life—blood. It did not pulsate in the veins of these people. Until now she had not recognized this fact, and she was half-way through the book. What had happened to her since yesterday? To what cause might be assigned this opposite angle of vision, so clearly defined?

"Is the book tell upon her knees and dreamily she watched the perspective open and diverticate. The low banks of the Irrawaddy, the jungle, the pagodas, charred her; and the languor of the East crept stealthily into her northern blood. She was not conscious of the subtle change; she only knew that the world of yesterday was unlike that of today.

Warrington, after depositing Ralph in the stateroom, sought the bench on the stern deck. He filled his cutty with unfortunate tobacco and roundly damned himself as a blockhead. He had forgotten all the niceties of diplomacy; he no longer knew how to be suave. The first young woman in all Indo-China who had treated him as an equal, and he had straightway proceeded to secure for upon the evils of traveling alone in the Orient!

And yet he had told her the truth; it was not right that a young and attractive woman should wander about in the East, unattended save by a middle-aged companion. It would provoke the devil in men who were not wholly bad. Women had the fallible idea that they could read human nature, and never found out their mistake until after they were married. He knew her kind. If she wanted to walk through the bazaars in the evening she would do so. If a man followed her she would ignore the fact. If he caught up with her and spoke she would continue on as if she had not heard. If a man touched her she would curl upon the fire of her eyes. She would never call out for help. Elsa was just that silly.

He bit hard upon the stem of his pipe. What was all this to him? Why should he bother his head about a woman he had known but a few hours? Ah, why to be himself? He knew what Elsa, usually quick and receptive, did not know, that he was not afraid of her, but terribly afraid of himself. For three times quickly in the East, men and women, souls and clods. And he was something like the parfish dog; spoken kindly to, it attached itself immediately and enduringly.

He struck the cutty against his boot heel. Why bothered? It would be only two days. At Rangoon their ways would separate; he would never see her again. He got up. He would go to her at once and apologize. And thus he surrendered to the very devil he had but a moment gone so vigorously discountenanced.

He found her asleep in her couch. He didn't wonder that Ralph had brought him to her side was thrust back. Why, she was nothing more than a beautiful child! A great yearning to brother her comforting his heart. He did not disturb her, but waited until five that grave and sober hour, when kings and clerks stop work for no logical reason whatever—tea. She opened her eyes and saw him watching her. He rose quickly.

"I was very rude a little while ago. Will you accept my apologies?"

"Un-condition that you will never say 'sher' (hyphen) and' ge-hown'."

He laughed exagerlyly. "You've bit my mustard. It was the act of a big lazy child."

"It did not sound exactly like a man who had sicked six months from Singapore to the Andaman Islands. But there is one thing I must understand before this acquaintance could go on. You said, 'Why throw what manner of man I am?' Have you ever done anything that—would consciscionably bring you to speak of a penal, dishonorable woman?"

"I Want You to Tell Me Some Stories."

Singapore and the Andaman Islands that they spoke to me." Thus ten years." with a shrug. "Can you fancy me a lack-a-daisical as a T. & O. boat, looking old ladies in their chairs, stargazing about with a tray of brothy broth, helping the invalids to their staterooms, and touching my cap at the end of the voyage for a few shillings in tips?"

"Tell me more."

She looked into her beautiful face, animated by genuine interest, and wondered if all men were willing to obey her.

"I always interests me to hear from the man's own lips how he overcame obstacles."

"Sometimes I didn't overcome them. I ran away. After all, the strike is not was a fluke."

"I don't think so. But go on," she prompted.

Well, I have been manager of a coconut plantation in Penang; I helped lay tracks in Upper India; was a hand in some bridges; served in a rubber plantation, worked in a ruby mine, been a bandsorter in the Whiteaway Laidlaw shop in Bombay; cut wood in the teak forests; helped exterminate the plague at Chitor and Udaipur; and never scared a green leaf. I have had an adventure in all my life."

"Why, your wanderings were all ventures," she insisted. "Think of the things you could tell!"

"And never will," a smile breaking over his face.

How like Arthur's that smile was! thought the girl. "Romantic persons seem to have no adventures. It is to the prosaic these things fall. Because of THEY happens you lose their values."

"There is some difference between romance and adventure. Romance is what you look forward to; adventure is something you look back upon. But I always supposed adventure was the thing that happens, on land and on sea, of fisticuffing, of fighting with sabers and pistols, and all that rigmarole. I can't quite fit my experiences up to the height of calling my six months' chore-engineering on the Jaila an adventure. It was brutal hard work, and many times I wanted to lay down. The Lascars—they got out of trouble that way."

"Why, I thought adventure might be assigned this opposite angle of vision, so clearly defined!

The book fell upon her knees and dreamily she watched the perspective open and diverticate. The low banks of the Irrawaddy, the jungle, the pagodas, charred her; and the languor of the East crept stealthily into her northern blood. She was not conscious of the subtle change; she only knew that the world of yesterday was unlike that of today.

Warrington, after depositing Ralph in the stateroom, sought the bench on the stern deck. He filled his cutty with unfortunate tobacco and roundly damned himself as a blockhead. He had forgotten all the niceties of diplomacy; he no longer knew how to be suave. The first young woman in all Indo-China who had treated him as an equal, and he had straightway proceeded to secure for upon the evils of traveling alone in the Orient!

And yet he had told her the truth; it was not right that a young and attractive woman should wander about in the East, unattended save by a middle-aged companion. It would provoke the devil in men who were not wholly bad. Women had the fallible idea that they could read human nature, and never found out their mistake until after they were married. He knew her kind. If she wanted to walk through the bazaars in the evening she would do so. If a man followed her she would ignore the fact. If he caught up with her and spoke she would continue on as if she had not heard. If a man touched her she would curl upon the fire of her eyes. She would never call out for help. Elsa was just that silly.

He bit hard upon the stem of his pipe. What was all this to him? Why should he bother his head about a woman he had known but a few hours? Ah, why to be himself? He knew what Elsa, usually quick and receptive, did not know, that he was not afraid of her, but terribly afraid of himself. For three times quickly in the East, men and women, souls and clods. And he was something like the parfish dog; spoken kindly to, it attached itself immediately and enduringly.

He struck the cutty against his boot heel. Why bothered? It would be only two days. At Rangoon their ways would separate; he would never see her again. He got up. He would go to her at once and apologize. And thus he surrendered to the very devil he had but a moment gone so vigorously discountenanced.

He found her asleep in her couch. He didn't wonder that Ralph had brought him to her side was thrust back. Why, she was nothing more than a beautiful child! A great yearning to brother her comforting his heart. He did not disturb her, but waited until five that grave and sober hour, when kings and clerks stop work for no logical reason whatever—tea. She opened her eyes and saw him watching her. He rose quickly.

"I was very rude a little while ago. Will you accept my apologies?"

"Un-condition that you will never say 'sher' (hyphen) and' ge-hown'."

He laughed exagerlyly. "You've bit my mustard. It was the act of a big lazy child."

"It did not sound exactly like a man who had sicked six months from Singapore to the Andaman Islands. But there is one thing I must understand before this acquaintance could go on. You said, 'Why throw what manner of man I am?' Have you ever done anything that—would consciscionably bring you to speak of a penal, dishonorable woman?"

"Ah, ah!" began the bird.

"Oh, what a funny little bird!" cried Elsa, laughing. "What does he say?"

"I've often wondered. It sound like the beckoning you hear in the River Dragon pagoda in Rangoon. He picked it up himself."

The colonel returned to his elderly charges and became absorbed in his aged Times. If the girl wanted to pick up the riff-raff to talk to, that was her affair. Americans were impossible, anyhow.

"How long have you been in the Orient?" Elsa asked.

"Ten years," he answered gravely. "That is the weak part."

"Sometimes it was the eternity."

"I have heard from the purser of your good luck."

"Oh!" He stooped again and locked the door of Ralph's cabin. "I dare say a good many people will hear of it."

"It was epidemic. I tried to tell stories like that, but I'd rather hear them told first-hand."

Elsa was not romantic to the sense that she saw heroes where there were only ordinary men. It was the obscure and unknown hero who appealed to her; such a hero as this man might be.

"Oh, there was nothing splendid about the thing. I simply hung on. Then a thought struck him. "You are speaking alone?"

"With a companion." A peculiar question, she thought.

"It is not wise," he commented.

"My father was a soldier," she replied.

"It isn't a question of bravery," he explained, a bit of color charging under his skin. "This world is not your world. Women, over here. Oh, I've lost the art of saying things charmingly. He polled at his beard embarrassedly.

"Are you warning me against yourself?"

"Why not? Twenty thousand pounds do not change a man; they merely change the public's opinion of him. For all you know, I may be the greatest rascal unhanged."

"But you are not."

He recognized that it was not a query; and a pleasurable thrill ran over him. Has there been the least touch of condescension in her manner he would have gone deep into the shell.

"Not there are worse men in this world than I. But we are getting away from the point, of women traveling alone in the East. Oh, I know you can protect yourself to a certain extent. But everywhere, on the boats, in the hotels, on the streets, are men who have discarded all the laws of convention, of the social contract. And they have the keen eye of the kite and the vulture.

"To Elsa this interest in her welfare was very diverting. "In other words, they can quickly discover the young woman who goes about unprotected." Don't you think that the trend of the conversation has taken rather a marketable turn, so important it could should be?"

"I lose your pardon! Shall I go?"

"No. I want you to tell me some stories." Then laughing, "Don't worry about me, Mr. Warrington. I have gone my way alone since I was sixteen. I have traveled all over this wicked world with nobody but the woman who was once my nurse. Now, tell me something of your adventures. Ten years in this land must mean something. I am always hunting for Harun-al-Raschid, or Sindbad, or some one who has done something out of the ordinary."

He listened against the rail and stared down at the muddy water. "Adventure?" He frowned a little. "I'm afraid mine wouldn't rend this adventure. There's no glory in being a stevedore on the docks at Hongkong, a stoker on a tramp steamer between

Singapore and the Andaman Islands that they spoke to me." Thus ten years." with a shrug. "Can you fancy me a lack-a-daisical as a T. & O. boat, looking old ladies in their chairs, stargazing about with a tray of brothy broth, helping the invalids to their staterooms, and touching my cap at the end of the voyage for a few shillings in tips?"

"Tell me more."

She looked into her beautiful face, animated by genuine interest, and wondered if all men were willing to obey her.

"I always interests me to hear from the man's own lips how he overcame obstacles."

"Sometimes I didn't overcome them. I ran away. After all, the strike is not was a fluke."

"I don't think so. But go on," she prompted.

Well, I have been manager of a coconut plantation in Penang; I helped lay tracks in Upper India; was a hand in some bridges; served in a rubber plantation, worked in a ruby mine, been a bandsorter in the Whiteaway Laidlaw shop in Bombay; cut wood in the teak forests; helped exterminate the plague at Chitor and Udaipur; and never scared a green leaf. I have had an adventure in all my life."

"Why, your wanderings were all ventures," she insisted. "Think of the things you could tell!"

"And never will," a smile breaking over his face.

How like Arthur's that smile was! thought the girl. "Romantic persons seem to have no adventures. It is to the prosaic these things fall. Because of THEY happens you lose their values."

"There is some difference between romance and adventure. Romance is what you look forward to; adventure is something you look back upon. But I always supposed adventure was the thing that happens, on land and on sea, of fisticuffing, of fighting with sabers and pistols, and all that rigmarole. I can't quite fit my experiences up to the height of calling my six months' chore-engineering on the Jaila an adventure. It was brutal hard work, and many times I wanted to lay down. The Lascars—they got out of trouble that way."

Linen Dress for the Little Miss

The simple, attractive dress, of handkerchief linen, shows that it claim to innovations and improvement in shape, but in a modified way from season to season on the strength of its sunny merits. It is a little two-piece affair, one a dress and waist of the same material.

The dress is the upper part of the sleeves are cut in one piece with kimono shoulder. The lower part of the sleeves is set in under a box in the upper part, which has the effect of a tuck in the sleeve. This makes it possible to use narrow as well as wide materials for this pattern.

The neck opening and finished with buttonhooked scallops. Small sprays of flowers and eyelets embroidered in a colored floss like that used for the scalloped edges provide the decoration and enlarge the design. The sleeves are also finished with scallops.

The belt is run through slides of the linen placed at each side and fastened with a pearl button and the front.

Bright red and delft blue are the colors liked best for embroidering these linen dresses in white or unbleached linen. On the latter white floss is often used, but the red or blue floss is often used, but the red or blue floss is often used, but the red or blue

The Charlevoix Sentinel

Published every Thursday morning, at Charlevoix, Michigan.

WILLARD A. SMITH - EDITOR

Office, 112 Bridge St. - Phone No. 9.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

Three Months	$ .45
Six Months	.75
One Year	1 50

RACE FOR A WIFE.

Getting Married Is a Strange Game In Frigid Kamchatka.

AN ORDEAL FOR THE GROOM

After Working Hard For a Few Years For the Girl's Father He Finally Wins Her In a Public Chase, In Which He Gets His Skin Well Tanned.

It gets too hot for the Siberian only once in a lifetime. The native Koryak of Kamchatka, far up in the peninsula that is washed by the Bering sea, can sleep comfortably in a room four feet high with six by eight feet of floor space and have a fire smoking near all night while the doors are tightly closed, and then does not object if three others share his apartment with him. Tomorrow he will have chance enough to breathe more cold, fresh air than he cares for. His picture of the happy hereafter is a snug, cozy place where every cell of his body can perpetually enjoy warmth and where neither ears, fingers nor toes shall be frozen.

Once in his life, however, things get a little hotter than he can honestly enjoy, and that once he cannot escape if he is to be a man of importance in the community, for it is his marriage ceremony. As soon as the youth falls in love in dead earnest he calls on the maiden's father to find out what dowry she can bring in case of eventual marriage. Since reindeer is the Koryak's medium of exchange, the dowry usually consists of reindeer. If the father consents to the engagement and the dowry pleases the young man he interviews the girl, and if she reciprocates his affection he enters her father's service. Chopping wood, tending the herds, cultivating the garden and all other kinds of farm work fall to his share. The period of service lasts from two to three years.

The marriage ceremony begins about 6 in the evening. There is a building in the village into which the villagers crowd at twilight. A large hall runs through the center of the building on either side of which are from ten to fifteen little rooms called pologs. Each polog is separated from the next by heavy reindeer curtains, and the entrance from each polog into the hall is closed by similar curtains. Nowhere in all that building except in the hall could a good sized man stand upright.

After considerable eating and some drinking a brass drum begins to beat. At the same time a solemn faced Koryak passes from one polog to another dropping willow sprouts and alder branches in each inclosure. Presently the beater of the drum begins to sing, to accompany his slow performance on the drum. Gradually he accelerates his beats and his song. Faster and faster he smites his drum; louder and louder he sings, until within thirty minutes he has worked himself into a state of frenzy—a consummation that is not without its effect upon the villagers. The stolid calm with which they entered, suggestive of an impending funeral, gives place to smiles, to tossings of the head, until by and by the whole crowd is as excited as its leader.

At this point, the front curtain of each polog goes up, and two or three women appear inside. In their hands are willow sprouts and alder branch-bridegroom enters the building, leading the happy couple by the hand. The noise, the shouting and the whirling now become indescribable. At a signal from the groom's father the bride dashes into the first polog to the right. The women that are within lift the curtain for her, and she passes quickly from one compartment to the next.

Not so with the groom. He dashes after her, but no sooner has he entered the first polog than the women begin to beat him with the willow sprouts and alder branches. He seizes the curtain to enter the next polog, but one or two women hold it down, and if he finally succeeds there is a hot application of branches on that part of his anatomy that remains longest within the polog.

Meanwhile the women in the next polog are ready to receive him with equal warmth. They ply the switches energetically and do not hesitate to thrust out a foot also in order that the "happy groom" may stumble and afford a more enduring target for their blows.

There is no escape from this experience until the groom has entered and passed through every one of those twenty or thirty pologs. The front curtains are raised, so that the public has a clear chance to enjoy the spectacle.

Of course he never catches the bride. She has reached the last polog before he is halfway through. If she passes out of the last polog he must work on other gear at her father's house and pass through the same ordeal once more. But she usually awaits him in the last polog, and when they meet there the wedding ceremony is finished—and they are man and wife.—Youth's Companion.

Over the Telephone.

"Is this Mr. Jones?"

"It is."

"This is the Gotemquick hospital. A woman who was taken ill on the street has been brought here and we think she is your wife."

"Does she say so?"

"No. The patient is unable to talk."

"Then it is not Mrs. Jones. Try somebody else."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Great characters shine out through small crevices.

Council Proceedings

Council Chambers, Apr. 19, 1915

The Common Council for the City of Charlevoix met on the above date—Mayor Wilbur presiding.

Aldermen present: Priest, See, Barney, Cartier, Geiken and Carey.

Absent, none.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The finance committee submitted the following report: Having examined the following bills report the same correct and recommend that they be allowed out of the several funds as herein stated:

General Fund

R. W. Paddock, Board of Elec Com'rs	$ 2 00
E. J. Hiller	2 00
Isaac Webster	2 00
Wm. Scougale Jr., " Reg. 1st ward	3 00
R. N. Faulkner " " 2nd "	3 00
Wm. Finucan " " 2nd "	3 00
Carl Hite " " 2nd "	3 00
R. S. Shapton " " 3rd "	3 00
George Anderson " " 3rd "	3 00
Geo. W. Pease " Elec Ins 1st w'd	4 00
D. F. Meech " " " " "	4 00
R. C. Hammett " " " " "	4 00
R. N. Faulkner " " " " "	4 00
A. L. Pitt " " " " "	4 00
Alex. Blanchart, Gatekeeper 1st ward	[illegible]
Wm. Finucan, Board of Elec Ins 2nd w'd	4 00
W. R. Barney " " " " "	4 00
John Zeigler " " " " "	4 00
Carl Hines " " " " "	4 00
E. J. Hiller " " " " "	4 00
C. W. Harrington, Gatekeeper 2nd w'd	2 00
H. Allcox, Gatekeeper 2nd w'd	2 00
Charles Carey, Board of Elec Ins 3rd w'd	4 00
E. B. Ward " " " " "	4 00
George Anderson " " " " "	4 00
S. D. Carey " " " " "	4 00
Milo Miller, clerk " " " " "	4 00
Isaac Webster, Gatekeeper 3rd ward	2 00
E. M. See & Sons, rent of store elec. pur	[illegible]
Jesse Smith, services	1 25
Lisle Shanahan, services	9 00
John Cook, paid woman to clean offices	1 00
F. L. Slaght, salary	50 00
Sentinel, services	2 80

Cemetery Fund

F. S. Blanchard Est., supplies	4 01
Wm. McLain, salary	25 00

Fire Fund

A. E. Mason, supplies	8 00
American LaFrance Fire Engine Co. sup	4 51
Fire Department, shores Fire	24 50

Highway Fund

Ed. O'Neill, Jas Wyers services assigned	12 60
Moses Lapeer, services	14 10
George Olney, services	8 90
Allen Shanton, services	3 30
Earl Hatch, services	8 00
Henry Clark, services	17 00
H. B. Wood, services	28 00
E. B. Ward, services	14 00

Sewer Fund

H. D. Marshall, services	33 08
R. F. Sloan, sewer system plans	50 00

Bridge Fund

Elmer Johnson, salary	30 00
Pere Marquette railroad, freight	63
C. H. Rafer, supplies and services	17 38

Police Fund

H. D. Marshall, Chas. Jefferies salary assigned	30 00

Lewis Street and Petoskey Ave. Sewer L. I. G. A.

Lisle Shanahan, services	1 00
Sentinel, services	2 80

Electric & Water Funds

Eugene Fairchild, services	30
Zona Adams, services	1 50
Pere Marquette railroad, freight	4 70
A. J. Hamilton, salary	43 20
Gunson Dixon, salary	30 00
Morris Ackert, services	28 00
Thos. Nowland, services	1 50
C. R. Munson, services	4 50
R. F. Sloan, waterworks system plans	50 00
H. D. Marshall, services	1 00
Lumber Company, supplies	89 25
H. Channon company	1 40
The Fisch-Hines company, supplies	[illegible]

Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Priest that the report as read be accepted and the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to issue warrants on the city depositories for $781.70 and the Clerk be instructed to draw orders on the various funds for the amount of each respective bill. Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote: Ayes, Priest, See, Barney, Cartier, Carey and Geiken. Nays, none.

Moved by Alderman Geiken and seconded by Alderman Cartier that Clarence Bartlett be permitted to install a four inch lateral to the sewer on Mason street, lot 15, block 13 in the City of Charlevoix. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Priest that the contractors (Madill and Marshall) be instructed to complete their contract of the Hurlbut avenue and Bridge street sewer by completing the pavement at the south end of Bridge street. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Geiken and seconded by Alderman See that cross-walk at rear of block 5, lot 3, Dixon's Addition on Nettleton street between property owned by Mrs. Jas. McGeagh and Frank Hull be installed. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Carey that Mr. Parmelee be instructed to complete his contract on the south side bridge approach at once. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Cartier and seconded by Alderman Geiken that the sidewalk to the south side bridge approach be installed according to the city engineer's instructions. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Cartier that the plans of the railing for the south side bridge approach be accepted and the clerk be authorized to advertise for bids. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Geiken and seconded by Alderman Barney that the clerk advise Mr. W. H. Aldrich, Chicago, Ill., that the cost of carrying the water main on West Lincoln street to the property owned by him would be approximately $230.00 and the cost to be divided 50 per cent for the city and 50 per cent for Mr. Aldrich. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Barney and seconded by Alderman See that the city renew the contract with the government to furnish electricity for the light on the north pier, said contract taking effect July 1st, 1915. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman See and seconded by Alderman Priest that Mr. A. Bergeon's resignation as a member of the Board of Public Works be accepted. Motion carried.

Moved by Alderman Geiken and seconded by Alderman Cartier that the Mayor's Proclamation be accepted. Motion carried.

Alderman Priest and seconded by Alderman See, moved the adoption of the following resolution:

Sewer District No 17

Lewis Street and Petoskey Avenue.

Resolved by the common council of the city of Charlevoix, that the establishing and constructing of a sewer including the constructing of all the necessary ventilations, gutters, man holes, catch basins, cess pools, flush tanks and all the necessary attachments, commencing at the center of Lewis street and Dixon avenue thence north to the center of Petoskey avenue, thence east on Petoskey avenue to the center of Lot five (5) Block Three (3) of Fox and Eaton's unrecorded plat, is a necessary public improvement.

Resolved further that the plans, plats, diagrams, specifications and estimates of cost of the Board of Public Works for the establishing and constructing of all the necessary ventilations, gutters man holes, catch basins, cess pools, flush tanks, and all the necessary attachments mentioned, be and the same are hereby approved and adopted as changed by the common council said change being an increase in the estimated cost of $163.00 dollars, making a total of $2,230.00.

And be it further resolved that the expense of said public improvement be defrayed as follows:

First: The expense of establishing and constructing the said sewer in all interior squares and spaces formed by the intersection of streets and alleys and in front of all public grounds, public buildings and city property, estimated at the sum of Seventy-five Dollars, shall be paid from the general sewer fund in said city of Charlevoix, according to Act No. 215, 1895 as amended, "An Act to provide for the incorporation of cities of the fourth class."

Second: That the sum of Twelve Hundred dollars, being the estimated cost of the laying and constructing of said sewer including the necessary ventilations, gutters, man holes, catch basins, cess pools, flush tanks, and all the necessary attachments in said streets also mentioned, aside from the establishing and constructing of said sewer in said streets and alleys intersections and in front of all public grounds, public buildings and city property, shall pursuant to Act No. 215, 1895, as amended, "An Act to provide for the incorporation of cities of the fourth class," be paid by special assessments, payable in five equal installments, to be assessed according to benefits upon the following described lands and premises, which are hereby constituted a special assessment district and deemed to be benefited by the said public improvement. All lots, parts of lots, lands and premises abutting and fronting on either side of Lewis street from the north line of Dixon avenue north to the north line of Petoskey avenue and also on either side of Petoskey avenue from the east line of Lewis street east to the center of Lot five (5) Block three (3) of Fox and Eaton's unrecorded plat, excepting from the above all public streets and alleys. Provided, that the whole amount levied by said special assessment upon any one lot or premises, for said public improvement shall not exceed twenty-five per cent of the value of said lot or premises as valued and assessed for State and County taxation in the last preceeding tax roll. Any cost exceeding that per cent which would otherwise be chargeable upon the said lot or premises shall be paid from the general sewer fund of the city of Charlevoix.

This resolution was passed and adopted this 19th day of April A. D. 1915

Attest: OSCAR E. WILBUR, Mayor

P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote. Ayes, Priest, See, Barney, Cartier, Carey and Geiken. Noys, none.

Alderman Barney and seconded by Alderman Cartier, moved the adoption of the following resolution:

Sewer District No. 17

Lewis street and Petoskey Avenue,

Resolved by the common council of the city of Charlevoix, that whereas the said common council did by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the aldermen elect, resolved to make the following public improvement: the establishing and constructing of a sewer including all the necessary ventilations, gutters, man holes, catch basins, cess pools, flush tanks and all the necessary attachments, commencing at the center of Lewis street and Dixon avenue, thence north to the center of Petoskey avenue, thence east on Petoskey avenue to the center of Lot five (5) Block three (3) of Fox and Eaton's unrecorded plat, is a necessary public improvement.

Whereas the said common council did by the affirmative vote of two-thirds of all the aldermen elect, resolve that the expense of said public improvement—aside from the establishing and constructing of said sewer in all interior squares and spaces formed by the intersection of streets and alleys, and in front of all public grounds, public buildings and city property, estimated at the sum of Seventy-five Dollars, be paid from the general sewer fund of the city of Charlevoix, estimated at the sum of Twelve Hundred Dollars, shall pursuant to Act No. 215, 1895 as amended, "An act to provide for the incoration of cities of the fourth class," be paid by special assessment, payable in five equal installments, to be assessed according to benefits upon the following lands and premises, to wit: All lots, parts of lots, lands and premises abutting and fronting on either side of Lewis street from the north line of Dixon avenue, north to the north line of Petoskey avenue and also on either side of Petoskey avenue from the east line of Lewis street east to the center of Lot five (5) Block three (3) of Fox and Eaton's unrecorded plat, excepting from the above all public streets and allys.

Now therefore, Robert F. Sloan, Darwin F. Meech and Chas. J. Zeuter, who constitute the Board of Assessors for the city of Charlevoix, be and they are hereby directed to make said assessment of the sum of Twelve Hundred Dollars, pro-rata upon the lots and parts of lots, lands and premises within the district aforesaid. Said assessment to be made according to benefits and in accordance with the provisions of Act No. 215, 1895, as amended, "An Act to provide for the incorporation of cities of the fourth class," and that said Board of Assessors meet for the purpose of making such assessment on the 21st day of April, 1915 at nine o'clock in the forenoon in the council room in said city of Charlevoix.

And it is further ordered that the city clerk make a certified copy of this resolution and deliver the same to one of the said assessors together with the plats and diagrams of said public improvement.

This resolution was passed and adopted this 19th day of April, 1915.

Attest: OSCAR E. WILBUR, Mayor.

P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, } ss
County of Charlevoix. }

I, Peter E. Vandermade, being duly sworn, do hereby certify that I am the City Clerk of the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, and that the within is a true copy of the resolution passed on the 19th day of April, 1915.

City Clerk.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of April, 1915.

Notary Public in and for county and state
My commission expires.

Motion carried by the following aye and nay vote. Ayes, Priest, See, Barney, Cartier, Carey and Geiken. Nays, none.

There being no further business the council adjourned.

P. E. Vandermade, City Clerk.

Your Child's Cough is A Call For Help

Don't put off treating your Child's Cough. It not only saps their strength but often leads to more serious ailments. Why risk? You don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery is just the remedy your child needs. It is made with soothing, healing and antiseptic balsams. Will quickly check the cold and soothe your child's cough away. No odds how bad the cough or how long standing, Dr. King's New Discovery will stop it. It's guaranteed. Just get a bottle from your Druggist and try it.

Beauty of Zambezi Falls.

To realize fully the wondrous beauty of the Zambezi falls, Rhodesia, one must have time to linger and watch the ever changing scene. The depths of the chasm below are relied from sight by the rising columns of opalescent mist, and above the yawning abyss the sun glints and sparkles, weaving the drops into a magnificent rainbow. Three hundred feet below roars and boils the swirling flood as it emerges from the Boiling Pot, rushing on down the zigzag gorge between towering cliffs of rock, narrow, fierce and of unfathomable depth.—African World.

Granite and Water.

A coat made of granite, while perhaps not the most comfortable article of wearing apparel—although granite in thin sheets is flexible—might be thought to be storm proof, yet granite will absorb a considerable amount of moisture. If a cubic yard of granite that had been completely dried out were immersed in pure water it would, according to the United States geological survey, after a short time take up four gallons of water.

Nonchalant Shaw.

Archibald Henderson tells the story that when William T. Stead was planning to get together some of the great men of Europe and make a world tour in the interests of peace he asked George Bernard Shaw to join the company and received the reply:

"If you care to bring a collection of rulers to my quarters in Adelphi terrace I shall be very glad to receive them some morning."

Beaver Island News

Born to Mr. and Mrs. M J. McCann, a son last week.

The steam barge Schnoden made a trip to Charlevoix Monday.

Dan Boyle went to Duluth, Minn., last week to visit his son Patrick.

Pat Malloy spent Sunday in Charlevoix.

Dr. Armstrong, of Charlevoix, was over on a sick call Friday.

Anthony McDonough went to Buffalo for the summer.

Clyde Gallagher went to Milwaukee for the summer.

Mrs. John P. Malloy returned home from Grand Rapids last Friday.

Emmet Gallagher went to Chicago for the summer.

Roland McCann went to Ashtabula, Ohio.

Harry Hartwick returned home from Charlevoix, where he was visiting his father and mother.

Mrs. Lou Briggs was called to Rogers City on account of the sickness of her sister.

Andy Ross and Ellsworth Dutton, of Charlevoix, spent several days here last week scaling logs for the Charlevoix Lumber Co.

H. Franklin, our merchant tailor, arrived from New York City, where he spent the winter.

The Saunders family, of Pentwater, are here for the summer.

Godfrey Hansen, of St. Joe, is here for the summer.

A. T. Stewart, of the U. S. Fish Hatchery, is planting young whitefish around the islands.

Napoleon's Confidence.

Just before his marriage Napoleon received the appointment of commander in chief of the army of Italy. He was then twenty-six. "You are rather young," said one of the directors, "to assume responsibility so weighty and to take command over veteran generals."

"In one year," Napoleon replied, "I shall be old or dead."

"We can place you in command of men only," said Carnot, "for the troops are in need of everything, and we can furnish you with no money to provide supplies."

"Give me only men enough," Napoleon answered, "and I ask for nothing more; I will be answerable for the result."—"Table Talk and Opinions of Napoleon Bonaparte."

Pure Bred Arab Horses

In Cairo there is a society for preserving the pure bred Arab horse. It is said that recent changes in the lives and habits of the Bedouins have resulted in the deterioration of these horses. A practical horseman of wide experience says that as a rule the Arab horse is now no better treated than our own horses, whatever may have been true of the old days when such poems as "The Arab to His Steed" were written.

Extension work on the B. C. G. & A. was resumed the first of this week. A crew, the ditcher and steam shovel are now busy extending the line beyond Atlanta.

Mrs. Macey, of Charlevoix delightfully entertained about twenty friends and relatives in honor of her mother's, Mrs. Bogart of this city, 75th birth anniversary. The rooms were beautifully decorated with hyacinths and ferns and a large pyramid birthday cake added to other beautiful table decorations. An enjoyable time was reported and Mrs. Bogart was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.—Boyne Citizen.

First publication April 22nd.

Notice of Hearing Claims

State of Michigan,
Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

In the matter of the estate of Emor R. Lawson, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that four months from the 19th day of April A. D. 1915, have been allowed for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to said court for examination and adjustment, and that all creditors of said deceased are requested to present their claims to said court, at the probate office, in the City of Charlevoix in said county, on or before the 19th day of August A. D. 1915, and that said claims will be heard by said court on Thursday the 19th day of August A. D. 1915, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

Dated April 19th, A. D. 1915.

Servetus A. Correll, Judge of Probate.

Religious Notes

Congregational Church

Public Worship at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Morning: "The Something Behind."

Evening: "Home Missionary Exercise by twenty children: "America's Welcome."

Bible School at 12 o'clock.

Junior Endeavor at 3:00 o'clock.

Y. P. S. C. E. at 6:30. Leader, Herbert Taggart.

Prayer Meeting Thursday 7:30 o'clock.

(AT IRONTON)

Bible School at two o'clock standard time; preaching at three.

Baptist Church

A. M.—"The Man Who Got Held Up."

P. M.—"Charlevoix's Angels or Feathers and Wings."

B. Y. P. U.—Topic, Missionary Practice Through Tracts." Leader, Ethel Sanford:

Bible Study Tuesday evening, "The Bible Doctrine of Faith."

Prayer Meeting, "Difficult" Passage Review of the Doctrine of Apostacy.

Sunday School, 12 m.—Frank Bearss, Superintendent

Christian Science

Christian Science Society, Van Pelt Hall.

Sunday service 10:45 a. m. Subject—"Probation after Death."

Wednesday service 7:45 p. m.

Reading Room open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 2 to 5 p. m., also 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday.

Catholic Church
Sunday Service

8:00 a. m.—Low Mass.
10:00 a. m. High Mass.
7:30 p. m.—Evening Service.

Masses during the week as announced on previous Sunday.

Episcopal Church

Services second and fourth Thursday in each month, by Rev. Harris, of Petoskey.

Methodist Church

A. M. "Dealing Honestly with Things."

P. M. "Essentials and Non-Essential, One Faith, One Lord, One Baptism."

Certificate of Determination

State of Michigan, } ss.
County of Charlevoix. }

The Board of County Canvassers of Charlevoix County have ascertained and canvassed the votes of the several wards and townships of said county, of the general election held on Monday the fifth day of April A. D. 1915.

Do Hereby Certify and Determine,

That May L. Stewart, having received the largest number of votes is elected County Commissioner of Schools

That Walter D. Hammond having received the largest number of votes is elected County Road Commissioner for a term of six years.

In Witness Whereof, we have hereunto set our hands and affixed the seal of the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, this Thirteenth day of April, in the year one thousand nine hundred fifteen.

Alberto J. Puday,
Wm. A. Pickard,
Board of County Canvassers.

Attest: Alberto J. Puday,
Richard Lewis, Chairman of Board of County Canvassers.
Clerk of Board of County Canvassers.

State of Michigan, }
County of Charlevoix. }

I, Richard Lewis Clerk of the County of Charlevoix, and clerk of the circuit court for said county, the same being a court of record and having a seal, do hereby certify that I have compared the annexed copy of Certificate of Determination of the Board of County Canvassers, with the original record thereof now remaining in my office, and have found the said copy to be a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole of such or original record. In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said circuit court at the City of Charlevoix, this 14th day of April A. D. 1915.

Richard Lewis, Clerk.

Fish!

We know you will buy where you can get the most and the best for your money.

We catch our own fish, therefore you save the middleman's profit.

Located 3 doors east of X L Creamery.
BELVEDERE AVENUE
All Standing Orders Delivered.

H. L. BRADY & SON.

HOSIERY AT COST PRICES

We are going to close out our present stock of Eiffel, Avalon and Service Hosiery at cost prices, preparatory to taking the exclusive agency of the famous "Foot-Rest" brand of hosiery. The hosiery we are placing on sale is the same kind you have been buying for the past year. You know how well they have worn, and now you will have the opportunity of buying them at COST PRICES. See our window display.

Sale Starts Saturday, April 17th.

17c Hosiery.....13c	13c Hosiery.....10c
15c Hosiery.....11c	10c Hosiery.....8½c

Seal-Packt Hosiery, former price 25c per pair, during sale 2 pair for.....18c

6 pair "Dime Sox" Hosiery, six months guarantee, during sale for.....52c

Better buy early while your size is in stock—They won't last long.

GONSER'S VARIETY STORE
104 Bridge Street.

Now they're perfect!

The Trade Mark that identifies the world's best hosiery

- SPECIAL -
SATURDAY, APRIL 24th
- SPECIAL -

RIPPELETTES
—) at (—
12½c per yd.

The best material for Children's Rompers and Dresses for Children Girls and Ladies.

A. E. Mason's
DEPARTMENT STORE

Wall Ruined? No Indeed | A little soap and water | Make it like new if your walls are painted with SHERWIN-WILLIAMS

Flat-Tone

No spots or finger marks on Flat-Tone walls! Soap and water take such marks off without the slightest marring of dainty tints. We recommend Flat-Tone not only because it is a beautiful decoration but also because we know it is truly sanitary. No germs can hide behind Flat-Tone.

Flat-Tone may be laid on any surface and leaves a perfectly smooth finish of dull warmth that invites and rests the eyes.

We can furnish Flat-Tone in many beautiful shades, and we shall be glad to show you the attractive effect secured with this modern sanitary wall finish.

F. S. BLANCHARD ESTATE
Charlevoix, Michigan.

Yes Mother, You Look Fine

Electric Bitters simply brought the bloom of health to your cheeks.

Electric Bitters will do it every time. Increase your appetite, regulate Liver and bowels, restore your strength and improve your complexion.

After a long weary winter we need a tonic and blood purifier to rid our system of accumulated waste and impurities. Nature needs help to throw off that languid, tired, worn-out feeling.

Do your part! Take a few weeks treatment of Electric Bitters, it will give you vim and energy, bring back the spring of youth, make you feel fine. You'll enjoy your work.

Go to your druggist and get a small bottle of Electric Bitters and start the treatment right now.

Tilda Pool of Bristow, Okla., writes: "Electric Bitters raised me from a bed of sickness and suffering and has done me a world of good. I wish every suffering woman could use this excellent remedy and find out, as I did, just how it is." As it has helped thousands of others, it surely will do the same for you.

H. E. BUCKLEN & CO. PHILADELPHIA. ST. LOUIS.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOLUME 46 | Charlevoix, Michigan, Thursday, April 29, 1915. | NUMBER 2

Make Your Future Bright--

You can make your future bright by saving a part of your earnings. Do not depend upon luck to provide for old age. Begin at once to establish a growing Savings Account. It is not so much the amount that you start with, that counts, as the regularity with which you make additional deposits.

We invite Savings Accounts in any amount. 4 per cent Interest paid on Certificates of Deposit and Savings book accounts.

CHARLEVOIX STATE SAVINGS BANK

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

RESOURCES $250,000.00

J. L. CRANE, Pres. H. S. HARSHA, Vice-Pres.
W. J. RACHOW, Cashier.
ARCHIE LIVINGSTON, Ass't. Cashier.

A Savings Account

Is a friend in adversity. And a friend a great majority of people need sooner or later. Life's road is an uncertain highway, leading us over all kinds of rough ground and experiences. We may be fat with plenty today and lean in poverty tomorrow. The only sure and safe way to be prepared for these contingencies is to begin saving, if only a little at a time and keep it up regularly and persistently

Start a Bank Account

Put your money where it will be safe and bring you a little interest. Look out for the principal. See that that is safe and the income will take care of itself. Start an account with us where it will bring you interest and still be at your disposal any time you want it.

Charlevoix County Bank
of Nicholls, Buttars and Bridge

4% on deposits if left six months 4%

J. L. CRANE

Special For Friday, April 30th. ONE DAY ONLY.

Black Sateen Petticoats.

Reliance Patent Adjustable Band.

65 cent Grade Friday Bargain 39c

ONLY ONE TO A CUSTOMER.

One Day Only----- Friday, April 30th.

Rheumatism Yields Quickly to Sloan's

You can't prevent an attack of Rheumatism from coming on, but you can stop it almost immediately. Sloan's Liniment gently applied to the sore joint or muscle penetrates in a few minutes to the inflamed spot that causes the pain. It soothes the hot, tender, swollen feeling, and in a very short time brings a relief that is almost unbelievable until you experience it. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c of any Druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

FOUND

Small row boat found, named Alice. Owner can have same by paying for advertisement.

H. E. COBLENTZ,
Phone 117-6r.

3t

NOTICE!

Whoever borrowed the roller from the Beach Hotel and forgot to return it, will oblige by bringing it back as soon as possible as we want to use it.

Mrs. J. S. Baker.

Notice!

I will be at the farm of the late John Rice, township of Eveline, Tuesday, May 4th, to dispose of personal effects on the premises.

CHAS. ZEITLER,
Administrator.

FOR RENT—From May 1st the offices now occupied by Mr. A. L. Fitch, attorney, in the postoffice building. Apply to MRS. C. B. GARNSEY, 901 Prarie Ave., Joliet, Mich.

JUST WHAT IT MEANS.

The anti-saloon victories in the recent Michigan elections, in which a tremendous gain was made toward the goal of state wide prohibition, mean a quickening of the public conscience. Only by a narrow margin was the cause defeated in the legislature.

It means that the open saloon must go. There is no question but that the conditions which the war has revealed, respecting the inefficiency caused by strong drink, has had much to do with public sentiment here, notwithstanding the fact that the same conditions have existed here, minus the tragedy of war.

The advance of the anti-saloon forces toward the enemy's main defenses is greater than in any previous year, and it seems to us that there can be no retreat from the ground gained.

So far as Michigan is concerned, we believe that two years more will see state-wide prohibition in force.

There is but one side to the question.

MOOSE INSTALL OFFICERS

At the regular meeting of the Charlevoix Moose Lodge Monday night the following new officers were installed Oluf Nordrum officiating:

Dictator—B. L. Harrington.
Past Dictator—O. D. Hammond.
Vice Dictator—Albon Smith.
Prelate—Nathan Blissett.
Secretary—Richard Lewis.
Treasurer—W. D. Fairchild.
Sergeant at Arms—Paul Smeltzer.
Trustee, 3 years—Art Alcock.
Inner Guard—George Stafford.

On behalf of the lodge Fred Alexander presented O. D. Hammond, retiring Dictator, a watch-fob with Moose charm.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The annual musical of the Historical Society will meet at the Congregational church, at 8:00 Friday evening, April 30, 1915:

Part I.

Organ Prelude...Miss Madeline Mullen
Praise Ye the Father, by Gounod.
Te Deum.....Double Quartette
Dudley Buck
Instrumental Solo..Mrs. A. A. Swinton
Staccato Caprice Max Vogrich.
Reading.....Mrs. Jas. Wilkinson
Vocal Solo.....Mrs. A. L. Coulter
A Norwegian Love Song, H. Clough-Leighter.
Instrumental Solo...Miss Ida Levinson
Salut A. Pesth.

Part II.

Organ.....Mrs. Harry L. Oldham
a. Reverie.....Minor Baldwin
b. Oriental Sketch..Arthur Bird.
Vocal Solo.....Miss Irene Finucan
"Springtide," Rheinhold Becker.
Reading.....Mrs. Robert E. Lee
Instrumental Solo..Dorothy Armstrong
La Castagnotte, Henry Ketten
Male Quartette.....Selected
Organ.....Mrs. Harry L. Oldham
Postlude—in D—— Guthbert Harris

Mayor's Proclamation

I, Oscar E. Wilbur, Mayor of the City of Charlevoix, do hereby set aside Monday, May 3rd, 1915, as "Clean Up and Fire Prevention Day" in accordance with the Governor's Proclamation. And I urgently request every resident to observe the day.

On Tuesday, May 4, 1915, the City of Charlevoix will collect and cart away all rubbish and refuse except ashes and tree limbs that has been collected in convenient piles in all streets and allies within the City, free of charge. Kindly "clean up" and pile your rubbish in the streets convenient for the city to cart away.

Approved by the Common Council.

P. E. VANDERMADE, City Clerk. OSCAR E. WILBUR, Mayor.

Local and Personal Notes

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

J. L. Crane
C. Danto & Son
M. A. Levinson & Co.
A. E. Mason Dept. Store.

The maples are leafing out and summer is here.

Harry Nicholls was in Detroit this week on business.

R. W. Elston and wife have returned home from Florida.

Judge Mayne is holding court in Detroit last week and this.

Trout angling begins next Saturday, but don't begin the season by lying.

Empire Stites spent last week with relatives and friends at Williamsburg.

Fred Stites, of Flint, is here visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Empire Stites.

Mrs. Sarah Emrey, who spent the winter in California, returned home last week.

Mrs. O. A. Sears returned from Saginaw Saturday, much improved in health.

When the farmers buy automobiles it denotes prosperity. Mrs. Emmet Coulter is driving a car.

Alex Cameron, who has been quite ill for a month, is out again, and rapidly gaining in strength.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Waite, of Hart, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Alexander for a few days.

Rev. Quinton Walker is making a tour with the State Sunday school officers in Otsego county this week.

The steamer Hum came down from East Jordan Monday on her first trip, in good shape for the summer business.

Roy Ranger has sold the gasoline boat Rhyne to St. Ignace parties. She will run between St. Ignace and Mackinac Island.

Rev. Quinton Walker attended the Grand Traverse District Ministerial Meeting at Traverse City Friday and Saturday.

Marshall & Madill have completed their south terrace sewer contract and the pavement repairs at the south end of Bridge street.

Carl, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Platt Webster, of Hayes township, died last week. The funeral occurred Thursday. Deceased had been ill for several years from the effects of a fall.

The Charlevoix Historical Society will meet at the Congregational Church on Friday evening April 30th with a musical program. Members are expected to invite their friends.

F. L. Bartholomew has fitted up two rooms on the second floor of the Bartholomew block, which will be occupied this summer by his family. Mr. Bartholomew will divide his time between Chicago and Charlevoix.

R. G. Madill is the contractor and Ed. Brock the brick-layer on the new front of the Novak Bridge street property, occupied by McCann's bakery and a millinery store. It is a great improvement to the ancient facade that has graced the street.

More than a year ago an expensive ordinance was written into the municipal statute books. It is known only to memory as the "weights and measures" ordinance. It is more honored in the breach than in the observance. We suggest that the city slow up on passing ordinances and catch up on enforcement of what we already have. One hundred percent of the value of an ordinance is the enforcement of it.

We hereby brand Charlie Lamphear as a wilful prevaricator. On the day of his marriage, in response to an inquiry from this office Charlevoix said that he and his bride would take no wedding trip, but would just settle down and go to work next day. But just as soon as the clergyman had pronounced the fateful words Mr. and Mrs. Charlie entered their car and hied themselves south. They were first heard from at Traverse City, then at Cadillac, where they turned about. Charlie says there are times in which a prevarication is justified.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tyler a son.

Wood Bros. electricians have a new ad. in this issue.

J. R. Mead returned to the Masonic Home at Alma Monday.

A valuable mare belonging to the Henry Wood livery died Monday.

Born, at Holland, last Thursday, to Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Newman, a son.

On Tuesday April 20th a young son was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mossington.

Fruit growers are a little nervous about the early warm weather. Cherry buds are appearing.

Thirty men are rushing work on the new Beach Hotel, and splendid progress is being made.

The steamer S. M. Stephenson took a cargo of lumber from Von Platten, Boyne City, to Erie, this week.

Henry Wood arrived home from the West Tuesday morning. Mr. Hooker is following with two carloads of horses.

Rabbits are so plentiful hereabouts that they run the streets and play about in the back yards. They even invade Bridge street.

Dr. A. M. Wilkinson was in Traverse City Friday. He gave an address before the Grand Traverse District Ministerial Association.

The steamer City of Boyne, now owned at Harbor Springs, has been chartered for the Beaver Island run until July 1st; Capt. Ava Smith master.

Married, Monday evening, April 26th, at Rev. Lloyd C. Vinyard's study, Mr. Earl Loomis, age 21, to Miss Leota Bell Sweet, age 16. They will reside in Eveline township.

Mason street is well to the front in improvements this spring. Wm. Heise is building a new residence, and Capt. Sam Rose is raising his house, providing a larger basement, with other important improvements.

Miss Eva Himebaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Himebaugh, of this city, died very unexpectedly at Petoskey hospital last week Tuesday. She had been ill for some days, but the case was not considered critical. The The funeral was from the Congregational church on Thursday.

With an invitation from the junior Y. M. C. A. the 8th grade Y. M. C. A. spent their evening on the south side Lake Michigan Beach. After the regular business was finished a marshmallow roast was joined by all. George Block led in stories for the rest of the evening.

The state fair at Detroit again offers transportation and all expenses to the boy qualifying under the agricultural examination for eighth graders. The West Michigan state fair, held at Grand Rapids, also offers an eighth grade prize in the form of transportation and a ticket to the fair which will be presented the boy or girl standing highest in the regular eighth grade examinanion. As a second prize they offer an admission ticket.

Capt. Ole Hansen, of the Milwaukee schooner Alice, was here Tuesday while his vessel was loading at Traverse City. It seems good to see Capt. Ole here, as he a "survival of the fittest" of the bunch of vessel captains that traded at this port in the good old days. Capt. Ole tells us that the Alice is like himself, as good as new. Capt. Hansen has 13000 bushels of potatoes bought at Horton's Bay, and the schooner J. V. Taylor is expected here today to take 11000 bushels of them.

SPECIAL SERVICES

Owing to the fact that the service in the Methodist church was taken up last Sunday evening Rev. Quinton Walker will preach on "The Essentials and Non-essentials of Christian Forms and Beliefs," as announced last week. His text will be "One Faith, One Lord, One Baptism."

Come and hear the facts in the light of the twentieth century investigation and belief.

At the close of the service there will be a public installation of Epworth League officers.

Northern Michigan

The Manceiona News says of L. E. Slussar, for twelve years judge of probate of this county: "He has bought a beautiful home in Ann Arbor and says he and his family will locate there permanently, as they enjoy that city greatly."

The Grand Traverse supervisors turned down the proposition to employ a farm agent by a vote of ten to seven. Congressman McLaughlin and Dr. Eben Mumford appeared before the board in support of the plan. Their advice was not heeded.

The State Bank of East Jordan will pay in special premiums for the best exhibit of corn grown in Charlevoix and Antrim counties and placed on exhibition at the Charlevoix County Fair to be held at East Jordan, September 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th, 1915, as follows: For the best bushel of yellow dent corn, ears, 1st premium $25 in gold, 2nd premium $15 in gold; 3rd premium $10 in gold.

About forty of Antrim county's progressive farmers and business men met at the court house in Bellaire on April 13, for the purpose of organizing the Antrim County Farm Bureau. The meeting was interesting and successful. Robert E. Morrow, of Central Lake, was elected President; P. C. Wellman, of Bellaire, Vice-president; Dorr D. Buell, of Elmira, Secretary and Treasurer.

Boyne Citizen: The Citizen received word from E. S. Bedell, brother-in-law of A. B. Steele, that the latter had passed away at eleven o'clock last evening at the Soldiers home in Grand Rapids. Mr. Steele is well known in this section of the state, he having lived for nearly half a century at Advance where he conducted a store for many years, and was prominent in lodge circles. He was an Odd Fellow who has passed through all the chairs and a Mason of high degree.

Harbor Springs Republican: William R. Oates, of Marquette, state game, fish and forestry warden, was in the city Saturday and Sunday having come to inspect patrol boat No. 4 of the fish department, which is being fitted out at Harbor Springs. He also superintended the placing of rainbow trout from below the dam in Boyne river at Boyne falls to the deep water above the dam. Not many rainbow trout were found for they have not yet commenced their heavy spring run.

Elk Rapids Progress: Although sentiment appeared to be quite strongly in favor of the employment of a county farm agent the board of supervisors on Wednesday of last week killed the project by a vote of eight to seven. In case it had been decided to employ an agent the government would have paid one-half the salary and the expense to the tax payers of Antrim county would have been about twenty cents on $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Boyne Citizen: At a recent meeting of the road commissioners of the county it was advised by local commissioner, Ed. Lorch that a petition be presented to the state to make the Boyne Falls-Boyne City road a branch trunk line. Mr. Lorch has written to the district superintendent and has received much encouragement. It is expected that work will be commenced upon the road early in May. The road will be fifteen feet wide and the state award will go a considerable distance towards meeting the expense. Such a highway would mean much to this city and Mr. Lorch is to be commended for his efforts in securing it.

Traverse City Record: Jacob Culman died at his home, 909 South Union St. yesterday at 1:00 o'clock p. m. He was born in Germany in 1842 and came to the United States in 1866. After spending a few years in Pennsylvania he removed to Chicago where he entered the bakery business. He married Miss Sophia Endres in Chicago in 1869. He was in Chicago at the time of the great Chicago fire. They removed to Traverse City thirty-four years ago, and Mr. Culman started in business at 222 East Front street, where the Culman block now stands. Mr. Culman has not been in business the past fifteen years. He leaves four sons, Frank of Grand Rapids, Louis of this city, Daniel J. and Jacob Jr. of Elk Rapids; five daughters, Mrs. Mike Hanner of Elk Rapids, Miss Rose and Miss Margaret of this city, Miss Mae of Saginaw and Mrs. Frank Eastes of Muskegon; one brother, Daniel Culman of Indianapolis, and two sisters in Germany. He also leaves eight grandchildren.

Your Child's Cough is A Call For Help

Don't put off treating your Child's Cough. It not only saps their strength but often leads to more serious ailments. Why risk? You don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery is just the remedy your child needs. It is made with soothing, healing and antiseptic balsams. Will quickly check the cold and soothe your child's cough away. No odds how bad the cough or how long standing, Dr. King's new Discovery will stop it. It's guaranteed. Just get a bottle from your Druggist and try it.

WAR MAKING MAN OF ENGLISH HEIR

Prince of Wales Serving at Front With His Regiment.

MUST NOT BE CAPTURED.

Life In the Open With Responsibilities is Rapidly Developing the Slight, Rosy, Boyish, Twenty-year-old Prince. Lithe and Young, He Has Done His Twenty-five Miles a Day.

London.—The Prince of Wales, the twenty-year-old future king of England, faced Earl Kitchener in the war office one day last November and demanded that he be allowed to go to the front at once. Three months previously, at the very outbreak of the war, within a week of receiving his commission as a lieutenant in the First Grenadier guards, he had made the same request, but the secretary of war had refused it on the ground that the prince's military training had only just begun.

Photo by American Press Association.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

For a second time the lithe and slender subaltern stood before the great field marshal. He had thrown himself into his work with such enthusiasm and patriotic fervor that now, after only twelve weeks, he was fit and ready for active service. He had been so reported by his commanding officer.

Earl Kitchener listened to what the young man had to say. The British war lord is stern and unbending, but human. He knew the prince's spirit and talked with him as one soldier with another, not from a personal but from a national point of view. It went without saying that the prince was eager to fight and would do his duty just the same as any other officer, taking his chances of being killed or wounded with the rest.

That was not what was worrying Kitchener. He would mourn if anything happened to the Prince of Wales, but he knew that if the heir apparent did get killed there were plenty of other people to come to the throne of England. What concerned Lord Kitchener was this:

If the Prince of Wales were taken prisoner and held as a hostage by the Germans very serious embarrassment might be caused to the allies, and their plans for the final settlement of the war would be gravely hampered. This Earl Kitchener pointed out in his usual direct and forcible manner, but the young prince was not to be denied, and when he left the war office it was with the promise that he would be attached to Field Marshal French's staff at the headquarters of the British expeditionary force in France. On Nov. 16 the Prince of Wales crossed over from Folkestone to Boulogne and proceeded at once to St. Omer, where the headquarters' staff was then located.

From that day till April 10, when the Prince of Wales arrived in London bearing dispatches from the British commander in chief, he has regularly performed the arduous and dangerous duties of a dispatch rider.

The Prince of Wales is a slightly built and very high strung youth who looks two or three years younger than he really is. There is nothing in his uniform to distinguish him from any other staff officer.

